Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

JUL 9 1912
NO TITLE-PAGE & INDEX ISSUED

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
JUL 9 1912
MUSICAL DIV.

Volume VI
No. 1

JULY 6
1912

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from
"THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF"
Gaumont Release July 30th

PN1993
.M6

THE THANHOUSER

THREE-A-WEEK

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, a Three-Sheet and an Eight-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"The Merchant of Venice"

IN 2 REELS—FRIDAY, JULY 26

Shakespeare's Masterpiece as a Gorgeous Thanhouser Masterpiece

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI OHIO

The FOURTH issue of the new SUNDAY RELEASE

The Finger of Scorn

It Will Cease to Point at the Fallen, If This Film is Heard

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 14

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 16

"Vengeance is Mine!"

A Wife Resists the Temptation to Take the Revenge That Was in Truth the Lord's

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 19

The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird

The Bird Wasn't Nearly as Hungry as the Boy Who Stole His Bread—and Found a Friend Thereby

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE June Feature-frame. I am I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name .....

Address .....

Exchange .....

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," Charles Reade's Great Story "LUCILLE," By Owen Meredith In 2 Reels

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

We advertise not only in Trade Journals but also in publications reaching millions such as The Christian Herald, Advocate, etc.

Best State Right
STATE RIGHTS WITH EACH SALE
Proposition Ever Offered
MORE OPPORTUNITY FOR BOOKINGS THAN ANY PICTURE EVER MADE
REFINED PRODUCTION
BEST MONEY-MAKER
THE CHATAUQUAS IN YOUR STATE WANTS THEM
BOOKED IN FIRST-CLASS MOTION PICTURE AUDITORIUMS
A BRILLIANT PRODUCTION
The Life of John Bunyan
2000 feet
A JEWEL
of Magnificence
CHURCHES AND LECTURE ROOMS DESIRE THEM
LYCEUM CIRCUITS ARE ANXIOUS TO PROCURE THEM
The
Pilgrim's Progress
3000 feet of Elevating Entertainment
NOT A ONE-SIDED RELIGIOUS STORY
A PERFECT PRESENTATION OF LIFE FROM ANY STAND-POINT
DRAMATICALLY SUBLIME ARTISTIC DIRECTION BY FRANCIS POWERS
PROPERLY EDITED from HISTORICAL and ECCLESIASTICAL VIEW BY O. I. LAMBERGER PH.D.
BEAUTIFUL COLOR TONE BY THE SECRET HOCHSTETTER PROCESS
More opportunity for bookings
than any production ever made

HOCHSTETTER UTILITY CO., Inc.

40 E. 12th Street 'Phone 2496 Stuyvesant New York City

ECLAIR FILMS

PERSISTENTLY PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY

TUESDAY, JULY 16th

"THE DREAMERS"

A heart touching drama exquisitely produced

SUNDAY, JULY 21st

"RIZZIO"

In which figures Mary, Queen of Scots
A story of Court Intrigue and Royal Love

THURSDAY, JULY 18th

"THAT LOVING MAN"

A comedy which will make them laugh at love

AND COMING

"ROBIN HOOD"

Now being produced in Eclair Fashion. A Great Story by a Great Producing Company

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42d St., New York City

HOW TO BUY
A FEATURE FILM

State-right men who want valuable information regarding the purchase of feature films, will kindly communicate with this office immediately.

We are going to give you Free what it cost us thousands of dollars to learn.

There are no "strings" attached to this offer. Just let us know the class of your business—its needs—and we will do the rest.

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.
145 West 45th Street
New York City

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Tel. Oxford { 3790 / 2187

MONDAY, JULY 8

IMP "The Parson and the Medicine Man"	NESTOR "The Flower of the Forest"	CHAMPION "The Gypsy Bride"

TUESDAY, JULY 9

GEM "Under Two Flags"—Two Reels	BISON "Reconciled"	ECLAIR "A Double Misunderstanding"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10

POWERS "Tangled"—"Leap Year Delusion"	NESTOR "A Gentleman of Fortune"	THE ANIMATED WEEKLY

THURSDAY, JULY 11

REX "The Greater Love"	IMP "Caught in a Flash"	ECLAIR "The Cedarville Scandal"

FRIDAY, JULY 12

VICTOR "In Swift Waters"	POWERS "Getting Even"	NESTOR "Young Wild West Cornered by Apaches"

SATURDAY, JULY 13

BISON "Just in Time"	IMP "The Wrong Weigh" "Gov. Wilson at His Summer Home"	MILANO "The Wolf's Prey" Two Reels

SUNDAY, JULY 14

REX "The Mother Heart"	ECLAIR "Artful Gontran"	Across the Caucasus

THE EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

The Most Wonderful Horse in the World
Displays More Than Human Intelligence in

"The Equine Spy"

TWO REELS

An Original Story Written by a Well Known Magazine Writer as a Vehicle for this Remarkable Animal

"DON" A HORSE WORTH $10,000

"DON" has made a fortune for his master. He is considered the most perfect type of the performing horse. He got $500.00 a week in vaudeville and "big time."

Released Wednesday, August 23d

"THE EQUINE SPY" is a romance of the Civil War. In it the horse steals papers and ammunition, carries messages, lights bonfires and does everything but talk.

Released through FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

OTHER FEATURES

Wednesday, July 17th—SLIPPERY JIM—Jim is a crook, who is turned over to the police by his own wife. Sensational melodrama with remarkable situations.

Friday, July 19th—THE FOUR FLUSH ACTOR — A story full of fine humor and farcical situations. One of those comedies for which Solax is famous. All-star comedy cast.

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, N. Y.

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI July 6, 1912 Number 1

A FORUM OF THE INDUSTRY

We, in our editorial capacity, and also in news notes in our columns, have held aloof up to the present from criticizing the general trend of the industry except in a general way. Many items of value to our readers have been omitted for the sole reason that it might to some extent injure the manufacturers of various films. In commencing this new volume we think the time has come when we can outline to a fuller degree our policy, and what will be acceptable from our readers.

We invite opinions from our readers, and ask them to give their views for fearless discussion through our columns, on every subject pertinent to the welfare of Cinematography. There are many problems confronting the manufacturer, the manager, the director, and most of all the actors, who by their efforts make or mar the picture. Then last, but not least, the exhibitor who has to bear the brunt of every fault and folly of the above. We fully realize best results can only be obtained by a multitude of counsellors. Therefore we open a forum for suggestions from exhibitors and their patrons. Some manufacturers want to improve their products, some are so mediocre, so mean in their help, making their scenario editors write two plots a week for a salary of twenty-five dollars, so that one does not wonder that plots are stolen occasionally. Others are so advanced that it is hard to suggest any improvement, and with it all the exhibitor has to stand the brunt.

We contend that if an exhibitor wants to use a film, say of the Imp which is exceptionally good he should have it, and when the Imp turns out a poor picture then it should be the province of the exchange and the exhibitor to refuse it. When the Powers Picture Plays turns out some poor production, the same should happen, and when Western subjects are thrust upon the exchange the exhibitor is compelled to get that or none. This should not be. The Association with one or two exceptions have fully censored their films, and they are generally acceptable to the bulk of the exhibitors, but when certain men combine together to try and exclude such films as Thanhouser, Gaumont, Bison, Itala, Ambrosio, and others, the time has come to call a halt and ask whither are they tending. Taking it on the whole we will say that every producer in the industry wishes to improve his product, and present a programme that shall be acceptable to the theatre audience, and to that end we desire that the MOVING PICTURE NEWS shall be the means of bringing together the connecting links between exhibitor and producer, and strengthening the chain so that only the best educational uplifting subjects shall be presented to the public.

The time is now ripe for a full, free expression of opinion, and we want the keenest intellects among the exhibitors to respond to our invitation. The manufacturers are trying to weed out undesirable members who can not produce subjects up to the high standards that are now being demanded by the public. The MOVING PICTURE NEWS is read by practically every one in the industry and is regarded as the educational representative organ of Cinematography. Hence it is only just and proper that its columns shall be the forum through which full, free discussion on all matters affecting the industry should be presented. The question of the quality of the film, its photography, its plot, and each individual actor, should come in for comment, thus helping forward the elevating tendency of the day.

A RIFT IN THE LUTE

We very much regret the recent break in the ranks of the Independents. It brings to mind an old adage which says: "A house divided against itself cannot stand," and in this case it seems, for the moment, as though the whole fabric was going to break down. Letters, and a report, on our desk show that within the past week nothing less than 316 houses have switched over to the Association. For this we can hardly blame them, taking into consideration the fact that under present conditions it is very hard indeed for an exhibitor to make up his program, however loyal to the Independent cause he may be. We ask all our readers to have patience for a little while until matters have had time to adjust themselves. The story has been garbled in other papers and has tended to create a scandal in the ranks which injures the cause. Scare headlines in newspapers (which are supported by the industry) are very ill-advised, and, if we might use the term, extremely foolish, inasmuch as it causes a feeling of unrest in the minds of their readers. It may be done for a purpose, but the purpose, to say the least, is ill-advised. Garbled stories are running around, and we will try as far as we can to give the truth of the situation.

Certain manufacturers who own exchanges and picture houses endeavored to form a company that should be a distributing agency for the benefit of this coterie. This caused a great deal of unpleasantness in the ranks, with the result that others were forced out to protect themselves. The coterie forming the group was comprised of the "Imp Films Company," "Nestor Film Company," "Rex Motion Picture Company," "Champion Film Company," "Powers Moving Picture Company" and the "New York Motion Picture Company." They elected officers: Chas. O. Bauman, president; P. A. Powers, vice-president; J. E. Brulatour, treasurer; Wm. H. Swanson, secretary. It was found, after a while, that certain matters were not agreeable to some of the promoters, and J. E. Brulatour asked to withdraw. This was granted him, owing to the fact that he was taking a trip abroad and that he was representing the Eclair Company. Other matters arose, in connection with some arrangements, which did not please Chas. O. Bauman and Adam Kessel. They also asked leave to withdraw, which was refused by the other members of the combination, who attempted to secure the property of the New York Motion Picture Company. Whether they had a legal right or not, the courts have to decide. However, it immediately resulted in the instant journey of William H. Swanson to the Coast to bring forward legal action to obtain control of the "101" Ranch of the New York Motion Picture Company. Hector J. Streyckmans left on the train following to prevent any unconstitutional acts on the part of William H. Swanson. In the meantime injunctions and cross-injunctions were taken to prevent the New York Motion Picture Company doing business, and, incidentally, tying up the exchanges of Adam Kessel, also refusing to supply the latter with films from the Sales Company. Just as we go to press injunctions are asked to compel the Sales Company to supply the exchanges as heretofore. The result at present is pending, and in a little space we have reserved we may be able to give our readers the results if they come in time before we go to press.

As we have said before, it is a thousand pities that such a condition of affairs exists, and the only solution to this problem is an open market, and we urge exhibitors to stand fast for a little while until the storm has blown over, and in the meantime to compel (we used the word advisedly when we used the word compel) their exchanges to supply them with any and all pictures they need, whether Universal or the Film Supply Company of America, and if exhibitors will taboo the exchanges who are owned by manufacturers, and who themselves own houses, they will be able to get a program sufficient for their needs. Our columns show the brands available, and if they cannot gain this, let every man, every exhibitor in the country, switch over to the General Film Company until such time as reason and common sense prevail among the manufacturers. The industry is too great, too vast, too important for a few unprincipled men to try and play battledore and shuttlecock with it. Its educational proclivities are too high and advanced now to be checked, and the only way to bring the various manufacturers and importers to their senses is for the exhibitor, through their State and national organizations, to take a strong, firm hand and call a halt. We eagerly await the outcome and watch for the dove of peace to settle over the Independent ranks.

THE FEATURE FILM

Oh! "what a storm in a teacup" we have stirred up!! One indignant feature film man over the phone told us that we were raising "Hail Columbia" on the feature film, because he did not advertise with us, and asked us our price, finishing up with the statement, "Thank God, nobody reads your paper." We reply to this man with the statement, as we replied to him over the 'phone, that this did not enter into our mind at all. Advertisers have a perfect right to select the medium they wish to advocate their goods. At the same time, we think that as the Moving Picture News, and ourselves personally, have lost or refused many thousands of dollars to support their cause, some little return is due to us. However, that is not the question. We are perfectly satisfied to be paid for advertising we take and pay our way. We have our price, as we told our indignant friend, but neither he nor any of his confrères could raise the money high enough to buy us. We have fought for principles in the past; we can do so in the future, and still stand upon our merits, irrespective of what a few detractors may say. As to the question of no one reading the News, we very pertinently ask why did he read it and why he is so umbraged and so angry because we state the truth? We want in future to protect all our readers from "bunco games" and being fleeced from good money, unless they do it with their eyes wide open, knowing the results they may obtain. We have letters, and from personal conversation, showing that in very few instances have the purchasers of State rights been able to make the money which they paid for them. We can contend, and contend strongly, that if these films must be sold, and certainly the exhibitors ask for them, and ask their exchanges to supply them, they should be sold at a reasonable figure so that all may reap the benefit, and our contention is that 15 cents per foot is equitable, or even raise it to 20 cents per foot, which will allow a fair margin of profit from the higher rental of these films.

The Olympia games at Stockholm were secured by one firm for the sum of $15,000. Another $10,000 will cover every bit of expense. We gather there are to be three reels, of a thousand feet each, distributed throughout the world. The rights for America were offered to the highest bidder. We understand the highest bid is $10,000, including the negatives of this event, so that there is quite a large amount of profit available from this film, and this practically applies to every so-called feature film emanating from Italy, Greece, France and Russia. We do not object, by any means, to the feature film. They are exceedingly good in their way, but what we do object to is the large prices demanded for small subjects, and some of these subjects are not able to pass the Censorship Board of the various States and cities.

UNIVERSAL FILM CO. VS. N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO.

This case was decided in favor of the N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Consequently Bison, 101 and other productions will be continued as before. The open market is in sight. The Empire Film Co. against the Universal Co. was decided in favor of the Universal. The court maintained the Sales Co. could distribute its productions as it sees fit.

KINEMACOLOR

Kinemacolor Color Co. of America has the rights for "The Miracle." This play, as our readers know, is a wonderful production that has had a unique run at the Olympia, London. Patrons of Kinemacolor will soon have the pleasure of witnessing this most wonderful scenic, spectacular play the world ever produced in all the varied tints of nature, showing all the Oriental colors as in the original production at Olympia.

More stringent requirements for moving picture theatres having a seating capacity of more than 300 persons will become effective in Chicago if Mayor Harrison signs an ordinance passed by the City Council Friday night, June 21st. The new law requires that these theatres shall be located on two streets or have open spaces on two sides, the width and length depending on the seating capacity. One of the provisions requires a space of thirty-four inches between the seats, from back to back.

EDWIN AUGUST MAKES CHANGE

Now a Member of the Power's Picture Players in the Stock Company

Mr. Edwin August, a former member of the Edison and Biograph stock companies, has been secured to play leading roles in the Powers pictureplays, and became a member of that company last Monday. He will pose under the direction of Mr. Frank Powell, and great work is expected of this pair of motion picture stars. Mr. August closed with Biograph Company, having remained

EDWIN AUGUST,
a Powers Picture Player

upwards of two years in stock. During that time he played many leading roles and has appeared in exactly 167 pictures

He was for seven months leading man for the Edison Company, where he appeared in leads, and is to-day one of the best known moving picture stars now posing.

Prior to his work before the camera he was on the legitimate stage and was with Otis Skinner for two years, and also with Mrs. Leslie Carter for a satisfactory engagement. He was an important member of the cast in the revival of "Shore Acres," and in the original production of "Going Some." He has had a valuable experience in stock companies, having been with Belasco in Los Angeles, Studebaker in Chicago, and with Melbourne MacDowell in St. Louis. He was featured in the Hathaway Stock Company in New Bedford, Fall River and Holyoke, Mass. Mr. August has appeared in such notable films as "David Copperfield," "With Bridges Burned," "The Eternal Mother," "A Blot on the 'Scutcheon," "A Wreath of Orange Blossoms" and many other film successes.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. J. Keenan will erect a moving picture show at Germantown avenue and Durham street.

M. P. E. LEAGUE OF AMERICA

President M. A. Neff, writing to us, says: On my way home from New York I stopped at Philadelphia and met the local organization there. We had a splendid meeting and from there I went to Washington, where I organized the District of Columbia and from there I went to Pittsburgh, where we had an enthusiastic, harmonious meeting and every one worked in perfect harmony. The committee that had charge of the Pittsburgh convention can not be too highly praised for the efficient manner in which they handled the convention and the hospitality extended to the visitors.

Mr. Henry Poke, whose congenial, pleasant personality had much to do with the success of the Pittsburgh convention, seemed to be at the right place all the time and doing things for some one to make it pleasant for them.

K. & C. Local No. 2 of Kentucky held a meeting in Covington last Tuesday and they are certainly a live wire. An ordinance was passed this week in Covington, Ky., that all one-night stands and places of amusement shall be charged a license of $25 per night.

M. A. Neff, national president, and C. M. Christenson, national secretary, and Mr. Wm. Sweeney of Chicago were in St. Louis on Sunday, June 30, looking after the interests of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Cincinnati Local Branch No. 2, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held a meeting at Parlor F, Sinton Hotel, Friday, June 28. The new slide, which is a fac-simile of the certificate of membership of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was shown and fifty of them ordered. Mr. Kitt, the chairman of the committee, was instructed to have all of the slides ready at the next meeting. Mr. Clem Kerr and Mr. Reyberg, of Dayton Local No. 5 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, attended the meeting and were given the glad hand. Mr. Kerr is State organizer for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Ohio and is an efficient worker, and is at all times ready to work to advance the interests of the League.

Cincinnati Local Branch No. 2, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, at their meeting Friday read over the new ordinance which is being drawn up and passed upon it section by section. It will be presented to the Council at their next meeting for their consideration.

The Waldorf Amusement Company of Cincinnati opened their new theatre at Eighth and Depot streets last Thursday night. They are having a contest and the name has not been given the theatre as yet. They gave three shows and several hundred were turned away.

Mr. Henry Levy reports big business from the Liberty Theatre, and he also reports that they will open their new Colonial Theatre, which will seat 100 people. This is one of Cincinnati's finest picture shows.

Mr. M. A. Neff will attend the Kentucky State Convention, which will be held at Lexington, Kentucky, on the second of July.

Very truly yours,
M. A. NEFF,
President M. P. E. L. of A.

Dexter, Me.—The Park Theatre will be opened shortly.

IN HER BROTHER'S DEFENSE
Majestic Release, July 16

SCENE FROM "UNDER TWO FLAGS"
Thanhouser Release of July 7th

BETTY, THE COCKSWAIN

By VIRGINIA WEST

(Adapted from Imp Release)

The festivities of commencement week were in full swing at Boston. The campus was filled with girls in bright colored dresses and young men in white ducks and light summer suits.

There was an air of gayety and happiness over the assembly as a whole, but here and there, in the more secluded spots, strolled a couple with serious faces. One could pick out the seniors in this way if no other—they were about to bid good-bye to their sweethearts for an indefinite period.

Among these sad-faced couples were Betty Marshal and Ned Dean.

"It's no use," Betty was saying, "I tell you it's no use, Ned. Father has always said if a fellow didn't have courage enough to ask for a girl he didn't deserve her. My telling him we're engaged isn't any good. He knows that already, if he isn't so blind. What we must have is his consent, for you know, I've told you over and over I won't marry without it."

Ned looked at the girl pleadingly.

"Don't you think if you would——"

"Now, Ned," Betty interrupted, "you know that wouldn't do any good. Father would just look at me quietly and say, 'Why doesn't the young man ask me himself?' And then when I said, 'He's afraid, Father,' he'd be sure to give his consent, wouldn't he?"

Ned turned quickly to Betty. "But, Betty, you know I'm not afraid," he exclaimed vehemently.

"Oh, yes, Neddie dear," said the girl teasingly, "I know you're not afraid, but Father doesn't know you quite so well as I do, you know."

Ned sighed. "Well," he said, "I suppose I'll have to, but somehow I don't feel that I ought. You belong to yourself and what right has another man to give you away—even if he is your father?"

"That's all right. You go on thinking that way, Ned, dear, but ask Father for his consent, anyway. Maybe he'll give it, and then think how happy we'll be."

"Yes," growled Ned, "and maybe he won't, and then think how miserable we'll be. We at least have the uncertainty as it is now."

Betty's face grew serious. She took Ned's hand and drew him to a rustic bench. "Please, dear, ask him tonight. It would be much better for us to know before you go away."

Ned kissed the hand that lay in his. "Now, Betty," he said, "you are taking a mean advantage of me. You know I'll do anything when you look at me that way and use that tone."

Betty laughed. "Well, promise me while the spell is on you."

"Oh, yes, I promise, confound it. I'd rather take rat poison."

Two hours later the young man was shown into Mr. Marshal's study.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?" asked Betty's father.

Ned made the plunge at once. "I suppose you know, Mr. Marshal, that Betty and I love each other."

"Well, I have never been informed of the fact," said Mr. Marshal with irritating coolness.

"I want you to give your consent to our marriage," continued Ned.

"Indeed! And may I ask what you expect to keep Betty on?" asked Mr. Marshal coolly.

"I have an income, Mr. Marshal, and I shall go into business at once. I did not expect to marry until I am able."

Mr. Marshal's expression did not change. "By the way, Mr. Dean, you are coxswain of the crew, are you not?"

Ned could not entirely cover his indignation as he answered that he was.

The idea of speaking of a boat race when he was talking about marrying the sweetest girl in the world.

"I'm greatly interested in the race to-morrow," continued Mr. Marshal. "I used to be coxswain of the crew of this very university, years ago. I want to see you win this race. Do you think you will?"

"We're going to make every effort, sir," answered Ned almost impatiently.

Mr. Marshal was thoughtful for a moment. "I'll make an agreement with you," he said quite solemnly. "If you win the race I'll give my consent to your marrying Betty—not now, of course, but as soon as you are able financially."

Ned scarcely knew whether to be happy or not. He felt, somehow, that he was being laughed at, and yet he felt sure they would win and all would be well.

The next morning the excitement was high. The day was bright, the visiting crew had arrived, and the race was sure to take place.

Many of the students' parents and friends had come for commencement. Among them was Ned's mother.

At an early hour Ned left her and hastened away to Betty.

"Oh, Ned," she cried as soon as she saw him, "I am so excited I don't know what to do. I didn't sleep a wink last night. Ned, we've got to win—we've got to." Betty's eyes snapped and her jaw set.

"Well, we're going to," Ned assured her. "I wish all the fellows had as much reason for wanting to win as I have. Betty, you know how I love you and when you see the race you'll know I'm racing for you, dear."

The time of the race was three o'clock. By two both crews and many spectators had assembled.

There were, here and there, small groups of students from both colleges talking excitedly.

In one group was Ralph Cummings, a classmate of Ned's. His face was flushed suspiciously, and his manner was tense and nervous.

From time to time he glanced in the direction of the Barton crew.

"If it wasn't for Dean, Barton couldn't win," he said to one of his companions.

"Can't you fix him?"

"I don't know—— Yes I've got to find some way. It's a quarter after two," he said, "but I'll see what I can do."

Ralph Cummings had become deeply in debt during the year, and when, as he watched the progress of the Barton crew, he came to the conclusion that they could not win, he bet heavily against them. But in the last two weeks of practice the crew made such rapid strides in the right direction that their victory was almost assured.

This left Cummings in a pretty bad fix and at the last moment he began to feel desperate.

At half-past two a messenger boy rode rapidly up to the boat house and handed Ned Dean a note. While he was reading it the boy disappeared.

"Good Heavens!" cried Ned, "my mother has been injured in an automobile accident. Boys, I'll have to go. I'll be back as soon as I see about things. Hold the race back a few minutes, if possible."

"But you can't!" exclaimed the coach. "There is only a half hour."

"But the accident was just at the edge of the town," said Ned as he hurried into his clothes. "I'll take that wheel, there, and be back in a short while."

Very reluctantly they let him go, and in a moment he had disappeared down the road.

The place where the note had said the accident happened was on a side road that ran along a creek bank a mile out of town. On each side were pines and hemlocks, making a dense shade.

In a clear place in this grove stood an old vacant house which had, until recently, served as a roadhouse.

Shortly after Ned entered this secluded stretch of woods, two men sprang out from behind the trees and underbrush and seized him by the shoulders. He struggled and tried to call, but it was useless. In a moment he lay upon the ground unconscious.

It was the work of a few moments to carry him into the old house and lock him in one of the upstairs rooms.

At the boathouse there was much excitement. The news of Ned's absence soon spread, and there was great anxiety among the Barton students.

The members of the crew were in despair. They knew without their coxswain they stood little chance.

The visiting crew was clamoring for the start, and when four o'clock arrived, it seemed that they must use a substitute.

There was none they felt they could fully trust, but there was nothing else to do.

Just as the coach was about to choose a substitute from among the second crew he was touched lightly on the arm. He turned impatiently.

"Oh, Mr. Wallace," said a sweet, low voice, but the coach saw only a boyish figure in a raincoat and cap.

"Well?" said Mr. Wallace. "What do you want? I'm in a hurry.

"Come over here—quickly."

The man went, with a frown on his face. He scarcely knew why he went.

"Don't you know me, Mr. Wallace? I'm Betty Marshal. You coached at the Woman's College when I was there, you remember. I was coxswain and you said then I was as good as any you ever saw. Oh, Mr. Wallace, do let me take Ned's place. We must win this race. There's more at stake than you know. No one else can steer as well as Ned unless it is I. You must let me."

The girl had talked so rapidly and earnestly that the coach was persuaded before he had a chance to say a word.

"Yes, I do remember Betty Marshal," he exclaimed when she had finished. "I'll let you do it. Are you ready? No one need know until afterward."

The girl opened her coat and showed him that she was ready for her task.

"Boys, don't ask any questions even in your own minds. Do your best. We're going to win this race. Trust me." This the coach said to them as they were about to start.

And they obeyed him. Some of them had recognized Betty and some had not, but they all had faith in their coach and did not question.

In the meantime Ned regained consciousness. He had no idea how long he had been in the house. His first thought was of the race. What would they do without him and what would they think of him for not returning as he promised?

He soon discovered that he could break the glass of the window and climb down a wistaria vine on the side of the house.

Weak as he was, he reached the ground in safety. He looked for his wheel but it was nowhere to be seen.

Summoning all his strength he started for town at a dog-trot.

When Ned reached the boathouse he fell exhausted on the landing. No one noticed him, for all eyes were turned to the river.

He lay quite still and listened to the remarks and exclamations around him.

"They're almost here and neither gaining," said someone.

"It surely looks like a tie."

"No, look!"

"We're ahead!"

Ned could not tell who "we" were, for he did not see the speaker.

"We're gaining, we're gaining! Look, we've shot a half-length ahead."

Ned strained his ears. Then a cry went up of "Barton, Barton."

A great sigh came from him and he closed his eyes thankfully.

By the time the crews came in Ned had managed to crawl into the boathouse. The constant cries of "Barton" seemed to give him strength.

The moment Betty was free she ran for the boathouse, hoping to find news of Ned at least.

When she found her sweetheart lying exhausted on the floor she forgot the crowd and her costume and everything but that he needed her. She kneeled beside him and raised his head.

"Ned, dear, what is wrong?" she asked anxiously.

"I've been played a foul trick, Betty, but I'll tell you of that later. You won the race for me, God bless you."

Just then Mr. Marshal came hurrying into the boathouse. The story of Betty's pluck had been noised abroad and he had come to see if it was true.

"Betty, you're a plucky girl," he said; "congratulations, young man."

"Oh, but I didn't do it, Mr. Marshal, and I remember what you said last night, so I'm not feeling so happy after all," said Ned.

He had risen to his feet and stood looking mournfully into Mr. Marshal's face.

"Yes," said Betty's father, "I remember, too; but what I said ought to work both ways. Betty won the race and if she wants you she ought to have you. Isn't that so, daughter?"

"Yes, Father," said the girl, frankly putting one hand in Ned's and the other on her father's arm.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

The American Film Manufacturing Co. moved its Western studio last week from La Mesa to Santa Barbara, So. Cal. The new location will give the Western company equally good backgrounds for its pictures. The actuating reason for the move was the fact that nearly all good locations in and about La Mesa had been extensively used in "Flying A" pictures. Two horses were stolen from the American stables recently. Oddly enough, this event occurred the same day that two "Flying A" players were married. Detectives failed, however, in discovering any clew that might link the disappearance of the horses with the simultaneous disappearance of the honeymoon couple.

* * * *

On August 7, the American Film Mfg. Co. will release a two-reel problem play feature which, for many reasons, will receive a world of comment on its appearance.

A delicate subject has been handled so cleverly that no offence will be taken by church or layman. A boy, brimming over with youth and love and about to be married, promises on his father's deathbed to enter the priesthood. This he does. Six years later the girl, having married a working man of intemperate habits, reveals the fact to him that the man who is now priest is the father of their child. When he casts her off she enters upon a gutter life, where she is finally rescued by the priest's mother.

It is not often that picture-makers have the temerity to present a problem play which parallels the beauty of great stage productions. This is due principally to the fact that pictures can hardly be made to express the real heart interest, the folly of loving too well, without assaulting the eyes with that which the veiled lines of a story can tell but which pantomime finds difficult of expression. In "The Battle Ground" the theme is magnificently carried; the horror and intense suffering of the gentle-hearted priest when he learns of his early folly, the powerful acting of Rosalyn Verene, a Frohman actress of splendid powers, will make a two-reel picture that will linger long in memory.

"GOVERNOR WILSON AT HIS SUMMER HOME"

Imp Release of Saturday, July 13, 1912

This interesting picture was made at Sea Girt, N. J., and shows the summer home of the presidential candidate of the Democratic party. There are many views of Gov. Wilson and his family which at this juncture will no doubt interest thousands of people all over the United States, as Governor Wilson now looms prominently in the limelight.

A NEW PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Exhibitors and writers the country over will be interested to learn of the arrival of a bouncing baby boy to make glad the home of Mr. and Mrs. Epes Winthrop Sargent, of New York City. The youngster is to be known to fame as Epes Winthrop Sargent, Jr. The Moving Picture News hastens to extend heartiest congratulations.

OPERATORS' CHAT

By James Girvan

Auxiliary Local 35, I. A. T. S. E.

OFFICERS

President—Frank Brennan.
Vice-president—Robert Goldblatt.
Financial Secretary—Gus Durkin.
Recording Secretary—Sydney Dignon.
Sergent-at-Arms—Willie Cohen.
Business Agent—Henry Weinberger.

The Auxiliary meets at Teutonia Hall, No. 66 Essex street, the first and third Monday of every month at 12 o'clock midnight. Dues can be paid to Brother Weinberger at the Union Office, No. 133 Third avenue, or to Gus Durkin, care of Berkeley Theatre, No. 19 West Forty-fourth street.

The regular meeting was called to order at 1.15 midnight, July 1, 1912, to a fairly good attendance. The final instructions were given the delegate to the I. A. T. S. E. convention. The question of reel carrying was again discussed, and I believe final measures will be taken at our next regular meeting.

It was also decided that the initiation fee goes to $25. Another matter which was taken up was that of proper ventilation in the operating rooms. Members realize now that they cannot afford to put this off any longer, and have decided to place it in the hands of proper authorities. The meeting was adjourned at 5 45 a.m.

* * * *

The next regular meeting will be held on August 5th, when we will expect to hear the report from the convention. All members are requested to kindly be on hand to pay their assessments and dues.

* * * *

Am informed that Brother Ridder is now employed as machinist and also chief over the film examining department at the Greater New York Film Exchange. He also has a nice soft job in an airdrome on the corner of Bushwick and Myrtle avenues, Brooklyn. Well, "it never rains but it pours," so be sure to make all the "hay while the sun shines." Brother Ridder, that film department has needed a MAN at the head of it for some time. Here's hoping they give you a chance to make good.

* * * *

Anyone requiring the services of competent operators at any time for city or road work, by letting me know, can have same at an hour's notice.

* * * *

On entering the H. A. Mackie Co., Inc., was greatly surprised to see our old friend, Eddie Weil, formerly chief operator with Miles Bros., standing behind the counter with a regular "Sunny Jim" smile. He has been at the Tremont Theatre, at 177th street and Webster avenue, Bronx, for the past three years. He tells me he wanted a change, so he decided to came back downtown. Well, that's to be expected, Eddie, and I kind-a got a hunch that you couldn't resist the call of old "Soubrette Row," but, joking aside, Ed., it looks a little bit like old times to see you back again, especially with our old friend, Mr. Edwards.

* * * *

The stork paid a visit to the home of Brother Louis Hirsch on June 4, 1912, and left a bouncing baby girl. Best wishes to your wife, baby and yourself, Lou, but whisper, what is she going to be, a stenographer or a film examiner?

* * * *

They tell me that Brother Sam Kaplan is in pretty soft now, having secured a nice easy berth at the "Simple X" factory on Thirty-fourth street, far from the "grinding crowd." You are to be congratulated on your good fortune, but would advise Brother Kelban to keep an eye on you, as we don't care to lose you altogether.

* * * *

Pleasing Personalities.—Just a word or two about one of the most jolly and pleasant boys that ever worked in a film exchange (I. M. A. No. 1). Brother Charles Thiel is the one to whom I refer. Yes, he is the same Charlie that handed you the reels in Miles Bros.' a few years back, and he is ready to do the same thing now at the Western Film Exchange, where he has been for about two years.

* * * *

L. P. Raaf,
Niagara Skating Club,
Noord St., Johannesburg, S. A.

Dear Friend:

Received your letter and was very glad to hear from you. Was sorry to hear of your accident but hope you will be able to get around by the time this reaches you, as I want you to keep me posted hereafter on what is being done in the moving picture business out there, especially the operating or projection end of it.

Will write you later. Best regards, I remain,

Fraternally yours,
JAMES GIRVAN.

* * * *

Brother Shanks,
Toronto, Canada.

Would like to hear from you in regard to the doings in the moving picture local and how things are in the projection line as well.

* * * *

The projecting moving picture operators of Rochester, N. Y., formed a union on June 18th, to be known as the Projecting Moving Picture Operators' Union of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. The affiliation becomes a branch of the Rochester I. A. T. S. E., 25, with a charter of twenty members.

The organization was perfected in Painters' Hall, addresses being made by officers of the I. A. T. S. E. The newly elected officers are: President, Roy Fisher; secretary and treasurer, Frank Genereaux; temporary business agent, S. R. Webb. It is said that nearly all of the managers of the motion picture houses favor the organization which has been formed, according to a statement of one of the members, "to promote the interests of the projecting moving picture machine operators in Rochester.

MOVING PICTURES OF CALVARY

A New York cinematographic concern left Jerusalem after endeavoring to obtain pictures in order to produce a replica of the sufferings of Christ, the Crucifixion, scenes and environments, types of the people and their costumes as near as possible to the time when the Saviour lived.

Through a liberal use of money the authorities were persuaded to permit photographers to take numerous scenes of Mount Olivet, David's Tower and the Gate of Damascus. But the temper of the people prevented the authorities from permitting the cinematographic apparatus operating in the vicinity of the holy sepulchre on Mount Calvary, where the Crucifixion took place. The men therefore staged their representation four miles north on a hill very similar in appearance to Mount Calvary.

The day previous to their departure an attempt was made to take photographs of the sacred place. An enormous crowd was gathered at the entrance to the hill, but in the midst of the fezzes and other Oriental types, whose attires are much the same to-day as they were twenty centuries ago, a large number of persons in modern costumes started to raise umbrellas and parasols to protect them from the broiling sun, with the result that they completely spoiled the effect of the picture. The police made an effort to remove them and a riot ensued, when the picture men abandoned the scheme and left.

H. A. SPANUTH LEAVES FOR CALIFORNIA

H. A. Spanuth, president of the General Film Publicity and Sales Company, left for California on Wednesday, July 3d, on an important business matter. News of further developments will be given later.

Ely, Minn.—Ely is to have another moving picture show.

Hutchinson, Kan.—The Iris Theatre on North Main street was sold at public auction.

Radford, Va.—J. B. Akers and Earle Moore, of Roanoke, have purchased the Art Theatre.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

THE Pictureplay Philosopher," of the Motion Picture Story Magazine, philosophizes in the following: "All great deeds in this world are payable in one of two kinds of reward: pence or praise; and the latter is the cheaper and goes the farther. Artists do not paint great paintings for money; soldiers and sailors do not fight great battles for pay; poets do not write great poems for cash; authors and philosophers do not think great thoughts for dollars; inventors and scientists do not exercise their genius for gold. If monetary reward comes to them, as it seldom does, so much the better, but it is not the primary cause of their efforts. And so with the pictureplayers. The stage actors are rewarded by the applause that comes to them over the footlights as sweet music to their ears, as this appreciation gets to be almost as necessary to them as their pay envelopes. The pictureplayer does not receive this kind of reward."

Mr. Brewster has called attention to a fact that has been little appreciated, we think, by the pictureplay fan. Behind the footlights, the Thespian is inspired and spurred to greater heights by the warm plaudits of the appreciative. But the tumultuous applause that finally brings the actor bowing before the curtain, is not for the brother and sister in the motion picture studio. Actors and actresses have temperament; they are artists and have the artistic soul. Approbation to wearers of sock and buskin is as sweet as it is to the painter, the poet, the preacher. Many are satisfied to sacrifice monetary consideration for public laudation. The weakness is inherent to the artist; it is soul-satisfying, a deserved, spontaneous tribute to work well performed. But the approving shouts of the multitude are not for the pictureplayer.

To our mind, the pictureplayer's work is more exacting and more artistic than the actor with the spoken word. The pictureplayer is not incited to more earnest endeavor by shouts from pit or gallery; when the "big scene" is finished there is not applause, prolonged, insistent to compel the principals to appear before their admirers. The artistic effort has been made, the convincing, earnest, detailed labor is there—but the tumult and the shouting is for the footlight favorite around the corner. We take the position that the pictureplayer in sacrificing his love of outspoken praise and approbation, and nevertheless accomplishing the desired end without further hope of reward, has advanced a step forward from the standing army of Thespians and is entitled to the greater credit.

* * * *

One is not surprised to learn from consular reports that the motion pictures are making headway in popular favor in the world's progressive countries. An institution that has proved so popular in this country was certain to prove popular in other countries where people resemble Americans in their taste for amusement. But it is surprising to discover that the moving pictures are enjoying great favor in out-of-the-way corners, and that much the same kind of pictures are popular there as here.

A recent report shows that such countries as Turkey, Egypt, India, Japan and China have developed a marked taste for films and that the American made pictures dealing largely with American subjects enjoy the most marked approval. But the Japanese demand pictures of heroism in preference to all others, and American humor pleases them not at all. A report from a United States Consul in the Fiji Islands is to the effect that American moving pictures create as much interest as is evinced in more civilized countries. If the moving pictures have conquered the Fiji Islanders it can be truly said that they have conquered the world. No people are so savage, so remote from the cultivation of civilization as to be able to withstand their fascination.

It can be honestly asserted that Cinematography has accomplished much within the past few years to bring American customs and American personality before foreign nations. The European's popular conception of an American, a few years ago, was a lean, lank individual with cross-eyes and wearing a dollar-marked suit. Every one was supposed to carry a gun and a rope. A better understanding of America and Americans has resulted from the American-made moving picture. This can be stated despite the fact that "Wild West" pictures have flooded foreign countries. The popularity of these Western stories, with the super-abundance of gunplay, can be put down to the fact that many citizens of foreign lands are loath to believe that cowboys and bandits are not now à la mode in Uncle Sam's domain.

* * * *

We often wonder if the pictureplay favorites who pose in Pictureville appreciate their influence and their wide-spread popularity. In Squedunk and Mudsock, 'Frisco and Gotham, the delightful personalities of the heroes and heroines of Pictureland are intimately discussed. We struck a hamlet in Mississippi a few months ago when we were raking up some necessary material for a special yarn. Grass grew in the streets, the postoffice and town pump were in-gathering spots —but so was the picture theatre.

"There's a good un at the picture show to-night; Costello's in it," remarked Mine Host at the Tavern.

He and his buxom helpmate talked as knowingly of Costello, Lawrence, Anderson, Baggot, Quirk, Pickford, Johnson and the rest as could the most enthusiastic fan of the "first-run" theatre. It is really surprising. John Robinson's Circus and the Stellar Stock Company are passé. The pictureplayer is now first in the hearts of our countrymen. The pictureplayers have a mighty loyal following and it must cheer the hearts of the participants in the Silent Drama to know the fact.

* * * *

Recently we experienced a little unpleasantness at Chicago and then the storm center shifted to the East and there was some excitement at Baltimore. Enough has been written in the newspapers about these occurrences; however, we may now look forward to a deluge of pictureplays having a political atmosphere. In other words the political conventions will furnish material for drama, both silent and spoken. Political dramas are all right, particularly in pictureplay form. They are rather hard to "put over" and we do not envy the editor who will be obliged to wade through bales of political action in his search for the nugget. Like the patriotic film, the political story cannot be produced too frequently for us. Politics is second nature to the true American citizen, and the people like to see political warfare with its plots and counter-plots rehearsed in the moving picture theatre. We have our dime ready, promise to find a front seat, and will be just as enthusiastic as the next one, no matter whether the ambitious pictureplaywright chooses our favorite "courageous leader" for his principal character, or is so benighted as to pick out some one not near so good as T. R.

* * * *

There is far less criticism of moving pictures at present than there was even a short six months ago. The reason is obvious. There is less to criticise. The objections issued so freely by the Moving Picture News against the making and exhibiting of meretricious and demoralizing films have been generally heeded, and the pictures of to-day are of a better average, not only in their mechanical excellence, and plausibility of plot, but also in their moral tone. Millions of dollars are invested to-day in the moving picture industry. The continued success of these investments depends entirely upon the continuance of public patronage. Legitimate manufacturers and the exhibitors' leagues are therefore most anxious to give the public what it wants—not what it does not want. It surely stands to the credit of the public taste, and to the worth of the responsible manufacturer, that the discovery has been made that pictures once threatening to bring the entire industry into disrepute no longer meet with approval. The suggestive picture is short-lived these days, and manufacturers and exhibitors have banded together in a worthy purpose to make it almighty difficult for the irresponsible and mercenary producer to try for even a brief period to injure the enviable reputation long and arduously fostered by those having the elevation and refinement of the industry at heart.

A. K. GREENLAND
Of the Gaumont Company

H. Z. LEVINE
Of the Solax Company

TWO PROMINENT FILM PUBLICITY MEN FROM FLUSHING.

Mr. A. K. Greenland, who handles all of the publicity for the Gaumont Company, is well known throughout the trade. Mr. Greenland before he became identified with the film game was the New York manager for the Billboard and left their employ to assume his duties with the Gaumont Company.

Mr. Greenland makes frequent trips around the country in the interests of his company, and his former training has fitted him abundantly for the position he now occupies.

Mr. H. Z. Levine, publicity manager for the Solax Company, has also made good. The pose Mr. Levine has assumed in the above reproduction indicates that Mr. Levine is very well satisfied with the film business and that it's an easy job to write about Solax products, as he can say they are good and be honest about it. He also keeps busy writing dope for the Magnet and attending "Solax Night" theatres.

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Willson & Co., Patent Attorneys, 715 Eighth Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of any of these patents will be forwarded to any person by Messrs. Willson & Co. on receipt of ten cents. Persons ordering Copies must give Number of Patent

1,030,433. Securing Device for Camera Backs. A. A. Ruttan and C. E. Hutchings, Rochester, N. Y. Assignors to Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.

1,030,540. Photo-Printing Frame. Roy Robinson, Portland, Ore.

1,030,737. Photographic Apparatus. Hubert Lill, Manheim, Germany.

1,029,997. E. A. Ivatts, Paris, France, assignor to Society Compagnu Generale De Phonographes, Cinematographers, Et Appareils De Precision, Paris, France, Lens-Diaphragm-Controlling-Device for Kinematographic Apparatus.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS" (THANHOUSER)

The above production of Ouida's famous novel was full of surprises for the reviewers from various news sheets who beheld in the half light of the projection room of the Film Supply Co. of America the splendid work of the Thanhouser Company in the portrayal of this fascinating story. There is the genuine thrill about the race-track scene; there is the desert atmosphere and the sandstorm scene; and in fact the production has the ring of the true metal all the way from start to finish.

Catherine Horn in the part of Cigarette lends a fire and dash to the production that increases its market value threefold.

There is an easy smoothness and a vivid realism to the presentation that leaves not a jar apart from the intensity of the gripping drama of the novel, which is one of the best ever penned by Ouida.

The review of the story which appeared in last week's issue of this magazine claimed for the production stronger merit than for "Jess." In the mind of the writer there is no comparison in the two pictures. "Under Two Flags" is "head and ears" over "Jess," which was also one of the best.

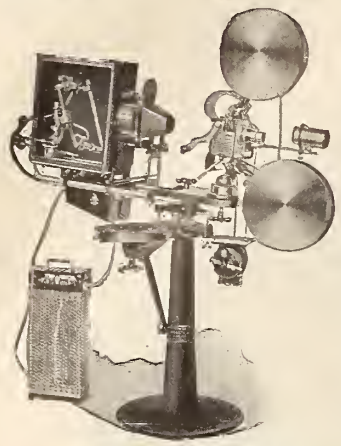
"Under Two Flags" of Thanhouser is gotten up in two reels and will be released through the Film Supply Co. of America on Sunday, July 7.

MARTIN SHERIDAN

World's champion all-round athlete (from New York Police Department, in Commissioner Waldo's office) holding world's record in running jumping, pole vaulting, hurdling, weight throwing, etc., pertaining to teach athletics. Has had Jack Hemment (man who made the Paul Rainey African Hunt pictures) take 1,000 feet of film, showing how athletes are made. This film may be on the market if Sheridan can be persuaded to let the trade have it.

* * * *

Carl Laemmle is going to open an exchange office in New York City.



No. 1000—A MOTIOGRAPH

ARE YOU ONE OF THE FOUR HUNDRED?

MORE THAN FIFTY PER CENT OF CHICAGO'S SIX HUNDRED THEATRES ARE EQUIPPED WITH THE MOTIOGRAPH

This endorsement of the "Home" exhibitor of a machine made in their "Home Town" is the strongest endorsement we can offer.

We do not spend one-fifth the money in advertising that others do—our best advertisement comes from thousands of satisfied users.

Chicago Exhibitors in particular, and all others as well—we want to be personally acquainted with you—we want you to come and see us, to see where and how your MOTIOGRAPH is made, to see the care and exactitude used on each part—we want to show you why we may justly claim THE MOTIOGRAPH THE BEST MADE MACHINE IN AMERICA.

Send ten cents for the 1912 Hand Book and Instructions.
Every operator will find it worth many times the cost.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

WANTED---TWO DIRECTORS

EXPERTS IN THE PICTURE PLAY — Must be capable of handling a large company. Must be gentlemen whose moral character will bear the strictest investigation. Salary no object, to the right men. All who can fill the above, are requested to reply to "HIGHEST GRADE," care Moving Picture News, 30 West 13th Street, New York.

A gf A

Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

POWERS PHOTO-ENGRAVING CO.

The Fastest Engravers on Earth

154 NASSAU STREET

(Tribune Bldg.) NEW YORK CITY

OPEN DAY, NIGHT, SUNDAYS and HOLIDAYS

Phone 4200, 4201, 4202, 4203 } BEEKMAN

OUR CUTS ARE UNION MADE

New Process for Enlarging Half-Tones from Moving Picture Film

Independent Exhibitors

INCREASE YOUR ATTENDANCE
MAKE YOUR THEATER KNOWN
SECURE THE INTEREST OF YOUR PATRONS
HELP RAISE THE STANDARD OF THE WHOLE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

At No Cost To You

The Motion Picture Story Magazine is now printing Independent as well as Licensed Stories. Your patrons will want to read it. You can put it on sale at your theater at no risk to you.

We will ship you the magazine at ten cents per copy, cash in advance, giving you the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of ten cents each. This arrangement protects both you and us. We will send you slide and advertising matter free.

Thousands of exhibitors are now increasing their attendance by the use of The Motion Picture Story Magazine. Send in your order today. You will be surprised at the result. Just fill out the blank below.

Date.....

The Motion Picture Story Magazine,
26 Court St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Inclosed please find $..... for which kindly send me—copies of the Motion Picture Story magazine for the month of ..... It is understood that I am to have the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of 10c. each.

Name .....

Street and No......

Theatre .....

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

McCloskey Sees Improvement

The opinions of the several picture-play editors on the subject of improvement or non-improvement of scripts submitted within the past year are creating wide attention, not only among picture-playwrights but among exhibitors. Several exhibitors have written us kindly presenting their suggestions as to the kind of stories they deem desirable, and we thank them for their courtesies. Mr. Spencer's statement of last week is being freely commented upon by our readers and we take pleasure in giving the opinion, this week, of Mr. L. S. McCloskey, picture-play editor of the Lubin Manufacturing Company. Mr. McCloskey considers several thousands of scripts during the course of a year, and they are of all varieties. He sees an improvement in quality and his views are encouraging. His statement:

"Your inquiry as to whether or not I have found any decided improvement in the quality of scripts submitted to the Lubin Company this year was noticed just at the time I was investigating the same question on my own account.

"I am glad to say that there has been an improvement.

"I am not speaking at random when I make the statement, for the system on which this department is conducted was designed with the idea of knowing whether incoming scripts were getting better or worse. Much time and space would be necessary to describe this system, but briefly it is this: To help writers who show promise and to "keep tab" on their progress. Believing that the idea is the thing, and that the technique is incidental, we encourage the writer with a good, original idea, even though his working out of it is crude. We have found it the rule that such writers generally, if given a little editorial help, will quickly grasp the technical side of picture-play writing and develop into valued contributors.

LAWRENCE S. McCLOSKEY

"While much of the improvement has been wrought by budding picture-playwrights, a good part is due to the entry into the field of noted fiction writers.

"Even yet, however, the scenario department has to hustle to keep the directors supplied with available scripts, and there is room for much greater improvement.

"To this end I believe that more picture-playwrights should acquaint themselves with public taste and producers' requirements. Let them attend as many picture-play houses as possible, read the trade papers and all literature pertaining to their work (not necessarily the correspondence 'schools') and profit by each rejected script in learning why it failed of acceptance."

THE IDEA SCORES

Certain suggestions made by Mr. McCloskey to writers cannot be too strongly impressed upon them. The good, original idea, with or without technique, is bound to score in the end; regular visits to picture theatres is good advice reiterated; reading the trade journals is a habit rightly urged by this capable editor, and an acquaintance with public taste and producers' requirements is an essential often overlooked. When Editor McCloskey urges picture-playwrights to read all literature pertaining to their work, it is noticeable that he exempts "correspondence schools." His argument that a part of the improvement in submitted scripts is due to the entry into the field of noted fiction writers, should not discourage others. The idea is the thing; the original plot and situation may as readily come to the novice.

Next week we shall publish a straight-from-the-shoulder statement from C. B. Hoadley, pictureplay editor of the Powers Picture Play Co.

KEEP YOUR NERVE

"I acknowledge I was frightened off by the tales of the difficulties in the way of scenario writers. But I have sent out ten plays within two months and am receiving exactly the same treatment I have had from other editors of magazines and newspapers. Scenario editors differ in degrees of courtesy, just as the others do. The "Champion" editor was fine enough to acknowledge the reception of the manuscript, which is always a much appreciated courtesy. Only one company has a mode of rejection that rather cheapens the transaction."

The above is the exact text of a letter we recieved recently from a New England lady—evidently a beginner in the script writing field. We cannot see why some should be frightened "by the tales of difficulties." Like any other vocation, script writing must be learned, but the occupation should not be entered into with fear and trembling. If you haven't the nerve to take philosophically the rejection slip, with an eye to the future acceptance, it would be better to try some other profession. Ten scripts sent out within two months by the beginner are too many. More time, thought and study on a lesser number of scripts might bring more fruitful results. It should be remembered that picture-play editors receive hundreds of scripts and that it is indeed a courtesy—and one almost impossible to follow—to acknowledge all scripts submitted. The best magazine editors in the country do not acknowledge manuscripts which are held sometimes for many weeks before the author of the story or article knows the fate of the manuscript. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope with your script, and it will not be lost. We know of no present mode of rejection that would "cheapen the transaction." You submit your manuscript without solicitation; if it is unavailable, the transaction ends then and there and comment is not often necessary.

WHY WRITERS FAIL

Many writers fail to sell their work in the pictureplay field by not knowing the markets. For instance, the Powers Company receives many costume plays and Indian stories which they do not buy. There are hundreds of stories submitted, particularly to Edison, Lubin and Selig, dramatizing copyrighted books and plays—some of them palpable steals. There are hundreds of other picture arrangements that have been done—some of them many times. Others call for trick-dogs, ants, fleas, cows and goodness only knows what else. A prominent pictureplay editor writes in on the subject as follows:

"I received a script some time ago in which an ocean liner was shipwrecked in the night. 'Inky blackness' was the way the writer put it—with thunder and lightning for the spectacular trimmings. About five hundred feet of the story occurred during the storm, two ships were wrecked and a lighthouse was toppled over and the old pond was strewn with floating bodies. It had the Titanic disaster under ten feet of debris for gruesomeness. I sent it back with a note stating it could not be put over. I received for my advice a long letter taking a dig at editors in general and intimated that the ignorant person who returned this marine masterpiece should be stoking a boiler in a glue factory, literally speaking. It is to laugh when one reads some of this 'instruction stuff' handed out by some of the 'schools.' It's one colossal joke—almost criminal—the way some of the beginners are being isolated from their good money."

In other words, remember the limitations of the camera and engage the best instructor or school in existence, namely, experience, for your teacher.

THE ASSIGNMENT IDEA

Certain of the pictureplaywrights, who have won some merited success in the field by patience, study and the hardest kind of labor, are now the recipients of assignment work. Particularly is this so in the industrial script line. We know of one or two companies, having contributors who have been tried and not found wanting, and they have placed certain ideas at the disposal of these writers to be developed into pictureplays. Invariably the idea is one which the director and editor believes will be peculiarly adapted to the style and method of work accomplished by the writer in question. We know of several special pictureplays that have been written by pictureplaywrights upon orders from the producer. There is also a certain concern producing industrial pictures that has engaged pictureplaywrights of tried worth, who are turning out the stories woven about some highly advertised product. The work pays well, but it is a branch of the profession in which technique is of prime importance.

ANOTHER VIEWPOINT

A. W. Thomas, in his Pictureplay Department, asserts the time has come when the pictureplaywright must choose for himself whether his new idea is best fitted for pictureplay or magazine story. He says script editors are pointing out that many of the plots turned in are better fitted for magazine stories than for pictureplays. This is a situation to be figured upon by the writer who can turn out both the pictureplay script and the fiction yarn. Not every writer has that talent, although, in the course of time, greater numbers will acquire the knack.

GEORGE KLEINE'S RELEASES

George Kleine's Cines and Eclipse Releases

The Cines for Tuesday, July 9, is a split reel containing two highly amusing farces, "The Gay Deceivers" and "Leah Learns to Dance." Mr. George Gambardelli, in the role of Tony Stout, apparently a sedate married man, and his son-in-law, Fritz, have a high old time flirting with two coquettish young milliners unknown to each other and are mightily surprised when they chance to meet at the home of the girls. Under the circumstances they are obliged to overlook their digressions and swear to stick by each other through thick and thin. The climax of the fun comes when, on the following day, the milliners, in delivering hats to the respective wives of the gay Lotharios, find their recreant sweethearts there. Here the fun is fast and furious.

The second subject, "Leah Learns to Dance," is one in which the popular Cines comedienne makes lots of fun as a novice at the terpsichorean art.

The offerings for Wednesday, July 10, is a powerful Eclipse drama entitled, "A Mysterious Case."

A poor inventor calls on his brother in an endeavor to borrow money to carry on his experiments, but is refused. After he leaves the house his brother, in some mysterious manner, is seriously injured. Of course, the inventor, having been seen leaving the house, is suspected and arrested. The story and action from this point is very intense. The plot of the story is well sustained and the acting consistent throughout.

The Cines players will be seen Saturday, July 13, in a highly interesting light drama entitled "For Her Father's Sake." Dorothy Ferrari, as the daughter of the Marquis, plays the leading role in a very convincing manner, while Lorenzo Lupi enacts the father with dignity and reserve.

The story is amusing as well as interesting, and splendidly acted in scenes of beautiful settings for which this company is becoming well known.

THE SCENARIO EXTRAORDINARY

Speaking of scenarios, the press agent of the Lubin Manufacturing Co., said: "We certainly do get some birds. Here is one, received a day or two ago. Ephraham Blodgett, a country minister has a daughter, Ruth. She is not as pious as the father could wish, and in one of her rambles she runs across an actor who is with an itinerant troupe playing at the opera house. The bad thespian flirts with Ruth, and to make an impression, gives her a pass for the show. She asks Dada's consent to go, which puts the old man in a towering rage. As girlie's mother is dead, it is up to the minister to chastise his child—(Bus., this to be done very carefully)—then he sends her to bed. In the troy light the dorter escapes from the parsonage and goes to the show. When she returns home she finds the house locked up and she has to sleep on the verandah in the rain. (Bus., the rain effect can be made with a garden sprinkler.) Next day she receives another chastisement and is turned out of doors. (Never more be child of mine.) That settles it, the show leaves town and the virtuous maiden goes with it. The news quickly spreads among the congregation who, strange to say, take sides with the girl. The minister is given three days (one of which is Sunday) to leave the town. Childless and aimless he wanders out into the world and becomes a derilect. In the meantime, the girl having protected her horror falls in love with the actor, they get married and buy a nice little suburban home on the installment plan. A few years pass and father goes from bad to worse, driven to hunger he conceives the idea of burglarizing a cottage. In the dead of night he climbs through a window, he is in his daughter's house. The husband only partly dressed comes down stair, siezes the burglar. The wife follows, she explains, "Do not hurt him, George, he is me father!" Explanations follow and all is forgiven.

McCloskey, our editor, sent the script back with the note, "Thanks for the opportunity of reading your scenario, but we are not making any more Theodore Kramer dramas at present."

TUBERCULOSIS PICTURES TO BE SHOWN IN PARKS

The Department of Health has announced that many moving picture shows to teach the public about the dangers and prevention methods of tuberculosis would be given this Summer in various parks in the vicinity of New York City.

The Tuberculosis Committee of the Charity Organization Society has assisted the department in the work, selecting the films and supervising the exhibitions. The exhibitions begin at 8 p. m. and are scheduled as follows:

July:

1—Tompkins Sq., Avenue A and E. 10th.
2—Hamilton Fish Park, E. Houston and Willett Sts.
3—Corlears' Hook, Jackson and Cherry Sts.
5—Seward Park, Essex and Division Sts.
8—Mulberry Bend, Baxter and Bayard Sts.
9—Hudson Park, Hudson and Leroy Sts.
10—Washington Sq., University Place and 4th St.
11—Union Sq., Broadway and 14th St.
15—Alex. Hamilton Pk., 10th Ave., W. 27th St.
16—De Witt Clinton Pk., 11th Ave. and 52d St.
17—Recreation Pier, W. 129th St.
18—Recreation Pier, E. 112th St.
22—Recreation Pier, W. 50th St.
23—Recreation Pier, Barrow St.
24—Recreation Pier, E. 24th St.
25—Recreation Pier, Market St. and East River.
29—Crotona Park, Tremont and 3d Aves., Bronx.
30—Claremont Park, Webster Ave. and 170th St., Bronx.
31—St. Mary's Park, St. Ann's Ave. and 149th St., Bronx.

August:

1—Linden Park, Dumont Ave. and Bradford St., Brooklyn.
5—Playgrounds, Riverdale Ave. and Christopher St., Brooklyn.
6—Bushwick Park, Knickerbocker Ave. and Starr St., Brooklyn.
7—Greenpoint Park, Driggs Ave. and 12th St., Brooklyn.
8—Winthrop Park, Driggs Ave. and Monitor St., Brooklyn.
12—Sunset Park, 5th Ave. and 43d St., Brooklyn.

Handbills announcing the exhibition are being distributed by the nurses of the department.

Notes of the Week

The Wilmington, Del., Journal puts this one over:

"This moving picture business is becoming more strenuous. A photographer has gone to Brazil with a machine to take a reel showing a boa constrictor in full action. Let us hope the serpent will not swallow both the photographer and the reel. However, if such a tragedy is to come to pass as a result of this bit of moving picture enterprise, no doubt it will please those who have the moving picture habit if there be another moving picture man close at hand that he may take full advantage of the unlooked-for and tragic situation. The American public is becoming ever more exacting in its demand for thrills.

* * * *

"A demonstration was given on Monday, June 24, in High Holborn of a new moving picture film which is non-combustible and which, it is said, entircly obviates danger from fire in moving picture theatres," writes the London correspondent of the Boston Herald.

Lieut.-Col. Fox, president of the Fire Brigade Officers' Association, indorses the new film after test as having all the merits claimed for it.

* * * *

Through special permission granted by the Board of Education there was held Thursday afternoon, June 27, at 2:45 o'clock, in the Jamaica High School auditorium, an exhibit of the remarkable pictures of the Kinemacolor Company of America. The pictures include the pageant procession of the recent Indian durbar, the unveiling of the queen's memorial statue, the coronation of King George, the killing of a snake by water beetles, scenes in the Swiss Alps, Lapland and sunset on the Nile.

The pictures are being given under the auspices of and for the benefit of the General Organization of the school.

* * * *

The Federation of Clubs in Iowa is taking active steps to have moving picture shows exhibit hygienic subjects throughout the state. This effort contains a rich suggestion for every rural woman's organization. If several districts, contiguous to each other, have clubs and could plan together to get a good moving picture show to exhibit successive nights in schoolhouses, entertainment and educational features would be combined to good advantage.—July Farmer's Wife.

* * * *

The following from Dr. Frank Crane, though not altogether of motion picture interest, may be of value to those who are possessed of the necessary courage to lift the lid and look in:

The Moving Picture Man was showing us how certain miraculous views were made.

To represent people climbing up a steep wall rapidly, you simply lay a painted wall-scene on the door and place the camera above it and let the people crawl by. In a similar way dogs and men can be shown running on ceilings.

There are many strange things in human experience that can be made plain by remembering that the brain is a camera on which events are recorded as scenes on a moving picture film.

And there are persons with inverted brains, tilted brains, and brains that do not stand still, but wobble, and so produce marvelous things.

Many plain and ornamental liars are simply people who tell truly enough what they see, but who see abnormally. Their conceptual camera is not level.

Miracle mongers, folk who see visions, psychic subjects, and the like, are such.

Science is of value because it teaches us to hold the brain-camera level.

Those who believe outlandish nonsense, those who hold absurd and twisted views of life, see the same old world we see; only their camera is loose and shaky—or up-side-down. And whose brain-lens is perfectly firm and level?

The moving picture as an educator has had many successful trials, says the Politische Korrespondent (Berlin), and in proof of the assertion refers to the pictures on sanitation, natural history, botany, anatomy, etc. The latest step in that direction was made recently by Dr. Ludwig Munch, of Farmstadt, who employed the motion picture to demonstrate mathematical problems, "and by this means enabled those students who were unable to grasp the questions and methods of solution in their original form to thoroughly understand the work."

* * * *

This is a good one from the Youngstown Telegram:

One of the scenes of a motion picture drama in one of the local theatres recently represented the interior of a large hospital, with nurses walking about, and rows of patients in a large ward.

The scene impressed one man in particular.

"Isn't that natural?" he said to his companion. "I can almost smell the iodoform." He sniffed a little, then exclaimed emphatically:

"By George, I really can smell it. What do you think of that? Isn't it wonderful what they can do with those moving pictures?"

The remark brought a broad smile to the face of a man who sat back of the speaker, and who held under his coat a hand which was bandaged and which showed plainly from whence the odor came.

* * * *

A moving picture concern has offered Lewis Waller $10,000 for the rights to produce "A Butterfly on the Wheel."

* * * *

The City Council of Indianapolis within the next week will be asked, it is said, by the officers of the Indianapolis Moving Picture Theatre Managers' Association to pass an ordinance controlling motion picture theatres similar to a law now in force in San Francisco. A heavy penalty will be attached for the displaying of nude, immoral or obscene films. The Council probably will be asked to raise the license fee for moving picture theatres from $25 either to $50 or $75.

According to the moving picture theatre managers, there is no law or ordinance authorizing the city comptroller to collect the customary license fee of $25, which is being paid annually. The managers, however, assert that they not only are willing to pay this fee, but are willing to co-operate with members of the City Council in attempting to pass an ordinance that will raise the fee to $50 or $75 in order to facilitate the prevention of irresponsible persons engaging in the business.

* * * *

For the purpose of winning back from the motion picture houses to the legitimate theatres those who have changed their allegiance, and to lure with them those who have come to find their entertainment in the moving picture, the Messrs. Shubert, Messrs. William A. Brady, Lew Fields, Marcus Loewe and others have formed a circuit of theatres embracing thirty cities in the East and the Middle West and will send over it companies which will play at ten, twenty and thirty cents and others which will demand the regular prices of $1.50 and $2.

* * * *

It is reported that Chicago promoters will erect a moving picture and vaudeville theatre to seat 9,000 people in the downtown district of Detroit. It is also reported that Klaw & Erlanger attractions will be billed at this theatre.

* * * *

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A handsome motion picture theatre will be built at the southwest corner of Broadway and E. Twelfth street.

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Before taking up a review of other pictures that were seen here the past week it might be well to mention the arrival of a new picture operator in the city. Remember last week I stated that there was a new manager at the New Central and that Sidney M. Nutt, the proprietor, was being called "Papa"? Well, the Lyceum, not to be outdone in this respect, has also taken an interest in increasing the census, and Leo King, who married Miss Dorcia Dillow, the cashier at the Lyceum, a little over a year ago, was telephoned to the past week to hurry home. Leo made haste and, sure enough, there was another youngster. I understand, however, that his wife, who was a most charming young lady, is not very well and that the arrival has caused her quite a shock. However, we are all hoping to see both mother and baby out in the near future and the mob is waiting the time to catch Leo back of the baby carriage on Central avenue.

There are persistent rumors that the old Grand Opera House will soon be remodeled and turned into a first-class theatre, some stating it will be vaudeville and pictures, while others contend that it will be for the bigger attractions. These rumors, though, do not disturb the peace and quiet of my friend, J. Frank Head, manager of the Princess and Airdrome, who goes merrily along, realizing that he also has the Auditorium and, better still, contracts for the big shows coming here this winter.

The Eagles are to give a farce comedy at the summer theatre in Whittington Park on the evening of the day this will appear in print, and yours truly and "The Lady in the Baths" will play opposite to each other again for the first time in five years. The bill is the old farce comedy, "Captain Rackett." The county judge and other men of prominence are in the cast. I am playing "Timothy Tolman" and my better half is handling "Mrs. Timothy" in the same merry manner she did when on the road. In honor of the event the Moose Lodge will attend in a body, a compliment to the Eagles and myself and wife.

The New Central has contracted for a big feature every Monday in connection with their regular show, and the first of this special output brought "The Tale of Two Cities" to Hot Springs, where it was received by great crowds. I want to commend Cines for their French historical pictures. I have yet to see a bad one, and their "Josephine" was a treat. I think that their stage director deserves special commendation for the manner in which he produces this commendable class of pictures. Cines is the most popular foreign film coming here.

"Fighting Dan McCool" aroused a great deal of attention. He was a great scrapper, was this "Fighting Dan," only it was a good thing that the Kalem stage manager gave him a charmed life. Otherwise the picture wasn't so bad. They might tell you that the old feeling between the North and the South has all passed away. Forget it, brother, if any one hands that to you. When this reel was on some "Rebel," forgetting where he was, rose up in his seat in the New Central Theatre and yelled:

"Go it, you Rebs. Give them Yankees H——!"

Looks as if they have "forgotten," doesn't it?

"A Bachelor's Waterloo" created a great laugh, for which we are indebted to Lubin, while the "Golden Wedding Anniversary," with special elucidation as to the trials and troubles of Maurice Costello as the photographer, was one of the many good things that Vitagraph has sent the past week.

Thanhouser's industrial reel, "The Cry of the Children," was one of the best reels of the week, and our Socialistic brothers and sisters have not finished praising it even to this day. "Cupid Through the Padlocks" was O. K. from the American studio and Eclair gave us a rather novel idea on the "High Cost of Living." "Jimmie as a Hypnotist" was a great success, and Gaumont was accorded its quota of commendation. The "kid" is a wonder.

Took a run to Little Rock the past week and found several nickelodians out of business, but the Majestic, Gem and Royal were doing excellently. No wonder, either, for they are all first-class houses. I am taking a "flyer" to Hope, Ark., where I deliver an address at a big civic open air meeting in the interest of the Moose, and I'll look the picture trade over there and report next week. Here's hoping for hope!

The Arkansas Hot Springs, June 26.—No doubt the editorial mind will at once perceive that this letter is started by writing "The Arkansas Hot Springs" instead of "Hot Springs, Ark.," so explanations must be in order. There is a reason, too, and it is embodied in the fact that the city is rather jealous of its name. The people realize that there are many Hot Springs scattered throughout the country. One town of that name is located in Kansas. Still another can be found, I think, on the map of Oklahoma. There is one in the Golden Gate state, and the famous Virginia resort of the same name has long been a rival. But, good brothers and sisters, there is only one "Arkansas Hot Springs," and that is why we of this locality are taking special pains to impress the fact on those who receive communications from the "valley of vapors." That, too, is the reason why the men in business in this city are changing their letterheads to read "Arkansas Hot Springs."

MANAGERIAL DISAPPOINTMENTS

If there is one thing in the wide, wide world that will cause a manager to tear his hair and bust the Ten Commandments it is to advertise like a circus some special production and then, on the date it is to be given, find that the exchange got mixed up in their booking and that the said feature had not arrived. You managers where there are exchanges to whom you can go do not appreciate what it means to be disappointed, but two houses got "stung" here the past week and it was really very sad.

The New Central Theatre had taken up the greater part of the daily papers to tell of the coming of Vitagraph's big production, "The Tale of Two Cities," but on the date of its appearance the train from St. Louis came in without it and the "tale" remained untold. The manager, Sidney M. Nutt, knew why it hadn't arrived, for the reason that he had burned up the wires in an effort to find out, but the audience did not know it, and "Mr. and Mrs. Audience" were there in force, with all the little "Audiences," and it required considerable explanation to make one and all realize that it was not a "stall," but a real, honest-to-goodness disappointment that the manager had suffered.

While Mr. Nutt was almost "nutty" from explaining, down at the Photo Play the manager was telling his patrons how great the "Crusaders" were and assuring them that it would be on hand the following day, but when the train pulled in it was found that the conductor had not collected any tickets from gentlemen of this nature, and that night another explanation was forthcoming. Oh, no, it's a mistake to say that they were "peeved." To intimate that they were "angry" would scarcely cover it. In fact, one might state that they were "riled" and then fall short of descriptive adjectives. "Wild" might get one within speaking distance of the truth.

This is the second keen disappointment that Mr. Nutt has had, for it will be remembered that when "Cinderella" was booked at the New Central that the young lady was so unfortunate as to get tangled up in an Iron Mountain wreck and about 2,000 feet of her charming self was scattered over a vast area of track and Arkansas soil. I will say one thing for Mr. Nutt—he's no "piker." He waited until he had the pictures of "A Tale of Two Cities" in his theatre and then he started advertising all over again. Not only did he give the three reels of this Vitagraph feature, but he also included his regular run of three reels, making six reels in all, and as one of the reels had two pictures on it his patrons saw seven motion pictures for ten cents. There are some managers who will state that such a show was entirely too much for the money and hurts the trade generally. Forget it! The New Central Theatre seats 600 and by 7:30 o'clock that night standing room was at a premium. It was a great program, the biggest and best that any one man has ever offered the lovers of this industry since motion photography first appeared in the city.

"The Crusaders" finally appeared at the Photo Play, a day or so late, and it, too, proved to be all that was expected of it.

HALT LYRIC IMPROVEMENTS

There's nothing like a restraining order to tie up progress. If you have any doubts on this point, write to Harry Hale, manager of the Lyric Amusement Company, this city, for Harry is qualified to speak with authority on the subject. The Lyric, you understand, has been closed these many days. The front is open—wide open—for a new theatre is being erected there, but as it is located beneath the United States Hotel the proprietor of that hostelry decided that his entrance was being covered up and went into court and procured a restraining order, stopping the work on the new theatre until the difficulty could be amicably settled. When the Lyric is finished, which it will be by the time the winter season opens, it will be one of the prettiest in the city.

SELIG'S BIG FEATURE

The New Central has been advertising Selig's big feature, which will appear here this week, "The Coming of Columbus." I asked Mr. Nutt if he thought that Christopher would arrive on schedule time and he stated that there wasn't the least doubt about it.

"You see, I have that all fixed with the exchange in St. Louis," he said. "They have promised to send the film out of there two days before I have it booked here, so that will give Christopher ample time to ramble into my house."

Selig is sending out a lot of excellent press copy for this reel, and the place will be packed. The entire town is awaiting its presentation with much interest, and I certainly shall take pleasure in reviewing the same.

A KALEM FRIGHT

I have had occasion many times to commend the Kalem production, but I saw one of their pictures at the Lyceum this week that made me yell for the police. It must have been a reel that was numbered among the early productions of this company, for surely they know better by this time. It was entitled "In the Jungle," and it sure should be sent back there. The one thing that made the audience howl, aside from several raw inconsistencies, was the scene where the hero takes a meat axe and severs the arm of the gent who played the "heavy," after the latter had been bitten by a snake when he entered the jungle to find and take him back to the "gell" who loved him. Lord only knows how long he went without being discovered, but it was the left arm, right near the heart, mind you, and this was chopped off and he never even bled to death, notwithstanding the fact that an artery would have been severed by the operation. Kalem, that was a positive fright, and I shall try and forget it. Now, your picture, "Egypt as It Was in the Time of Moses," I am informed, was a treat, so we'll forgive the "Jungle" on condition that you are not guilty if you don't do it again.

THE EAGLES SCREAMED

The local lodge of Eagles gave a benefit at the park the past week, when Hot Springs talent played "Captain Rackett," presenting this merry comedy under the title of "Two Married Men." I had the pleasure of helping the cast out, as did also the "Lady in the Baths." We handled "Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Tolman." The summer theatre was packed and we had more fun out of it than a bag full of monkeys in a peanut foundry. It was a big success. Between the acts other talent of the city introduced vaudeville specialties and the show ran nearly three hours. The Eagles sure screamed for pure joy. My good Brother Moose are now pestering the life out of me to stage a comedy for them, which I will have to do in the very near future.

"The Bell Boy" company is certainly producing the goods at the Airdrome, and "S. R. O." is the rule there each night. It is one of the best musical attractions that has ever been seen in Hot Springs, too. Manager Frank Head is mighty glad that he slid vaudeville off the boards and picked this company to bring the crowds back, for they are doing that nightly.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

"THE TRUE LOVE"
Majestic Release July 9

SCENES FROM "THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF"
To be Released by Gaumont Company on July 30th

AN INTERESTING AUSTRALIAN LETTER

Sydney, New South Wales, June, 3, 1912.
(King's Birthday—Holiday)

Editor of Moving Picture News,
New York City.

Sir:

Things in the moving picture line are at the present time in a sort of "mixed pickles" condition, caused by the numerous factions in the business, and the mastery for the lead, and I guess that it will all end in something, but what, I dare not make an attempt to guess.

The four oldest firms, and four of the leading ones at that, have formed a combine and joined their wealth and strength into one concern, and they have at their back the largest amount of capital of any other firms or companies in the game out here, under the heading of the Amalgamated Film Supply Company, Limited. The firms that have joined the combination are Wests Limited, J. & N. Tait, Limited, Johnson & Gibson, and Spencers Limited; the combine has also bought out the business of Pathé Frères and have taken over all their assets and liabilities in this part of the world, and are making a strong bid for the film business of Australasia. On the other hand, the International Pictures Limited are plastering billboards of Sydney, putting forth their reasons why they have kept out of this combine; and J. C. McCullagh, managing director of Universal Films Limited, is on the fence with the two other combines, but he doesn't seem much perturbed at what either of the other parties are doing, and seems to go the even tenor of his way and let the rest do the same, and I think in the long run, that it will simply be a survival of the fittest.

To my own way of thinking, I think there is going to be a big slump in the moving picture business out here, and that before long, but there is not the least doubt in my mind but what the moving picture is but in its infancy as yet, and great strides will be made yearly, and great perfection made in the making and the projection of them to what they are to-day.

Another thing that will have to be done to keep up the interest in the public eye is, they will have to make the actors change their faces more, for it is a great deal like the canned music that is sold; there has been too much of the same singers' voices for years, and surely that is not a difficult thing to do, as an actor on the stage makes up and loses his personal identity in the part, and I hear the remark made daily, "Why don't the artists ever make a change in their personal appearance, by making up, so as to conceal their looks now and again?" They need not do it in every film, but now and again there is plenty of chance to alter one's looks by a little grease paint, wigs, etc.

Personally I think that the amalgamation of the large firms was one great mistake, for virtually they lose their identity; and, on the other hand, I think that the world has about had its fill of trusts and combines, for they have, in the greater majority of cases, been more of a curse than a benefit.

Then again, why should there be all this infighting to try and best the other fellow? But I regret to say that there is as much jealousy as in the medical profession. Then again, there is this to be said, that there is not one of the firms mentioned above that does not compete with the smaller fry by being exhibitors, and running shows against the patrons that are hiring films from them; in other words, they are trying to serve both God and mammon at the same time. Messrs. Gaumont run a hiring out business, Messrs. Harrington, Limited, and Clement Mason, Limited, run film exchanges, but do not show or exhibit.

There are several local producers in this city, and one that has in the past done a fair amount in Dupind American films, and may be doing so to-day; but I do know that in the past he has done so, and he may be doing it now for all I know to the contrary.

Were I to mention that firm, there would be some amazement in film circles, but as there is no law that can make me tell unless I feel inclined, I am not going to say more at present on that subject, but I am going to keep an eye on them all the same, and some day I may blow the gaff, when they least expect it.

There are new buildings for the pictureplay going up in all parts of Australia, and in the course of three weeks there will be two at least opened in this city, one in Melbourne, one in Adelaide, and one in Perth.

I believe that there are others projected, and in fact I am pretty certain of it, but I will not give the names of the parties that are building them, for fear I might knock them, and they would get their hair off with me for so doing. So it is best to keep these matters to one's self, and not be in any hot water with them if things do not pan out just as they inform you what their intentions are in the matter.

The Crystal Palace is announced to open its doors to the public on June 24th, but they have not got the place finished yet, and there may be another delay. I will say this much for the theatre portion: it is the finest in Australia so far, and it will take a lot of beating. The company have put in a very fine Estey pipe organ that will be quite an acquisition to the place. The writer had the pleasure of playing on it a few days ago, and I must say it sounds well, and in the hands of a good performer should add largely to the drawing power, especially for Sunday night concerts.

It does seem as if the very devil had taken possession of the hyper-good in this part of the world, in regard to the opening of these places of harmless sort of amusements on Sunday, and I guess that if the whole thing was sifted to the very bottom, there would be found that there were others that had a big pecuniary interest in trying to get them suppressed, for there is no gainsaying the fact but what they have made a cut in the theatres and vaudeville houses, and I have always noticed whenever there is a hue and cry raised in any matters of this kind, there is behind the whole thing some ulterior motive for all the smoke, and where there is smoke there must be some fire as well.

The writer of this article put the question direct to one of the police inspectors in this city, as follows: "Inspector, if you had your say in the matter, which would you rather see on a Sunday night, these picture shows open or closed?" And the answer that he gave me was as follows: "I would let them all open their doors (the moving picture shows) and make a charge for admission to them, but I would keep a close censor over the kind of films that should be shown on these nights." And I asked if he found the work of the force less when these places were open Sunday evenings, and he told me that it kept the people off the streets, it kept them away from doing something worse, and it also made them better in many ways, by going to these shows; that the masses that were in the habit of attending them would not go to church, and if they could not get this kind of amusement, they would simply go up or down the harbor to some secluded place and they would get into something worse than looking at picture shows, and he was not far out when he stated that, to my certain knowledge. You can sure lead a horse to water, but you cannot make him drink.

I do not wonder that the people do not attend church more than they do, for as a rule all of the churches I have been in, in this part of the world, are so badly seated that if you wanted to be even partly comfortable you could not be, and most of the "sky pilots" in charge are dull and uninteresting, and they never miss the collection plate, no matter how often the place is open to the public.

Then again, they would hold up their hands in holy horror if you were to broach the subject of using a machine to project films on the screen, or a lantern to show some of the many lands, especially where the Master trod while on this earth.

Again, talk of a Puritan Sabbath in my native state—Connecticut—why, I never saw such a Sabbath in all my life as they have here. It is the one day of all I hate to see come, and glad when the clock strikes 12 midnight for the Monday. They are too pious to let you buy a box of matches on that day, and a man never wants a drink on Sunday, no matter how much he does on Monday.

The trouble is, they will have to wait for a while, until some of the old fossils die off and younger blood gets in power, before they get woke up from their old laws of way back in the realms of antiquity, of George I of pious memory, etc. The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath, and the sooner they wake up to that fact, the better it will be for this part of the world. Let the churches put in a moving picture machine in their churches and let good religious, historical and scenic films be shown, with an intelligent man that can speak in a manner that all the congregation can hear, and not go drawling out his words like as if he had lost his mother-in-law, and I will wager my life that that church will have no lack of attendance, and there will be a much more plethoric collection when they call for the dough.

Then again, let them spend a little in the papers to make the fact known that on the following Sunday there will, in place of the regular sermon, be a descriptive lecture on such and such a film, and I will bet that when it is time to commence the service there will be only one thing to do, and that is to hang out the "S. R. O." sign, or else the "House Full," as the case may be.

You have got to attract the young, and the old, and you can't do it unless you have something more attractive than the average parson that I have seen and heard in the churches in this part of the world.

I have written this article in no spirit of disrespect to the members of the cloth. I respect an honest and sincere religious person, either male or female, but I despise a canting and crawling hypocrite as I do a venomous snake. I don't think that all the hue and cry will ever down the picture show, but they are urged to pass so many laws to not only harass, but annoy the proprietors, that some day there will be something doing to put a stop to it.

The matter of fact part of the business is, there are far too many laws already, and it would be a good job if they shut up the law shop for five years and gave the people a rest before trying to tinker up some of the old antiquated laws that ought to have been expunged from the books two hundred years ago. There are many today here who would go back to the ways of our ancestors, and would consign the railways and motor cars to oblivion, and would go back to the old stage coach and post horn and burn tallow dips in place of the electric light. They are a back number, living to save funeral expenses, and the world would be well rid of them. The times change, and so do the people, but these old fossils will never change until they are cremated.

W. H. HUBBELL.

"DON," THE WONDERFUL HORSE

Features in the Two-Reel Solax, "The Equine Spy"

"Don," the horse that has been appearing in vaudeville and earning $500 a week, and whose value is said to be more than $10,000, plays the leading role in "The Equine Spy," the Solax two-reel feature release of August 23.

The horse does wonderful—almost unimaginable—"stunts." He carries messages, steals papers and ammunition. He displays more intelligence than some human beings. The owner of "Don" values him at $10,000. A horse with an earning capacity of $500 a week or $20,000 a "vaudeville year," is surely worth $10,000, if not more.

"Don" is a fine-looking horse, is jet black, lean and a thoroughbred. He has all the characteristics of a race horse. He is a fine specimen and possesses the nervousness always so evident in high-bred animals. Anyone with red blood gets a thrill of pleasure after a glimpse of graceful "Don" going across a stretch of country bearing on his back wounded Darwin Karr or carrying Fannie Simpson to Karr's rescue.

HALLBERG EQUIPS THEATRE COMPLETELY IN VIRGINIA

Mr. Thomas Parsons, of Cape Charles, Va., has purchased through Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," a complete oil engine electric lighting outfit, Power's No. 6 moving picture machine, 400 opera chairs, and all the necessary wiring lamps, and supplies for the equipment of a new theatre at that place. Mr. Hallberg also reports a splendid trade in moving picture machines of all makes, Hallberg "Economizers," ventilating and exhaust fans—in fact, says the business is twenty-five per cent better than last year at this time.

Houston, Texas.—Alfred Hill has bought from the Shearer Amusement Company the Airdrome here and will continue to operate same.

AVAST ON THE SWAN BOAT!

They don't use swan boats for gondolas in pictures any more! When a film maker has a scene calling for the employment of gondolas he no longer rushes to the nearest park and picks the handiest swan boat. No, swan boats are left to pleasure-seekers who will spend a dime to travel in style on the park waters; and Mr. Film Producer builds himself some real gondolas. Whereupon the motion picture is much benefited, for the nearly-real gives place to the really-real and there are no coarse comments from the audience. Genuineness is as welcome in a film as in other articles. For films, after all, are mere articles, a little more interesting than some others, to be sure, but articles to be bought and sold just the same. That they may be good articles is all we may ask.

"The Merchant of Venice," by Thanhouser, should be a

"good article." Certainly this company have spared no pains to make it such. Herewith is a scene in the studio yards at New Rochelle showing that the park swan boat has gone out of date. The studio construction crew is seen gathered about one of the gondolas they have built for use in the two-reel Shakespearean feature. The release date of "The Merchant of Venice" is Tuesday, July 30.

THE LIFE OF BUFFALO BILL FILM CONTROVERSY.

Buffalo Bill Has Appealed from the Decision of Judge Gerard to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York.

Col. Wm. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and Major Gordon W. Lillie (Pawnee Bill) have appealed to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court from an order made by Judge Gerard, denying them an injunction pending the trial of their action against Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Co. They announce that the case will be fought to the bitter end and taken to the highest court. They are anxious to have the matter disposed of as speedily as possible, so that the present or intending purchasers of the rights of these films may have no complications.

If they should be successful eventually, then all persons who have purchased the rights from the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Co. will in all probability have to account to them.

FILM SUPPLY COMPANY POSTER CONTEST

In order to stimulate an interest in the designing of film posters among the manufacturers releasing through the Film Supply Company of America a most effective method has been adopted; a joint display of all the weekly collection of posters from the different manufactories are exhibited at the offices of the Film Supply Co., 133 W. 44th street, giving each of the manufacturers represented there an opportunity of comparing their own posters with those from other firms.

This is a good scheme, and should be productive of better poster results.

New York City, N. Y.—The Fleischman Amusement Company has purchased the moving picture theatre at 2226 Seventh avenue.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

INDEPENDENT

SLIPPERY JIM

Solax Release, July 17

Faith Merrill, a young girl who has been strictly reared, meets and loves the stranger, a handsome dare-devil fellow whom all like, as soon as he drops in their midst. The couple marry. Ideal happiness follows until Faith, accidentally learns that the man she worships is a member of a robber gang, wanted by the police. Deeply as she loves her husband, his duty, as she sees it, is to give himself up and take his punishment.

The girl, her soul torn between love and duty, as she sees it, finally staggers from the room, after a dramatic scene with her husband. Jim thinks that she has gone to prepare for their voyage. Not so. Reaching the upper floor, the girl enters her bedroom. Inside the door she falls on her knees. "God," she prays, wringing her hands, "save his soul. Save his soul. Don't let him hate me for that which I am about to do. Save his soul." She takes down the receiver, telephones police department, and gives up her idol to the law. This she does with a broken heart, but with an inward conviction that only by this hard method can salvation be accomplished.

Jim, waiting below in blissful ignorance, is presently surprised by the police, shows fight, is wounded, and is arrested after a very effective fight.

A year later, Faith, in an agony of expectation and love, waits. Jim has that day been released. Will he forgive? During his year's imprisonment, he has persistently refused to see his wife. Love conquers. Jim rushes in, catches her to his heart, kisses her repeatedly. His better nature had conquered. He tells her he has forgiven, that his life shall henceforth be worthy.

Presently Faith, on some pretext, leaves the room. Jim moves about gazing at the loved familiar objects about the room. Finally he seats himself before the open grate fire and becomes lost in thought.

Faith softly enters with a sleeping infant clasped in her arms. Unheard by Jim she approaches him and lays her hand upon his head. Jim, smiling, catches her hand, and presses it to his lips. Then he looks at her and springs to his feet, his hands clenched. Spellbound he gazes, until the truth floods his soul. Completely overcome, he falls to his knees and clasps the tiny hand of his child. The other arm he clasps about his wife's waist and buries his face in her soft gown. "Slippery Jim's" redemption is complete. Faith lifts her face, glorified with happiness and closes her eyes in prayer.

THE FOUR FLUSH ACTOR

Solax Release, July 19

This story deals with the adventures of a "ham actor" who tries to "make good" in moving pictures. This Ham comes into the studio and assures everyone, including the directors, that he is the "real thing." He assumes that air of "I'll show you dubs" and starts to do things. He not only gets into trouble with the camera man and everyone else but makes a general nuisance of himself.

The film shows, besides its ludicrous story, many of the methods in film production.

This is one of the scenes, which is characteristic of the story. A Seaside Scene—The Ham, in Summer costume. The leading lady also in Summer costume. Three girls in bathing suits—listening to orders—then step out of the picture. The Ham is supposed to flirt with the leading lady—makes her acquaintance—then he hears a cry of help—he bravely goes after one of the supposedly drowning bathing girls, but he trips and turns a somersault—and soon is in need of assistance himself. They drag him out, roll him on a barrel and there's an end of his moving picture career. There are also a number of laughable incidents on the ledge of a precipice—the harm trying to ride a horse and be a cowboy and such funny stuff.

HEARTS IN CONFLICT

Imp Release, July 15

Andrew and David, brother fishermen and life-long friends, start for the fishing banks, but before their destination is reached their boat is wrecked and David is drowned. Andrew returns home a saddened man, determined to do all in his power for David's daughter, Angelina, whom he adopts, and in time comes to love as dearly as his own child Elinor.

The years pass, and the two girls, who seem sisters in reality, are approaching womanhood. Elinor and Ralph, who is known as the village flirt, are sweethearts, but her father does not trust the young fellow and forbids his daughter to receive his attentions. She, in order to blind him, plans to have Ralph make love to Angelina. He agrees to this, and later discovers that the foster sister has in reality won his heart.

Elinor surmising this sends Ralph a note asking him to meet her. This through chance falls into the hands of Angelina, and she to test his fidelity, has it delivered to Ralph. She decides, however, to be an unseen witness at the meeting.

Ralph explains to Elinor that his heart is now entirely her sister's and he intends making her his wife. Elinor, realizing her plot has indeed been successful, throws her arms about him and pleads with him not to forsake her. All this is seen by Angelina, though she cannot hear the conversatio. She is stunned by the revelation and reproaches Ralph for his perfidy, and refusing to listen to his explanation, rushes away to the shore. Arriving there, she extends her arms appealingly towards the water, begging her father to take her to his home, when to her overwrought mind, she seems to see her father's image rising from the water, urging her to come to him. And she blindly walks through the waves towards him.

Ralph, fearing Angelina will be drowned, throws Elinor from him and dashes after his sweetheart. He reaches the shore and rushes into the water, seizes his sweetheart and bears her safely to land. Here his presence restores her to a normal condition, and after all is explained she forgives her lover and promises to be his wife.

WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY

Imp Release, July 18

Luther Clews, a Kentucky gentleman of the old school, finds himself at the opening of the story in financial difficulties. His son, Howard, owns Queen Bee, whom the father and son expect to retrieve the family fortune as she is entered in the famous Latonia Derby. Young Howard has lost heavily on a previous race and without his father's knowledge has given his note for $5,000 to Doc Martin, an unscrupulous pool room owner doing business in Lexington, Kentucky.

Martin knowing the great value of Queen Bee and thinking that if she were scratched, his own Eagle would win the Derby, induces young Howard to give him a mortgage on Queen Bee to secure the note. The day Howard is to ship his horse to Latonia, Martin forecloses. At this juncture, Howard's fiancee buys an interest in Queen Bee.

Martin secures the assistance of a friend who endeavors to poison the animal in order to prevent her entry in the race. The plot is foiled by Howard who is secretly watching his pet. The race is run, Queen Bee is victorious and fortune again smiles on the Clews family.

BUILDING A CHURCH IN A DAY

Imp Release, July 20

Eight hundred persons worshipped one night last week in Elbethel Methodist Church in Spartanburg, S. C., which was completely built in a day.

The first nail was driven at six o'clock in the morning by Mayor A. H. Kirby, who said the edifice was handsomer than the first Methodist Church, which required a year to build.

One hundred and fifty carpenters, painters, paperhangers, plumbers, electrical workers and other artisans, working by a carefully arranged system, had the structure completed by sunset. By seven o'clock the mission heads were installed, the aisles carpeted, the altar placed and decorated with flowers, and a pianno was in place in the choir loft.

During the day the work excited the interest of many people and it is estimated that fully 18,000 persons visited the spot and watched the progress of the erection of the building.

On the same reel:

THE FOREIGN INVASION

Michael Dolan has been long enough in this country to imbibe American national sentiment and he resented having to purchase whiskey at a saloon kept by a smiling Dago. His resentment was intensified by some newspaper statistics that he read dealing with alien immigration.

Dreaming a dream, he witnessed the curious spectacle of people of various nationalities taking active part in public affairs. For example, he sees the Asiatic in control. In other words the Yellow Peril has led to officering of the country by Japanese men. Other nationalities, in the garbs of their countries, also appear in this picture much to the horror of Micheal, who has to endure the greatest agony at the grotesque sights he sees in his dream.

Of course, he awakes from his dream and getting down to the stern realities of life is sent to the wash tub by his wife, who admonishes him against excessive drinking and idle newspaper reading.

The comedy is of a quaint turn, telling an amusing story in grotesque fashion and acted in the spirit of the tneme by a capable company.

GETTING EVEN

Powers Release, July 17

"Getting Even" is a refreshing little comedy with all the scenes laid in the open and the backgrounds are very picturesque which lends a distinct charm to this picture.

Percy Jones takes his sweetheart Dollie Vaughn and her mother to the country during the heated period and there the party meets Hank Hawkins and Ezra Jackson, farm laborers. Percy lords it over the husbandmen and the city people make the pair the butt of many a joke.

Percy and Dollie go boating and espy the farmers working on the shore. They concoct a little scheme and it works admirably. They pretend the boat is sinking and shout lustily for assistance. Hank and Ezra hear their cries and rush to the waters edge. Hank divests himself of shoes and hat and swims to the boat only to be laughed at by the city lovers. He swims to the dock and vows vengeance after relating his humiliation to Ezra.

A few days later Percy and Dollie go rowing again and the boat springs a leak and is sinking fast. The occupants are frantic and their shouts are heard by Mrs. Vaughn. She rushes to the lake, and sees their predicament and runs for assistance. Ezra and Hank are working and decline to contribute again to the enjoyment of the city people. The mother is frantic and appeals to Hank on her knees. He again plunges in and saves Percy and Dollie. Dollie sees the contrast between Percy and Hank and falls genuinely in love with Hank. The latter leads her up to a declaration of love and then shows her the picture of an actress telling her it is a picture of his sweetheart and she is piqued and urges Percy to take her home. The closing scene is at the railroad station with the people from the city aboard the train bound for home and the young country youths evincing gratification at having gotten even with their visitors.

"RIP VAN WINKLE"
(2 Reels), Released Saturday, July 6th.
Taken in the heart of the Catskill Mountains.
Great cast. Special three and one-sheet posters.

RELIANCE

"GRANDPA"
Released Wednesday, July 10th.

"THE TOY 'PHONE"
and Natural History
(Split Reel), Released Saturday, July 13th.

Coming Releases; "At Cripple Creek" (2 reels) Wednesday, July 17th; "Love Me, Love My Dog," Saturday, July 20th; "The True Love," Wednesday, July 24th; "The Soldier's Baby," Saturday, July 27th.

Sold only through the FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA.

UNDER TWO FLAGS

Gem Release, July 9

First Reel.

Bertie Cecil, a member of England's nobility and its most exclusive military order, the National Guardsmen, idolized by the men and lionized by the women of his set, realizes his gilded beggary. Indifferent to most things of life to a degree of carelessness, he finds particular diversion in innocent flirtations with married women. Lady Guinevere likes him in a silly sort of way, but she values her diamonds and the thing she calls her pride more than she does her attachment to Bertie, so she determinedly resolves and consistently manages to keep the romance from her husband's prejudiced observation.

Bertie's brother Berkeley, even more shiftless, reckless and extravagant than his elder brother, loses heavily at gambling and asks Bertie for financial assistance. Bertie patiently but sadly explains that he cannot meet his own debts, but the boy sulkily doubts his sincerity.

At nine o'clock that night Lady Guinevere visits Bertie in his home. And at the very time they are conducting their clandestine flirtation, Berkeley goes to a Jew money-lander, offers a note for sufficient money to cover the deficit, and signs his brother's name, endorsed by a friend, Lord Rockingham.

A little later the last slim vestige of Bertie's fortune is wiped away. Rockingham's eight-year-old sister comes to him—they're in the garden and the approaching night seems to symbolize the darkness of his heart—and offers him some gold. Bertie is touched and saddened by the sweet sincerity of the child, but tells her he cannot accept the money, and that when she has grown to womanhood she will know the reason. He asks for the little enamel box in which she carried the gold-pieces for a memento, and receives it just as he is summoned by a messenger to Rockingham's quarters. Arrived there, he finds Lord Rockingham and the Jew money-lender, with the forged note. Rockingham pleads with him to deny the charge, and explains where he was the night the note was executed. If Bertie speaks, he must sully and soil a woman's name; if he spares her, his silence must be accepted as admission of his guilt. Deaf to the plea of his friend and the sneers of the Jew, blind to the anguish on Rockingham's face and the cunning and glow of unholy victory on the face of the Jew, he keeps his silence and his faith with Lady Guinevere.

It is only a few minutes later, when the Jew attempts to place the handcuffs on him, that he realizes he is under arrest. All the wild freedom of his reckless spirit suggests one course, one act, one daring defiance, and obeying the insistent impulse, he rushes off and escapes.

He goes to Africa and engages under the French flag. And in Africa the life that he thought he left behind, buried under the fair reputation of a respected woman and the honorable guilt of a cowardly boy, looms up to mock and menace him, a sneering, jeering Nemesis, pursuing and tormenting him with all the relentless mischief and malice of a guilt incarnate.

Second Reel.

Cigarette, soldier of France and daughter of the Army, Cigarette, a bit of fiery, furious humanity bundled into a wild child, Cigarette, tender and brutal, gentle, jealous, generous and domineering, Cigarette, a kitten with a tigress in her—Cigarette was to learn the bitter definition of pain.

She loved Bertie—loved his soft speech and his sad silences. She had seen his reckless loyalty in battle, his humanity toward the foe, his tenderness toward the wounded of both forces, his gallantry and subdued, resigned manner—and she loved him. His naturally cold English impassiveness, heightened and emphasized by the utter indifference to the memory of the past and the concealed promise of the future, puzzled and annoyed her—but she loved him. He looked upon her wild dances and riotous revelries with a little disgust and a great pity—but, oh, she loved him.

Ten years he had lived under the French flag and the African sun. He was older than his years—his soul was as old as the very Egypt that had stolen into his heart. But the memory of before still lived and lingered with him.

To Africa came a party of tourists—from England. They visited the barracks. Among the women in the party was a sweet, young, beautiful slip of a near-woman. She was to Bertie a link of the past, a vision of the happy yesterday that had died. He was to her—only a soldier of France. But somehow they became acquainted, and somehow she became interested in him. We can't explain the mysteries of life.

And Cigarette saw—saw the light in his eyes as they followed the slight, lithe form of the other woman, heard him speaking to his secret in the silence—and her wild heart filled with pain and rage.

When he fell wounded in battle, Cigarette dragged him from the red field to a shack in the outskirts. And through the long, black night she nursed him, her lips clinging to his—because he would never know of it. And when he trembled in the chill desert night, she covered him with her tunic, and crept shivering closer to the meagre fire. It was the love of the Amazon. Then, faintly, feebly, she heard his voice and a name. Eagerly she listened, her heart beating a prayer—the only prayer her being was ever known to make. But the whispered name was the name of the other. She choked the sob and flew from the tent, that he might never know.

One day the English woman saw the little enamel box, now rusty, battered and tarnished, the little box that had symbolized a treasure and a pleasure only less than the memory itself of the sweet child who thousands of hours before had offered him the money it contained, that he had carried through all the wars and woes of the past ten years. She saw it, and started and stared; and asked him where and how he obtained it. He related the incident—and she told him it was she.

She explained that Lord Rockingham was with her in Africa, and begged him to stay until her brother returned to the house. With a sudden , startled fear he begged her not to disclose his presence, and flew from her.

Once, on a street in Algiers, he looked into his brother's face. The boy was a man, even if not very much of one. He greeted Bertie with a vague, trembling fear, a hollow horror that the other would usurp his place and power. But Bertie told him to leave Africa with his title and his honor, return to England and live his life according to them.

An irresistible something drew him back to the woman. It might have been England calling to him, or peace, or love—it might have been all three. He went again.

The Colonel of Bertie's regiment, who hated him with a blind and bitter passion, saw him come from the house, and in jealous rage demanded to know why he had gone there. Bertie was silent, again shielding a woman's name. The Colonel sarcastically insinuated that the aristocrat was cold to her equals and carried on her midnight intrigues with the blackguards of his camp. A moment after the deed Bertie realized that he had struck him.

He was court-martialled, found guilty, and sentenced to be shot on the morrow. Cigarette heard and realized, realized also that she had no time for despair or tears. Frantic with grief and dismay, she ran up the street—and stopped to peer into a face. The face was the face of Bertie, the face of an Englishman, with the stamp of his order. She stopped him and excitedly told him all, and learned he was Bertie's brother. To her the boy confessed all, and not waiting, she had him write his statement, snatched the paper and dashed off for the marshall's tent.

Her story was told and proved. The stay of execution of sentence was given her, and she resumed her break-neck ride against the sun, pitifully appealing to time, as have so many others on nights that seemed but a group of moments, to keep back the day.

She rode into the scene of the execution just as the command was given to fire. Her shout, "Stop in the name of France," came a moment too late. The command had already been given, and the guns were speaking their dirge. But even fleeter than the leaden death, she hurled herself from her horse, in front of Bertie. After the first moment of dull, despairing astonishment he realized that she had sacrificed her life for him, realized in the last chapter all the devotion and integrity of her love. Slowly he dropped his head until his lips met hers. But the long-longed for sweet had come too late, and the victory of her love was too late to be anything but defeat. Once she smiled, a sweet, fleeting smile of triumph, and in the kiss that she had hoped and lived for, she died.

In England, on a night of mystery and many stars, Bertie and She sat together. Sadly they smiled at each other. They were thinking of a distant grave, the human cost of their happiness.

THE CALL OF THE WEST

Champion Brand, Release July 15

An entirely different story from the ordinary Western. The usual story shows the Easterner tiring of the quiet life or the profligate son disinherited by an irate father, leaving his home of wealth and luxury to try his fortune in the West. This story deals with a real Westerner who comes into a fortune left by his uncle in the East. One clause of the will provides, however, that the legatee must live in the ancestral house in the East, otherwise the fortune is lost.

Bill Smith accepts the conditions and goes East. He is soon settled in his new home, surrounded by every luxury money can buy. But these things do not appeal to Bill. He longs for the free life of the prairie. Naturally he is much sought after owing to his wealth and new position. He gains the clubs, attends balls and receptions, where the idle rich are wont to congregate. Still he is far from happy.

One day at his club, Bill protects Edith Mason, a little flower girl, from the insults of a half drunken loafer. In the scrimmage the girl received a blow. Bill takes her to her home in his auto. They soon become fast friends. Edith's mother is a consumptive. She receives a letter from her brother in the West telling of his coming to New York to take her west with him, where it is hoped the climate would benefit her. Bill calls on Edith and is shown the letter. Much to his surprise he finds that the Uncle is Pete Curley, his former friend and fellow cowpuncher.

Bill shows Pete the sights. As the time for the departure of his friends draws nearer, Bills longing for the West grows stronger. He realizes that his new acquaintances tolerate him because of his wealth. This he proves by a clever ruse. After bidding good-bye to Pete and Edith, in whom he becomes very much interested, he returns to his home of luxury. He is very unhappy. The call of the West is too strong for him to resist. He writes a note to his lawyers, relinquishing all claims to the estate and rushes madly to the station just in time to gain the little party, as they board the train for the Glorious West.

THE FLOWER OF THE FOREST

Nestor Release, July 8

Jim Fielding, a venturesome and selfish young man, is at the head of a hunting expedition. To show his friends how little he cares for danger, he leaves them behind and is soon lost in the woods. For two days he staggers hither and thither vainly trying to find a passage out of the dense and seemingly endless forest. At last, his supplies gone, his strength deserts him and he falls unconscious to the ground.

Wanda, an Indian maiden known as "The Flower of the Forest," goes out to gather fagots and comes upon the prostrate form of Jim, who revives under her tender ministrations. Later he's carried to the Indian camp.

In a couple of weeks, Jim is completely restored to health and is eager to return home; the Indians, however, have other plans and detain him. Fretting under this enforced imprisonment, he silently watches his opportunity to escape. The psychological moment comes when the Indians, en masse, go hunting, leaving Jim and Wanda alone. The man makes violent love to the girl, who believes him implicitly. She guides him to safety and is then brutally told to go back whence she came.

Basil Russett, an old settler, takes the young man to his shack. Bella, his daughter, looks upon Jim with favor. Her mother disapproves, stating that the stranger has an evil eye. Meanwhile, Wanda, assisted by old Russett, reaches the settler's humble dwelling, where Jim is unmasked and unceremoniously put out of the house.

A GENTLEMAN OF FORTUNE

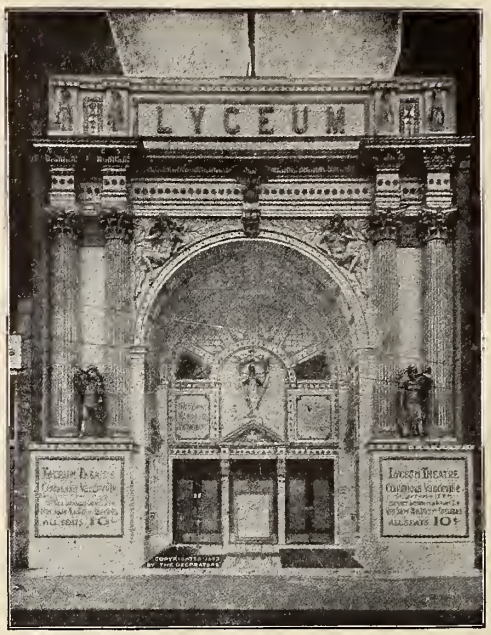
Nestor Release, July 10

Phil Willing, though possessed of a good heart, becomes the leader of a band of outlaws. The evil life he leads is not to his liking and yearns to become a respectable citizen. When Margie Billings, the sheriff's little daughter, crosses his path, Phil resolves right there and then to cut loose from his companions.

At church, the following Sunday, he is recognized by a visiting deputy and promptly taken to jail. Little Margie pleads for him but to no avail.

The outlaws, free from Phil's restraining hand, go on a rampage. They successfully rob the sheriff's home, the mistress being an invalid and alone with Margie. The little girl manages to reach the deputy, who is keeping watch outside of Phil's cell, and apprises him of the robbery. The deputy and other men immediately give chase to the desperadoes. Margie finds her mother in a faint and rushes out in search of aid. Phil comes to her mind, and with the forgotten jail key she lets him out. The freed man rides like the wind to the nearest doctor, and, on his return to the sheriff's home, is recaptured by the posse who have also caught the fleeing robbers.

Thanks to little Margie, the sheriff deals kindly with Phil, who is escorted to the State line and told to ride ahead and ride fast.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

YOUNG WILD WEST CORNERED BY APACHES

Nestor Release, July 12

Starlight, a beautiful Indian girl, is betrothed to Young Bull, the chief's son, whose love she does not reciprocate. Young Wild West comes in the nick of time and saves Starlight from the clutches of her savage adorer. The girl gladly joins the Americans' camp.

Young Bull, vowing revenge, lies in wait for Young Wild West. They meet and a terrific hand to hand combat ensues. The Indian brave is vanquished; his recital makes the old chief rage with anger, which causes him to command the Indians to bring back the girl at any cost.

Notwithstanding the American's watchfulness, the red men succeeded in carrying out their chief's mandate; but Young Wild West is not to be denied. With a few of his followers he gets on the trail and retakes Starlight. This causes the Indians to go on the warpath and a big battle follows. Young Wild West and his sweetheart, Arietta, hold many braves at bay until their ammunition is gone, and then, just as they are being captured, his friends come forth with Young Bull in tow. An exchange of prisoners is soon made and peace restored. Starlight returns to the American camp.

THE OCTOROON'S SACRIFICE

Republic Release, July 22

There are many and varied tales told of hardships and cruelties of the South before the war. In spite of the nobility of the genuine Southern families, there were many alien slave holders whose treatment of the slaves was anything but laudable.

The beautiful Octoroon was the property of an unscrupulous French adventurer whose son was a typical "chip of the old block." After being accosted time and again with insulting propositions from both father and son, she finally runs away and by a clever ruse evades the bloodhounds and negroes that have been put on her track.

About this time Eveline, a little Southern beauty, in a teasing mood jumps into a row boat to evade the caresses of her sweetheart, Frank Lee. As the boat nears the center of the stream she laughingly waves to her sweetheart on shore and in so doing loses her oars; in an effort to regain the oars, the boat is capsized and the girl is thrown into the stream. The Octoroon who is hiding in some bushes nearby, sacrifices her chances of freedom by leaping into the water and rescuing the young girl.

Eveline becomes very fond of her and finally persuades her father to buy the Octoroon from her French owner. The young Frenchman when he meets Eveline falls madly in love with her in spite of the fact that the young lady shows her preference for Frank Lee, a handsome young Southerner.

The Frenchman through his father, manages to almost ruin Eveline's father, and when all honorable methods of love-making have failed to win Eveline, he does not hesitate to threaten her father with ruin unless she accepts him. The Octoroon hears of this and thinking to save Eveline by sacrificing herself, she makes an appointment with her former master and during a struggle the man is thrown over the cliff and is dashes to pieces on the rocks below.

Young Lee is accused of the murder on circumstantial evidence and is locked up in the county jail. In the meantime, the Octoroon, weak and ill from exposure comes to the hut of a poor "white trash" family—here she learns that young Lee is being held for the murder of the Frenchman and in spite of her weakened condition and the fear that she might again fall into the hands of her former owner, she braves all dangers and appearing before the authorities confesses how the young Frenchman came to his death.

Her sacrifice brings happiness to two loving hearts and peace to her before she dies, as the result of her painful experience.

THE ALL-SEEING EYE
Republic Release, July 15

A power more than worldly is the means of unraveling a mysterious murder which had no eye-witnesses.

The Canadian lumber country, noted for its hardy men, is the center of this strange tale of love, hatred and conscience. Tom O'Hara, the foreman of the Bleecker Lumber Company, is in love with the daughter of his employer, and although his suit is looked upon with favor by all, his course of true love does not run smooth, owing to the tactics pursued by Pete Le Faner, a bully, whom Tom had to thrash more than once for his cowardly attacks.

Le Faner has at one time been deeply in love with Rose Baptiste, the beautiful daughter of a lumberjack, but finally tiring of her beauty, he cast her off. The girl told her father who vowed to avenge her honor. The opportunity came when Le Faner followed Tom and his sweetheart and then purposely picked a quarrel.

Tom, unable to withstand his taunts, sprang at his insulter, and in a few seconds the men were locked in a deadly embrace, while the girl rushed to the camp for assistance. Tom succeeds in thrashing Pete until the latter cries for mercy, then leaves him while he follows his sweetheart. As Pete is left alone, the father of the girl he has ruined rushes upon him and makes him pay with his life for the girl's honor. Rose has in the meantime obtained help and upon returning to the spot where she left the two men, only the dead body of Pete is found. Tom is at once arrested for the murder and is held for the jury. The conscience of the murderer, however, will not permit him to rest and in a moment of remorse he confesses his crime to the sweetheart of the man who is awaiting death in a prison cell.

THE DREAMERS
Eclair Release, July 16

Mrs. Fuller has an ambitious daughter named Dorothey, and a literary but impecunious young tenant named Edward.

In exchange for much belated rent, Edward is engaged to prepare Dorothy for entrance to college, and Edward though very busy writing a prize-story finds time not only to instruct but fall in love with his pupil.

A relative's sudden appeal for financial aid causes Dorothy to give up her scholarly aspirations. This occasions much sorrow to Ed. but incites him to increase his efforts for winning the prize.

Things, however, go worse, Edward's food supplies give out; a relentless collector takes away his typewriting machine; and, worse yet, Edward receives news of his father's death, together with a small sum of money left by the deceased in payment of a debt to an old friend of his heirs.

In spite of all difficulties and temptations occasioned by the money in his custody, Edward completes his story. Lacking the price of postage, he pawns his overcoat and after mailing the manuscript and purchasing some food, Edward returns home shivering in the cold but none the less hopeful.

Dorothy unearths a coat that has belonged to an uncle and through the transom throws the coat into Edward's room. This discovery of the coat, its refusal and final acceptance results in the bethrohal of the giver and the recipient.

Later on:

Edward in his room. One of the committee to pass on the story enters tells him that he has won the prize and hands him the certificate and package of bills, amount of prize. Edward, elated, bethinks him that he had better take his coat out of pawn. Leaves to do so—puts it on and then takes the old coat back to Dorothy—and also the good news. As he hands her the coat an envelope falls from it's pocket. He reads the superscription and notes that it is the name of his father's friend. "Why, Dorothy, is this youn uncle?" "Yes." "Then you are the heiress to whom, according to my father's directions, I am to give this. Take it." She signs no—pushes it back to him—for both of us—he understands, as he takes her to his arms—the others are about to enter—see the situation—tip-toe off.

And thus the dreamers realize their sweetest dream.

THAT LOVING MAN
Eclair Release, July 18

Bob Anderson is the sole remaining heir to his uncle Henry's great fortune. But Uncle Henry has old fashioned ideas, that young men should and do things of greater fruit than lounging clubs and leading cotillions. So Uncle Henry puts it up to Bob to go to work or be cut off from any inheritance. Bob is so highly incensed over such a proposal that he, a society leader, should become a factory worker, which is the work that his uncle proposes. Bob tells his fiancee of his Uncle's degrading suggestion and expects her sympathy only to find her of the same mind as the Uncle, she begs him to accept and go to work. Bob refuses and she breaks their engagement.

Bob plans to get even by making love to other girls, hoping to provoke her jealousy to a point where she will take him back. This plan fails, his finances run out and he plans to die.

Bob writes a circular form of letter to each and all of his creditors and erstwhile sweethearts in which he blames them by inference of being the cause of his contemplated self-destructions. Letters are sent out for delivery, Bob looks for weapons of destruction and discovers an unopened bottle of wine. He decides to have one last "Tipple," drinks it and is soon victim of the "sleep of the grape."

The notes arrive at their addresses and each addressee determines to rush to Bob's apartment to try and prevent his terrible contemplated end. Creditors and sweethearts arrive, find Bob spread out on floor with many murderous looking weapons scattered about. They think him dead and their expressions of grief commence. Their wailings awaken Bob, he arises, face agrin over the joke of it all. But they do not take it as a joke, rather they leave in high dudgeon.

In the end Bob decides life is too sweet to end, he accepts his uncle's original ultimatum and goes to work. Uncle Henry saves him form his creditors and his girl takes him back.

DETECTIVE FUZZLE'S TRIUMPH
Gaumont Release, July 25

This film is one to be enjoyed by the appreciators of the humorous in motion pictures. Its story is simple and ridiculous; everybody behind the scenes is busy making up. The clever danseuse in her hustle and bustle to reach the stage has time however, to receive a valuable pearl necklace from her stage admirer, an English Lord. Answering her cue, she rushes from the room, dropping her pearls in her undergarment. She returns, to find to her alarm that the jewels have disappeared. She summons the famous detective Zigoto. This noted sleuth commissions his two subordinates, Detectives Fuzzle and Summers, to take care of the job. The mysterious comedians respond to the obligations placed upon them, the former by taking a most serene nap on a bench under a side window, the other by upturning everything in his search for the coveted necklace. In the meantime the Lord buys the actress an exact duplicate. Summers spies him, mistakes him for the thief, and leads him as prisoner to the detective Bureau. In the meantime Fuzzle is rudely awakened by a thump on his head. Upon investigation he finds the necklace which has been brought from above as the maid shook out the ill-fated undergarment. With his prize in hand, he also returns to the bureau, arriving simultaneously with his comrade. Surprise, joy, humiliation, triumph all ensue.

THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF
Gaumont Release, July 30

2 Reels.—A Drama of 1796.

The gray, bleak, silent prison castle of Roucras still towers ruggedly above the vast expanse of crag and sea that isolates it from the rest of humanity.

It was in this impregnable place that captives of the state were condemned to imprisonment, and that the French government during the Revolution of 1796-9 sentenced all plotters found guilty of treason. It was in this Bastille that they were convicted on the thinnest of evidence to confinement for life or still more often proscribed to death.

In this silent fortress of Roucras on the rugged cliffs of the Bay of Gascony close to the frontier of Spain lived the prison Governor, his wife and mother. His young wife was indeed a charming being, the embodiment of all delicacy and life that contrasted sharply with the desolation and loneliness of her enforced solitary habitation. To the prison Governor and his family it was but of ordinary significance to receive a warrant of long imprisonment daily for some new victim.

However, on this August evening the Governor starts back with amazement, mixed with horror when he finds that his colleague of early years, the Marquis de Fiers, is the next victim to the doomed walls of the dungeon. Without any explanation to his family, the executive hastens to the wide stairs down which the prisoner is descending and holds out his hands with a promise that while he remains at the head of the institution he will see that his prisoner is as comfortable as possible; but poor de Fiers is unable to respond to the cordial greeting of his friend as his hands are securely bound behind him. The Governor's wife, alarmed at the actions of her husband, starts in pursuit and is surprised to find him so pained and worried over the arrival of the prisoner, a thing which heretofore has been a commonplace occurrence, and inquires the reason. He explains to her the circumstances and she understands at once, with the result that she decided to do all in her power to make the lot of Roucras' latest captive as pleasurable as possible. Setting aside the prison rules and regulations the Governor visits his captive, asks him to dinner and also allows it to become a regular custom for the Marquis to spend his evenings with his pretty wife and mother.

De Fiers and his fair hostess share a passion for music wherefore many pleasant hours are spent in playing and singing to the accompaniment of the harpischord. Unfortunately, however, the prisoner is overcome by his hostess' charm of femininity and all unwillingly and without evil intention is carried away by her singing and beauty to the extent of engaging in a dangerous flirtation. While the pair are momentarily enjoying terms that are rather too friendly the Governor's mother happens into the room and discovering this circumstance informs her son of his wife's supposed infidelity.

Consumed by jealousy the Governor's friendship and laxity turns to hate. He plans that the Marquis must now die and under the guise of helping him to escape he in reality forces his prisoner to commit suicide. Further impetus for his dastardly deliberations is engendered when he receives a letter from the court requesting him to release the prisoner on whose behalf further exonerating evidence has been conclusively supplied. The plan he works out is that the prisoner without knowledge of his pardon must kill himself. Under the guise of assisting the noble man to escape he presents him with a rope and file, the former to help him descend the precipitous wall of the

"A Man After My Own Heart"

Alton Crosby, Dreamland theatre, Willmar, Minnesota, says: "It is our aim always to give the people more than their money's worth, believing that in the long run this is the best business policy!" There speaks a man after my own heart! That's the very policy that has made the Laemmle Film Service the staunchest exchange in the business today! I'd rather give my customers more than their money's worth every day of the week than spend my time thinking up schemes to gouge them out of their last cent.

Mr. Crosby says further in a letter addressed to my Minneapolis office: "I desire to express my personal appreciation of the very excellent service you have been giving me. I am pleased to note a very marked improvement in the quality and arrangement of the program." He is one of the many who are "universally delighted" with Laemmle Films, Laemmle Service and—if you please—Laemmle Luck! What in heaven's name keeps you from hooking up right away?

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
SYKES BLOCK, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1312 FARNAM ST., OMAHA, NEB.
421 WALNUT ST., DES MOINES, IOWA.

The BIGGEST and BEST Film Renter in the World

tower, having carefully arranged that the rope is too short so that the prisoner will be dashed to pieces at the bottom of the castle. The Marquis thanks his friend and sets vigorously to work on the iron bars of his cell, soon succeeding in removing one and throwing down the rope, thereby letting himself down hand over hand. Too soon does he realize that he has been foiled when he gets to the end of the hempen ladder, and attempts to climb back to the top only to find that his strength is exhausted and that he must loosen his hold and slide to destruction.

Morning brings returning consciousness and the Marquis recovers to find the fast rising tide the next enemy he has to contend with. Crawling painfully away, dragging his bruised body over the rugged rocks of the prison base, he is soon overtaken by the surging inrush of the sea, but manages to combat it successfully and reach safety, drenched to the skin and fainting from want of nourishment.

In the meantime the Governor has conveyed to his wife the fact that the Marquis has been pardoned by letter from court, and filled with that malice the like of which only jealousy is capable of producing he hands this letter of deliverance to his wife, suggesting that she be the bearer of the good tidings to its consignee. Little suspecting the schemes which have been carried out against her friend she rushes to the prisoner with the turnkey to release him. Finding that he has escaped, the two return to the Governor in unguarded excitement where the wife is openly accused of proving faithless to him through her intimacy with the Marquis. In his fury he acknowledges having allowed the prisoner to escape, thereby hoping to effect his death. During this scene of declaration a letter is received from the escaped prisoner, who while forgiving his friend for the attempt on his life assures him that he has no cause whatever to be suspicious of his fair spouse. On the strength of this letter the Governor is relieved of his mental turmoil; he understands that the relations of his erstwhile prisoner with his wife have been harmless and if anything the result of his super-jealousy and subsequently he begs for forgiveness for his unfounded suspicions, eventually succeeding in restoring happiness in the isolated family in the prison castle of Roncras.

THE TRUE LOVE

Reliance Release, July 24th

RELIANCE.

Angry because he fails to keep an appointment with her on time, Dorothy breaks her engagement with John, giving him back his ring. He goes to his club and takes a few drinks with his friend, leaving the club at a very late hour. On the way home he protects a shabby girl from a tough who is treating her brutally. The tough and John fight and John succeeds in knocking him down. Then he takes the girl, Mary, to his apartment where he places her in charge of his housekeeper. Next morning the housekeeper recalls the girl to his mind and he is quite at a loss to know what to do with her. He tells her she had better go home, but she begs him not to send her away, that the tough will kill her. In his perplexity he thinks of Dorothy, but she has left town. Then he sends Mary to his country home with the housekeeper. He returns to town again but is very lonely and goes up into the country. Mary is already deeply in love with her benefactor and John is beginning to return her love when Dorothy, regretting the broken engagement, visits him with her mother. His old love for her awakens and when she insists that he go back to town with them he consents. Mary sees Dorothy kiss him and is heartbroken. John tells Mary that he is going away with Dorothy. At first she is hurt and grieved and then she becomes angry. She writes a letter to the tough telling him that if he comes after her she will return with him to the city. A few days later the tough appears. He taunts her and she is half sorry that she sent for him. Dorothy and John ride by in the motor car and again Mary becomes furious. She tells the tough that John wears a lot of valuable jewelry and bids him to go after it. He loses no time and attacks John as he is walking up the path. Dorothy, seeing the tough, runs away; Mary watches the two men struggle. She is glad that the tough is getting the better of John until he suddenly pulls a revolver. Then she remembers John's kindness to her and her own love of him, and, rushing toward the men she interferes as the gun falls to the ground. She picks it up and orders the tough away.

Dorothy returns with help, but John, realizing the real worth of the other girl and her great love for him, takes her into his arms and presents her to Dorothy as his future wife.

"THE SOLDIER'S BABY"

Reliance Release, July 27

During the War between the North and South, Dorothy's father leaves his home to defend the cause of the Confederacy. The little girl, while picking flowers along the road, is met by a certain general every day. They become great friends. Each day as he rides by he waits for her. But one day she is not in the road and he has to ride on without seeing his little friend. The child is very sick and in delirium she calls for her father. The mother despatches a colored boy with a note telling the father of the child's illness and desire to see him. Upon receipt of the note he calls upon the general and asks permission to go home. This is refused him. But that night Jean steals away to the cottage. His absence is discovered and a guard despatched after him and he is captured and placed under arrest by the general. The next morning when the general rides by Dorothy's home he stops in to see the child and finds her very ill, still calling for her father. The mother, weeping hitterly, explains the situation to the general who realizes that it must have been Dorothy's father whom he had placed in the guard house. He immediately send a boy with an order for the prisoner's release. Upon being freed the father rushes home and the general gives him leave of absence until the child recovers. So Dorothy's life is saved.

THE COOK CAME BACK

Majestic Release, July 7th

Miss Slim's hoarding house is a mecca for old maids who have turned their backs on conceited man forever. The colored cook is the only man allowed in the house, and even he is dispensed with when Miss Slim discovers his family in her kitchen eating heartily while her hoarders are clamoring for enough food to keep them from starving. A woman cook is advertised for and the advertisement falls into the hands of two striking waiters, who, being desperate, arrange a plan whereby one of them can impersonate a woman and thereby get the coveted position. Miss Slim appears to possess a beautiful head of red hair, when, in reality she is as bald as a billiard ball. An afternoon nap by the open window results in her losing her red wig out of the window and the waiter finding it just when he needed a wig to complete his disguise. He succeeds in getting the position, but during a secret visit of his friend, the cat is let out of the bag, and the colored cook is welcomed back to his old place in Miss Slim's kitchen.

"THE LOST MESSENGER"

Majestic Release, July 9th

Tom Saunders, messenger for the First National Bank, is a hard-working, steady fellow who lives happily with his beautiful young wife and sweet little baby. Thus, the surprise of his many friends and business associates is great when he suddenly disappears, leaving his wife and babe alone and penniless. His wife struggles along as best she can, but is finally forced to give up her home and live in absolute poverty. To add to her troubles, the baby is taken seriously ill. The doctor who is working to save the child's life is also interested in a case at the hospital of a watchman who has been badly injured by thugs while on duty at the docks. The watchman recovers his health but his strange actions interest the doctor, who is surprised to find a picture of the mother of the child he is also attending in the case of the man's watch. The watchman proves to be Saunders who disappeared so strangely years before. Overwork had brought on an attack of aphasia and he had been working as a watchman, entirely ignorant of his own identity. His recovery is followed by the complete return to health of his child and the little family is happily united once more.

THE FINGER OF SCORN

Thanhouser Release, July 14

The girl could not even remember her mother, who had died when she, her only daughter, was still a child. The girl's only near relative was her step-father, the deacon, who prided himself on "doing his duty" by the girl. He was a highly religious man, and as such, when the girl's young fancy was attracted by the attentions of a vulgar drummer, he indignantly made her a prisoner in her room, and without explaining that it was the character of the man he objected to, he simply told the girl she would have to be punished. Feeling that she had been treated like a child, the girl became indignant and ran away. At the railway station, she met, by accident, the fascinating drummer who, his sales completed, was leaving town on the night train. Learning the girl had no definite destination, he offered to act as her friend and guide. The trusting country girl gratefully accepted his assistance.

A year later, a shabby outcast, whose wasted features bore slight resemblance to those of the country girl who had left the deacon's home, returned there humbly entreating shelter and forgiveness. Being "a religious man," the deacon promptly turned her into the streets, pointed her out as a thing of loathing to her fellow townsmen and joined the other esteemed citizens in welcoming to the village its new minister.

The new minister was an extremely poor young man, with a delicate wife, and a little daughter dependent upon him. Shortly after their arrival in the village the little girl rushed from the cottage to the rescue of the outcast, whom she found being driven through the village by a crowd of cruel children who were hurling after her stones and abusive names.

The child took the poor hunted creature into her father's home and the minister was willing to give her shelter. This, however, the highly scandalized community would not tolerate his doing, and the outcast, rather than bring misery into the one home in which she had found kindness, voluntarily went away. She passed the old mill, and crossing the bridge near the milldam, she wearily climbed the hill and took refuge in a deserted cabin. That night, the mill-dam burst, and it was from her vantage point on the hill that the outcast saw the oncoming torrent which meant destruction to the tiny village which lay in the valley below her. She it was who brought the first words of danger to the people who had derided her. It was her weak arms that carried to safety many children, among them her tiny champion, the minister's little girl. She paid for this last act of heroism with her life, but she smiled in death as she never could have smiled again in life.

VENGEANCE IS MINE

Thanhouser Release, July 16

A bank president who has been indulging in high finance, suddenly receives word that the examiners are preparing to visit his institution. Realizing that an inspection at this time means ruin to himself, the banker by altering the books makes it appear that the shortage in the funds is due to crooked work on the part of the paying teller. The unfortunate teller is arrested and sent to prison for a period of years.

The teller has a wife and child and after he is arrested poverty and suffering come upon them. The child grows weaker and finally dies. The wife, blaming the bank president, whom she intuitively suspects of crooked work, vows to be revenged, but a priest, who has called to comfort her, appeals to her religious faith, reminding her that vengeance is the Lord's. After the baby's death, the wife becomes a trained nurse and through a strange chance is assigned to a private case, of a man who is near death in a hotel. To her amazement she recognized in her patient the banker who had changed her life from joy to sorrow. Left alone with the invalid she watched him closely and rejoiced to note that his case was approaching a crisis and unless carefully tended he was certain to die. The medicine that should be administered to him was close at hand but she refused to give it, gloating over her enemy as he lay helpless before her.

But she was saved from a crime she would have been certain to have regretted all her life. At the critical moment the emblem of her faith was recalled to her mind and she remembered the words of her good pastor, "Vengeance is Mine, Saith the Lord." With a prayer for forgiveness she again became the devoted nurse and gave all her energy to saving the life of the man she hated.

The crisis was passed successfully, and the doctor greatly rejoiced. He told his patient that he greatly owed his life to his nurse and the banker feebly called her over so he could thank her. Then for the first time came recognition. He realized that the woman he had wronged had saved his miserahle life. And full of remorse he made what amends he could.

The banker's confession resulted in the teller's pardon. The wife took the precious paper to the prison, received her husband with joy and thankfulness and hand in hand they left the gloomy penitentiary to take up a new and happier life.

STORY OF THE RANCHMAN AND THE HUNGRY BIRD

Thanhouser Release, July 19

He was just a ragged little urchin, homeless, friendless and hungry, skulking through Central Park one day, he noticed a hig man husily engaged in feeding bread to hirds who flocked around him. On the bench heside him the big man had a hig piece of bread and the boy decided that he needed it more than the birds did. He was afraid to ask for charity, having received many rebuffs in his young life, so he just slipped up quietly, clutched the bread and began to eat it ravenously.

The big man turned and saw him. The hoy started to run but was captured before he could get away and stood tremhling, fearing that some horrihle punishment was to he inflicted upon him. Much to his surprise, the big man showed sympathy and insisted on hearing his pitiful story and took him off to his hotel where the boy had the first bath and the first real meal that had come his way in a long time.

The hig man was a kindly ranch owner from the West who was simply in New York for a few days on business. Filled with pity for the child he decided to give him a home, and the youngster gladly went with him to the far West.

The ranch owner had many friends, hut like all good men he had some enemies. One was a half-hreed servant who had been detected selling liquor to Indians and had heen promptly kicked off the place. Wrathfully he determined to be revenged and the disappointed Indians agreed to help him in his plot. They selected a night when all the cowboys had gone to a dance some distance away and the ranch owner and his little protege were all alone on the place. Then they attacked the house, confident that they could overcome any opposition before help could arrive.

They failed to count upon the child, however. While the rancher was keeping them off with his gun, the boy made a daring escape from the house, leaped on his pony, and rode off during the night. He reached the dance hall in safety, summoned assistance, and the galloping cowboys got hack in time to capture the Indians and the half-hreed, before any serious damage was done.

And all the glory of the capture went to the small and formerly dirty hoy who had been picked up among the other hungry birds in the far eastern city.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF OLD KENTUCKY

Comet Release, July 13

This story deals with native Kentuckians during the late feud days. The daughter of one family, the son of the other learn to love each other, the father of the girl opposing, with the full strength of his nature, the union. The young people are cautioned by the girl's father to not carry it any further, that the engagement must be hroken, and if Jim persists in his courtship, he will kill him.

Later, the father finds them planning an elopement and at the point of a gun holds Jim at hay while he horsewhips the daughter with a long mule driving snake whip. The father in his fury drops the point of his gun for a second while whipping the girl, and Jim who has heen driven frantic through witnessing the whipping, draws his gun, and fires. The father falls to the ground to all appearances mortally wounded. The poor hard working mother rushes upon the scene. Meg (the daughter) tries to induce Jim to escape before the officers arrive, but he refuses to go without her. Realizing that she is the cause of the shooting, she decides to go with him. She tells the mother so, and says that she will stop at the home of a relative who lives a short distance away, and they will come to her at once.

Meg rushes to the stable, saddles and mounts her horse "Spot." We see her riding out of the harn, Jim waiting on the outside mounted. They ride hurriedly away. The uncle is notified. He starts to the assistance of the mother. Meg rushes back to where she has left Jim holding the horses. They mount, ride to the cliff overlooking the river, dismount, slap their horses on the flanks, horses gallop away. Meg and Jim descend the cliff to the river, hoard the river steamer, the planks are drawn in, and the steamer glides into the stream. The lovers are soon to begin a new life across the boundary line.

Later they learn that Jim's shot was not fatal. There is a happy reunion, and the curtain descends midst an atmosphere of peace and harmony with the suggestion of the harmonious strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" permeating and vibrating around the happy surroundings.

REGGIE BREAKS THE COLLEGE RULES

Comet Release, July 15

"Reggie," the pampered son of a fond and doting mother, after months of preparation, starts for the college selected hy his parent, to take up his finishing course that it is hoped will some day make him one of the leading lights of the legal profession.

His attractive personality excites the envy of his less fortunate college mates, and shortly after being installed in sumptuous quarters his wealth and social standing cause him to be much sought after hy the young lady residents of the college town.

Wherever "Reggie" appears he is immediately surrounded hy a hevy of heautiful girls, who lavish attentions upon him and he seems to possess a faculty for occupying their entire time to the exclusion of his fellow collegians, who in consequence make him the object of many mad college pranks. He accepts the inevitable with exceeding good nature and succeeds in holding his own through the many indignities that are heaped upon him, and proves himself a hero in the end. A conspiracy is on foot to "haze" him and he learns of the fact in time to outwit his would-he tormentors, and turn the tide in his favor.

The accidental meeting with a lightweight pugilist of note in the town on the night he is to be made the victim gives "Reggie" an unlooked for advantage. He relates to his friend the story of the intended assault, and the fighter volunteers to take his place. So he is secretly smuggled into "Reggie's" room and serenely throws himself into "Reggie's" soft and downy couch, while the latter hides underneath.

The hour arrives and the enemy force their way into the room. Reggie's supposed figure is seen dimly outlined in the bed. Several violent hands are laid upon him when the fighter rises and hegins the assault. Only a few moments elapse until the floor is littered with the attacking party and one of the principal offenders is thrown from the window, while the others are rendered "hors de combat."

In the excitement the fighter escapes unrecognized and "Reggie" receives the credit of creating the havoc, and is in consequence held in wholesome esteem for the halance of the term.

Roy Nickerson, a well-known pugilist, plays a prominent part in this picture which it is said is a scream from start to finish.

LICENSED

A BUNCH OF VIOLETS

Vitagraph Release, July 10

Married to a man who is a drunkard and a general good-for-nothing, Violet Ray, a popular actress, sticks to him for the sake of their dead child. Mabel Wright, the daughter of a florist, aged ten, is a great admirer of Violet and comes every afternoon to the stage door with a hunch of violets. Violet grows fond of the child and one afternoon takes her home with her to her apartment, and in answer to the girl's questions tells her about the little girl she has lost. Mahel reciprocates Violet's love with all her childish sympathy. Alec Lang, a man about town, who is very much in love with Violet, tries to persuade her to leave her brutal husband and marry him, but she refuses.

One day, going to the stage door, Mahel is run over and seriously injured; she is taken to the hospital. She makes her father go and tell Violet what has happened and take her some violets. In the meantime Jim has grown particularly hrutal, and Violet resenting his conduct, decides to accept Alec's protection. She telephones him to come to her. While she is waiting Mabel's father arrives with the message and the violets. These touch Violet's heart and awaken her wifely love. She dismisses Alec, and we see her in the final scene, at Mahel's bedside, consoling the little sufferer and happy in her resolution to remain true to herself and the memory of her child.

THE FOSTER CHILD

Vitagraph Release, July 12

What is more lonely than a childless home? Mr. and Mrs. Caspar, home loving, industrious people, long for a little one to hless their lives and their home. Their hopes are not in vain. One night, when they were sitting in the quiet, they hear the voice of a baby. Mr. Caspar, opening the door finds a deserted male child lying on the doorstep. Tenderly lifting it in his arms he brings it to his wife, who cares and nurtures it with a mother's love. Their adopted child is just one year old when a son is born to Mrs. Caspar, and an added joy comes to hless their union. The foundling Dick and the real son Jack grow up together as brothers. The real son is idle, morose and disrespectful, and a selfish ingrate, who heaps abuse upon his parents, regardless of their kindness. The foster son is manly, kind and thoughtful.

The mother of the child whom she deserted, conscience-stricken and remorseful, one day comes to the Caspar home to reclaim her child. Of course she cannot identify him, and the Caspars hate to part with their hoy. They determine to pass their own son off as the woman's. She is very wealthy, and when Jack hears this he is anxious to go with her. Jack, with plenty of money, which he does not hesitate to demand from his supposed mother, soon shows his real nature. He indulges in all sorts of dissipation. In a gambling den he hecomes involved in a quarrel. In the struggle he is accidentally shot. He is taken to his home, where he dies. When his real parents hear that their son is dying, they hasten to his hedside, where they find him dead. The Caspars tell the whole truth to Dick's mother, and then, returning to their home, impart the truth to Dick. With a heavy heart, he hids farewell to those who have hrought him safely and lovingly to man's estate. He hastens to his own mother's side, where she clasps her deserted child to her hosom and he lovingly embraces her.

AFTER MANY DAYS

Edison Release, July 9

This is the story of an old musician and his little daughter. Beginning when they play and sing in the saloons together, passing through the time when she is a coon shouter in a popular priced theatre and then under his careful training becomes a good concert singer, she finally accepts an offer of a leading role in a big production in a large city. This, of course, leaves the old father alone as he cannot travel with her and at their parting she gives him some money to take care of him until the first salary day comes around.

As he turns from the railroad station he is followed by two men who have noticed the money. By the river's edge they attack him, take the money and put him, unconscious, into a small boat which is shoved off into the stream. At Rest Haven he is cared for by fisher folk who find him, hut he has lost his memory and all idea of who he is or where he belongs.

The singer is fairly heside herself hecause she can get no word and finally employs a detective to trace him,. The years roll hy and the great singer comes for a vacation to Rest Haven and is asked to sing at a henefit concert for the Old Men's Home. The detective coming there tells her that his search is over, that he has exhausted every resource and failed to find her father. Later, among the fisher folk, he sees one who resembles the picture which he had. He questions him hut the old man can tell him nothing of his past and so he invites him to the concert. Thus the father is hrought face to face with his daughter, hut while something in his mind puzzles him, he is unahle to place her until she sings an old song which he taught her. Then, of course, recognition comes, his mind is restored to him and the daughter to his arms.

The story is tremendously appealing, exquisitely played and sure to make a popular and lasting impression. It is in every sense a worth-while film.

THE ARTIST'S JOKE

Edison Release, July 10

A wealthy artist lives in retirement in his country mansion with his only son Charles, who is averse to country life and anxious to make his abode in the city where they raise hrides instead of crops.

One day a sketch club, consisting of a hevy of beauties, arrive by motor from the city to sketch the ruins of an old castle which they are at first unable to locate. Nell Travers, the leading spirit of the party, inquires at the mansion for direction and thus forms the acquaintance of Charles, who begs to be permitted to act as guide. She gladly accepts the proposition and introduces him to the other members of the Sketch Club and together they proceed to the old ruins and after considerable discussion as to the best point of view, the tripods and canvases are finally placed and each girl's name written in bold type across the top of her canvas. It is noon and they decide to return to their motor car for luncheon but Charles, having become enamoured of Nell's charms, persuades her to meander in an opposite direction. The canvases being left alone Charles' father, when he happens upon the scene, is unable to resist the temptation of carrying out a practical joke. He draws a caricature upon each canvas and in fiendish glee departs for home.

When the girls return and discover their canvases unfit to work upon they conclude that Nell, the missing one, must be the culprit and immediately depart for home in their motor leaving Nell to get home as best she can. When Nell learns of the girls' sudden departure, the gallant Charles offers to drive her home in his trap. At the mansion she meets his jovial father and, seeing the various drawings about the house, she immediately suspects him of being the one who disfigured the girls' canvases. She makes the accusation and the old gentleman admits that he is the real culprit and humbly apologizes for his joke. Nell now starts for home escorted by Charles and we can plainly see that he is no longer anxious for city life.

ON THE BRINK OF THE CHASM

Pathe Release, July 10

Three settlers, one a woman, are attacked by the Indians. It so happened that one of the men is the accepted sweetheart of the girl, and the other is the rejected suitor. The latter, in order to save his friend, manages to help them escape, while he, himself, is trapped within a burning cabin. He, too, however, escapes, because the Indians, believing he will burn to death, leave the cabin to pursue the others. The lovers finally are caught, tied to a stake and about to be burned to death, when on the crest of a nearby hill suddenly looms up the figure of the man supposed to have perished amid the charred embers of the cabin. He holds aloft in his hand an Indian papoose, and having made sure that the Indians see it, he rides desperately away, hotly pursued by the Indians, who leave their victims for the while. Finally, catching up with the fleeing paleface, they find him standing on a little projecting rock eighty feet above the roaring mountain stream; one hand is outstretched over the dizzy abyss, and from this hand dangles the helpless Indian child. Warning the Indians that if they approach he will dash the child to the rocks below, he parleys with them and finally, holding the child as hostage, sends them back to release his friends. The timely arrival of other traders saves the trio at the last moment, when everything began to look very dark.

HIS WIFE'S OLD SWEETHEART

Pathe Release, July 11

This fascinating story of Old Mexico deals with a woman who discarded a wealthy lover for a poor man. Eventually they sink to greater and greater poverty until she has to work for the support of herself and her children. One day she meets her old lover, who notices her plight, and offers to relieve her poverty with a monetary gift—which she refuses. The husband, seeing this and misconstruing the motive, leaves his wife and children and threatens the wealthy Mexican with death. Everything, however, is ultimately straightened out to the satisfaction of everybody.

MAX TAKES TONICS

Pathe Release, July 12

Max is sick and his doctor prescribes a medicine, and the dose is a Bordeaux wineglassful. Upon his return to his home the only glass Max can find is one that holds about a quart, but it's marked "Souvenir of Bordeaux" consequently he drinks his tonic at one gulp and becomes marvelously spiffilicated. Wending his rather unsteady way in the street, he has an altercation with Don Brigands, the Elbanian ambassador, and they exchange cards, hoping to meet in a duel the next day. He has the same experience with General Snobsky, of the Army, and Mr. Catchem, Commissioner of Police. Being unable to navigate further, Max hangs himself on a lamp-post, where he is discovered by a policeman, who finds the Police Commissioner's card, carries him to the latter's address, whence he is promptly thrown out. He falls into the arms of a second policeman, who carries him to the home of the Elbanian ambassador, where he meets the same fate. Finally he is carried unceremoniously to Gen. Snobsky's quarters and thrown out of the window. The three officers of the law who have recently helped him to his various homes, catch him as he falls and, each desiring to take him in a different direction, they finally get into a terrific altercation, in which Max gets decidedly the worst of it.

THE UNWILLING BRIDE

Pathe Release, July 13

When the daughter of an Indian Chief is given in marriage to the Chief of a neighboring tribe, he sends a messenger to bring her. The Indian princess and the messenger fall in love and get married themselves, which, of course, results in their both being fugitives from their tribesmen. How they manage to ultimately escape forms a series of intensely interesting pictures.

Read the

Moving Picture News

for All the Latest News of the Industry

EXHIBITORS' NOTES

Franchises cost good money in Brattleboro. With the rise in temperature this month the price of a license to operate a moving picture and vaudeville theatre has been pushed up to $500. On Friday evening, June 21, the bailiffs granted Mrs. Emma C. Farrington, Rutland, Vt., a license at that figure to operate a picture show in Charles Miner's new building on Elliot street. A few months ago Gibbs & Wheeler were granted a license to operate a picture show in the Leonard building on Elliott street at $300 a year, and at that time it was believed that the high figure had been reached. Lawyer Robert C. Bacon, representing Mrs. Farrington, said Saturday that his client would not accept the generous offer of the village of Brattleboro. As the rent and license fee would amount to $1,200 or more a year, the chances are that the people of the north and west part of the town will be obliged to patronize the present picture theatre so far as Mrs. Farrington is concerned.

* * * *

The "white plague" moving pictures which are being shown in New York City at the present time, under the auspices of the Department of Health and the tuberculosis committee of the Charity Organization Society, have proved to be such a success that the Department of Health contemplates using this medium to educate the people in the other functions of the health work being done here, especially that of child welfare.

The tuberculosis pictures are drawing record crowds. At Tompkins Square there was an audience of ten thousand persons on Sunday night, June 30th.

* * * *

Lake Charles, La.—The New Airdrome has opened.

Greenville, S. C.—A new airdrome is being erected on North Main street.

Rochester, N. Y.—Permit has been granted for a moving picture theatre on Webster avenue, which will cost $10,000.

To Writers:

THE EDITOR

(The Journal of Information for Literary Workers) published in your interest for eighteen years, is the magazine of which Jack London said: "I may not tell a hundredth part of what I learned from THE EDITOR, but I may say that it taught me how to solve the stamp and landlord problems." It is a monthly stimulus to the production and sale of more and better manuscripts. Besides articles of concrete, practical worth by editors or by writers successful or about to be successful, each number contains in "The Literary Market" all the news of all the magazines, new and old, that pay for manuscripts.

THE EDITOR is especially helpful to the scenario writer. It publishes from time to time helpful articles by those who are successful producers of photoplays. A copy of the current number will be sent for 15 cents. The yearly subscription is one dollar.

The Editor

Box 830, Ridgewood, New Jersey.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

		Feet
May	29—The Optician's Dream (Com.)
June	14—If I Were King (Com.)
June	14—Italian Lakes
June	22—The Maniac
June	28—The Actor's Test
June	28—Benares, the Sacred City
July	5—Legend of the Chrysanthemum
July	5——The Air Man

AMERICAN

June	17—The Weaker Brother (Dr.)
June	17—A Fifty-Mile Auto Contest
June	20—The Wordless Message (Dr.)	1000
June	24—The Evil Inheritance (Dr.)
June	27—The Marauders (Dr.)
July	1—The Girl Back Home (Dr.)
July	3—An Hour of Terror (Dr.)	1000
July	4—Under False Pretenses (Dr.)	1000
July	6—The Fall of Black Hawk (2 reels, Hist.)	1000
July	8—Where There's a Heart

BISON

June	11—Memories of a Pioneer
June	15—A Soldier's Honor
June	18—His Punishment
June	22—On the Warpath
June	25—His Message
June	29—The Colonel's Peril
July	2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.)
July	6—The Restoration (Dr.)

CHAMPION

June	10—Camille (2 reels	950
June	12—A Western Child's Heroism	950
July	1—Pat's Breeches
July	1—Little Old New York
July	8—The Gypsy Bride
July	15—The Call of the West

COMET

July	1—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.)	450
July	6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days	1000
July	8—The Intercollegiate Regatta, Poughkeepsie	975
July	13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky	1000
July	15—Reggy Breaks the College Rules	1000

ECLAIR

July	2—The Holy City (Biblical)
July	4—Hearts and Memories (Dr.)
July	7—For Love (Dr.)
July	7—Arabian Theatres (Edu.)
July	9—A Double Misunderstanding
July	11—The Cidarville Scandal
July	14—Artful Congren
July	14—Across the Caucasus
July	16—The Dreamers
Julyy	18—That Loving Man
July	21—Rizzio

GREAT NORTHERN

June	15—The Price of Secrecy (Dr.)
June	22—Painter and Peasant (Dr.)
June	29—How to Make a Reputation (Dr.)
June	29—A Bath With Consequences (Com.)
July	6—The Two Sisters (Dr.)
July	6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.)
July	13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	694
July	13—Moving Pictures (Com.)	305

GAUMONT

		Feet
July	4—Written in Blood (2 Reels)
July	9—That Troublesome Bird
July	9—A Tenacious Hubby
July	11—The Silent Castle
July	16—Love's Surest Proof
July	18—Lion's Revenge
July	23—Love's Floral Tribute
July	25—Detective Fuzzle's Triumph
July	25—A Modern Hercules
July	30—Prison on the Cliff
July	30—The Isle of Marken
Aug.	1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug.	6—Androclus and the Lion
Aug.	8—A Phantom of the Night
Aug.	13—Dream Driven

GEM

June	25—The Reason
July	2—The Medal of Honor
July	9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)

IMP

July	1—Love, War and a Bonnet
July	4—Betty, the Coxswain
July	6—Home Again
July	6—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps
July	8—The Parson and the Medicine Man
July	11—Caught in a Flash
July	13—The Wrong Weigh
July	13—In and Around Chicago, Ill
July	15—Hearts in Conflict
July	18—Winning the Latonia Derby
July	20—The Foreign Invasion
July	20—Building a Church in a Day

ITALIA

Feb.	17—The Italian Army in Tripoli
Feb.	17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June	29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July	6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)

LUX
By Prieur.

June	14—Music Mad (Com.)		453
June	21—The Gambler (Dr.)		948
June	28—Thou Art the Man (Dr.)		721
June	28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)		259
July	5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)		860

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

June	26—Reaping the Whirlwind (Dr.)
June	28—Young Wild West Leading a Raid (Dr.)
July	1—When Hearts are Trumps
July	3—Hard Luck Bill
July	5—Young Wild West on the Border
July	8—The Flower of the Forest
July	10—A Gentleman of Fortune
July	12—Young Wild West Cornered by Apaches

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

June	19—No Children Wanted
June	22—Two Gay Boys
June	26—Their Day's Work
June	26—The Helping Hand
July	3—The Coming Generation
July	5—Mates and Mis-Mates
July	10—Tangled
July	17—Getting Even

RELIANCE

		Feet
July	3—A Man's Duty
July	6—Rip Van Winkle (2 reels)
July	10—Grandpa
July	13—The Toy 'Phone
July	17—At Cripple Creek (2 reels)
July	20—Love Me, Love My Dog
July	24—The True Love
July	27—The Soldier Baby

REPUBLIC

June	25—The Queen of May
June	29—In the Balance
July	2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks
July	6—The Girl in the Auto
July	15—The All-Seeing Eye
July	22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice

REX

June	27—The Weight of a Feather
June	30—Looking Backward
July	4—A Prophet Without Honor
July	7—The Unknown Bride

SOLAX

July	5—Between Two Fires
July	10—Winsome but Wise
July	12—Hotel Honeymoon
July	17—Slippery Jim
July	19—The Four Flush Actor

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July	2—Out of the Dark
July	5—Ma and Dad
July	7—Under Two Flags
July	9—Pa's Medicine
July	9—Hazers Hazed
July	12—Nursie and the Knight
July	14—The Finger of Scorn
July	16—Vengeance Is Mine
July	19—Story of "The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird"

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL

Nov.	20—Love and Aviation (Dr.)
Nov.	20—Zigomar (Dr.)
Jan.	1—The Thunderbolt (Dr.)

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr.	22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May	8—Through Trials to Victory	2500
May	20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

June	23—Meals by Weight
June	25—Papa's Double
June	30—Getting Rich Quick	1000
July	2—The Flat Upstairs
July	2—The Burglar Alarm Mat
July	7—The Cook Came Back
July	9—Father's Bust
July	9—The Widower's Widow
July	14—Father's Bust
July	14—The Widower's Widow
July	16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.)

SHAMROCK

May	25—A Cold Reception
May	28—White Fawn
May	31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTORGRAPH

June	4—The Outlaw's Sister
June	11—In the Clutches of the Loan
June	14—Not Like Other Girls (Com.)

EDWARDS'

NEGATIVE and POSITIVE RAW FILM

(Extra Fast) (Extra Brilliant)

Sole Agents Write for Terms

THE PHOTO CINES CO., 24-26 East 13th Street, New York

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
June 20—The Spirit Awakened (Dr.).....
June 24—A Dash Through the Clouds (Com.)
June 24—The New Baby (Com.).....
June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com. Dr.)
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.).....
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.).....
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.)....
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.).....
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.)

CINES
C. Kleine

	Feet
June 25—The Girl and the Mayor.....1000
June 29—The Wandering Minstrel (Dr.)....1000
July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.).....
July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.).....
July 6—In Wrong (Com.) 1000
July 9—Lear Learns to Dance (Com.).... 400
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.)..... 595
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.).....1000
July 16—Disowned (Dr.) 1020
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.) 995
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.) 900
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)....1000
July 30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.).....1090

EDISON

	Feet
June 26—Pennsylvania State Police, Troop "B" 500
June 26—The Wooden Indian (Com.)..... 500
June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.).....1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution 1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com. Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.).....1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.) 700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)..... 300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.).....1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.) 300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)..... 700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.).....1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)..... 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.) 400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves 1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.) 1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.) 1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.) 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.).1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.) 1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

	Feet
June 25—Billy and the Butler (Com. Dr.)..1000
June 27—A Guardian's Luck (Com.).....1000
June 28—Springing a Surprise (Com.).....1000
June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.) 1000
July 2—On the Cactus Trail (W. Dr.).....1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.).....1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr) 1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.)....1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.).....1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN

	Feet
July 12—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Com.)
July 12—The Hypnotist (Com.)
July 13—The Stranded Actors (Com.).....
July 15—Honor Thy Father (Dr.).....
July 17—The Senorita's Remorse (Dr.).....
July 18—Together (Dr.)
July 19—Buster's Dream (Com.).....
July 19—The Uninvited Guest (Com.).....
July 20—A Western Courtship (Dr.).....
July 22—The Ranger's Reward (Dr.).....
July 24—A Visit to Lively Town (Com.)..
July 24—The Talker (Com.)
July 25—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.).....
July 26—His Vacation (Com.).....
July 27—The Divine Solution (Dr.).....
July 29—Pueblo Indians, Albuquerque, N. M. (Edu.)
July 29—A Farmer's Son (Com.)
July 31—The Derelict's Return (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Two Gun Sermon (Dr.).....
Aug. 2—Hosecleaning (Com.)
Aug. 2—Man Wanted (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)..

G. MELIES

	Feet
July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....

PATHE FRERES

	Feet
July 2—Wild Birds at Home (Edu.).....
July 2—The House of Mystery.....
July 3—Where Jealousy Leads (Dr. Com.)
July 3—Winter Landscapes in Finland (Travel)
July 4—The Greed of Gold (Dr.).....
July 5—The Would-be Hunter's Nightmare (Com.)
July 5—Hairdressing of Other Days.....
July 6—The Wooing of White Fawn (Dr.)
July 8—Pathe's Weekly No. 28.....
July 8—The Adopted Child (Dr.).....
July 9—The Geisha's Love Story (Dr.)....
July 10—On the Brink of the Chasm (Dr.)..
July 11—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Dr.)..
July 12—Max Takes Tonics (Com.).....
July 13—The Unwilling Bride (Dr.).....
July 15—Pathe's Weekly No. 29.....
July 16—The Mosquito
July 16—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Com.)
July 17—A Question of Size (Com.).....
July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.)....
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.)
July 20—The Half-Breed Foster Sister (Dr.)

KALEM CO.

	Feet
June 26—Captured by Bedouins (Dr.).....1000
June 28—The Penalty of Intemperance (Dr.).1000
July 1—Tragedy of the Desert (2 reels Dr.).2000.
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.)..1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.).....
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.).....
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.).. 875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.) 125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.).....
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.)....

SELIG

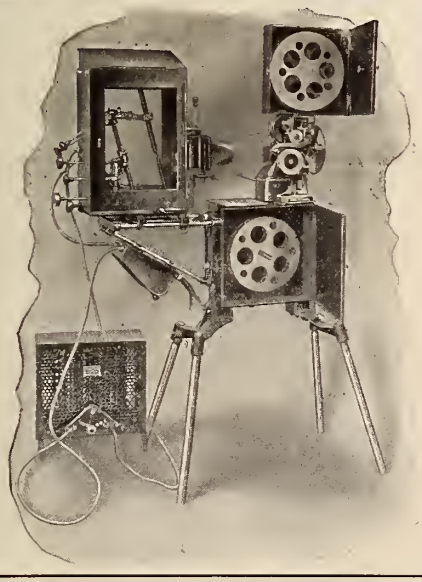
	Feet
June 24—The Adopted Son (Dr.).....1000
June 25—Pansy (Com. Dr.).....1000
June 27—His Father's Bugle (Dr.).....
June 27—Elephant Butte Dam at Albuquerque (Edu.)
June 28—Murray, the Masher (Com.).....1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com. Dr.) 1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Baby Betty (Dr.).....1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.).....
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.).....1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.)..
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.)

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

	Feet
June 19—Studies of Fish Life.....
June 19—Bergen, Norway (Sc.).....
June 26—The Music Hall Singer (Dr.).....1000
July 3—The Wax Model (Dr.).....
July 3—Scenes in Somerset (Sc.).....
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Grandmother (Dr.).....1050
July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.)..... 485
July 24—The French Army in Action (Mil.). 505
July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.) 1,000

VITAGRAPH

	Feet
June 21—Her Brother.....1000
June 22—The Gamblers.....1000
June 24—The Extension Table.....1000
June 25—The Transition 1000
June 26—When Roses Wither.....1000
June 28—Pseudo Sultan 1000
June 29—At the End of the Trail.....1000
July 1—After Many Years (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Church Across the Way (Dr.).1000
July 3—Lincoln's Getttysburg Address (Hist.) 1000
July 5—On the Pupil of His Eye (Dr.)....1000
July 6—The Troublesome Step-Daughters (Com. Dr.) 1,000
July 8—Her Old Sweetheart..... 500
July 8—Fate's Awful Jest..... 500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake.....1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets.....1000
July 12—The Foster Child.....1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance.....1000
July 15—Conscience, or "The Chamber of Horrors" 1000



PRAISE UNSOLICITED

Shakespeare said "Love sought is good, but given unsought, is better" so with a testimonial; and when it is offered unsought by one who knows, it serves as a valuable guide to the prospective purchaser.

Mr. Maxwell H. Hite of Harrisburg, Pa. is a practical electrician, expert cinematograph operator and cameraman. He has answered over three hundred letters requesting his opinion as to the best machine. Under date of June 15, he sent us an open letter which we quote herewith:

"For the benefit of interested parties, I wish to state that I have personally operated and repaired eight different makes of machine and I state without fear of successful contradiction that the POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has proved to be the BEST of them all. I operated a Power's No. 5 for three years without one cent for repairs and this in a theatre that opened at 1 P. M. and closed at 11 P. M. daily. At present I am operating a Power's Cameragraph No. 6 in an Airdrome, and I advertise Moving Pictures Brightly Projected and FLICKERLESS, and ALL PATRONS say that I am giving all that I advertise.

Trusting that you will publish this letter for the benefit of those contemplating buying machines, I am

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) MAXWELL H. HITE,
Practical Electrician and Operator,
Harrisburg, Pa."

Dated, June 15, 1912.

Our latest equipment No. 6A is now ready for delivery. On this machine we use the regular No. 6 mechanism, which has proved its excellence in over 5950 installations all over the world.

Let us send you Catalogue D, with full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 90 Gold St, NEW YORK

For Fourteen Years the Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Get our prices on Wire Drawn Tungsten Lamps and Regular Lamps, 4, 8 or 16 Candle Power.

Write for Catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-717 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERB ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year and the ART OF SCENARIO WRITING, by William Lord Wright for $2.00.

Slides
[GUARANTEED]

The only man in the world who guarantees slides against heat.

No other manufacturer dare do this.

New slides made from broken slides.

J. DE COMMERCE
46 East 14th Street
NEW YORK

BE UP-TO-DATE
Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication
Moving Picture News

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

HIGH ART FEATURES

We release one every ten days in two and three-reel productions.

Write us for our list and synopsis.

NEW YORK FILM CO.,
12 Union Sq., New York City.

David's War With Absalom

1,500 Feet. Ready for shipment May 10. Three styles lithographs.

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES
WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY

From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.

MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. N Omaha, Neb.

EXHIBITORS

WHY NOT HAVE A LOCAL MOVING PICTURE MADE?

Cost is low. A sure money-getter. We make 'em. Film titles. Any length. 3 Feet for 25c.

M. P. Machinery bought and sold. Cameras loaned. Announcement slides. "Best yet." 25c each, colored. Send for Sample.

Advertising Slides and Films made to order.

LECTURE SETS. ANY SUBJECT.
Plain, $2.00; Colored, $3.00 per dozen.

SPECIAL—Dante's Inferno, 12 Slides, colored, with Lecture and Posters—$3.00

GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave., New York. Dept. B.

STOCK BRASS SLIDES

1. Good Night. 2. New Pictures Every Day. 3. Matinee To-morrow. 4. This Concludes the Performance. 5. Please Do Not Smoke. 6. Good Afternoon. 7. New Program To-morrow. 8. Hats Off, Please. 9. Intermission. 10. One Minute, Please. 11. All Out. 12. Welcome.

ORDER BY NUMBER

Price Each, CASH WITH ORDER, 25c.
Exchanges: Write for quantity price.

BEHREND M. P. SUPPLY HOUSE
30 Union Square, New York City.

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!
Every Exhibitor Can Do It.
Write Us To Show You How.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.
248 West 35th Street, New York.
We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

Mackie-Flammer, Inc.

THEATRE BROKERS
Dealing in High Class Theatres
COMMERCIAL TRUST BUILDING,
1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS
$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.
Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.
SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

ROLL TICKETS
LARGEST FACTORY IN THE WORLD

50,000— $5.90
100,000— 8.75
200,000— 16.00

CARTER TICKET CO.
DANVERS, MASS.

WE HAVE WON!!

An enviable position as a Factor for the Betterment of Motion Pictures and the improvement of trade conditions by strict adherence to a set policy:—

"The Exhibitor Be Pleased"

We are Sole distributors of all films made by the following producing companies, all of whom are earnestly striving to make Better Productions than ever before:

THIS PROGRAM EXCELS

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, GAUMONT WEEKLY, AMERICAN
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Write for Name of Your Nearest Exchange

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

LIST! COMING!

TWO REELS, BLACK and WHITE (tinted and toned) TUESDAY, JULY 30

The PRISON ON THE CLIFF

Some exhibitors have been fortunate enough to see this on the recent tour of Mr. D. W. McKinney amongst their several conventions. It was shown at Chicago, Atlanta, Lexington, Cleveland, Wheeling, etc., and in each case the exhibitors have asserted their rights and demanded the exchangeman to place his order for it. There's a reason—Sensationality and Picturesque beauty were never more harmoniously combined.

TWO STYLES OF 1-SHEET LITHOS—ONE STYLE OF 3-SHEET HERALDS—BOOKLETS.

JULY 18—THURSDAY

THE LION'S REVENGE

(Hand-Colored)

Scene from "That Troublesome Bird" July 11th

JULY 16—TUESDAY

LOVE'S SUREST PROOF

JULY 23—TUESDAY

THE SILENT CASTLE

(Hand-Colored)

JULY 25—THURSDAY

LOVE'S FLORAL TRIBUTE

(Hand-Colored)

Scene from "Love's Floral Tribute."

TUESDAY—JULY 30

The Prison on the Cliff and Isle of Marken

THURSDAY—AUG. 1

A ROMANCE OF THE PALM GARDEN

1 SHEETS—3 SHEETS—8 SHEETS

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

2 REELS THURSDAY, AUG. 15

Here's the Hugest Sensation of the season, barring none. Even more exciting than Attacked by a Lion, a film which every exhibitor in the country has eagerly booked and re-bocked in his show houses. This feature is being shown in Chicago by Mr. Harry Igel, our Chicago agent. Arrange for an exhibition with him. Address him care of any Chicago Film Supply Exchange.

The Exhibitors will surely get THEIR Just Deserts in real profit and thereby enjoy their LIVES Forever if they avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity and start kicking FOR the most thrilling sensation ever filmed. To run it in your theatre means that you shall be rewarded with real GOLD

JUL 16 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 2

JULY 13
1912

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from
"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE"
Thanhouser Release, July 26th

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

THE THANHOUSER

THREE-A-WEEK FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, a Three-Sheet and an Eight-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"The Merchant of Venice"

IN 2 REELS—FRIDAY, JULY 26

Shakespeare's Masterpiece as a Gorgeous Thanhouser Masterpiece

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI OHIO

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 21

"Only a Miller's Daughter"

But She and Her Rube Beaux Proved More Than a Match for the Smart City Chaps

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 23

"The Portrait of Lady Anne"

It Came to Life and Started to Look the Surroundings Over With Amazing and Amusing Results

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.
Send me FREE June Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name .....

Address .....

Exchange .....

Coming! Charles Reade's Great Story "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," In 2 Reels
"LUCILLE," By Owen Meredith

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

WEIGH THIS WELL!!

Our great program of novelties represents the individual efforts of many well known producing firms, each striving to outdo the other.

These films are leased to carefully selected distributing agents only on condition that they each supply an adequate program to the exhibitor.

TELL US THE NAME OF YOUR EXCHANGE!

and we will advise you promptly if it is one of our agencies. If not, we will tell you where to get our program.

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, GAUMONT WEEKLY, AMERICAN
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

Write for Name of Your Nearest Exchange

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

ECLAIR FILMS

TUESDAY, JULY 23rd

"THE GOVERNOR'S DAUGHTER"

A society drama in which Love gets mixed up in Politics and Cupid saves the day.

SUNDAY, JULY 28th

"THE LADY BARRISTER" and "BEAUTIFUL VINTAGE TIME"

One of those delightful French comedy conceits and a charming bit of Eclair picture travel through the vineyards of France.

THURSDAY, JULY 25th

"THE DOUBLE CROSS"

A "bully" love comedy showing the materialization of what has heretofore been but a figure of speech.

REMEMBER!—COMING

"ROBIN HOOD"

A world known character and story is Robin Hood. Being produced in a three-reel magnitude of magnificence.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42d St., New York City

POWER'S 6A With Motor Drive

This, the latest product of POWER'S, is the only moving picture machine for use with motor drive which has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters; it has also been approved by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City.

Variable speed motor can be furnished for alternating or direct current.

In our new 6A the mechanism and all superior features of our No. 6 are retained, and to them are added:

ARC LAMP

will carry 100 amperes, take carbon ¾" in diameter, 6' lower, 12" upper.

LAMP HOUSE

larger, more accessible, door each side and better ventilated.

STAND

made entirely of iron. Lower magazine built in to carry 14" reel.

AUTOMATIC LOOP SETTER

This patented device, found only in POWER'S, overcomes the annoyance of losing film on lower sprocket. By its means, stopping to reset is eliminated. THE MACHINE RESETS LOWER LOOP AUTOMATICALLY WITHOUT STOPPING.

This not only acts as a safety device (making it unnecessary to open gate and film shields, thereby exposing film), but it also does away with the dark screen and broken picture forever.

THESE FEATURES ARE FOUND ONLY IN POWER'S 6A, THE MODERN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE.

WE ARE DELIVERING NOW. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE D.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 GOLD ST., NEW YORK CITY

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

STARS
OF THE
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

THE KING'S POWER
IN TWO REELS
READY FOR RELEASE AUGUST 3rd

A strong dramatic subject of exceptional beauty and refinement with a charming story exemplifying the old adage that "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

ARTISTICALLY UNEXCELLED

Elaborate one and three sheet lithographs, heralds and booklets.

Arrange with your exchange immediately for a booking of this big headliner.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 20th

ALMOST A TRAGEDY
A Comedy-Drama—Length 666 Feet

On the same reel:

UNCLE REUBEN GOES TO TOWN
Comedy—Length 332 Feet

All Our Films Are Sold Through the Film Supply Co. of America.

A HORSE MORE HUMAN THAN SOME HUMANS

DON

A REMARKABLE PERFORMING ANIMAL VALUED AT $10,000

This horse is featured in a rapid-fire and spectacular military masterpiece written especially for him by a well-known magazine writer. DON is the

"Equine Spy"

IN THE TWO REEL PRODUCTION OF THAT NAME. Released through the FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Friday, August 23

DON has an earning capacity of $500 a week or $20,000 a "vaudeville" year—more than some bank presidents earn. It's almost as much as an insurance president gets. DON steals papers and ammunition, carries messages, lights bonfires and does everything but talk.

LOTS OF ADVERTISING MATTER

OTHER FEATURES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th—BROKEN OATHS is a military drama replete with sensational incidents—daring riding and intense situations. Story revolves about an officer who acts "unbecoming an officer and a gentleman."

FRIDAY, JULY 26th—THE REQUITAL—A deep business drama of love and hate—pride and punishment.

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, N. Y.

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI July 13, 1912 Number 2

GIVE US MEN

"God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not fill,
Men whom the spoils of office can not buy,
Men who possess opinions and a will,
Men who have honor, men who will not lie,
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And scorn his treacherous flatteries without winking.
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog,
In public duty and in private thinking,
For, while the rabble with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds
Mingle in selfish strife; Lo! freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting justice sleeps."

The above poem expresses some of the sentiments we want to exemplify in this editorial. We need at the present moment a strong powerful leader. Is there not in the Independent ranks a man of the calibre of Mr. J. J. Kennedy of the Patents Company, who is able to lead his men across every pitfall and who is supremely a fighter? We dearly love a man who is fighting for what he thinks is right; we dearly love a leader who can keep his men in check and keep them in line marching forward to one goal. We love a fighter who stands for principle, because we are a little bit of an one ourselves, and to meet a man worthy of our steel who can fight openly, straightforwardly and above board is what we like, but when they backbite one another, vilify one another when they are away and then fall on their necks and kiss each other with the false Judas kiss, is what we despise more than we can give expression to. The Independent forces need a leader, they need men. The quarrelings and the bickerings that are going on throughout the ranks are a distintegrating influence rather than a building-up or an amalgamating. What is to be gained by such tactics? Are they so overwhelmingly self egotistical they think they can bluff the industry and the newspaper? Let us tell them that they never were so weak, so utterly disorganized as they are at the present day, and oh, for men of calibre, men with honesty of purpose, men who love the industry for what it may bring them and not for the filthy lucre and the worship of the God of Mammon which is so engrafted in their hearts.

The industry must progress. It cannot be held back, but it can be disorganized and disrupted, and this is what everyone should avoid. A letter from a correspondent says:—"Will you please tell me where I can go for my films? Four parties are in the field asking for my patronage and I am in the position of trying to stand on four stones with two feet. Anything you say goes, Saunders. If you say Patents, I am in for Patents. If you say stick to Independents, I am Independent, but for goodness sake let us get something doing so that we can know where we stand." We replied to this friend, wait a little on patience, order will soon come out of chaos and you will soon have no further difficulties. If you take into consideration the chaotic state of the market a short while ago, and compare it with today, you are considerably better off now than you were then. We strongly suggest that you write to your organization and use your best efforts to get the state association in line to dictate its policy, and its wants, and its desires to the manufacturer. If the manufacturers will not themselves take heed, let someone else take it for them, and let the exhibitor take the bull by the horns and compel them to accede the best they have. Speaking of the Associations, we want the exhibitor to become fully organized, fully equipped, fully strengthened so that the absolute power of the moving picture industry is in his hands. He must eventually become the dictator and the controller of his own destiny. We have repeatedly stated that only by full complete organization can they gain what is their due, and educational films must be the order of the day. Historical films must be accorded, and, speaking of historical films, we herewith quote from a letter we received from Mr. N. A. Neff, the president of the M. P. E. League of America. The reason we quote it is that it is a poem in itself, and while we have no authority to use the letter, we are sure Mr. Neff will forgive us for using it in this capacity.

> The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is increasing in membership very rapidly. I was in St. Louis last Sunday, attended a convention on Tuesday at Lexington, Kentucky, where delegates were elected to represent the State of Illinois. We had a splendid time after the business session was over. K. C. Local, Covington, Kentucky, met on Friday, July 5th, electing delegates and alternates to the Chicago convention. On July 3rd I left Cincinnati with Mr. Randall, Gaumont's camera man, and went to Dayton, and on the 4th of July had the pleasure of addressing the old soldiers at the National Soldiers' Home at Dayton, and Mr. Randall took a picture of the old soldiers and several views of the home. This picture instead of depreciating will appreciate in value as it grows older. It will only be a few years until the old soldier will pass away. It is a very beautiful place, but there is a sense of loneliness that surrounds it all. As I viewed the many beautiful hills and highly cultivated scenery, I could not eliminate the sentiment that was ever present, and the thought that continued to flash through my mind and while we know the shortness of life, especially those that have lived to the age of the old soldier, the thoughts came to me, the place that knows us now will shortly know us no more. I observed that there were eight or ten newly dug graves awaiting the old soldiers, and an average of forty odd died every month, and that it was not unusual at all to have three or four funerals in one day. The hour for burial is ten o'clock. The day has passed when these old soldiers will ever again advance or retreat, or hear the clash of arms and the roar of the cannon. Others must show heroism and stand firm in the ranks, while the dead and dying are all around. These old fellows have served their government well and nothing is too good for them. As they daily see the sun rise and set, it seems to me that they are awaiting for the message. I could not help but feel pathetic, sincere sorrow while the fragrance of the flowers and the beauty of the home is pleasing to the eye. Still there is a sadness in the heart when one thinks of the very few days that these old comrades can live. Although you will notice in the picture where I address them, they acted like boys again, nevertheless deep down in all their hearts they know they are fast traveling down the slope of time and will be only a short time here until the last roll call.

After reading the above, exhibitors will admit that in Mr. Neff they have a wonderful leader, a powerful organizer of men, and a man who is sterling to the core—a man upright and square-dealing. Let them look to him to solve some of their difficulties and let every manufacturer throughout the country turn to Mr. Neff and read and re-read the above quotation from his letter and see if it is not possible to give us such pictures that will bring tears to the eyes of the audience as well as give them full patriotic sentiments and love for the men who fought and bled for their country. The home at Dayton is not an isolated one. There are others from which good material can be obtained and a living, breathing atmosphere added to the historical archives of the future citizens of our land.

As we say at the head of this editorial, give us men, and if only every state in the Union could obtain for its president men like the national president, we feel sure that the difficulties that beset the industry will soon be things of the past, and be looked upon as a nightmare that upset us after a severe attack of indigestion brought on by overeating too many good things and surfeiting themselves too much with the gold that has come to their coffers. Exhibitors, exchanges, manufacturers, get together and let the convention to be held in Chicago be the cementing point of good fellowship and the starting point of a whole nation's prosperity in Cinematography.

INFORMATION FOR SCENARIO WRITERS

So many letters have come to us asking the question, where can they send their scenarios and who are in the market to receive them, and approximately what amount is paid for scenarios. After considerable inquiries we find the following scale among the manufacturers rules. Of course this scale is not to be taken as absolute, as owing to the excellence of some scenarios much more is paid for special subjects, even as much as $100 and $150, but these are very, very exceptional subjects. We will revise the list from time to time so that those who are constantly asking may keep the addresses and prices on file.

INDEPENDENT

American Film Mfg. Co., Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill., $10.00 to $15.00.

N. Y. Motion Picture Co., 521 West 19th St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Champion Film Co., 145 West 45th St., New York, N. Y., $5.00 up.

Comet Film Co., 344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Eclair Film Co., 225 West 42d St., New York, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Great Northern Film Co., 7 East 14th St., New York, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Imp Films Co., 102 West 101st St., N. Y., $5.00 to $15.00.

R. Prieur, 10 East 15th St., New York, N. Y., importer only.

Majestic Motion Picture Co., 540 West 21st St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Nestor Film Co., Bayonne, N. J., $15.00 up.

Powers Motion Picture Co., 422 West 216th St., New York, N. Y., $10.00.

Reliance, 540 West 21st St., New York, N. Y., $25.00 up.

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co., 573 Eleventh Ave., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Solax Co., Congress Ave., Flushing, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y., $25.00 up.

Feature & Educational Film Co., 104 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, $10.00 up.

Gaumont Co., Flushing, N. Y., $25.00 up.

LICENSEES

Biograph Film Co., 11 East 14th St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Thomas A. Edison, 239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J., $20.00 up.

Essanay Film Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill., $10.00 up.

Kalem Co., 235 West 23d St., New York, N. Y., $10.00 up.

Lubin Mfg. Co., 20th and Indiana Aves., Philadelphia, Pa., $20.00 up.

G. Melies, 204 East 38th St., New York, N. Y., $10.00 to $15.00.

Pathé Frères, 41 West 25th St., New York, N. Y., $5.00 to $25.00.

Selig Polyscope Co., Chicago, Ill., $25.00 up.

Geo. Kline, 166 North State St., Chicago, Ill., importer only.

Vitagraph Co., 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y., $10.00 to $20.00.

Albu-Collodio (Wet Collodion) Lantern Slide Making

Copyrighted 1908 by ALFRED H. SAUNDERS All Rights Reserved.

In January, 1907, number of the Camera, the editor soliloquizes thus:

"Is gelatine best for lantern slides?

"The question has recently forced itself upon our consideration, whether, after all, the gelatine plate, with all its advantages over collodion, is the best medium for the production of lantern slides.

"Personally, we have found a considerable degree of degeneracy in slides made upon the gelatine plate, after a lapse of time, say four or five years. This deterioration seems to be accelerated where the slide has frequently been subjected to projection in the lantern. The heat seems inimical to the film, and in few instances can the deterioration be traced to any error in manipulation.

"We have gelatine slides made by some of the best professionals, as well as those made by ourselves, where the probabilities are that the fixing, washing, etc., has been conscientiously accomplished. Nevertheless, they have woefully fallen off from their first estate, and are not fit for projection (the italics are ours. Ed.) This must be due to some inherent lack of resistance on the part of gelatine to heat, inasmuch as slides on albumen and collodion, much older, which have gone through the same fiery ordeal are not one whit less brilliant and beautiful than when first made.

"We hardly like to advocate a reversion to old collodion work; in fact, our advice to work the silver bath would hardly be taken seriously nowadays, still one is loth to see our beautiful work fall so soon into the sere and yellow condition, and would suggest the employment of collodion chloride, or carbon, which gives results practically indestructible by the energetic action of the great heat now employed in projection."

It was our pleasure on several occasions to listen to a late member of Parliament, in England, who used to say in defense of his strong statements, that they were not his, but So-and-so's. If we had sought the whole press over we do not think it possible to find a stronger argument in favor of the "good old wet collodion" than the above quotation. We have in our day made thousands of slides both wet and dry, and we have some in our possession to-day which we made sixteen years ago with collodion, and they will bear looking at and still show full vigor of detail, while some dry plates, made in New York in 1904, are wretched in comparison, in spite of the precautions taken in fixing, washing, etc.

Why is the American trade so prejudiced against wet collodion? It is the exception, rather than the rule, to find a manufacturer using it. Out of some twelve or fourteen makers of slides we know personally only one is conversant with the silver bath, and he always has more work than he can do. Is it because the rising generation do not care to soil their fingers? Or, is it too complicated for them? Or shall we say, it is the quantity versus quality, as one of our manufacturer friends puts it. Well, let the excuse be what it may, if the public pay a good price for their slides (and we know they do) they ought to have an article that will last, and stand the test of time.

We think this an opportune time to instruct the readers of The Moving Picure News in this almost lost art of wet collodion. We say almost because it is in full use in photo engraving and photo mechanical houses, along the seashore in summer, and in country fairs in the shape of the tintype man, and this same process, with a few modifications, will do for slide making.

But, you will say, when, with so many excellent dry plates on the market, which give many different tones according to the developers used, why go back to the "black art" of the wet collodion days? Still more pertinent queries will be, What advantage shall I gain by reverting again to this method? and, What will it cost? To the first query we reply, let those who are satisfied with the results they are getting from dry plates keep to them, these articles are not for those.

But large numbers are very dissatisfied, and waste so many plates in getting, after all, but poor results, while no professional slide maker with a reputation to keep, would risk losing it by making slides with dry plates, when the wet process is so very much superior. (We cannot fully assert this here, but can revert to England and France, where the makers, whose slides are known all the world over for beauty, excellence and vigor, are made by the collodion and albumen processes respectively). The second query opens a larger field for reply. It all depends upon the status of the maker, whether amateur or professional, and whether large or small quantities are to be made.

How many camera disciples (and their name is legion) throw away negatives, which on development turn out underexposed, flat, or lacking sparkle, but yet of scenes and incidents impossible to replace? Prints are wanted from them — no good — slides are wanted — dry plates won't give results worth exhibiting—time wasted, pleasure spoiled—and what might have been a source of pleasure to the family circle, club or lodge proves to be a source of vain regrets. Listen—wet collodion!—that's the help! —can produce, in careful hands, passable slides, which call forth expressions of wonder at the results from such poor material, while from good negatives the best slides "on this earth" may be made, full of beauty, vigor, halftone and detail, with clear glass for the sky and whites (except, of course, where clouds and haze are in the negative) and to the slide colorist they are a sine qua non.

Are not these advantages sufficient?

As regards the last query, that largely depends upon the reader's pocketbook. It is the first outlay that causes trouble, and may be from $15.00 to $75.00 or more, according to the tastes of the purchasers, but whatever is spent will purchase chemicals lasting months or years.

The requirements necessary to commence are: An 8 x 8 studio camera of the old school, which may be purchased at some antique lumber store for a dollar or two, a few stoppered bottles from a gallon down, a dozen 4-oz. wide-mouthed stoppered jars, four 7x9 dipping baths with dippers. Let us say a word here about dippers. On the continent it is an easy matter to get glass ones, but those procurable here are vulcanized rubber, and those supplied with the 7 x 9 baths allow the slide to fall through so it is necessary to get the smallest size in addition and fix them stem to stem on the larger ones. Take a half round file and file down the fork of the large size till the smaller one fits easy, then with brace and bit bore a couple of holes through both, about 3-16 in diameter and two inches apart, then with skewers of boxwood fix both together, and cut off protruding pieces of box.

[If any of our readers know where glass dippers can be procured in New York, we should be glad of the information. Ed. M. P. N.]

(To be Continued)

THE FAD OF CRITICISM

By M. I. MacDonald

The criticism of the moving picture and its theatre has become a fad. Now that its day of usefulness is almost over, there seems no other term that fitly applies to this tiresome malady. The man who has talked on the subject for the last five years or so can't stop the machinery —it's got the going habit—and the man who has been asleep all this time has just wakened up to the fact that he had better start in and make a noise, too; so, parrot-like, he imitates what brother has been saying, and the film and its theatre on their upward flight continue to be the mark of many well-meaning but stupid people.

On June 28th there appeared in the Detroit, Mich., News a criticism on one of the finest series of films which has circulated through the country in this year of wonderful film productions, "A Trip to the Garden of Allah," which displays a woeful ignorance of the subject under discussion. The following is the criticism as it appeared in the Detroit News:

"Patrons of the Majestic Theatre on Woodward avenue, this week, will testify to the fact that the police censor of moving picture shows is again 'asleep at the switch,' after a period of activity following The News' expose of several weeks ago that immeasurably improved the character and quality of the shows in all the downtown electric playhouses.

"The Majestic this week is advertising a pictorial reproduction of the play wrought out of Robert Hichens' famous novel, 'The Garden of Allah,' and incidentally is making much of the fact that Mary Mannering, of Detroit, now the wife of a wealthy resident of the Grosse Pointe colony, created the leading role in the play.

"Those who have been lured by the advertisements to give up a dime in expectation of seeing the scenes of the play flashed on the screen, have not only found themselves 'buncoed' in this regard, but have also been shocked and disgusted by one of the pictures, purporting to show a party of Arabian Mohammedan fanatics indulging themselves in a 'torture dance' as a means of expiating their sins. In the course of the scene the dancers stick great needles through both cheeks, sear their tongues with red-hot irons, and finally fall exhausted, to be later resuscitated by the Mohammedan priests, who pour fiery stimulants down the throats of the unconscious fanatics to revive them and grant them absolution. Not only are patrons shocked by the self-inflicted tortures, but are disgusted by the suggestiveness of sensuality involved in the muscular contortions to which the dancers resort at times.

"The pictures do not show a single scene from the play, although all the advertising outside the theatre leads the passerby to believe that inside is to be seen an actual pictorial reproduction of Hichens' famous story. Some of the pictures show scenes in an alleged 'Garden of Allah,' said to have been created by 'Count Landon,' a wealthy Parisian near the village of Biscari, on the edge of the Sahara desert. For the rest, the pictures are scenes said to have been taken in the course of the photographer's trip from Marseilles, the Mediterranean port of the south of France, to Biscari, and 'Count Landon's' 'Garden of Allah.'"

The truth about these films is that Mr. J. Parker Read, Jr., a few months ago motored from Paris, through Algiers, and into the heart of the Sahara Desert, to bring back to America pictures of great educational value from the actual scene of the play produced by Liebler & Co.

Apart from the beautiful scenes, taken in the Garden in the desert, which Count Landon paid $100,000 to the French government for the privilege of watering from the oasis, and where appear the original characters depicted in the play, there is a wonderful exhibition of a religious dance of the Arabs called the "Dance of the Howling Dervishes" which is remarkable and valuable in that it depicts to us the actual condition of the Arab in his religion, and demonstrates a religious dance of which we know practically nothing. Also these people are hypnotized and have absolutely no feeling during the strange ceremony, nor does the blood run from the wounds made by the daggers. Their condition is merely hypnotic, such as we have seen demonstrated many times in our own civilized country without any particular display of horror. The series is not only very fine but absolutely truthful, and in most part beautiful and artistic.

So let us have done with this fad of criticism, and let us have truth and common sense, even in connection with a mere film. This series is billed as "A Trip to the Garden of Allah" and is not intended to show scenes from the play proper but from the scene of the story.

This article is not written in defense of any particular person, but as a protest against the ridiculous habit of ignorant criticism so prevalent at the present, and which is a menace to the uplift and educational side of the moving picture.

EXHIBITORS' NOTES

Motion picture proprietors from various parts of the state held a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibition League of Kentucky, Monday, July 1st, and selected the following delegates and alternates to the national convention at Chicago in August. Delegates, L. J. Ditmar, of Louisville; L. H. Ramsey, of Lexington; A. B. Arnett, of Midway. Alternates, A. H. Rose, of Cynthiana; Mat H. Nove, of Nicholasville; A. J. Wellman, of Catlettsburg.

A resolution was adopted directing that an organizer be put into the State to secure the membership in the League of all motion picture proprietors who have not already joined.

* * * *

Mayor H. P. Keller, of St. Paul, has appointed seven city officers who will act with a committee from the commercial organization of this city in an investigation of the moving picture theatres. The proposed inspection is the result of a collapse of the Iris Theatre, Midway, and is for the purpose of forcing improvement in other picture houses if needed.

* * * *

The Auditorium Theatre, Spokane, Wash., will open about August 1st with the new moving pictures that talk. Sid Rosenhaupt, who is interested with Mr. Weaver, John Cort and others, who control the invention, report that the manufacture of the machines and films is proceeding without interruption.

The machine, the invention of Dr. Isadore Kitsay of Philadelphia, gives the sounds of the voices and the noises of the situations as the picture shows them.

* * * *

The contract has been let for the construction of the $100,000 motion picture theatre to be erected for W. L. Baxter on Curtis street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, Denver, Col. Excavation for the structure will begin early next week and the big house will be ready for occupancy January 1.

The building will have a seating capacity of 2,200. It will seat more people than any theatre in the city, will cover three lots, and will be three stories in height.

LUBIN NOTES

The Lubin baseball team is very proud of its game with the Pathe Frères; the latter won by 3 to 1, but the Lubin boys want a return game, and, viewing the fact that the Pathes corralled five professional players, are willing to bet 3 to 1 that they get licked again.

* * * *

The Lubin Company are putting out an interesting film that shows how the round white balls which are the cause of so much excitement during the summer months are made. The latter half of the picture shows a game at Shilo Park, Philadelphia, between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Washington team of the American League.

SCENE FROM "MERCHANT OF VENICE"
Thanhouser (Two Reel) Release of July 20th

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

Affiliated with the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America

New York, July 6, 1912.

Editor Moving Picture News,
30 West Thirteenth Street,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

I wish to call your attention to a matter which I believe will be of interest to every exhibitor in the country and which, in my opinion, marks the beginning of the end of the iron rule and high-handed tactics practiced by the Motion Picture Patents Company.

One of our members, J. Whittman, who conducts a moving picture theatre in the upper part of the city, informed us that his license had been revoked by the Patents Company without cause, and requested us to take the matter up with them.

We thereupon visited the office of Mr. Braden, the man in charge of the licensing department, and he informed us that said license had been revoked because Mr. Whittman had run a reel released by the Gaumont Company (now unlicensed). On investigation we learned that the reel in question, Esther and Mordecai, had been released some eight or nine months ago, and was licensed by the Patents Company, and is still being rented by the various exchanges controlled by the General Film Company.

We then took the matter up with Mr. Braden and informed him of that fact and assured him that Mr. Whittman in running the reel did not do so with the intention of violating any of the rules of the Patents Company, but was under the impression that in as much as the film had been licensed, he had the perfect right to show it on the screen. Mr. Braden informed us that he would take the matter up and we would hear from him within a few days. Not having heard from him, we repeatedly attempted to communicate with him by telephone, and when we finally got in touch with him and informed him that a meeting had been called and that the matter had been acted upon and was now an affair of the Association, he requested us to put that statement in writing, and that the matter would be taken up without further delay.

His request was complied with. (Copy of our letter to him is herewith enclosed.) After a lapse of several days, Mr. Trigger called upon him. In an effort to secure a peaceable adjustment of the matter, he explained that ours was a community of interest and that it was the duty of the Patents Company to protect the interest of the exhibitor, and that in as much as this was an organization matter, and that the breach of the Patents Company rules was not intentional, the matter could best be adjusted by their restoring Mr. Whittman's license.

Mr. Braden again assured Mr. Trigger that the matter would be taken up without further delay, and when several days had passed without any word from the Patents Company, we again communicated with Mr. Braden, and were informed that our request had been denied, you can readily see from what transpired that the Patents Company have not acted in good faith in this matter.

We therefore feel that it is high time for the exhibitor to assert his strength, for to-day we are so strongly organized, that we do not have to cringe in fear of the iron hand of any man or men. It is bad enough that we are the subject of attack on the part of reformers, notoriety seekers, and other butters in, who go scouting around the country searching for prey, not to speak of unfavorable legislation, due to the gross ignorance of some of our law making bodies, that we have decided to at last rise up in at least an attempt to get what is our just due.

We have therefore instructed our attorney to apply for an injunction restraining the Patents Company from depriving us of our rights, making a livelihood in an honest and legitimate way, and if necessary will carry this matter into the highest courts.

As we recognize the extent of your influence with the exhibitors throughout the country, we request you to give the matter as much publicity as possible, and to give us every assistance you can in bringing it to a successful termination.

Hoping you will publish the facts as stated, I beg to subscribe myself,

Sincerely yours,
SAM. H. TRIGGER,
President.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS ASSOCIATION OF GREATER NEW YORK

Incorporated

Office and Rooms: 136 Third Avenue, New York

New York, June 26, 1912.

J. J. Braden, Esq.,
80 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Pursuant to a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Greater New York, I have been authorized to communicate with you with a view to having you restore the license of Mr. J. Witman, of 1297 Wilkins avenue, New York City.

As per our conversation over the 'phone today, I wish to impress upon you that this is not an individual matter but is an appeal from the Association, and I trust that your company will take cognizance of that fact in order that the exhibitor and manufacturer may be brought closer together.

Trusting that you will take this matter up at the very earliest moment, and awaiting your reply, I beg to subscribe myself,

Very truly yours,
SIDNEY ASCHER,
Secretary.

The Toledo convention is attracting the attention of exhibitors all over the country. One of the important subjects to be discussed at the convention will be the Sunday opening. Hon. James M. Cox, gubernatorial candidate of Ohio, will be there to address the convention on the 16th. Headquarters will be established at Wayne Hotel. Big preparations are being made to entertain the delegates. A motion picture will be taken of the convention, a boat ride on the lake and a splendid entertainment especially for the ladies. The convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock a.m. on July 16th, and will close the night of the 17th.

The Wisconsin State convention will be held in Milwaukee. Headquarters will be at the Plankinton Hotel. The meeting will be called to order at 10 a:m:, Friday, July 19th, and will close Saturday night with a big banquet. Every exhibitor in the state of Wisconsin is invited to attend this grand convention, where they will be royally entertained; state officers and delegates elected to attend the Chicago convention.

On Monday, July 22d, and Tuesday, July 23d, the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the state of Indiana will hold their convention at Indianapolis, Ind. Every effort is being made to secure the attendance of every member of the League in the state, and also to secure all the new members possible. Every exhibitor, whether he be a member or not of the state of Indiana, is not only invited to attend the convention, but is urged to attend.

Matters pertaining to and affecting the business of every exhibitor of the state of Indiana will come before the convention.

The new developments in the motion picture business demand that every exhibitor of Indiana attend this convention. Delegates will be elected to attend the Chicago convention and a general good time is expected in addition to the large amount of business that will come before the convention.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITION LEAGUE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

A meeting will be held at Union Square Hotel, on Thursday, the 18th of July, at 11 A. M. A number of prominent speakers representing the civic and official bodies of this city have promised to attend.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Greater New York is a body of men composed of 296 experienced exhibitors, out of the total of 694. This is not a very flattering statement, but it's true.

Now is the time for all motion picture exhibitors to get together and join the organization. We are not here for social reasons only, but to combine and oppose those who harass us constantly with laws and ordinances detrimental to our business.

Do you know, Mr. Exhibitor, that there is a bill introduced in the Legislature in Albany to close on Sunday, and do your know there is another bill before the Board of Aldermen for the same purpose? There is nothing to prevent this bill in passing or becoming a law, except the opposition of those obtaining a livelihood from motion picture theatres through their organization. There are some law makers who are doing everything in conjunction with a number of clergymen to railroad these bills through, and endeavor to have you closed on Sunday, and you realize what that means.

This is your battle, to fight the defamers of our business. Will you do your part like a man and help us or will you foolishly close your eyes to the fact and wake up when too late? It has won many battles you know nothing about, and had it not been for the organization, adverse legislation would have been passed in the last legislature, but we need your help to win this fight, and show those who look down upon us that we are an important factor and a powerful force in this community, and that we are united in our work, and that we are able to use the screen in the 694 motion picture theatres in this city in such a way that we can get such protection from the law as we are justly entitled to.

In conclusion I would state that you need not be a member to attend our meeting. I simply want you to know the progressive steps we are making, and assure ourselves of your co-operation.

Hoping to see you at this meeting, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

Samuel H. Trigger, President.

The motion picture exhibitors of Kentucky met at the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington, Ky.. July 2d, and held an enthusiastic meeting. Delegates and alternates were elected to represent Kentucky at the National convention to be held at Chicago in August. Louisville Local Branch No. 1 was represented by L. J. Dittmar and others. K. C. Branch No. 2 was represented by Orene Parker, of Covington, and others.

M. A. Neff addressed the meeting and reported that a large number of states are coming into the League and urged the delegates to attend the national meeting to be held in Chicago. Several new members were taken into the League and arrangements made to send an organizer to visit every exhibitor in thestate of Kentucky. Mr. L. H. Ramsey entertained all of the visitors present with a beautiful dinner. Speeches were made and everybody enjoyed themselves to the limit. The next meeting is to be held in Louisville, Ky., on October 15, 1912, at the Sealback Hotel. All of the exhibitors in Kentucky are enthusiastic over the good work accomplished by the League and confidently expect to have every exhibitor join the League before the next meeting.

The new theatre opened in Cincinnati by the Waldorf Company is doing a very large business. Mr. Dinglestedt, of Norwood, is doing a fine business with his big new airdrome. Mr. Dinglestedt is a real hustler and is always on the job.

Mr. M. A. Neff returned Monday morning from St. Louis, where he met Mr. Christianson, national secretary of the Cleveland, and other members of the League. An inter-insurance is being arranged for, whereby all of the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America can secure a safe insurance. Only members of the League will be insured in this company, and through the Inter-Insurance Company of St. Louis, it is stated about one-half of the prices now paid will be saved to the members of the League.

Missouri State Convention

On July 30-31 the Missouri State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America will hold their firs. convention at the Sexton Hotel, Kansas City, Mo.

The object of the meeting is to elect delegates to the National convention, also to transact a large amount of important business now pending. The Kansas City Local No. 1 is preparing to give all visiting exhibitors a fine time while in the city.

Our state organizer, A. P. Drennan, is having excellent success throughout the state securing new members. We expect by the time of the convention that the majority of the exhibitors in the state of Missouri will be members of the League.

We hope that every exhibitor in the state, whether members or not, will make a special effort to attend this convention, and we have invited the exhibitors from the states of Kansas and Oklahoma to attend and help boost things along

At the last meeting of the state executive meeting a local charter was granted to Springfield to be known as the Springfield Local No. 2.

G. H. WILEY, President,
M. P. E. L. of A., Missouri State Branch.

"THE TRUE LOVE"
Reliance Release, July 9

A MAN'S DUTY

By VIRGINIA WEST

Adapted from Reliance Release.

WHEN John Wilson had gone North to college there was some question in the minds of his neighbors as to the wisdom of it. When a year after his graduation he returned North and brought home a young wife they wisely shook their heads and said that it would never do. John was such a Southerner, they said, and a Northern woman with entirely different ways could bring nothing but trouble.

However, with all their expectations, nothing came of them. The neighbors had to acknowledge that they had never seen a happier couple.

After the coming of their two boys it seemed to John Wilson and his wife that they had nothing else to wish for.

Mrs. Wilson was a woman of strong mentality. Her mind worked entirely independently of her husband's, and it happened that their opinions were not always the same.

But this did not in any way interfere with the harmony of their bliss.

As the boys grew old enough to have opinions Mr. Wilson made it a rule to discuss with them the topics of the day, so that they would develop minds of their own.

It was soon seen that Dick, the younger boy, usually agreed with his mother, while John junior, was apt to hold the same ideas as his father.

The summer preceding the war between the states the boys were twenty-one and nineteen.

As the autumn passed and the winter came, many were the heated discussions in the Wilson household but always friendly.

Suddenly the discussions ceased almost as if by magic. Rumors of war had gone through the South.

In the minds of the father and mother and the two sons was but one thought, and that they dared not speak. Each involuntarily read the thoughts of the others, but tried to conceal his own.

Then at last came the moment when they knew that the North and South must fight.

When Mrs. Wilson heard the news she turned pale but her voice was steady when she said to her husband, "You feel that you must go?"

"Yes, dear," he answered.

"And the boys, Oh, John, they—they are so—so different and I—" She stopped and was unable to go on.

"Yes, dearest, I know your thoughts," said the husband gently, "but we must leave the boys free to choose. We must accept and respect the belief of each. Can you do that?"

Mrs. Wilson bowed her head

"Shall we send for them now and ask them what they will do?" asked her husband.

"Yes."

The boys were sent for and soon came down to the library.

"My sons," said Mr. Wilson, "your mother and I have always wanted you to think for yourselves, to be entirely independent of us mentally. We have helped you to do this. You may not always be right but I am sure you are always honest."

He paused.

"And now, my boys, has come what is probably the greatest trial of your lives. The war is now an assured fact. You know that your mother and I are of different opinions on this great subject. Now tell us, what will you do? Will you go to war?"

"Yes, I shall." answered John quickly.

"And I," said Dick.

The father waited a moment, then looking tenderly at the boys asked in a low voice, "Which side?"

"Oh, Father, I shall fight for the South, of course," cried John impetuously.

"And you, Dick?"

The boy turned pale.

"I am on the Northern side," he said.

At last they knew that that which they had dreaded, was true. Brother must fight against brother.

The few days that followed before the departure of the three men to join their regiments, were filled with sorrow.

Mr. Wilson was made a Colonel and John a lieutenant under his father's command, but Dick left his home in the uniform of a private soldier of the Northern army.

At home, the wife and mother attended quietly to her household duties, with anxious, trembling heart. She was torn between her love for husband and oldest son and her loyalty to the Union cause.

One day a few months after the commencement of the war Colonel Wilson sent for his son to come to him. "My son," he said, "I have just received word from General Lee that a Northern spy has entered the Confederate lines. All the Colonels have been warned to be on the lookout for him. I am going to put you in command of a scouting party to search for him in our vicinity. I am sure you will do your best."

"Thank you, sir," said John, saluting. "I shall do my best to bring him back if he is around here."

The scouting party was organized and in a short while they were searching the woods.

Their method of search was to surround a certain chosen piece of woods and then gradually draw toward the center.

Every bush and tree was searched, every rock looked behind.

After the scouting of one piece of woodland Lieutenant Wilson came up and found his men surrounding a soldier he knew was not of his party.

"We thought we had him, Lieutenant, but it's only one of our own men," called one of the party.

When Lieutenant Wilson was close enough to see the man's face he stopped suddenly and turned deathly pale.

Several men sprang to his side. "Are you ill, sir?" they cried.

"Only for a moment. It will pass," he answered.

The men stood waiting, still surrounding the man they had taken for the spy.

The Lieutenant stood silent for a moment his eyes covered with his hand. Then addressing his men he said, "We will return now."

As he dropped his hand from his eyes he looked into the eyes of the man in the midst of his soldiers.

The eyes never flinched. The soul of honor looked from them. The Lieutenant pulled himself together with a great effort. "And take this man with you," he added. "I—I suspect him."

On the way back the Lieutenant walked with a firm step and with head erect, but his face was of a ghost.

Colonel Wilson sat in his tent when his son entered to report to him his day's work.

The Lieutenant came in and stood before the Colonel.

"My boy!" exclaimed the father, "are you ill?"

"No, father." came the answer, and the hand that brushed the hair from the white forehead trembled.

"My son," said the Colonel sternly, "do you mean that you cannot perform an unpleasant duty in a manner more befitting a soldier than the one you are showing now?"

"But I—I—" The voice failed and the young officer sank into a chair.

"You have found the spy?" demanded the Colonel.

"Yes."

"Where is he? Did you fail to do your duty? Did you allow him to escape?" questioned the Colonel with suppressed excitement.

The young soldier gathered himself together for a moment. "I have captured the spy and he is in the guard house, but, Oh, Father!"

His voice broke and ended in a flood of tears.

The father put his hand gently on his young son's shoulder. "My boy, I am your father as well as your Colonel. Tell me what troubles you. Is it just the thought of this poor fellow's plight?"

The son raised his head and looked into his father's eyes. "Don't you know?"

For a moment there was a death-like silence in the room then a spasm of pain crossed the father's face. "My God," he whispered hoarsely, "you mean——?"

"Yes, I mean it's Dick!"

The Colonel covered his face with his hands and sank into a chair.

The room was silent save for the breathing of the two stricken men.

At last the Colonel arose, his face pale and set.

"John, my son," he said steadily, "you have done your duty, now I must do mine."

"You mean—? But of course you know your duty, Father, and must do it, as you say. I must not make it harder for you—I promise I will not."

He held out his hand, which the father took tenderly.

"Thank you, my boy," he said.

During the court-marshal none of the other officers knew that anything more tragic than the mere sentencing of a spy was taking place before them, so self-possessed were the father and brother.

But beneath the stern exteriors two hearts were breaking.

The spy was sentenced to be shot at sunrise.

After the sentence was pronounced John went to his father again.

"I must go to General Lee," said the young man. "I shall ask him for a reprieve. You will give me permission?"

"Yes, but you have a long way to go. General Lee is fifty miles away."

"I shall be there and back before sunrise," answered John with determination.

"Then go, son, and may God keep you and reward you?"

"Amen," answered John.

Hour after hour he rode, growing weary and more weary, fording deep streams, going up steep mountain roads and down again, but never once did he swerve from his purpose. His brother must be saved if it were possible.

At midnight he had reached General Lee's headquarters. Begging an audience and swearing that the business was a matter of life and death he was finally admitted to the General's presence.

The face was kind and earnest as always and into the eyes of the young man looked eyes that commanded trust, but the request could not be granted. Any personal desire must be put aside, he said, for what he considered the safety of the South.

John told the General of his mother and of the youthfulness of the spy, but with tears in his eyes the great man of the South said that he could not grant what he asked.

In sorrow but without bitterness John turned toward his own camp. He did not urge his worn horse for now it would do no good and the poor animal needed rest.

Worn and heartbroken he reached the top of the hill above the camp shortly after sunrise.

In the valley below him, in a secluded spot, he saw a squad of men and at a short distance from them one man stood.

John closed his eyes, for he knew the significance of this scene.

Then it came over his dulled senses that it was after sunrise and he wondered why the one man was still standing there.

Almost against his will he opened his eyes and looked again. There was something he had not seen before. A man on a horse stood near the squad of men. He urged his tired horse once more toward his father's tent. He dared not hope, yet he could not keep hope down entirely.

Colonel Wilson met him a short distance from his quarters.

"You have not failed after all," he cried, "a special messenger has come by another road with a reprieve. You must have affected him strongly for him to change his mind."

Lieutenant Wilson's hands loosened and he fell forward on the saddle.

Some soldiers came running up.

"He's fainted," said the Colonel, "carry him to his tent.

"I thought he was ill yesterday," said one man.

"Reckon he didn't want to give up," said another.

"No, he didn't want to give up," answered the Colonel.

ROBIN HOOD.

Every big production has its accident or near fatality, some risk that players must undergo in their work. Eclair had practically finished Robin Hood without a scratch or fall—until this week while Mr. Arnaud was out on his last retake. The scene had started when Mr. Arnaud discovered some bit of "prop" had been forgotten, he stopped the scene and returned to the studio for it. Now be it known that Mr. Arnaud is a strict disciplinarian while his company is working. As soon as the auto had disappeared from view there was a general exclamation of "The boss has gone," and a sort of revel started. Miss Tennant had wandered off by herself and was seated back of a tree—hidden from the men. Robin Hood (Robt. Frazer) suggested an archery contest and picked out the aforementioned tree as the target; he pulled back and let fly—the arrow just missed the tree and there came a cry and then they saw Miss Tennant scramble to her feet, holding her arm. For the arrow had grazed her arm, also had passed through her waist sleeve. She is in a quandary whether to mend the tear or keep the waist as a souvenir of Robin Hood and a very close call.

HALLBERG A. C. TO D. C. ECONOMIZER, FOR CANADA

As an evidence of the widespread demand for Hallberg A. C. to D. C. Economizers, Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the sale of one of his 40 amp. sets to the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba. The sale of Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizers continues surprisingly large, and shipments of these best known current savers and light producers are being made to all parts of the country.

TWO POWERS STARS

Miss Florence Barker and Edwin August to Pose in the Leading Roles with the Powers Picture Players

Coming from the Biograph Company to the Powers picture players, Miss Florence Barker brings prestige and valuable moving picture experience to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Manager Evans feels very much elated at securing Miss Barker and Edwin August to augment his already excellent stock company.

Miss Barker has had a wide and varied experience in moving pictures and enjoys an international reputation. Gravitating from the legitimate ranks she went abroad and for some time played leading women roles for the Pathé Frères company in both London and Paris. She early evinced decided talent and was the idol of the picture fans across the water and in this country. Returning to America, she was engaged by the Biograph Company to appear in leading roles, and how well she has succeeded is attested by her world-wide popularity.

Her theatrical career was began in the legitimate in stock companies in nearly all the principal cities of the United States, and she was assigned difficult leading roles in nearly all of the dramas that have become popular. The call of the moving pictures was too strong and she forsook the speaking and acting business for the silent drama and her success was instant and permanent.

Those who have seen those classic "Biograph dramas, "Priscilla's Picture," "Way of the World," "Oaths and the Man," "Orange Blossoms," "The Call" and "The Diamond Star," and many others, will readily recall her. She will appear in the Powers dramas under the direction of Mr. Frank Powell in stories written especially to bring out her wonderful talent.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Kinemacolor is advertising for photoplays. The producers will supply much of the local color.

* * * *

Too much hardware in the films, remarks Eugene V. Brewster. We would add to this: "Hardware and Harness."

* * * *

One good thing about the moving picture theatre is that you always know where to find somebody.

* * * *

A number of leading theatrical managers are organizing with a view of winning back their patrons from the moving picture theatres by reducing prices. When they can give as good an hour's entertainment for a dime as do the picture theatres, their efforts may meet with success.

* * * *

The management of McClure's Magazine has selected the Edison Company to film the "Adventures of Mary" as serial to start in the Woman's World. The general excellence of Edison releases and the human interest appeal of Edison photoplays led to the McClure Company making advances. Others have noted the realism of Edison film stories—also the artistic efforts of Vitagraph.

* * * *

Don't care one straw for politics;
Don't care who's licked, don't care who licks;
Don't care who's right or who is wrong ;
Don't care about the houn' dawg song,
Don't care what happens, what may be—
For there's the picture show for me!

* * * *

Viewed a picture the other afternoon in which the hero performed a surgical operation and proved himself a reel cut-up.

* * * *

According to the very latest count there are 16,000 moving picture theatres in the United States. No wonder the mints find it so difficult to keep pace with the demand for nickles and dimes.

* * * *

An Armenian stepped up to the ticket window of a moving picture theatre in Chicago and said to the young lady at the window, "Give me a ticket, my dear." He was later arrested, a heavy fine imposed, and also a sentence to the workhouse, which was all right and proper.

* * * *

Vaudeville in the Middle West small towns is doomed. The public wishes the pictures and less of the Irish and Dutch comedians who "go on" with pillow cases strapped about 'em and query: "Why does a hen cross the street?"

* * * *

"Force children to take back seats at picture theatres," says an English authority who claims that no child should be allowed to sit nearer than thirty feet away from the screen. We understand that the children are perfectly willing to be forced to take back seats, or any other kind of seats.

* * * *

What's the use of finding fault
With every wind that blows?
What's the use of wanting rain
Every time it snows?

What's the use of howling when
The heat you can't abide?
Slip into some picture show—
You'll forget the heat, inside.

* * * *

Photoplay Philosopher is entirely correct when he says that one suggestive film tends to lower the entire standard of the industry. He adopts "Raise the Standard" as his slogan. It's a good slogan, too.

* * * *

Did you enjoy seeing Selig's "Coming of Columbus?" So did we. And by the way, isn't it about time that Essanay was giving us another one of those side-splitting baseball comedies? They're talking of the last one yet, up in our end of the town.

* * * *

"I wish Biograph would release that 'Fighting Blood' Western once more to show some of these other fellows just how it was done a year or so ago," remarked the photoplay fan on the car this morning.

* * * *

We are going to thank Vitagraph in advance for that coming "Pickwick Papers" release. And now won't Mr. Plimpton, of the Edison Company, brush up on Warren's "Ten Thonsand a Year" and give it to us in about three reels? It is one of the greatest of English novels—best known perhaps to barristers—but it would make a classy picture. We can see Quirk, Gammon and Snap and Tittlebat Titmouse in the pictures right this minute. O please, Mr. Plimpton!

* * * *

In urging the filming of great characters of American history, Mr. Brewster mentions Daniel Webster, Cass, Calhoun, et al. We would respectfully add the names of Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr to the Brewster list, expressing our approbation as to his suggestion the while.

* * * *

By the way, why doesn't some energetic director grab Captain Mayne Reid's "Rifle Rangers"? That old book contains material for several photoplays of Mexican war period atmosphere. The "dope" would be apropos right now. Any public library. General Scott and Santa Anna would prove new historical characters in filmland.

* * * *

A number of unwise investors have failed recently as moving picture magnates. Those who thought that all that was necessary to become successful in the moving picture business was to buy a lot and build a theatre, have learned of their mistake. Many lose in the moving picture business by not knowing that business. The time of the storeroom prosperity has flickered by.

* * * *

Penetrating into perilous places, making thrilling rides on scenic railways in mountainous countries, carrying a heavy camera in mountain climbing, clashing with authorities and running risk of arrest and imprisonment in taking prohibited views, the life of the moving picture camera man is not always a happy one. And the humble individual who turns the necessary crank hardly ever gets into the picture, either. Here's to you!

* * * *

I'm weary of "ripping good stories"
I'm sated with "honest red blood,"
I'm worn with their muscular glories,
With heroes who pound through the mud;
I'm tired of the sheriffs so husky
Who occupy all of a scene.
Give me one whose ringlets are dusky
To stand in relief on the screen.

* * * *

An interesting feature of the July Woman's Home Companion is an article entitled "The Fatal Penny," by Mary Heaton Vorse, in which the author reports many startling facts about the dangers that children undergo who buy cheap candy, cheap ice cream, prize chewing gum, and other goods sold to youngsters for one cent. We respectfully ask the Selig or Lubin editorial departments to look over the article and then arrange with the publishers to picture the idea. It is a vital theme and in pictures would add much to the educational value of cinematography.

* * * *

The moving picture show is the parlor in which thousands of working girls of the Middle West entertain their "young men." While it is a poor substitute for a real home, it is decidedly better than the grill room and the public dance.

The above are findings of Humane Society officials after several months investigations of moving picture theatres. The reports assert that the picture houses and the entertainments offered by them are clean and of moral influence. Not only have they superceded dance halls as meeting places for young men who work in the city and room in the downtown sections, but they have also eliminated the dime novel. Youths prefer the pictures of their heroes fighting the Indians, and the bold bad bandits, than the lurid yarns in cheap novels, often ending with doubtful lessons.

MISS JEAN LAWSON'S CAMPAIGN STORY FOR THE "MOVIES"

A play in the interests of the fly campaign has been enacted before the motion picture camera by Normal School girl students in Cleveland. The following gives in brief the story of the play which has been written by Miss Jean Dawson:

"The play is to contain both comedy and tragedy," says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "The comic bit in one scene shows a small boy with a jack hammer swatting a fly on his uncle's bald head.

"In the opening scenes portrayed yesterday the motion picture camera was set up opposite the entrance to the Normal School near University Circle. While the picture man turned the crank the girls thronged down the steps, excitedly discussing the opening of the kill-the-fly campaign. Their excited gestures were intended to reproduce a scene a year ago, when Miss Dawson of the Normal School, now head of the city fly bureau, started the campaign.

"The second scene showed the young woman discussing a newspaper announcement that the city had taken up the crusade.

"The third scene, to be enacted to-day, will show the enlistment of school children. This introduces tragedy.

"One of the school children in scene three goes home in scene four and tells his mother how flies spread disease. His baby sister has died from disease spread by flies. It is intended to have a professional actress take the part of the mother, and to have the pictures made in a slum district.

"Later on, when fly traps come into the story of the fly crusade in Cleveland, another child in this same family is ill from disease spread by flies. A man comes to sell fly traps, but the poor mother has no money with which to buy one.

"The city presents her with a fly trap. This is to illustrate the latest phase of the fly crusade in Cleveland. Another picture shows fly crusaders telling the mother that clean yards are as necessary to the extermination of flies as are traps or swatters. The yard is raked. The trap is put on the garbage can. The little sick child recovers, and the last picture shows the happy mother selling fly traps to her neighbors.

"One of the intervening scenes will show the young woman at the city hall buying flies at the summer price of ten cents a pint. The purchase of flies by the pint begins Monday.

"On Saturday young women who volunteer in the crusade will sell tickets to picture and vaudeville theatres which give half the proceeds to buy fly traps for the poor as illustrated in Miss Dawson's play."

WASHINGTON, D. C., NOTES

The Belasco Theatre, controlled by the Schuberts, is having a run of Kinemacolor pictures. The fact that this is one of our first-class theatres for drama and grand opera is evidence of how the motion pictures are intruding upon the places reserved exclusively for the legitimate drama, though it is a well-known fact that the Schuberts are running Kinemacolors and states rights features in a number of their houses. They were among the first managers of the legitimate stage to publicly acknowledge the motion picture as an amusement and financial enterprise.

The exhibition now going on at the Belasco is composed chiefly of scenic views, which have been relieved by an occasional drama. Many of the scenes were of foreign lands, but the fact that several reels were of our own United States especially interested the spectators. Particularly was this true of the beach scenes of West Palm Beach, Fla., where many prominent men and women were easily recognized.

Incidental remarks are made by Theodore Hardy, who knows just when and what to say to add interpretation and stimulate enthusiasm without detracting from the movement of the scene. It is the intention of Manager Taylor of the Belasco to interest the cultured, educational and scientific element of the National Capital in Kinemacolor, for there are few discoveries or inventions more wonderful, artistic and highly elevating than Kinemacolor.

W. H.

GEORGE KLEINE RELEASES FOR WEEK ENDING JULY 20th

For Tuesday, July 16th, is a Cines drama which is a splendid example of the high-class dramatic ability of the Cines players. The title of this film is "Disowned," which indicates in large measure the nature of the play. Miss Josephine Scotti, who plays the female lead in the play, displays a fine sense of interpretation; and Guido Serena portrays with splendid feeling and realism the character of the penniless but proud young professor in love with the heroine.

The Eclipse schedule for Wednesday, July 17th, is a fine dramatic offering of a heart-gripping character entitled "The Grandmother." The real interest centers about the good old lady's great-grandson, a very clever little tot, about four years of age, who succeeds in his innocently earnest and touching little way, with his great-grandmother's co-operation, in uniting his young and widowed mother with her parents, from whom she has become estranged through her wilful marriage against their wishes.

Saturday, July 20th, offers a fine Cines comedy-drama, "The Part the Servant Played." Mr. Alfred Bracci, as the wayward son, and Mr. Lorenzo Lupi, as the severe father who opposes strenuously his son's engagement to a young lady of whom he does not approve, portrays their characters in a realistic and convincing manner. The character of the old family servant who plays such an important part in the comedy action, is excellently taken by one of the prominent players of the Cines Company. He assumes the privileges of long service with the family and plays the role of peace-maker between father and son so effectively that where otherwise a domestic tragedy might easily have occurred, peace and unison are once more restored.

EDITOR GILES R. WARREN,

Of the Victor Film Company, is spending a few weeks at the seashore enjoying a deserved rest. Mrs. Warren is with him. Editor Warren expects to be back in the harness within a week or so.

"THE SOLDIER'S BABY"
Reliance Release, July 27

THE EQUINE SPY

(Solax Release for August 23d)

Director Warrens, of Solax, has made a good production of "The Equine Spy." Anyone who has the good fortune to see this film will not forget in a hurry the beautiful horse "Don," around whose accomplishments this romance of Civil War times is woven.

This production is in two reels, and is full of action, the scene of which is laid principally on the skirmish line. "Don," the wonderful performing horse, does all kinds of human tricks, even going so far as to bring a canteen of water to his master, who has been captured and imprisoned in an old tumble-down building by the Union soldiers. He also lights the bonfire which attracts the attention of the comrades of his master, when the Confederate officer by whom he is ridden has been pursued and wounded.

This scene is particularly effective, with the glaring red of the fire against the shadows of the moonlight. The film must commend itself to all lovers of a good horse, for "Don" is certainly a superb specimen.

Darwin Karr and Billy Quirk deserve special mention for their work in this film. Billy Quirk, as the old darkey servant, left nothing to be desired in the characterization of the part, and Darwin Karr, as a Confederate officer, appears the brave soldier to a finish. The cast is as follows:

The Equine Spy.....“Don”
A Confederate Officer.....Darwin Karr
His Sister.....Fanny Simpson
A Darky Servant.....Billy Quirk
A Southern General.....George Paxton
A Northern General.....Lee Biggs
A Southern Mother.....Mrs. Foy
A Northern Soldier.....Harry Harvey

MANUFACTURERS' NOTES

The British-American Film Manufacturing Co., Ltd., has been incorporated with $500,000 capital, to manufacture moving picture films at Montreal.

* * * *

Henry J. Brock, president of the Kinemacolor Company of America, has concluded negotiations with William Hammerstein whereby Hammerstein's Roof Garden on September 1st, at the termination of the present summer season, will become the permanent winter home of the Kinemacolor pictures. The roof will be entirely remodeled, a modern steam-heating plant installed, and the seating capacity increased.

The first films shown will be those of Prof. Reinhardt's spectacle, presented at the Olympia in London, "The Miracle."

* * * *

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago, sailed with his wife and son on the S. S. Olympic for Europe, July 6th. Mr. Hutchinson will visit his London offices and tour the continent before returning home.

* * * *

William Lee is the name of a new producer recently added to the forces of the American Film Mfg. Co. Mr. Lee formerly produced for the American, shortly after the company was organized. He will specialize in straight Western dramas.

* * * *

Daniel Frohman has become managing director of a new organization in the motion picture field called "The Famous Players' Film Company," just established with a capital of $250,000.

This moving picture company is designed to photograph famous players acting in their most successful plays. The films will be displayed only in first-class theatres.

The company has already secured Mme. Sarah Bernhardt in her play "Queen Elizabeth." This will be the first work to be exhibited.

* * * *

THE REFLECTOSCOPE

The U. S. Government, through the Department of the Interior, for the Indian Schools recognizes the importance of visual instruction as an aid in its educational work and has recently placed orders through Mr. George H. Gale, the New York manager for twenty new model Thompson reflectoscopes for combined opaque and slide projection.

These are so made that the attachment for motion pictures may be added at any time, and many of the schools will doubtless take advantage of this and make use of the educational films now being produced.

THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF

"The Prison on the Cliff" is a delight in point of photography and artistic rendering of the subject in question. Gaumont, famed for unexcelled choice of location and the beauty of their sea pictures, have in this production even overstepped their usual bounds. The breaking of the waves against the walls of the grim prison castle, throwing the spray high in angry rebellion at the interference of the stone walls, and the foam lying white on the rocks and seething waters below are enough to delight the eye without the interpolation of the plot.

The story is laid at the silent fortress of Roucras on the rugged cliffs of the Bay of Gascony, close to the frontier of Spain. Here lived the Governor with his mother and beautiful young wife. The duty of receiving prisoners at the fortress was one of almost daily occurrence to the Governor and his family, for the period of the story is at the time of the French Revolution, and it was here the plotters were sent, found guilty of treason. However, one evening in August, to his amazement, the Governor, recognized a sentenced man as his colleague of early years, the Marquis de Fiers. Great kindness is therefore shown the prisoner by the Governor, and he is invited to dinner with the family on frequent occasions. The prisoner and the young hostess, both fond of music, enjoy many pleasant hours together, which ends in the prisoner forming an unhappy passion for the young wife of his friend. Consumed by jealousy, the Governor's friendship turns to hate. He plans that the prisoner must die under the guise of helping him to escape. While he is making calculations for the fulfilment of his plan, a letter of pardon comes for the Marquis. However, still consumed with the idea that the prisoner must die, he resolves to keep the fact of his being pardoned from him, and to place within his reach means of escape which will practically mean suicide. The Governor, therefore, pursuing his wicked course, places in the tower where the Marquis is imprisoned, a rope which is too short to reach to the bottom of the cliff, with the hope that, should he attempted the descent, he, the prisoner, will be dashed to death on the rocks below.

It is often the unexpected that happens, however, and the Marquis, though he makes the perilous descent and drops from a terrific height, still is practically unharmed. The Governor repents, begs forgiveness of his wife, and happiness is restored to the isolated family.

SCENES FROM "THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF"—GAUMONT RELEASE

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

Editor Hoadley's Opinion

Every photoplaywright counts C. B. Hoadley, editor for the Powers Picture Play Company, as his friend. As editor for the Imp, Great Northern, Champion and Powers companies, Mr. Hoadley has kept in touch with photoplaywrights the country over, and has read the work of nearly every successful author. Mr. Hoadley's statement on the question as to whether scripts submitted during the past year show improvement or not, will be read with great interest. His statement submitted for the benefit of photoplaywrights, follows:

"You can quote me as saying that, in my opinion, the class of manuscripts submitted to-day show no marked improvement over those of a year ago as to their adaptation to moving picture production. I think a more intelligent class of writers are now striving to sell, but there is the same lack of originality of theme and construction. The preparation of the manuscripts show some improvement as to the prescribed form, and pen scripts are now scarce. Fully seventy-five per cent of the scripts are accompanied by self-addressed and stamped envelopes for return, and the usual rules regarding the submission of manuscripts are more universally regarded.

"My experience has proven to me that the newspaper and magazine writer fails as an author of photoplays. He is entirely too cocksure of himself and has made less effort to familiarize himself with picture needs than the moving picture 'fan,' who is a student of the picture. I have read scripts from editors, reporters, short story writers and other literary lights and, as a rule, they are as ignorant of the mechanical and camera requirements, and make many mistakes that are common to the contributor from Carnarsie or Huckleberry Ridge. They have taken no pains to equip themselves for the work and take an occasional flyer at it. As a rule they are easily discouraged and about two stories suffice to cool their ardor. Writers of vaudeville sketches fail inevitably. As a rule, they are the worst of the lot, for they lay the story in one interior scene invariably, and their stuff must be gotten over almost wholly in dialogue.

"Many of the illiterate ones stick to it, profit by refusal, and come along and sell, but there are very few writers with a dozen sold scripts to their credit. Fully seventy-five per cent of the stories put on today are written by people connected with the actual production of the pictures. They know the requirements and the dramatic ingredients that are necessary to an interesting film story. Thousands fail to sell for the reason that their stories cannot be adapted to pictures for one or more of a hundred reasons. It would seem that the many periodicals published in which writers are supposed to be enlightened, and the so-called schools of instruction, have failed to improve the quality of scripts through enlightening the writers as to the needs of the producers.

"Probably fifty per cent of those writing the stuff are igonrant of the fact that moving pictures are actual photographs, and that scenes cannot be conceived at will. They forget the big situations they write about cost enormous sums of money and really have but little connection with the story. They forget that editors are supposed to have memories, are in touch with the game, and that the story they saw six months ago, cannot be filched and sold as original. They write stuff in which really nothing happens out of the ordinary, and their limited knowledge of law, industrial and social conditions, etc., makes their efforts appear silly.

"For instance: The man with a wife is made to elope with another woman and marry her on the spot, without bothering to seek a divorce; the sheriff is the only officer of whom they have any knowledge, and he takes the most unwarranted liberties with the law, being always Johnny-on-the-Spot; hangs men on the slightest provocation; yanks them to the penitentiary without the formality of a trial; and makes himself the arbiter of all trouble. Lovers meet, fall in love, and are married in fifteen feet of film, and there is no such thing as a marriage license. The sheriff generally releases the wronged man from prison, the process being just as easy as falling downstairs. Fifty per cent of the stories are nonsensically weak, and without a semblance of dramatic qualities to recommend them. Hundreds are only a series of pictures which cannot possibly be connected to form a story that will interest. They begin nowhere and end the same."

A Frank Statement

The above statement by Editor Hoadley is frank—and it is the more beneficial for that. He tells of his personal experiences, and they are bound to be instructive to the aspiring photoplaywright. It has been proven in this series that editors differ. Mr. McCloskey believes that the entrance of noted fiction writers into the field has improved the photoplay output. Mr. Hoadley believes the fiction writer is a failure as a photoplaywright. Hoadley's most interesting and encouraging assertion, to our mind, is that the most humble writer by studying the picture and profiting by rejections is finding a market.

Next week we will publish an opinion expressed by George W. Terwilliger, editor Reliance Company.

The Centralization Idea

A Massachusetts author friend (name suppressed) writes us anent the request of the Universal Company for scripts and he wants to know if this means that no more scripts are to be sent to the individual editors of the companies comprising the Universal. Not so far as we have learned. All authors can be assured of good square treatment by submitting scripts to the headquarters of the Universal, and abiding by the rules as have been advertised in the Moving Picture News. However, those authors who have been catering to the desires of individual editors will probably send their scripts to them direct. This action should only be taken by those who have familiarized themselves with the wants of certain editors who have, in the past, met with the desires of this or that editor. It does not apply to the standing army or script writers. Take the case of Florence Lawrence, accomplished star of the Victor Company. She is difficult to write for. Giles R. Warren, formerly of the Imp, Powers and Lubin concerns, has been especially engaged to furnish Miss Lawrence suitable material. It is authoritatively said that only one per cent of average manuscripts are available, while for Miss Lawrence about one-fifth of one per cent would be nearer the mark. Therefore the Victor Company must have their own means to obtain their own material, and writers who have successfully catered to Mr. Warren in the past will probably be requested to send their stuff direct. The same rule will probably apply to other editors.

Wallingford Methods

To cite the Wallingford methods pursued by some of the Photoplay correspondence "schools," one "syndicate" has added another graft to its repertoire. A Chicago writer submits follow-up literature in which the "come-on" who refused to "fall" for lessons in script writing is urged to pay for particulars as to how to correspond for newspapers. "You can easily earn $100 a month," reads the literature. The "string" of "outside" newspapers is the fortunatus of one or two newspapermen in every town of any consequence. They are accredited and are selected for their experience. These correspondents can take a column newspaper story and boil it down to one hundred words before placing it on the wire. Some earn $100 monthly at it—the majority do not. It's a side line to the regular. There is no opportunity for the "outsider" to earn $100 monthly corresponding for newspapers, just as there is no chance for a correspondence school graduate to earn $50 weekly writing photoplays.

The Fully Developed Script

The three-page script must be superceded by the fully developed script. We take the liberty of again quoting Epes Winthrop Sargent on this subject because he expresses, in our estimation, some vitally important facts. He says: "Too many studios have become 'rutted' and run along handling all themes in the fashion that they fancy brings them success. There is no variety to the output.

The indifferent script is built up and the real story 'built down' until the same level of mediocrity is attained. Things cannot be otherwise as long as the three-page script is demanded. If directors were beyond criticism their position would be impregnable, but we never knew a man who knew it all, and the best director is the man who interprets the ideas of various authors with sympathy and skill."

A three-page script of action is not a photoplay; it is the skeletonizing of a story; really the curb-bit to free swing, red blood, inspiration and characterization. The sooner the brief, barren, form of the present technical script is supplanted by the five or six pages of detailed action, with character drawing, and enthusiastic style of the author, the sooner will the present mechanical action be superceded by absorbing, convincing interest, and that indefinable something that cannot be described in photoplay or story—human sympathy.

The fixed length of the reel is another item acting as a deterrent to the best work of the photoplaywright. There are hundreds of plays that cannot be produced correctly in a thousand feet, and there are many writers handicapped in their work because of this commercial ruling. It is true art subservient to commercialism, nothing else.

Permit the author to have free reign to his fancy; permit him to have the children of his imagination perform undeterred by the one thousand feet limit and the three-page script; encourage him to write the "quiet action"—the photoplay in which the characters "next door" consistently perform with their frills and foibles painted true to life. Let him write until he "gets through" with those little deft touches and by-play which causes the various types to stand forth in bold and convincing relief.

Giles R. Warren, one of the greatest photoplaywrights of the present day, who wrote many plays for the spoken drama before turning his talents to studio work, has long been an advocate of the fully developed script. Let us give one example of Warren's methods: A new author submitted a script to him. The author knew little of technique but he had written a story that stood out. It was a masterpiece in its way. When you read the script, in your mind's eye you could see the unbridled passions of the frontiersman; the patient love of woman; the boundless prairie; the weaknesses and the strength of human nature. We were given an opportunity to look over that script. It was a story in which the author had written his heart and soul. Warren bought the script. He knew it was just a bit too long for the one thousand feet limit, but he rightfully believed that a man who could turn out such work should be encouraged. Every bit of action was convincingly described; every scene a word picture. Mr. Warren did not have the heart to cut the action; no director could at that time be induced to handle the story. That script has not been produced to this day. If it has not been used for a memorandum pad, mislaid or lost, some day an artistic director will take that story and produce a masterpiece in the way of a photoplay. There are similar instances where a writer has composed an exceptionally good story which has been turned down for mediocre work, because the author did not confine himself to three pages of skimpy action. Mr. Sargent has hit the nail squarely on the head in his plea for more fully developed scripts, and we are with him in the endeavor to bring about a higher excellence.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT.

SIEGMUND LUBIN AND THE VANIMANS

Among the many who deplore the airship tragedy at Atlantic City, one of the most affected is Mr. Siegmund Lubin, who was a warm admirer and patron of the Vaniman brothers. The project to cross the Atlantic was much encouraged and promoted by Mr. Lubin. Film-photographs of the Dirigible and probable crew had already been taken and arrangements made to continue the subject on the European side. Had the project ever been fulfilled, the Lubin Company would have had a pictorial description of the trip that would have been of spectacular value to the people of both the old and new world. Mr. Lubin regrets the tragic end of the brave boys who were so earnest in the work of solving the great problem of our time.

"WHERE THERE IS SOAP THERE IS HOPE"
Reliance Release, July 3

Topeka, Kan.—The New Best Theatre has been enlarged.

Johnston, Pa.—A charter has been granted to the Co-Operative Film Exchange.

Racine, Wis.—P. C. Havill was appointed manager of the Orpheum Theatre on College avenue.

One of the Lubin Troupes, directed by Joseph Smiley. Most of the company are children under 9 years of age. The small figure second from the left is the famous Roswell "Buster" Johnson, only 3½ years old and playing star roles.

Opportunity for splendid returns for individual seeking investment in the motion picture field. Address I. L., care of Moving Picture News.

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan

Auxiliary Local 35, I. A. T. S. E.

OFFICERS

President—Frank Brennan.
Vice-president—Robert Goldblatt.
Financial Secretary—Gus Durkin.
Recording Secretary—Sydney Dignon.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Willie Cohen.
Business Agent—Henry Weinberger.

The Auxiliary meets at Teutonia Hall, No. 66 Essex street, the first and third Monday of every month at 12 o'clock midnight. Dues can be paid to Brother Weinberger at the Union Office, No. 133 Third avenue, or to Gus Durkin, care of Berkeley Theatre, No. 19 West Forty-fourth street.

* * * *

The next regular meeting will be held on August 5th, when we will expect to hear the report from the convention. All members are requested to kindly be on hand to pay their assessments and dues.

* * * *

Anyone requiring the services of competent operators at any time for city or road work, by letting me know, can have same at an hour's notice.

* * * *

Now that the Board of Health is working so hard to show the public how to prevent tuberculosis, let us show them how hard we have to work in the operating room from eight to fourteen hours per day, with little or no ventilation. Get right down to business now and have this most important point taken care of immediately. All operators wanting this matter taken up with the Board of Health get busy at once and write us a letter, care Moving Picture News, giving the address of the theatre and any further information you think will help.

* * * *

They tell me that the Midnight Owl Club had another session last Sunday, and among those present were: Father Mike, Black Sam, Blondey Tichenor, Fat Klein, Sergeant-at-Arms Cohen, Standard Abe Kessler, Louis Weinberger, the guy with the silver knife, and Tichenor's friend, Mr. White, and Arthur Weinberger. They say they caught 46 flukes, two large skates and a few sea robins. Seems to me ten men ought to be able to do a little better than that. Only two skates—I think that's ridiculous for ten men. Father Mike says the only thing he's sorry about is that he won't be able to attend the next one the following Sunday, as he has to go to the country to see wifie.

* * * *

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mr. Joseph H. Rinehart will kindly oblige me by letting me know.

New York Lodge, Y. M. A. No. 1, will have their annual Outing and Games on Tuesday, August 6, 1912. Full particulars about same in the next issue.

T. M. A. LODGE NEWS

Will Not Give Up T. M. A.'S.

Toronto, Can., July 5.—It has been intimated to R. C. Newman, grand secretary and treasurer of the Grand Lodge of the Theatrical Mechanical Associations of the United States and Canada, that to retain his Government position of inspector of theatres, that he must resign the grand secretaryship of the T. M. A.'s. Mr. Newman has decided, should they insist on it, to throw up the $1,500-a-year Government job sooner than resign from the T. M. A. office. He will know in a couple of weeks whether he will give up the Government position. If Mr. Newman does throw up the Government position he can and will return to Shea's Theatre as formerly, stage manager.

* * * *

Letter from Secretary Newman

Grand Secretary Newman has sent out the following circular:

June 25, 1912.

To All Lodges, Greeting:

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

Since my last circular I am pleased to inform you that the following new lodges have been added to our roll:

Reinstated Sacramento Lodge, No. 60, at Sacramento, Cal., on April 5, 1912, through the untiring efforts of Brother William G. Rusk, grand organizer, assisted by Brother James Hardy, who rendered valuable assistance. J. A. Heyman, 1701 M street, Sacramento, Cal., is the secretary.

Monessen Lodge, No. 97, at Monessen, Pa., chartered May 31, 1912, with 23 charter members. R. A. Anthon, Monessen, Pa., General Delivery, is the secretary.

Kalamazoo Lodge, No. 32, at Kalamazoo, Mich., chartered June 8, 1912, with 24 charter members.

Change of Secretaries' Addresses

Richmond Lodge—George W. Russell, 818½ Main street, Richmond, Ind.

New Haven Lodge—Fred. H. Frazier, 489 Columbus avenue, New Haven, Conn.

Bluefield Lodge—Robert Baker, P. O. Box 428, Bluefield, W. Va.

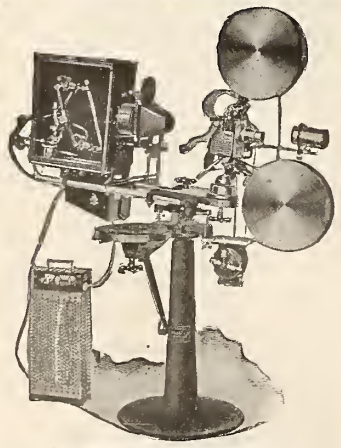
Seattle Lodge—H. W. Kirske, 536 Second Avenue, North, Seattle, Wash.

Atlanta Lodge—H. H. Brandon, 62½ North Forsyth street, Atlanta, Ga., T. M. A. rooms.

Troy Lodge—B. Norris, 3 Elberon Place, Albany, N. Y.

Ottawa Lodge—R. R. Marcil, 213 Cathcart street, Ottawa, Ont.

Wilkes-Barre Lodge—F. J. Fraley, 101 Wood street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.



No. 1000—A MOTIOGRAPH

ARE YOU ONE OF THE FOUR HUNDRED?

MORE THAN FIFTY PER CENT OF CHICAGO'S SIX HUNDRED THEATRES ARE EQUIPPED WITH THE MOTIOGRAPH

This endorsement of the "Home" exhibitor of a machine made in their "Home Town" is the strongest endorsement we can offer.

We do not spend one-fifth the money in advertising that others do—our best advertisement comes from thousands of satisfied users.

Chicago Exhibitors in particular, and all others as well—we want to be personally acquainted with you—we want you to come and see us, to see where and how your MOTIOGRAPH is made, to see the care and exactitude used on each part—we want to show you why we may justly claim THE MOTIOGRAPH THE BEST MADE MACHINE IN AMERICA.

Send ten cents for the 1912 Hand Book and Instructions.
Every operator will find it worth many times the cost.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

Asbury Park Lodge—N. H. Schuyler, 96 Lake avenue, Ocean Grove, N. J.

Detroit Lodge—H. F. Poggenburg, 155 Twelfth street, Detroit, Mich.

Change of Meeting Place

Denver Lodge—Meets at 1422 Curtis street, Denver, Col., first Tuesday.

Detroit Lodge—Meets at 247 Randolph street, Detroit, Mich., first and third Tuesdays.

"THE KING'S POWER"
Scene from Great Northern Release of August 3

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE

A pretentious production has been attempted by Thanhouser in the great Shakespearean drama, "The Merchant of Venice," and with fair success.

The photographic work of this production is superb—the camera man has done himself proud.

For the benefit of those unfamiliar with the story of the play, we will give a brief outline of the story: Antonio, a nobleman, and a merchant of Venice, in order to aid financially his kinsman, Bassanio, who desires to travel afar for the purpose of wooing the beautiful Portia, a woman of fortune, is obliged to borrow from a Jew called Shylock, with the promise that should he fail to return payment in three months' time he will forfeit a pound of his (Antonio's) flesh. Antonio's wealth is tied up in ships and merchandise. Before the term of the debt is up he loses all he has, and although Portia, upon hearing of Bassanio's kinsman's plight, dispatches Bassanio, now her husband, with thrice the amount, the cruel Shylock refuses the money, insisting upon the forfeit of the pound of flesh. Portia, disguised as a Doctor of the Law, pleads Antonio's case, and eventually Shylock is outwitted and the case won by Portia.

The production is in two reels.

The Bassanio played by Harry Benham is good, and Mr. Russell gives the genuine ring to the part of Antonio, but unfortunately the part of Portia has been miscast. Miss Flo Labadie, so charming and delightful in many of the parts we have seen her play, does not fit in the dignified character of Shakespeare's Portia.

The scenic effects are good and the atmosphere thrown about the production by the stage artist is appropriate, also the costuming is good. The great pity is that an otherwise beautiful production should have been marred by a miscast of one of its principal characters.

Rochester, N. Y.—Application was made by McGreal & Fagan for the remodeling of a building at Goodman street and Hayward avenue, for a picture show.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. J. Keenan is planning to erect a moving picture theatre at Durham street and Germantown avenue.

Huntington, N. Y.—Plans are being made for an open-air moving picture show on the lot just north of the Bijou Opera House.

Waterbury, Conn.—Plans are being figured for a new moving picture theatre to be erected at the corner of North Main and North streets for B. E. Hausdorf.

Lawrence, Mass.—The Victoria Theatre has taken over the Pastime Theatre and will conduct it as an up-to-the-minute show house.

New York, N. Y.—M. Marine, of 2257 First avenue, is building a three-story moving picture show at 2157 First avenue.

New York, N. Y.—E. Mayer and L. Schneider are planning to build a moving picture show at 118 and 120 Rivington street.

SCENE FROM ECLAIR'S "ROBIN HOOD"

SCENE FROM "DOUBLE CROSS"—ECLAIR

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., July 3.—One of the most remarkable illustrations of a most wonderful memory that has ever been noted in this city was given shortly before the doors of the New Central Theatre were thrown open for the regular picture show to-day, when Herbert Sidney Hopkins, graduate of Yale, resident of New York, guest for the past three weeks at the Waukesha Hotel, called from the innermost recesses of his mind the beautiful lines of Scott's most entertaining poetic masterpiece, "The Lady of the Lake," and for one hour entertained Sidney M. Nutt, the proprietor, and the employees, with exact quotations from this poem while the three reels of this picture, which constitutes the Tuesday feature at the New Central, were being run off to demonstrate his memory and ability to quote this poem to fit every scene in the three thousand feet of film.

Thought Him a "Crank"

Mr. Hopkins appeared at the New Central a few minutes before 1 o'clock. He met Mr. Nutt and surprised him by requesting to see "The Lady of the Lake," offering to pay many times the price of admission. He acted, says Mr. Nutt, in such a manner that the proprietor of the theatre believed him to be a "crank." The visitor was told that the feature he wished to see would not be shown until Tuesday, and Mr. Nutt asked him why he was so anxious to see the picture.

"There was a time when I could recite every line of that poem, and it came very near costing me my reason," replied Mr. Hopkins. "I was always more or less interested in such recognized works as those of Scott, Byron, Tennyson and others, and when finishing college, intending to teach literature, I set out to commit every line of 'The Lady of the Lake' to memory. I was taken down with nervous prostration, but I mastered the poem."

Grants His Request

"You don't mean to tell me that you can recite every line of Scott's 'Lady of the Lake?' asked Mr. Nutt.

"There was a time when I could, and that is why I want to see the pictures, to ascertain how much of the film is applicable to a poetic explanation of the same. You see, I am leaving for New York this evening, and unless I can see the film to-day it is doubtful if ever such an excellent chance would be given me to satisfy a longing to see the poem 'picturized,' as it were, and at the same time know definitely whether memory is a fickle mistress."

Mr. Nutt realized that it would be an hour before the afternoon show started and turning to Pat Gillam, his chief operator, said:

"Pat, start those pictures. We'll give Mr. Hopkins an opportunity to demonstrate his memory."

And Hopkins Made Good

The pictures were started, and Hopkins made good, too. Standing a few feet away from the stage, gazing on the curtain, he caught the opening scene, showing three deer drinking from a rippling stream, and in well modulated tones, with perfect inflection, began as follows:

"The stag at eve had drunk his fill,
Where danced the moon on Monan's rill.
And deep his midnight lair had made
In lone Glenartney's hazel shade."

In the scene showing the chieftain's daughter on the stream Mr. Hopkins quoted the following:

"The maid, alarmed, with hasty oar,
Push'd her light shallop from the shore,
And when a space was gained between Closer she drew her bosom's screen."

He Seldom Faltered

This man with such a wonderful memory seldom faltered. When he hesitated it was, it seemed, more to study the picture for a moment and get in his mind the exact scene to fit the lines that he was ready to quote. The ending of the last of the three reels is especially beautiful, and Mr. Hopkins was equal to the occasion.

"Receding now, the dying numbers ring
Fainter and fainter down the rugged dell,
And now the mountain breezes scarcely bring
A wandering witch-note of the distant spell—
And now, 'tis silent all! Enchantress, fare thee well!"

Acted As a Tonic

"You have no idea what good you have done for me," declared Mr. Hopkins after the pictures had been run off. He had been quoting from the "Lady of the Lake" for over an hour.

"I know now that my mind is sound and bright as ever, and that memory I took such pride in a few years ago is still my own. This little demonstration that I gave was better than any tonic I could have taken, and I certainly appreciate your kindness in running the pictures off for me. They are very beautiful and tell the story in a most intensely realistic manner. Give this to your operator for his trouble, please."

Mr. Hopkins left a crisp five dollar note for Pat Gillam, who didn't mind the extra hour's work.

The Press Agent's Dream

The foregoing, dear Mr. Editor, was a "rave" that the press agent of the New Central Theatre turned loose the past week when "The Lady of the Lake" came to Hot Springs, and believe me when I state that the local editors "fell" for it with the same alacrity that Democratic presidential candidates went after votes. It made a good story and the town appreciated it. Furthermore, when investigated, it was found that the name of Mr. Hopkins appeared on the register of the Waukesha Hotel. This story and some stirring national pictures for the Fourth of July week were the principal events that attracted local attention the past six days.

The best Independent pictures of the week were those sent in by the American Company, and "The Simple," "For the Good of Her Men" and one other reel I saw at the Princess Saturday evening, a comedy, in which a "dude" from the East was given the short end of the love purse after father and son had been subjected to a fake kidnapping and hold-up scheme, certainly brought the applause and laughter. The Western subject turned out by the American Company cannot be surpassed. We are also awaiting with much interest at the Photo Play the next "101" Bison release.

The first Comet reel that it has ever been my misfortune to witness was here the past week. It was so bad I tried to forget the name of it, and as I cannot recall it at this time, it would seem that in this respect I have succeeded. Suffice to state it was "orful."

Thanhouser sent a good comedy, "The Night Clerk's Nightmare," and the Photo Play gave it proper setting.

Good Trust Pictures

Biograph provided a merry split reel comedy, "Algy the Watchman" and "Bess, the Tomboy," although "Bess" was just a wee bit too mature for the part she portrayed. A clever girl is Bess, but she should have more mature parts. "Italian and Turkish War Scenes" were greatly enjoyed in the Cinese reel. This firm has a great following in Hot Springs, and their output always attracts favorable attention. Edison gave us a consistent Fourth of July reel in their battleship pictures, and Vitagraph sent to the New Central "Days of Terror," which also helped some. "Billy Changes His Mind" was one of the best comedies that Essanay has sent here in many weeks. "African Missionaries" was a sterling Kalem picture and was greatly enjoyed. The same company also provided a most interesting film in "A Bag of Gold."

The "Fourth" at the Park

There was a merry time at popular Whittington Park during the "Fourth." Manager "Doc" Owens had made special preparations for a big day and he was in no wise disappointed, for it seemed that the entire town was there. The vaudeville and pictures for that day were free, and, naturally, these attractions did a big day's business. Then, too, the Little Rock Elks came over to play off the "rubber" game with the Hot Springs lodge and the contest, staged on the Pittsburgh baseball club's grounds, attracted a great crowd. There was the usual patriotic band concert. The park looked beautiful, decorated specially for the day, and everyone had a genuine, merry time.

The Moose have demanded that yours truly give them a play at Whittington Park's summer theatre, so I'll have to make good. Me for two weeks more of constant rehearsals. The weather here continues delightfully cool and all the picture houses are doing an excellent business.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS.

Lux

The Lux force idea may be O. K. for European audiences but we must say it does not always fit in with the American idea of comedy. However, two of the films received this week were meritorious. "Spiffkins' New Job," a really laughable farce comedy, where Spiffkins in his new job of lamplighter accidentally lights everything that comes in his way; and "The Little Beggar Boy," the title of which tells the nature of the story. Both of these are commendable for any theatre. "The Chiropodist" jars on one's finer sensibilities.

Great Northern

"Aunt Jane's Will," from Great Northern, is good but not unusual. "Aunt Jane's Will" decrees that the bulk of her property be left to her niece and nephew, with the stipulation that they marry one another before the year is out. The cousins have met at a masked ball, unawares of their relationship, and have fallen in love. When the contents of the will is made known to each apart, there is great indignation and rebellion on the part of each. The final meeting of the two in an actual knowledge of their relationship is where the fun comes in.

Imp

"Winning the Latonia Derby," Imp for July 18, savors strongly of the race-track and is a rattling good film for those who love the turf. There is, of course, the usual heart interest mixed in to give it the necessary tip.

Nestor

"The Trifler," for July 15, from Nestor, is a fine refreshing story sniffing of the sea breezes—one of the best productions turned out by Nestor for some time, barring one or two inconsistencies, such as capsizing a boat which is supposed to be beset by the breakers, in smooth water, thereby making the near drowning and the rescue rather tame affairs. The attempt to restore respiration in the unconscious body of the girl showed lack of experience on the part of the rescue party.

These inconsistencies mar, to a certain extent, an otherwise beautiful and refreshing production. A little care and forethought behind the scenes and this might have been avoided.

The Nestor comedy, "Fur and Feathers," for July 17th, is good. Where a cat is put in the cage in place of a dove, and several pairs of long hose in place of the gloves intended, and presented by the amorous ranchman to a pretty Eastern visitor on her birthday, with carefully penned notes which turn out to be a woeful misfit to the objects presented—there is a scream of laughter at disconcerted faces and flying heels.

Champion

"Foraging on the Enemy" tells the story that there is still in the employ of the Champion Film Co. a camera man and a director who are not onto their jobs, else this film is one held over from the old days.

Eclair of America

"A Brother's Jealousy" is a fairly strong drama, showing some good work on the part of the players. The story is not a particularly unusual one, but there is much to please the eye in the seashore scenes.

The following looks good, and is another sprig of laurel in the crown of the moving picture:

Frank W. Howbert, internal revenue collector for the Colorado-Wyoming district, reports for the fiscal year beginning June 30, 1911, and ending last Sunday, not only a decrease in consumption of liquor, but a big falling off in number of cigars and cigarettes smoked in the two states.

The report shows 1,441,554 25 fewer gallons of beer, 299,506 fewer gallons of whiskey and other spirits, and about 300,000 fewer cigars and cigarettes paid taxes during the year than in the previous one.

The revenues from beer tax were $404,646, a decrease of $46,501.75. The revenue from spirits was $115,778.50, or $9,661.50 less than last year.

From cigarettes and cigars the collections were $52,335.95, a decrease of $9,672,53.

"The man with little money," said a revenue agent yesterday, "used to spend most of his spare nickels on beer. Now his wife and children spend them on moving pictures. He too goes frequently and finds that the 'movies' are more amusing as loafing places than the corner saloons."

The corporation tax yielded $1,157,393.04, an increase of about $30,000.

It is gratifying to read the many motion picture journals, and to know that at last the exhibitors have awakened to the fact that the only way to preserve their best interest is through organization, believing the old but true maxim that "United We Stand, Divided We Fall," and how could we expect it to be otherwise, as it is only natural in this progressive age and as a part in the evolution of time, that where there is an identity of interests those who would preserve their business would combine their forces, and I must say that there is no business or profession to-day that needs organization as do the exhibitors.

Now exhibitors from the North, South, East and West join the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. If you have not already got a state organization, get busy and organize, and if your state has a League, make application for membership at once and get in line for the big convention at Chicago in August. All persons wishing information in reference to the League, write to the national secretary, Mr. C. M. Christenson, 703 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O., or Mr. M. A. Neff, national president, 1003 Mercantile Library Building, Cincinnati, O.

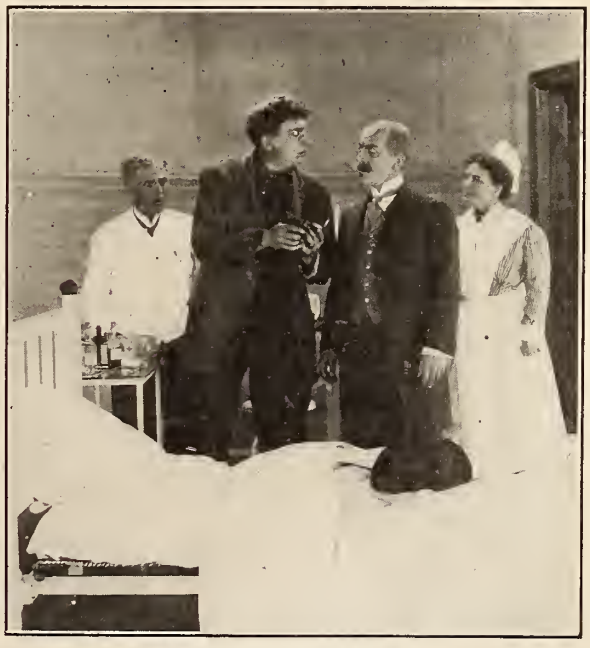
CHICAGO EXHIBITORS IN TOWN

Mr. William J. Sweeney, Mr. L. H. Frank, and Mr. Fred W. Hartmann, all of Chicago, Ill., have been in the city for the past week for the purpose of interesting manufacturers, exhibitors, etc, in the coming convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which takes place in Chicago in August.

New Haven, Conn.—Permission to build an addition to the moving picture house at Lighthouse Point was granted.

Orange, Tex.—Thomas Tatum has opened an airdrome.

Ironton, Minn.—F. W. Kast opened the Orpheum Theatre.



"THE LOST MESSENGER"
Majestic Release, July 9

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

ONLY A MILLER'S DAUGHTER
Thanhouser Release, July 21

The miller's daughter was a rustic beauty, but she was nobody's fool. She had a sweetheart, a steady-going young farmer, who loved her devotedly, and the girl was thoroughly satisfied that be would make an excellent husband. So when the city chap came along, the girl did not break her fiance's heart and spoil the lives of her parents by running away with him. Sbe sized up "the city chap" at his true value, and he would have been very much surprised had he known how slightly she regarded him.

The city chap was one of those offensive individuals usually classed as "lady killers." He approved of tbe girl and saw no reason why she should not fall a victim to his manly charms. His friend and traveling companion expressed some doubt as to this, and the city chap wagered real money that within one week he could induce the girl to run away with him.

It happened, however, that the girl and her rustic suitor overheard the details of tbe wager. Tbe countryman was eager to go out and argue harshly with the young man, but the girl restrained him. She had a sense of humor and considerable managerial ability.

The "city chap" was delighted to find that in his case, apparently, the course of true love did run smooth. The girl listened to his protestations of love, agreed to elope with him, and was on hand when he arrived with the coach. He chuckled to himself as he handed her inside, for his chum was waiting down the road, to satisfy himself that "city Lothario" had won bis wager.

The miller's daughter was not in the coach, however. She had slipped out the other door, but a warm welcome awaited the "city chap." The rustic suitor was there and he pawed and slapped the city Lothario until he wished he had never seen the miller's daughter or the mill. Down the road the city chap's chum was met. A strong right arm reached out of the carriage and dragged him inside. Then the coach continued its journey, which ended beside the mill stream. The rustic suitor alighted, dragging the others with him, and as they were all "het up" he cooled them off with a nice bath in the "purling water."

She was only a miller's daughter, but she certainly taught two fresh young men that "still waters run deep"—and damp.

THE PORTRAIT OF THE LADY ANNE
Thanhouser Release, July 23

It hung in the place of honor in the old Colonial house, and the daughter of the family was very proud of it, for she could prove by the likeness that she was a descendant of the proud Lady Anne, who had been a noted belle one hundred years ago.

The portrait had been painted before the Lady Anne was married, and only a few years before she died, leaving a broken-hearted husband and one little child. There were rumors that the Lady Anne had died of a broken heart, because she believed that she had sent one of her disappointed suitors to death, but it was only a tradition, and the girl never believed it.

The girl was the living picture of Lady Anne. Everyone told her so, and she had no reason to doubt it. Naturally she liked to watch the painting, and, knowing the other woman's life story, or believing she did, she wondered often what her own would be.

They had a house party at her home one time, and at night there was a dance. The girl, in a spirit of fun, took all the other young women up in the attic and fitted them out with costumes of days gone by. She herself wore the dress in which Lady Anne had posed for her portrait, for it emphasized the resemblance.

At the dance the girl and her fiance had a quarrel. It seemed most serious to her at the time, although it was only a trifle. Still she returned his ring and told him that all was over between them for ever. For the moment she believed it herself. So she flounced upstairs, took off her gala dress and was thoroughly miserable.

The young man was unhappy, too. Tbe others were dancing, but he stood sadly in one corner. A moment later he brightened up, for his sweetheart entered, and with radiant smile went over to him. He welcomed her gladly. They danced and all bis troubles were forgotten.

It wasn't the girl he was dancing with, however. She was upstairs in her room all the time. Finally the music drew her out, but as she was not dressed for the party she slipped out of the window and peered in the downstairs room, hoping to see a thoroughly miserable Jack. To her amazement she saw him dancing with—herself.

She could not comprehend until she had cautiously made her way into the library. Then she saw that the portrait of the Lady Anne was missing and she realized that a miracle had been performed in her behalf. She went back to her room and reverentially picked up the gown of the Lady Anne. Out of the pocket dropped a note, written one hundred years ago. She read and understood.

The old legend was true; the Lady Anne had lost the man she loved because of a foolish quarrel and had died of grief. The girl knew that what she had seen was meant as a lesson to her, and she decided to be guided by it.

The lovers made up and never quarreled again, and they say that the portrait of the Lady Anne was seen to smile on their wedding day, but, as a matter of fact, one individual said it was only the reflection of the sun upon the glass.

Perhaps. But the girl does not believe it, and never will.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE
Thanhouser Release, July 26

Antonio, a nobleman and a merchant of Venice, is asked by his kinsman, Bassanio, for a large sum of money. Bassanio wishes to travel afar, in order to woo Portia, a woman of great fortune as well as one of wit and beauty. Bassanio has not the necessary funds to make the trip, and therefore comes to Antonio for aid.

Antonio, although a man of wealth, finds that he has no gold, his fortune being represented in the cargoes aboard his various ships at sea. He knows that in a few weeks his ships will return and he will have ample funds, but in the meanwhile he offers to borrow for his kinsman's present need from a notorious money lender of Venice, Shylock, the Jew.

Shylock has long hated Antonio because of his proud spirit, and when he consents to lend the money it is only on the condition that Antonio should sign a bond, whereby, should he fail to return the money inside of three months, the Jew shall receive, in lieu of interest, a pound of his (Antonio's) flesh, to be cut off by Shylock. Antonio laughingly agrees to this bond. He knows the Jew desires his death, but feels so sure that in much less than three months' time his ships will have returned, and he can easily pay the borrowed money.

With the money obtained by his kinsman on this strange bond Bassanio travels to tbe home of the fair Portia. There, after passing a test imposed upon her suitors by her father, Bassanio is finally accepted, and feels that he owes all his good fortune in winning the lady of his desire to his noble kinsman, Antonio.

Part Two

Bassanio is happily married to his lady love, Portia, when he receives a message of distress from his noble kinsman, Antonio, the merchant of Venice. Antonio writes that his many ships, containing all his wealth, have been lost at sea, and that he is not able to pay to Shylock, the money lender, the money he borrowed for Bassanio. Because he is unable to pay, Shylock will be able to exact from Antonio a pound of his flesh. This foolish bond Antonio signed, although he knew Shylock hated him, because he felt so sure he would have no difficulty in paying the money he had borrowed.

When Portia heard of the plight in which her husband's kinsman found himself, she despatched Bassanio with many times the amount of gold Antonio owed him, in order that a noble life might be saved.

Shylock, however, refused to take the money, insisting that he be allowed to cut from near Antonio's heart the pound of flesh that had been pledged bim. Thus he could kill his enemy.

Had not Portia, disguised as a doctor of the law, succeeded in being present at the court, Antonio's life would surely have been forfeited. Portia, however, made it plain to all that, in justice to Shylock, Antonio must allow him his pound of flesh. But she also warned Shylock that if, in taking the flesh, he took one drop of Christian blood, he would be committing a crime, as no blood was nominated in the bond.

Shylock, outwitted, failed to get his terrible revenge, and Bassanio, when he went to thank the learned lawyer who had saved his friend, found, to his great joy, that "she" was none other than Portia, his own clever and beautiful wife.

THE GOVERNOR'S DAUGHTER
Eclair Release, July 23

Governor Alton, of a prosperous Western State, is spending a few weeks in the mountain of an Eastern resort with his daughter Marion. A young college man loves her. Several politicians and franchise buyers descend upon their hotel to get the Governor's pull. He first repudiates them, but at last is about to yield. The young chap, Dan Hallen, learns of their plans and discovers that they are about to ruin the Governor in his home State to prevent his re-election, and gets into a big row with the old chap for his pains. The Governor forbids his daughter to have anything to do with the young man and she disobeys. Dan starts to feel out the tricksters, whom he makes think that he will co-operate with them. They ask him to win over the Governor's daughter for her influence, and he takes walks, secret drives, etc., with their assistance and connivance, as they explain the daughter's absence. At last they determine to get married, and while the old country parson is waiting for them, in a cottage near the hotel, the girl is told by her father that he has decided to agree with the politicians, for their pull, etc. She is furious and pleads with him. As she is doing so the men approach, and when they hear them they laugh, declaring that Dan helped them all along. She is broken-hearted. She hands him back his ring. She accuses him of falseness to her father's cause, upon which he shows her a telegram from the home State, showing that the gangsters have been exposed in the papers through his quiet work, and her father lauded as a great statesman who resisted temptation. The wedding goes on and they race away happily.

THE DOUBLE CROSS
Eclair Release, July 25

George Carter and William Porter are old college chums who have not seen one another since the latter has married. William sends for George to spend his vacation with him. George leaves to pay a short visit, and while with his friends, through their instigation, he decides to get married if they can find him a suitable wife. George returns home a short time after. William is out photographing and

"AT CRIPPLE CREEK"
(2 reels) released Wednesday, July 17th.
A story that is known all over the country.
Special three and one sheet posters.

RELIANCE

"LOVE ME, LOVE MY DOG"
Released Saturday, July 20th.

"THE TRUE LOVE"
Released Wednesday, July 24th.

Coming Releases: "THE SOLDIER'S BABY," Sat. July 27th; "WHERE THERE IS SOAP THERE IS HOPE" (Comedy), Wed. July 31st; "THE WOOD NYMPH," Sat. Aug. 3rd; "THE TWO FATHERS," Wed., Aug. 7th.
Sold only through the FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA.

comes upon a camping party. In one of the party, Maud Truesworth, he finds the girl for George and takes a picture of the party and sends one of the pictures to George with a cross indicating Maud. The photo and letter duly arrive, but his inquisitive old housekeeper, suspecting his game and afraid to lose her job, changes the cross and puts it under the photo of a plain-looking woman. When George sees this he is furious and writes a letter to William, telling him that he would rather remain a bachelor than marry such a person.

Maud is entering into the spirit of the joke when William enters with George's letter. Maud is furious and picks up the photo and letter and goes to her father and mother and tells them of the insult. A telegram arrives, saying that George is going to Sea Port and for her to go there and avenge the insult. So she takes her father and mother. Maud tricks George into talking to her, and a week after he is proposing to her, when she indignantly shows him the letter. He does not understand. Maud goes to William and George does the same. He demands those three photos of the group and makes up his mind that his meddlesome housekeeper has changed the cross. He rushes to the hotel and gets his photo and takes them both to show Maud. The old housekeeper appears and finds she is found out and is told to leave with the two pictures. Maud and George become reconciled.

THE LADY BARRISTER
Eclair Release, July 28

Lucette is trying her first case in court when she meets Counselor Dupuy. The Counselor immediately falls in love with Lucette and asks permission to call at her home, which permission she grants.

He calls on the appointed evening and finds her in company with another gentleman. This stirs his quick jealousy; she excuses herself and enters another room, asking the first gentleman to follow. The poor Counselor is now wildly jealous.

Now, the first caller has come to Lucette to talk over a divorce suit which she is conducting for him. The Counselor listens at the door, misinterprets what he hears and ahruptly enters the room and denounces Lucette. The client leaves during this scene, disgusted.

Lucette scolds the Counselor, who now understands his mistaken suspicions, pleads and wins her pardon and forgiveness. And two years later we see them playfully dressing their pretty baby as a little barrister.

On the same reel:

LIFE IN A BULGARIAN VILLAGE

This film shows types and customs of Bulgarian peasants, their simple vocations and their farm life, and closes with views of their Sunday feasts and recreations.

ANDROCLUS AND THE LION
Gaumont Release, Aug. 6

Gaumont

The story of Androclus and the lion is a classic that has been handed down to us by tradition. It is placed in the era of the persecution against the Christians by the Romans.

Androclus, a slave, because of his Christianity, is cruelly treated by his master, the Proconsul of Rome, from whom he escapes in order to avoid the humiliation he had been forced to suffer. While roaming through the jungle wilds of the Italian mountains, he encounters a lion in its cavern lair. Androclus starts back with terror at his discovery but curiously notes that the King of Beasts makes no attempt to spring upon him, but on the contrary is moaning and groaning with pain. The escaped slave approaches the beast, after gathering up enough courage, and discovers a huge thorn transfixed in the cushion of its paw. Stroking the monster on his mane, he finally succeeds in extracting the thorn and relieving the lion of his suffering.

A short time after Androclus is run down by the Roman soldiers and recaptured. He is returned to the Proconsul who sentences him to be devoured by the lions in the Coliseum. At the appointed hour the hapless Androclus is tied to the cross and a large lion set loose to pounce upon him. With distended nostrils and savage bellowing the beast springs forward upon its human prey, but to the amazement of all those assembled draws back as though from recognition, and, instead of lacerating the body of Androclus, rubs his head against his bare legs and licks his feet as though from gratitude. Androclus and the lion have recognized each other, nor has the King of Beasts forgotten the favor that the condemned slave had bestowed upon him at the time that he rolled in pain in his cavern lair.

The Proconsul is by no means the least surprised at this miracle and asks Androclus to explain, which he does with such ardor as to win his permanent freedom. The liberated slave is also granted the lion as a reward, thereafter man and beast become inseparable friends.

This picture is one of the most carefully hand-colored productions recently put out by the Gaumont Company.

A ROMANCE OF THE PALM GARDEN
Gaumont Release, August 1

This is one of the daintiest black and white subjects and at the same time most beautiful in its environment that the Gaumont Company has recently turned out. The story is one of love and light which will appeal to the softer sentiments of any audience.

While spending the holidays at the estate of her grandmother, Suzanne attracts the attention of Roger Marsh, the renowned landscape artist, who had come to the sun-kissed environs of Spain in order to add to the realism of several of his proposed paintings. He is immediately smitten by the daintiness of the little creature and plans to make her acquaintance. This he accomplishes by writing a short note on one of his visiting cards asking for the permission to sketch a view from the grandmother's terrace. Permission is granted and Roger loses no opportunities to avail himself of meeting Suzanne by sending her a floral tribute which she willingly accepts.

After thus making her acquaintance, he decides to spend more time in her company by engaging the first waltz, during which short space of time he tells her the secret of his heart. She proves, indeed, a willing listener and the lovers spend many a mutually pleasant hour under the large overhanging palm trees on Suzanne's grandmother's estate. While stealing embraces on one particular afternoon the grandmother happens into the grove. Having seen all, she is pleased at the prospects of a match with so well reputed an artist and conveys the news to Suzanne that her secret has been discovered. She assures her at the same time that she is complimented by the affair and wishes them both happiness.

One evening while preparing her toilet in order to spend a few hours in the company of Roger Marsh, Suzanne meets with a serious accident to her eyesight while curling her hair. The doctor is at once summoned but with the customary gravity of the family physician he advises that nothing but a miracle can save her vision. A specialist is consulted but the same discouragement is received from him. For a week Suzanne hovers between life and death as a result of the seriousness of the burn, during which time Roger is an untiring caller. However, at the end of the week he receives a wire from Rome which compels him to leave at once. After a short last call at the home of Suzanne's grandparents, he is grievously touched to think that he cannot know whether Suzanne has a chance to regain her vision. His absence, however, is kept from Suzanne, who in the meantime obeys the doctor's orders implicitly. Weeks pass and of course the news of Roger's departure has to be told. She takes it very resignedly, particularly since the aged grandmother reads over many, many times the love letters that Suzanne receives from the artist while in Rome.

Her careful obedience to the doctor's orders makes possible the restoration of her sight, which allows her to visit the exact spot in the palm garden where she and Roger used to meet. The location awakens sad memories in her bosom. The grandmother becomes alarmed lest her longing for Roger impair her in her weakened condition and takes it upon herself to send a wire to Roger asking him to come by all means as Suzanne would be greatly benefited by his presence. The delighted Roger breaks all bounds and rushes to the beautiful estate at once. Suzanne is decidedly pleased at his return. She improves much more quickly and soon the two lovers are breathing sweet tales to each other in their familiar palm grove haunt.

THE VANISHING RACE
American Release, July 11

The last of the Hoppe tribe, the father, son, mother and daughter, trailed their weary way through the sunny fields. They camped close to a small settlement and Dick Wren, handsome, sneering and indifferent, gazed with eager eye upon the pretty form of the Indian girl. Madge Blaine smiled cynically as she noted the trend of Dick's emotions and waited.

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

Despite her relatives, the Indian maid eloped with Dick. In a month he again turned toward Madge, who received him with open arms, leaving bis Indian love to wander back to her people. Her brother heard of it, and, Indian fashion, quietly took his gun and went in search of Dick. He found him and shot him through the beart but before he bad moved ten paces his own lifeless body hurtled to the ground. Then the last of the Hoppe tribe, seeing his nearest of kin slain, drew his knife and threw himself into tbe fight. He also joined his son in the land where the White Spoiler does not go, leaving two lonesome women to pack their clothes and wander further through the sunny fields.

THE FATAL MIRROR
American Release, July 15

Pretty Jessie Brown, living alone with her brother in the depths of the mountains, knew but few comforts and no luxuries. So when brother Bob brought a mirror from town, her joy knew no bounds. Nor was her grief the less when it was accidentaly broken.

In the afternoon Bob posted a sign: "Cattlemen found crossing this fence will be shot on sight." He found a similar sign directed against himself by the cattlemen. Old Jim Langfall, cattleman, met him there and in the altercation that followed shot him. His body was found by Jessie. In a passion she drew the revolver from her brotber's body, followed Jim and killed him. And in the underbrush close by watched an outlaw, hard pressed by a posse. Later that posse came to Jessie's forlorn home. They seized her and accused her of murder. Just then two shots rang out in the trees close by. The posse turned and there stood the badly wanted outlaw. He smiled and nodded when accused of Jim's murder and left between two hardy woodsmen intent upon seeing justice done.

On the same reel:

Some especially fine views of Point Loma, one of California's garden spots.

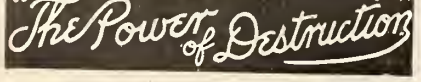
FATHER'S BUST
Majestic Release, July 14th

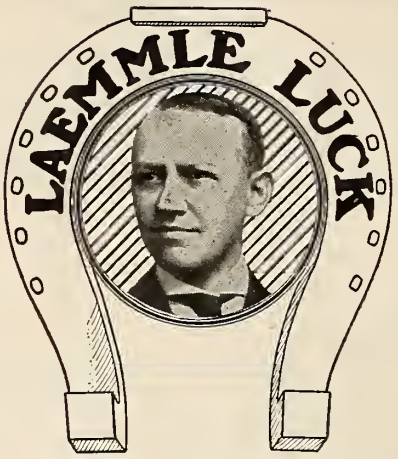
Michael Angelo, Mudslinger is a sculptor who has a hard time paying his rent. He is about to be ejected from his studio when a note from one I. Cohen asks him to make a bust of his dear father who died twenty years before. Mudslinger is discouraged when he discovers that he cannot get a photograph of Cohen's father but finally decides to make the bust from a description furnished by the Cohen family. He works hard on the bust and finishes it in short order, much to the astonishment of the janitor who is an interested critic of his work. The sculptor goes to inform his customers that the bust is ready after instructing the janitor to carefully clean up the studio. The janitor accidentally knocks over the precious bust and is so frightened when he sees the result of the accident that he proceeds to model one himself. The harder he works the more excited he becomes and his surprise is genuine when he sees the bust take its original form—even to the large diamond in its shirt front.

On the same reel:

THE WIDOWER'S WIDOW

Gordon Trent, widower, is madly in love with Matilda Byron, a vivacious widow. Trent's daughter Helen opposes the match, believing that her own place would be usurped in her father's life. At the earnest request of her father, Helen consents to visit her prospective step-mother. During the visit she meets the widow's son, Jack, just out of college, and they fall in love. Helen takes Jack into her confidence and explains to him that she wishes to prevent their parents' marriage if possible. In order to give Jack a reason for interfering she tells him that her father is baldheaded and wears a wig, thus deceiving





"Why IS IT"

Why is it that the minute an exhibitor hooks up with me he enters an era of prosperity, no matter how rotten his business was before? Why is it that my customers are more loyal to me than they ever were to any other exchange man? Is it because of Laemmle films, Laemmle service or Laemmle Luck? Or all three?

I don't know and I don't care. The Big Fact remains that my customers and I are successful. Some folks call me "Horse-shoe Laemmle". Others call me "The Human Rabbit's Foot". Both mean good luck. Very well, wouldn't you like some of it? All my exchanges are giving the best service and the best programs in the history of the moving picture business. These two things and Luck form a pretty trio. Why not play the winning combination?

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
SYKES BLOCK, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1312 FARNAM ST., OMAHA, NEB.
421 WALNUT ST., DES MOINES, IOWA.

The BIGGEST and BEST Film Renter in the World

his mother. Seeing a chance for mischief and an opportunity to please Helen, Jack exposes the old man, which has the desired effect. As a result of his work, Jack is forbidden to call upon Helen by her father. "Love will find a way" and Jack thinks out a plan to foil the purpose of Trent. The plan succeeds admirably, as it not only makes the marriage of the young people possible, but also that of their parents. In the end nothing remains to mar the happiness of all concerned.

IN HER BROTHER'S DEFENSE
Majestic Release, July 16

A struggling young lawyer is married to a beautiful girl and their happiness is complete except for the fact that she has never told him of her wayward brother who has disgraced her family and is serving a term in the state's prison.

She loves her brother in spite of his waywardness and as she sits before the fireplace, dreaming of her childhood, she sees again the sad events leading to her brother's downfall, and her visit to the prison when she told him of her dear mother's death. As she awakens her brother enters the room. He has been discharged from prison and is leading an honest and upright life.

She insists upon introducing him to her husband but he refuses to allow her to share his disgrace by acknowledging him to be her brother, and departs.

The young lawyer is given a very important case and is everjoyed because it will mean the making of his fame and fortune. The young wife is horrorstruck when she learns that the man her husband is to prosecute is her own brother, who, because of his prison record is accused of a crime that was committed at the very hour he was talking to her in her own home.

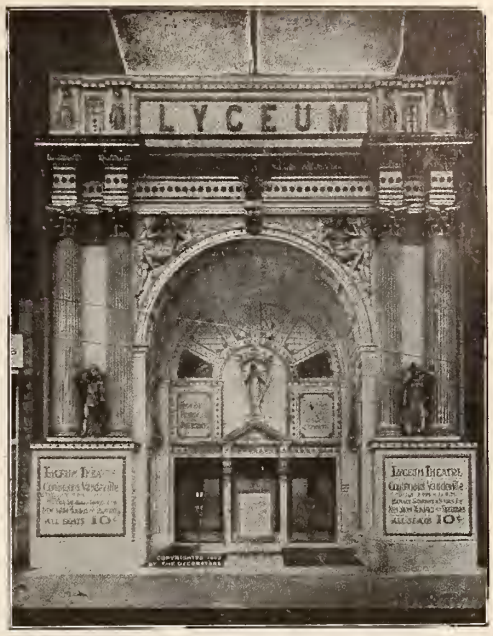
At the last minute she rushes to the court house and sacrifices her own good name and her husband's happiness to save the brother she knows is innocent. The real criminal is apprehended and complete happiness is born of her noble act.

WHERE THERE IS SOAP THERE IS HOPE
Reliance Release, July 31

RELIANCE.

Jim, who is down on his luck, is in love with Jane, who promises to marry him if he has enough money within a week to furnish a flat and pay all wedding expenses. He is out of work and his landlady demands the rent due her, which Jim is unable to pay. She gives him two days in which to get the money. He becomes desperate. He looks moodily at the one dollar and a half that is left him. Suddenly he gets a great idea. He goes to a grocery store and buys a long bar of common yellow soap and a cake of tar soap. He then takes these home, where he proceeds to cut the yellow soap into tiny pieces, wrapping each piece in tissue paper. He hires a horse and wagon in the village and drives out into the country, where he takes the wheel off the wagon and washes the axle clean of all grease and dirt. Then he smears the tar soap over the axle and replaces the wheel. He drives into the village and attracts a large crowd by demonstrating the virtues of his new soap, which will immediately clean anything. To prove this, he borrows a handkerchief from a bystander, wipes it in the supposed axle grease and at once washes it clean with a piece of his soap. His entire stock is soon sold out. Within a few days he is able to hire a handsome team. He writes to Jane, telling her of his success in business. Zeke, a countryman, buys a cake of the soap and takes it home. His wife does not believe in it, so he puts some axle grease on his handkerchief, as Jim did—but the soap will not wash it off. His wife laughs at him and he swears vengeance on the faker. He demands that Jim return his money, but Jim only laughs and again demostrates his magic soap to Zeke's satisfaction. Again Zeke returns home and experiments for himself, but with no better results than before. He finally realizes that he has been fooled and laughs with his wife. By the third day Jim has made so much money that he writes to Jane, telling her to get ready to be married. She goes to her uncle and aunt, who are none other than Zeke and his wife, to have the marriage performed in their house. Jim comes in and shows Jane a big roll of bills. Zeke recognizes the soap man at once, but says nothing until after the ceremony, when he is introduced to the groom. He reaches into his hip pocket as if for a gun, but produces instead a white handkerchief soiled with axle grease. The story is told to the guests and all join in the laugh that follows.

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE WOOD NYMPH
Reliance Release, August 3

When John became engaged to Grace, a rich young society belle, she stipulated that he give up his fishing trips into the country. He had been in the habit of going off for weeks at a time by himself to fish and enjoy the quiet solitude of the woods. But, to please his capricious fiancee, he promised to give up fishing and devote his time to her. But the following summer, while they were staying at a large and fashionable country hotel, the lure of the woods became too strong for John to resist. Early on the morning of the day set aside for his wedding, he left the hotel, equipped for a fishing expedition. On the same day, Gertrude, a little girl from one of the poorer cabins, sets out to catch some fish for breakfast. While fishing she hurts her foot. John, out in midstream, hears her cry and hastens to her aid. He does everything he can for her and finally carries her home. He is so interested in the little wood nymph that he forgets all about the wedding and Grace, who is waiting for him impatiently. Angered at his non-appearance, Grace tells her parents she will not marry a man who evidently thinks so little of her; so, tearing off the wedding finery, the spoiled beauty leaves the hotel with her parents. John, helping Gertrude's father make the girl more comfortable, suddenly remembers Grace. Looking at his watch he is panic-stricken to see how late it is. He dashes out of the cabin and back to the hotel, to learn that Grace is gone, leaving him a curt note breaking their engagement. For a second he feels badly, then, remembering the little wood nymph, he retraces his steps in the direction of the cabin.

STORIES THAT REBOUND
Lux Release, July 19

A worthless vagabond is discharged from the employ of a benevolent scientist who spends all his days seeking to find the secret of many diseases of the eye. Previous to this incident, he has discovered an eye salve which wins much renown. The vagahond leaves his wife and child to shift for themselves, and sets off to enjoy himself. Some time later he returns to the Professor's lahoratory at the dead of night and poisons the eye salve. He is surprised hy the Professor, they struggle and their shadows on the blind attract the attention of the Professor's courageous daughter who takes a revolver, enters the lahoratory and shoots the intruder. He is not, however, seriously hurt, and the professor places him in hed and tends him himself. The next day chance decrees that the little daughter of the worthless vagahond attends the hospital to have her eyes attended to by the Professor. The Professor instructs that her eyes shall he treated with eye salve. Fortunately, he discovers that the salve has heen poisoned just in time to prevent its being applied to the child's eyes. Through the wonderful powers of the ointment, the child's sight is restored, and her father is taught a lesson which he is not likely to forget, and he has reason to he thankful for his narrow escape of being struck hy the very stone that he himself aimed.

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

THE TRIFLER

Nestor Release, July 15

Although engaged to Hartley, Muriel does not hesitate to amuse herself with other men. John Hardy, a fisherman, hut a man out of the ordinary, easily falls hefore her charms. She succeeds in making him love her deeply. One day, while walking with her fiance, she sees Hardy approaching and persuades Hartley to hide. She carries her coquetry a little too far with Hardy, who takes her in his arms and tells her of his love. She breaks away from him furiously. Hartley appears. Hardy realize that he has heen a plaything and sorrowfully departs. Hartley and Muriel go for a sail. Hardy watches them out on the bay. Suddenly he sees that the hoat had turned over. At first he is inclined to let them help themselves; hut when Hartley starts for the shore, leaving Muriel to her fate, Hardy forgets the wrong she has done him, and, swimming out, brings her hack with him. After untiring efforts she is revived. Later, while she is recuperating, Hartley comes to her and begs to be forgiven his cowardly act. She indignantly sends him away. Still later she goes to Hardy, humhly thanks him and asks for his friendship. He refuses it.

FUR AND FEATHERS

Nestor Release, July 17

The ranchman's niece, Estella, arrives from the East and is met hy her uncle. Lee, a neighhor, is asked by the ranchman to assist him with her haggage, much to the envy of the other hoys, who are anxious to meet her. They hurry to the ranch as fast as their horses will carry them, however, arriving hefore the huckboard, hut while they are waiting for her to appear, Cousin Bill stampedes them. Later they follow Lee and Estella and force Lee to give them an introduction, and when her hirthday comes, Jack and Will, the most persistent of her admirers, take great pains in selecting suitable presents. Jack gets a lovely white dove, puts it in a hig cage, with the following note attached: "My Dear Miss Stanley: I take pleasure in presenting this living symhol of your true nature. Jack." While Will gets a box of handsome gloves and attaches a note which reads: "My dear Miss Stanley: I hope that these will fit, he the proper length, and that I may have the pleasure of seeing you wear them often. Will."

Unfortunately Lee is told of these presents, so watching his chance, he slips into the boys' room, suhstitutes a large cat for the dove and a box of stockings for the gloves. The boys unsuspectingly deliver their presents to Estella, only to he kicked out hy her Uncle to the delight of Lee, who has just been accepted hy the Eastern girl.

YOUNG WILD WEST TRAPPING A TRICKY RUSTLER

Nestor Release, July 19

Ike Bowers the foreman of a small cattle ranch is also a cattle rustler and he and three companions share in the profits of the stolen cattle. Ike even steals cattle from the ranch where he is employed. Wild West and his party stop at the ranch and hear about the ranchman's losses. He soon comes to the conclusion that the foreman is the guilty party. The ranchman's daughter and Arietta, Young Wild West's sweetheart, go for a ride. Over the range they look down in a canyon and are surprised to see the foreman and two men driving four of her father's head of cattle along. They follow them and see them enter the hiding place. Unfortunately the girl's horses make a noise; the cattle rustlers hear them, give chase, capture the girls and bring them hack to the canyon. There they tie them to a tree. At an opportune moment the ranchman's daughter becomes free and runs for help. On the road she runs into Young Wild West and his pal who are out looking for the cattle thieves. Sending his pal hack to the ranch for help Wild West takes the girl on his horse and she shows the hiding place of the rustlers. They go hack again to the road in time to meet the cowhoys coming. Wild West leads them to the rustlers' rendezvous. A long and exciting chase follows. Finally the bad men are rounded up and handed over to the sheriff. Arietta jubilantly returns to the ranch with her hero, Young Wild West.

THE SHERIFF'S MYSTERIOUS AIDE

Bison Release, July 16

With his heautiful wife, Dick lived quietly in the wilds of one of the border states. One day, his wife coming in, showed him a paragraph stating that Mexican bandits had held up the express and made not only a big haul, but had rohhed an old pensioner and a poor woman who had received a sum on account of her husband's death.

Dick instantly decided on his course. Procuring an effective disguise, he set out and single handed he recovered the stolen treasure and returned it to its owners, that is that part of it whose owners he could locate, the remaining portion, a goodly sum, he of course appropriated to his own use and purpose.

Now, in the meantime, the shefiff of that locality had offered a large reward for the capture of the bandit chief—incidentally he offered a reward for the capture of Dare Devil. He did this hecause the sheriff whose sweetheart Dick had purloined, sent on a poster to him asking him to search his vicinity for the noted outlaw. Dick decided to get the reward for the handit and in the slickest style succeeded in landing his man. The sheriff congratulated him, not penetrating his disguise of course, and so tickled was he that he gave him a special commission to hunt up Dare Devil himself.

Dick had a sense of humor and finding himself alone in the office, he removed his goatee and mustache and pasted them on the countenance of his counterfeit, the poster. He pinned to it also his badge and commission, and when the sheriff returned he was amazed to look upon the face of his new deputy hanging on the wall. A close inspection revealed the trick and then his deputy's identity was made manifest. The sheriff's consternation and surprise may he better imagined than stated. He simply ejaculated, "Well, I'll he d——."

Meantime Dick thought he'd hest make tracks and the last that was seen of him was himself and wife hoth astride the faithful Black Bess, as they sailed for new pastures just over the horder.

BROKEN OATHS

Solax Release, July 24

This is a military drama enacted on the Mexican horder. Vinnie, Colonel Begg's daughter, complains to her father that Lieutenant Sterling is paying her unwelcome attentions. The Colonel assures his daughter that she has no cause for fear. He immediately forgets the incident, as important military developments occupy his time.

But soon Vinnie has a more serious complaint—and the Colonel is forced to act. While on a short canter through the woods, Vinnie was again insulted by the forced attentions of Sterling. Fortunately, Sergeant Karr was nearhy and he saved Vinnie from a disagreeahle situation. The Colonel orders Sterling's arrest and later this untrustworthy officer is dismissed from the service.

Lieutenant Sterling is now out for revenge. Not being satisfied with having broken his oath to Uncle Sam "not to commit any act that is unhecoming of a gentleman and a soldier," he plans to immerse himself further in crime. In line with his plans for revenge, he engages a number of drunken Mexicans to aid him in kidnapping Vinnie and also help him teach Sergeant Karr a lesson for interfering with the actions of a "superior officer." The degenerate soldier is temporarily successful in his plans hut Karr is fearless and with indomitable courage protects the girl he has begun to love.

The story is remarkable for clever riding and thrilling fights and spectacular escapes.

THE REQUITAL

Solax Release, July 26

Jim Dawson's wife is ill. The doctor has prescrihed wholesome food, rest and a long residence in Colorado. Jim hasn't the money. He is too proud to ask his friends and those whom he had approached with a suggestion had only offered him sympathy. For a long time, Jim thought of the money he handled for his firm. He thought of the important work he did and the little he was paid for doing it.

In desperation he forges a check on the firm. In order to clear his conscience he insert hetween the pages of his ledger the following note: "I have committed forgery—hut not for my own sake—I shall pay hack every cent—so help me God." One of the clerks in the office who had long wanted Jim's position, finds the note and immediately informs the firm. Jim is intercepted at the hank and his plans for Colorado and the health of his wife go to smash.

Jim is arrested and in spite of his strong pleading is sentenced by a relentless judge to a ten year term in prison. After five years in prison—in the course of which Jim's wife dies—Jim tries to escape. He almost succeeds hut he turns hack to save a drowning child. A numher of dramatic complications arise in which it is learned that the child Jim had saved is the son of the judge who had cruelly sentenced him; the judge had now risen in politics to the position of Governor of the State. The Governor offers Jim a pardon but he refused to receive a favor from the man who had ruined his career.

Back in his cell, Jim sinks on his cot in deep contemplation. As he does so, the door of his cell is once more swung open, and the little boy whom he saved timidly enters. He advances a few paces and stands regarding him, but Jim is too occupied with his thoughts to notice the child. He comes closer and lays his hand tenderly on his shoulder. Jim starts. The child looks up to him with grateful eyes and solmenly thanks him for saving his life. Jim's face is a study as he gazes at the little one. Then after a long while, he shoots out his arms impulsively and draws the child close to him. The delighted child covers his face with kisses and nestles his happy little head on his breast. He next clambers off his lap, retreats a pace or two, and with great dignity draws the governor's pardon from his sash. With even greater dignity he delivers the document to Jim. He takes it.

At this point the governor enters, and advancing towards Jim, extends his hand. Jim grips it with strong sincerity. The governor presses Jim's with nohle love.

THE HIDDEN LIGHT

Rex Release, July 18

Somehow Phil Smalley couldn't put that snap into his writings that differentiates copy that is read from that that is not read. His efforts were sincere, and he worked more diligently than most of the other reporters on his paper—but somehow his stuff didn't get over. The editor was just heginning to get tired of him. But the editor's daughter was just beginning to become interested in him.

She let him see her interest, and the two became good friends. She would go over his copy, suggesting, correcting, revising—and—it was a peculiar thing—yet perhaps not so peculiar after all—but there was something in his writing that it had always lacked before, something that can never be explained except perhaps by the indefinite and insufficient word, "appeal." The next step in his success was when he sold his first short story. The girl brought him the letter with the check of acceptance, and it is hard to say whether he was more proud than she was happy.

And then—real success. Fame and fortune, the adulation and admiration of the world. And also the inevitable. He forgot the simple little girl who had brought about his prosperity and success, forgot her and her value. He accepted his new friends' flattery and never once thought of her who had really won his success.

The girl hoped on, dreaming that some day he would return.

And then suddenly, his stuff lost the punch again. It was dry, colorless, monotonous, wearisome. Even his friends could not be made to read it. The magazines returned his manuscripts with a curt note that they were not up to the standard he had set. And suddenly he realized——

He realized that his success was hers, and that without the germ of genius, or anything else you care to call it, concealed somewhere in her mind, he would be the same utter failure that he had been until her interest in him had been born.

He went back to her.

P. S.—Today that fellow is considered a literary genius. See?

WHEN LOVE RULES

Rex Release, July 21

She was a model, he was an artist and the other was a clergyman. It wasn't a very encouraging triangle, but it was a mighty interesting one. She didn't know much about the simple life, hut way down deep was peace and purity. The artist thought she had the best face he had ever transferred to canvas. The clergyman thought she had the face of a saint.

It was when she met the clergyman that she realized life was more than lobster suppers and champagne bubbles. She felt so hopelessly unimportant, so small a human atom to interest so giant a character. And he—he thought there wasn't enough room in her full life for a man as uninteresting as himself.

She looked at the life around her, the sin and sloth and murk and mockery, and dreamed of the life that he represented. He knew it was the church against the world—and he thought that the world would win. So he dared not speak to her.

She waited, and he delayed. Both thought they were unworthy of the other, both thought their love was in vain.

Yet once he mustered the courage. He went to see her. He found her with the artist, who was endeavoring to present her with a necklace. He came and offered her a better gold, and surprised and overjoyed, she accepted; and together they went where the air is pure with peace and sanctity.

A HOUSE-TOP ROMANCE

Republic Film Co Release, July 29

Willie Brown's inclination to flirt with every pretty face leads him into no end of trouble when flirting with pretty Rose Lanor. He engages an apartment in the same house and in that way tries to become acquainted.

His arduous wooing of the young woman finally leads him to the roof of the building in pursuit of the young lady who has gone to investigate the loss of some wearing apparel. In his anxiety to reach the young lady Willie is compelled to dodge about the wet linens until his appearance is anything hut prepossessing.

In this condition the young woman finally sees him and accuses him of being the thief.

Willie hy this time regrets that he ever attempted to make the acquaintance of the girl, hut owing to the accusation against him he decides to continue the acquaintance made under these unlooked for conditions until his innocence has been proven.

After many comical mishaps he finally proves to the young woman that he is innocent and also quite an estimable young man with a habit of liking pretty faces of which the young lady finally cures him by marriage.

On the same reel:

EVOLUTION OF A DUCK EGG

This is an exceptional, instructive and timely industry owing to the present agitation against the high price of beef and the cry of the beef Barons that beef is becoming scarce. The picture was taken at the famous Gray's Cove Farm, Sag Harbor, L. I., known as the largest duck farm in the world. From a distant view the place looks as though the ground was pure white for acres and acres; a closer view shows over a hundred thousand pure white ducks floating on the river edge of the property.

In detail is given the entire existence of the duck, from the gathering of the eggs in the nests to the serving of the roasted duck at the dinner table. It shows the difficulties encountered during the hatching of thousands of eggs, the cleanliness maintained from the time they leave their shells and are placed in the warm hrooder until the time they are about twelve weeks old and are prepared for the market. Feeding, killing, plucking, packing and shipping are shown in their order.

An exceptionally interesting view is given of the gradual birth of the duckling from the time the egg is placed in the incubator until the little bird forces its way out of the shell and staggers about until it becomes dry and is able to join its little hrothers and sisters. The final scene shows a family at dinner enjoying the delicious slices of roast fresh duck.

FORAGING ON THE ENEMY

Champion Release, July 15

Corporal Lemuel Sorenson, of the Federal Army, is ordered out with a squad of soldiers on a foraging expedition and is instructed by his Colonel to sweep the surrounding country clean. The first house visited by his troop is the home of a rich widow. Provisions at first seem scarce, being hidden away by the servants but the raiders begin a thorough search which soon reveals fowl of all kinds which are gathered together and confiscated.

Elated over their success they move on and visit another home. This time instead of signs of plenty, they are met by a gaunt hungry woman and her two fatherless children who plead with Sorenson to leave them the little they have for food. But the Colonel's orders are ringing in Sorenson's ears, and he orders his troops to commence the search. A small shack in the yard conceals two home-cured hams which Sorenson is about to appropriate despite the woman's frantic appeal, when a vision of the Corporal's northern home unfolds before him, showing his wife and child in want of food. With this picture in mind, Sorenson replaces the food where first found.

Private Kline who has always envied Sorenson's Corporal stripes, has witnessed this little domestic drama, and upon their return to camp informs the Colonel of what has transpired, whereupon Sorenson is roundly censured and placed under arrest, in the face of explanations. Being a man of family himself, the Colonel decides to personally investigate the circumstances, and finds in the widow's home that conditions are even worse than pictured hy Sorenson. On his return to camp, Sorenson is released and commissioned to restore to the widow, not only the provisions taken from her, hut a goodly supply from the army stores.

This pleasant mission is only too gratifying to Sorenson, who brings happiness to the widow. This heing done, the large hearted corporal offers up a prayer for the welfare of his own wife and child.

LICENSED

THE NECKLACE OF CRUSHED ROSE LEAVES

Edison Release, July 19

The title of rosary comes, we understand, from the fact that in ancient times the monks made their beads of prayer out of crushed rose leaves, dried and pared and rolled into a hard, round ball which gives forth that delightful odor of old roses and it is around an old necklace made from crushed rose leaves that this Edison picture is built. The scenes are laid in sunny Italy and filled with all the fiery passion of that race.

We are first introduced to the principal characters of the drama at an Italian dance. Prominent among the merry makers is one by the name of Tony, a wild, free-hearted lad who is in love with all the girls and they with him. The deep passion of life, however, has never entered his thoughts as most of these girls take his jollity lightly and a kiss as a kiss and nothing more and thus he goes on his merry way until he meets one by the name of Zella and when he tries to kiss her it is an insult and he receives a box on the ears that makes him think.

Here is something different; the inevitable happens and he falls deeply, fondly, devotedly in love with her. Her slightest wish is his greatest desire to grant so when he chances to hear her tell of a rare necklace of crushed rose leaves she has been shown at the priest's house, his only desire is to secure her one, hut none is to be had except that which lies hidden in the little, ancient chest at the priest's home. So, regardless of all consequences, he steals the steel-bound chest and takes it to a locksmith to open. Now it so happens that this same locksmith is in love with a dark-eyed lassie who loves Tony. It is here that all the trouble begins. Word is passed from mouth to mouth and at last Zella hears that Tony is the thief. Torn by anguish and love she decides to secure the chest and return it to the priest to save the man she loves but the sequence of affairs turns out differently for, in securing the chest at night, she is shot and seriously wounded. She crawls, however, to the home of the good priest and returns the chest and is cared for by him, being almost on the point of death. At last Tony realizes all that has happened and humbly goes to the priest for forgiveness and consolation. Through evil he learns good and the picture closes at the foot of the altar with a prayer to God for His forgiveness.

A strong, dramatic, Italian story well cast and splendidly played. Its heautiful scenic backgrounds give it a worthy place in this week's production.

THE LITTLE ARTIST OF THE MARKET

Edison Release, July 20

An American architect traveling in Europe with his wife and little son, comes upon an Italian artist painting on the Riviera. Little Joe, the artist's son, is lying beside him drawing on a piece of paper. While admiring the artist's work, the architect's eye falls upon the drawing of the hoy; he is struck by the lad's unusual talent which is along the lines of architectural drawing.

A year later; the artist having died, little Joe is brought to New York at the request of his only living relative, an uncle, who is a fruit dealer. The uncle and his wife mistreat the little orphan in various ways, forcing him to sleep in the cellar and only half feeding him.

The boy's inherent artistic tendencies cause him to make drawings on all the available fruit boxes at the stand, using the charcoal from his uncle's peanut roaster as a crayon and drawing the designs from his recollection of the old buildings in Italy.

Joe's only friend is Rowdy, a stray dog which he has befriended and with which, unknown to the uncle, he has shared his miserable quarters and meagre food supply.

The American architect has returned from Europe and is distracted over the death of his little son. Therefore he is unable to get an inspiration for the plans of an exposition building upon which he is bidding. The idea of which he is in search finally comes through seeing one of little Joe's drawings on an orange hox which is delivered hy a peddler. He searches for the person who made the drawing and is rewarded by finding little Joe in the cellar, ill and with Rowdy as his only companion. He arranges with the sordid uncle to adopt the boy and, incidentally the dog.

While Joe is convalescing, the grateful architect asks the boy his greatest wish. After thinking, little Joe draws a picture of a dog house for his canine friend.

THE OVERWORKED BOOKKEEPER

Lubin Release, July 00

Jerry Jenks, an industrious bookkeeper has so much work on hand that at six o'clock he is still bending over his books. The boss commends Jerry and promises him a raise.

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

When the boss has gone Jerry subdues bis joyous feelings (caused by the boss's praise) and gets down to work again. At 11:30 P. M. he is still adding figures, hut heginning to feel very sleepy. He sticks to it for a few minutes more, hut finds that he can't keep his eyes open any longer, and is ohliged to close his books. It is after midnight when Jerry finally gets to bed, hut in spite of his fatigue, he cannot get soundly asleep. Figures dance before his eyes, he imagines his mouth is an inkwell and his finger a pen. After a while he is on his feet, although sound asleep. His hooks are calling to him. Clad only in his pajamas, Jerry climbs out of his window, up the wall and on to the roof. If he was awake he'd surely have fallen, hut a sleep-walker can do marvelous stunts and Jerry was determined to get hack to the office. He walked along the edges of several roofs, disturbing spooning cats enroute until he came to some telegraph wires. He walked the wires, slid down the pole to the street and after various nocturnal adventures which failed to waken him, Jerry reached the office. It heing then ahout 1:15 A. M. The door of the huild-ing was locked, hut Jerry wasn't going to be kept away from his books hy a little thing like that. He groped along the wall until he found the rainspout, up which he climbed six stories, raised a window and climhed through it. He got out his books and spread them on his desk. His mind now at ease, Jerry's head fell forward on his hook and he sank into untroubled slumher. Next morning the stenographer arrived at the office and was shocked to see a man in pajamas asleep. She screamed—people rushed in, the hoss arrives and wakens Jerry, who is altogether flahher-gasted to find himself in the office, but when he finds himself with only his pajamas on he loses nerve, reason and everything but his pajamas and is in a panic. The boss is in a rage; Jerry is thrown hodily out and kicked into the street. He finally winds up in the "Nut College," where with plenty of chalk, he is adding figures on the wall.

THE MOSQUITO
Pathe Release, July 16

A film which shows the life of the mosquito from the time it emerges from the egg until it grows to a husky size and commences to do damage. It shows the mosquito as a wriggler, a nymph and as a mosquito, and shows how early mosquitoes may he exterminated hy pouring oil on stagnant water. Many will probahly feel they know all they want to know ahout this annoying little insect, hut after seeing this film they will realize that there are lots of things they don't know ahout it—and things which are very, very good for them to know.

On the same reel:

WHIFFLES MOURNS HIS TWIN

A screaming farce in which the twins are played by one man.

QUESTION OF SIZE
Pathe Release, July 17

A clever skit in which a little hit of a woman and a tall man fall in love with each other, and do everything they can to match each other in size—in wbich they ultimately succeed. It's a pity the secret discovered by these lovers cannot be given to the world at large, for the small men will fall in love with the tall, lanky women and vice versa.

A BRAVE LITTLE INDIAN
Pathe Release, July 18

This charming Indian story has for its hero a little Indian lad, who loves a pale-faced man and wife, and saves tbem from an attack hy the Indians of his trihe. The Indians, though having the reputation of heing very treacherous, still can be very, very true, as tbis story proves, to those of whom they are fond and by whom they have been treated kindly. They remind one of faithful animals in their gratitude to those wbo have hefriended them.

THE END OF ROBESPIERRE
Pathe Release, July 19

This film is not only exceedingly well acted hut has the additional charm of heing taken from the actual history of the man whose personality dominated the Committee of Safety in the early days of the French Revolution. It's tragic hut enthralling, and full of the atmosphere of those more than trouhlous times of the French Revolution, when blood was shed like water and men seemed turned to heasts.

THE HALF-BREED FOSTER SISTER
Pathe Release, July 20

This is a very pretty story of a half-hreed Mexican girl, adopted hy a Castilian famiiy after she bas performed a deed of considerable beroism in rescuing the daughter of the Castilian family. Later, tbe son of the Governor falls in love with her, not knowing ber humhle origin, and intends to marry her, but he has her identity disclosed to bim, and, though willing to continue the arrangement, she loves him too much to allow him to sacrifice his life for her, and enters the convent.

IF you want to keep your name and product before the Moving Picture Trade ADVERTISE in the MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Educational Lantern Slides

We have just completed a good set of slides, ahout 25 or 30 in number, illustrative of scenes incident to the Sinking of the TITANIC, Interior, Section views, etc., etc., hesides a fine picture of her leaving Belfast, and as good slides as possihle of the sinking (from drawings), also ahout 10 or 15 of the old wrecks of the past.

SEND FOR FREE LIST.

Slides 25c each plain and 50c colored.

Why not run some Educational slides hetween reels, such as Paradise Lost, Dante's Inferno, Merchant of Venice, Shakespeare Pictures, etc., etc.

WRITE FOR TERMS.

Special discounts to the trade.

RILEY

STEREOPTICON AND SLIDE COMPANY
Department "N"
(NEW ADDRESS)
150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

ROSS LENSES

For Projection Machines and Cinematograph Cameras

Ross Zeiss Tessar Lenses, F 3.5

No. 1—2-inch Focus in Focussing Mount

No. 1a—3-inch Focus in Focussing Mount

Send for our Catalogue of Cine-matograph Lenses

GEORGE MURPHY, INC.,
57 East Ninth Street, New York

The Art of Scenario Writing

By WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT

And 1 Year's Subscription to Moving Picture News for $2.00

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

"THE MIRACLE" IN KINEMACOLOR

Mr. Charles Urban, though still wooing convalescence on the Continent, has with characteristic enterprise just concluded negotiations for what is perhaps quite the greatest undertaking to which the cinematograph has yet been pledged. He has acquired, by arrangement with M. Joseph Menchen, the sole rights to reproduce in Kinemacolor (as well as by the ordinary process) Professor Max Reinhardt's and Dr. Karl Vollmoeller's masterpiece, "The Miracle," precisely as the great wordless play was presented at Olympia last winter. During the coming month the vast theatrical company will be reassembled and the elaborate scenery and effects reset in Vienna, and early in August, after due rehearsal, the process of filming will begin, so that the complete production, with the wonderful music of Humperdinck, may take place in London early in the autumn. On his return to town, Mr. Urban will endeavor to secure a separate and possibly larger theatre than the Scala for this remarkable presentation, as this moreover would have the advantage of leaving secure and undisturbed the present phenomenally successful program at the first home of "Kinemacolor" in Charlotte street.

The Lubin Mfg. Co. has organized a baseball team for the season under the management of Billy Hallman, late of the Philadelphia National League team. Billy has some of the best boys in the semi-professional ranks under his eye and expects a great season. The Lubin club has secured closed grounds for the season and will play all their games at home with the best clubs that can be secured. Have open dates in July and August. All first class and semi-professional, traveling clubs wishing games write to GEO. A. STILFIELD, Lubin Mfg. Co., Business Mgr. B. B. C.
20th and Indiana avenue,
Philadelphia, Pa.

WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY
Imp Release July 18th

NEW INVENTIONS

1,031,023. Roll-Holder for Photographic Cameras. W. A. Peters, Johnstown, Pa.

1,031,129. Film Feeder for Moving Picture Machines. C. E. Lloyd, Pensacola, Fla. Assignor to O. E. Searle, Pensacola, Fla.

1,031,315. Talking Picture Machine. A. D. Adamopoulos, Springfield, Mass.

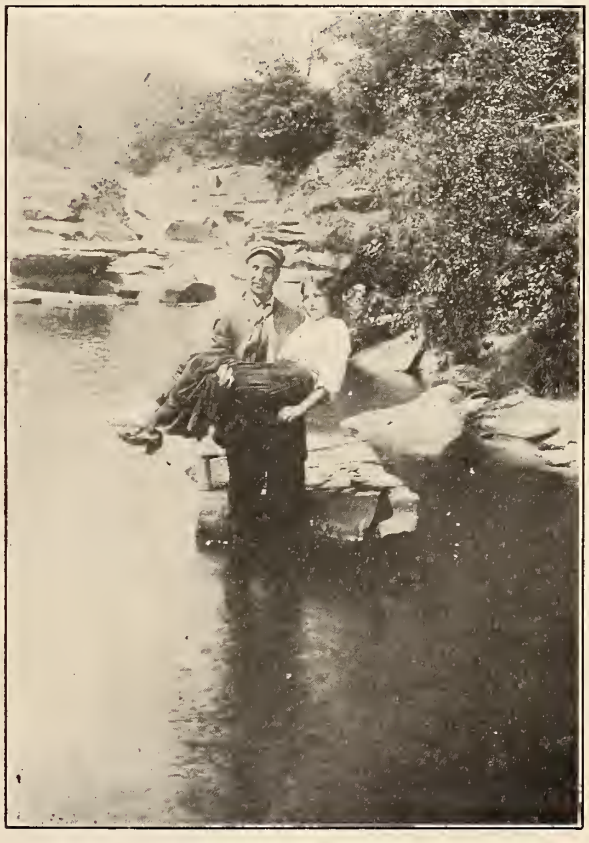
1,031,459. Film Developing, Fixing and Washing Apparatus. F. F. Nyc, Kerrville, Tex.

1,031,516. Film-Pack Photographic Apparatus. Carl Bornmann, Binghamton, N. Y. Assignor to Ansco Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

1,031,563. Photographic Printing Device. J. W. Liebenrood, Cincinnati, O.

1,031,627. Micrometric Printing Film-Frame Apparatus. Benjamin Day, Summit, N. J. Assignor to Ben Day, Inc.

THE PLAYERS
Victor Release July 19th



THE WOOD NYMPH
Reliance Release Aug. 3rd

FOREIGN CONSULAR REPORTS

AUSTRALIA

(From Consul William C. Magelssen, Melbourne.)

Most of the shows in this state are run by concerns in Melbourne, which have permanent theaters here and in other large towns near here, and a number of traveling shows which make the small towns. Some of these concerns import their own supplies and distribute to the trade, while others buy from local dealers. Pictures are taken and developed to a small extent in Sydney.

SOUTH AFRICA

(From Consul Edwin N. Gunsaulus, Johannesburg.)

Most of the Current Films Shown

Moving picture shows are a very popular form of entertainment in all the populous centers of South Africa, and there are about forty such shows in the Johannesburg consular district, sixteen being in Johannesburg. Many of the theaters in which these entertainments are given are finely designed and well appointed. In addition to the moving picture shows now running in this city, two or three new theaters are being erected, one of which will surpass anything of its kind in South Africa.

French and English machines predominate here, although some American machines are used. It is claimed that the mechanism of the French and English makes is not so complicated as the American. These machines have also found favor on account of their being heavier than those of American make. All agree that the American machines show the pictures as well as those of foreign make.

The film releases of most of the American and European firms are received here each week, the latest releases coming from London by post. The weekly importations of the three leading importers average 42,000 feet. These films are first shown in the theaters controlled by these firms and then rented to the smaller theaters in the district.

American films are very popular with the public here, cowboy pictures being particularly in favor with the general public. All of the theaters show at least one or two of such pictures at each performance. American dramatic films are also very popular—much more so than the Continental films, as it is claimed that the American dramas are better acted. A majority of the scenic films come from the Continent.

Local Photographic Products

No moving picture machines are manufactured in South Africa. There are three bioscope cameras, all of English make, in this consular district. The negative and positive films used for these cameras are imported from the United States. One of these machines is operated by a photographer here who turns out a weekly film of 400 or 500 feet, called the "Local Gazette." Another machine used for producing scenic and topical films turns out about 400 feet weekly.

One local firm has added a cinematograph department to its photographic supply branch. In this department complete stocks of bioscope machines and accessories are carried, as well as supplies of all kinds for bioscope shows. The manager of the cinematograph department of this firm states that the production of local films at present is more in the experimental stage than commercial.

All the principal bioscope theaters employ vaudeville artists. Those in the city of Johannesburg give two shows nightly and matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays. In the suburbs one long show is given nightly, also the usual matinees. At each performance from 4,000 to 5,000 feet of films are shown. All theaters give two entire changes of films each week. The usual prices of admission are 50 cents and 25 cents.

(From British and South African Export Gazette.)

Fine Field for Cinematographs

Another picture theater is to be opened in South Africa, the latest being on the Esplanade, Durban, which is to cost $34.000. The country is a fine field for cinematograph supplies of all kinds.

CANADA

(From Consular Agent Walter S. Riblet, Nelson.)

Traveling Exhibitors in Southern Ontario

According to the information received at this consulate, Nelson, population 8,000, is the only town in the district in which a moving picture show is in regular operation. Traveling operators exhibit picture shows in regular intervals. There are four towns in this district having a population of over 1,000 and nine between 300 and 800. The business appears to be very profitable here, and it is reported that a new company is planning to operate in Nelson. There is no moving picture manufacturing plant in the district.

HONDURAS

(From Consul George F. Davis, Ceiba.)

The principal towns in this consular district are Ceiba, population 5,000; Trujillo, 2,000; and Roatan, 300. None of these towns has moving picture shows in regular operation, but a contract has recently been closed for the operation of such a theater in Ceiba, with film changes three times a week.

(Reports on the moving picture business in foreign countries have previously appeared in the Daily Consular and Trade Reports for August 5 and 6, 1910, and January 14, May 29 and October 7 and 14, 1911. Lists of the moving picture theaters, with the addresses of their managers, and of dealers in films, machines, etc., in the various countries mentioned in the foregoing reports are on file in the Bureau of Manufacturers and are available for public reference.)

NEW ZEALAND

(From Consul William A. Prickitt, Auckland.)

One or two American makes of cinematograph machines have been tried in New Zealand, but they did not seem to give satisfaction. A number of the old Edison machines are still in use in various parts of the country, but they are gradually being replaced by French makes. However, comparatively little is known of modern machines and one person interviewed said:

"We are looking for good machines. We depend entirely on the imported article, and in New Zealand there is a market which requires to be studied. For instance, most American machines apparently do not suit us because they are manufactured with a view to projecting small pictures. They are made of too light a standard and are not steady enough for our large pictures. We use 80 amperes. In America the highest used is, I believe, 35 amperes. We have not the same legal restrictions here, and so always show a 28-foot picture as against the small 12-foot picture understood to be common in America. Thus when the size of the film is magnified so much it is essential that absolute steadiness should be maintained. These are points which American makers would need to study before attempting to work the New Zealand market."

It is estimated that over 50 000 feet of film per week come into New Zealand and are hired out through central agencies. Of this total quite 50 per cent. is manufactured in America, and on every program presented in a New Zealand picture theater fully half the items comprise American subjects from American films.

All American films come through London and are admitted duty free. American dramas, cowboy stories and comedies are exceedingly popular, and the photography is regarded as excellent. The average program is reckoned to run about 7,000 feet. Some proprietors suggest that films dealing with current American news might be sent out advantageously. The cinematograph business in New Zealand is practically all in the hands of three firms.

Maysville, Ky.—The Gem Theatre Company filed articles of incorporation.

San Marcos, Texas.—A moving picture show has opened and will show educational pictures.

Peoria, Ill.—The Weiss store location, corner of South Adams and Garden streets, will be converted into a moving picture theatre.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A moving picture show will be built at the northeast corner of Allegheny avenue, Kensington avenue and Hilton street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Samuel F. Wheeler has purchased the ground at 23 North Fifty-second street and will build a large moving picture theatre.

Barre, Vt.—C. L. Woodbuy and F. C. Fox have sold the Star Theatre to N. M. Johnson of Middletown, Conn. Messrs. S. S. Whitten and Frank Morcher have purchased the moving picture show on Main street.

MISS FLORENCE M. WELLINGTON

Says the Los Angeles, Cal., Tribune:

Promoters of moving picture shows err when they object to having the films censored. There is no desire on the part of any board of censors to cut out anything that would in the long run be beneficial even to the receipts.

"The moving picture business has a vast field. It makes a wide appeal, and there is wisdom in directing this appeal to the better elements, and not to the arousing of ambitions to crack a safe or figure as a successful holdup.

"If the business is directed with reasonable discretion there is no limit to its productivity. If it is permitted to cater to the baser tastes either of managers or the public it will, as a popular spectacle, fall into disrepute."

"THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF"
Gaumont Release

Miss Florence M. Wellington, the clever young motion picture actress recently alluded to in our columns, has added to her list of accomplishments the art of scenario writing.

Miss Wellington has recently disposed of a number of excellent scenarios, in several of which she has further distinguished herself by playing the lead.

It is our pleasure to recommend Miss Wellington to motion picture directors as a clever and accomplished young woman, combining the ability to write, act, ride and swim, all of which she does most excellently.

The Nicholas Power Company, 90 Gold street, New York, has just issued a very attractive folder descriptive of their new No. 6A machine. It is of interest to all exhibitors and operators and we suggest sending for a copy without delay.

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF
The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.
Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—ED. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

Abonnement 1 fr. pour le monde entier

CINÉMA-REVUE

Journal indépendant d'Informations
Supplement mensuel a "Cinema"
Annuaire de la projection fixe et animee
Numéro spécimen sur demande
Bureau 118, rue d'Assas Paris

To Writers:

THE EDITOR

(The Journal of Information for Literary Workers) published in your interest for eighteen years, is the magazine of which Jack London said: "I may not tell a hundredth part of what I learned from THE EDITOR, but I may say that it taught me how to solve the stamp, and landlord problems." It is a monthly stimulus to the production and sale of more and better manuscripts. Besides articles of concrete, practical worth by editors or by writers successful or about to be successful, each number contains in "The Literary Market" all the news of all the magazines, new and old, that pay for manuscripts.

THE EDITOR is especially helpful to the scenario writer. It publishes from time to time helpful articles by those who are successful producers of photoplays. A copy of the current number will be sent for 15 cents. The yearly subscription is one dollar.

The Editor

Box 830, Ridgewood, New Jersey.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
May 29—The Optician's Dream (Com.)
June 14—If I Were King (Com.)
June 14—Italian Lakes
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 5—Legend of the Chrysanthemum
July 5—The Air Man

AMERICAN

July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels) (Hist.)	2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.)	1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.)	1000
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	1000
July 22—Indian Jealousy
July 24—How He Made Good
July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.)
July 29—It Pays to Wait (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun

BISON

June 22—On the Warpath
June 25—His Message
June 29—The Colonel's Peril
July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.)
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.)
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)
July 9—Reconciled (Dr.)
July 13—Just in Time (Dr.)

CHAMPION

June 12—A Western Child's Heroism	950
July 1—Pat's Breeches
July 1—Little Old New York
July 8—The Gypsy Bride
July 15—The Call of the West
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy

COMET

July 1—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.)	450
July 6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days	1000
July 8—The Intercollegiate Regatta, Poughkeepsie	975
July 13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky	1000
July 15—Reggy Breaks the College Rules	1000

ECLAIR

July 9—A Double Misunderstanding
July 11—The Cidarville Scandal
July 14—Artful Congren
July 14—Across the Caucasus
July 16—The Dreamers
July 18—That Loving Man
July 21—Rizzio
July 23—The Governor's Daughter
July 25—The Double Cross
July 28—The Lady Barrister

GREAT NORTHERN

June 29—How to Make a Reputation (Dr.)
June 29—A Bath With Consequences (Com.)
July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.)
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.)
July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	694
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.)	305
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Dr.)	666
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332

GAUMONT

	Feet
July 4—Written in Blood (2 Reels)
July 9—That Troublesome Bird
July 9—A Tenacious Hubby
July 11—The Silent Castle
July 16—Love's Surest Proof
July 18—Lion's Revenge
July 30—Prison on the Cliff
July 30—The Isle of Marken
Aug. 1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug. 6—Androclus and the Lion
Aug. 8—A Phantom of the Night
Aug. 13—Dream Driven
July 23—The Silent Castle
July 25—Love's Floral Tribute
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice

GEM

June 25—The Reason
July 2—The Medal of Honor
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)

IMP

July 1—Love, War and a Bonnet
July 4—Betty, the Coxswain
July 6—Home Again
July 6—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps
July 8—The Parson and the Medicine Man
July 11—Caught in a Flash
July 13—The Wrong Weigh
July 13—In and Around Chicago, Ill
July 15—Hearts in Conflict
July 18—Winning the Latonia Derby
July 20—The Foreign Invasion
July 20—Building a Church in a Day

ITALIA

Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli
Feb 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)

LUX
By Prieur.

June 28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)	259
July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)	860
July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)	567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)	393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)	970

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 3—Hard Luck Bill
July 5—Young Wild West on the Border
July 8—The Flower of the Forest
July 10—A Gentleman of Fortune
July 12—Young Wild West Cornered by Apaches
July 15—The Trifler (Dr.)
July 17—Fur and Feathers (Com.)
July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Hustler (Dr.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

June 19—No Children Wanted
June 22—Two Gay Boys
June 26—Their Day's Work
June 26—The Helping Hand
July 3—The Coming Generation
July 5—Mates and Mis-Mates
July 10—Tangled
July 17—Getting Even

RELIANCE

	Feet
July 10—Grandpa
July 13—The Toy 'Phone
July 17—At Cripple Creek (2 reels)
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog
July 24—The True Love
July 27—The Soldier Baby
July 31—Where There Is Soap There Is Hope
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph

REPUBLIC

July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks
July 6—The Girl in the Auto
July 15—The All-Seeing Eye
July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
July 29—A House Top Romance
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg

REX

July 11—The Greater Love (Dr.)
July 14—The Mother Heart (Dr.)
July 18—The Hidden Light
July 21—When Love Rules

SOLAX

July 10—Winsome but Wise
July 12—Hotel Honeymoon
July 17—Slippery Jim
July 19—The Four Flush Actor
July 24—Broken Oaths
July 26—The Requital

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 9—Pa's Medicine
July 9—Hazers Hazed
July 12—Nursie and the Knight
July 14—The Finger of Scorn
July 16—Vengeance Is Mine
July 19—Story of "The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird"
July 21—Only a Miller's Daughter
July 23—The Portrait of the Lady Anne
July 26—The Merchant of Venice

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.)
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.)
Jan. 1—The Thunderbolt (Dr.)

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr. 22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May 8—Through Trials to Victory	2500
May 20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

June 23—Meals by Weight
June 25—Papa's Double
June 30—Getting Rich Quick	1000
July 2—The Flat Upstairs
July 2—The Burglar Alarm Mat
July 7—The Cook Came Back
July 9—Father's Bust
July 9—The Widower's Widow
July 14—Father's Bust
July 14—The Widower's Widow
July 16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.)

SHAMROCK

May 25—A Cold Reception
May 28—White Fawn
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTORGRAPH

June 4—The Outlaw's Sister
June 11—In the Clutches of the Loan
June 14—Not Like Other Girls (Com.)

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEWMANN

BERLIN SW 68 Fruchstr. Berlin O. 17.

Annual subscription abroad 12 sh. Write for specimen copy.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,

la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.

Best advertising medium in North Europe.

Subscription 6 shillings.

Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

Have You An Idea?

Are You a Writer of Scenarios?

So many letters with crude scripts have come to us for our editor to advise upon that it takes up too much time; some of the writers enclose a dollar for advice. We have always returned script, letters and money, asking the sender to forward writings to the various manufacturers. Some have written to us complaining about their treatment at the hand of some schools of scenario writing, and requesting us to open a page for this work. This is also too much for our capacity. We have therefore made arrangements with our Miss Virginia West, whose stories appear each week, and who from her training in scenario writing and dramatic school, is fully qualified to criticise and advise, and Wm. Lord Wright, who as author of "The Art of Scenario Writing," and of the column "For those who worry o'er plots and plays," is capable of handling this branch.

The fee is One Dollar per Script.

The Moving Picture News stands pre-eminently America's leading cinematograph weekly, is read by every man in the industry, circulates in all the leading universities and colleges and is the "Vade Mecum" of the wide awake advertiser.

New subscribers to the Moving Picture News enclosing $2.00 for one year's subscription and script, with return postage, can have full criticism on one script free.

Cinematograph Publishing Co.

30 West 13th Street =:= =:= NEW YORK

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
June 20—The Spirit Awakened (Dr.).....
June 24—A Dash Through the Clouds (Com.)
June 24—The New Baby (Com.).....
June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com. Dr.)
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.).....
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.).....
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.)....
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.).....
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.)
July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.).....
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.).....
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.).....

CINES
C. Kleine

	Feet
June 25—The Girl and the Mayor.....1000
June 29—The Wandering Minstrel (Dr.)....1000
July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.).....
July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.).....
July 6—In Wrong (Com.) 1000
July 9—Lear Learns to Dance (Com.)....	400
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.).....	595
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.).....1000
July 16—Disowned (Dr.) 1020
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.)	995
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.)	900
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)....1000
July 30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.).....1090
Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.).....	640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)...

EDISON

	Feet
June 26—Pennsylvania State Police, Troop "B"	500
June 26—The Wooden Indian (Com.).....	500
June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.).....1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution 1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com. Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.).....1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.)	700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.).....	300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.).....1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.)	300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.).....	700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.).....1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.).....	600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves 1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.) 1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.) 1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.).1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.) 1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

	Feet
June 25—Billy and the Butler (Com. Dr.)..1000
June 27—A Guardian's Luck (Com.).....1000
June 28—Springing a Surprise (Com.).....1000
June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.) 1000
July 2—On the Cactus Trail (W. Dr.).....1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.).....1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr) 1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Pa Truhell's Troubles (Com.)....1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.).....1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.).....1000
July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.)..1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.).....1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.).....1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN

July 19—The Uninvited Guest (Com.).....
July 20—A Western Courtship (Dr.).....
July 22—The Ranger's Reward (Dr.).....
July 24—A Visit to Lively Town (Com.)..
July 24—The Talker (Com.)
July 25—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.).....
July 26—His Vacation (Com.).....
July 27—The Divine Solution (Dr.).....
July 29—Puehlo Indians, Alhuquerque, N. M. (Edu.)
July 29—A Farmer's Son (Com.)
July 31—The Derelict's Return (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Two Gun Sermon (Dr.).....
Aug. 2—Hosecleaning (Com.)
Aug. 2—Man Wanted (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)..
Aug. 5—A Prize Package.....
Aug. 7—The Sand Storm.....
Aug. 8—Buster in Nodland.....
Aug. 8—A Douhle Courtship.....
Aug. 9—A Fly Time.....
Aug. 10—The Missing Finger.....
Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw.....
Aug. 14—The Stuhbornness of Youth.....
Aug 15—Baseball Industry.....
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm.....
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril.....

G. MELIES

July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny.....

PATHE FRERES

July 6—The Wooing of White Fawn (Dr.)
July 8—Pathe's Weekly No. 28.....
July 8—The Adopted Child (Dr.).....
July 9—The Geisha's Love Story (Dr.)....
July 10—On the Brink of the Chasm (Dr.)..
July 11—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Dr.)..
July 12—Max Takes Tonics (Com.).....
July 13—The Unwilling Bride (Dr.).....
July 15—Pathe's Weekly No. 29.....
July 16—The Mosquito
July 16—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Com.)
July 17—A Question of Size (Com.).....
July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.)....
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.)
July 20—The Half-Breed Foster Sister (Dr.)
July 22—Pathe's Weekly No. 30.....
July 23—Jane Seymour and Henry VIII of England (Hist. Dr.).....
July 24—His Second Love (W. Dr.).....
July 25—The Redman's Friendship (Dr.)....
July 26—A Bold Game (Dr.).....
July 26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Travel)
July 27—For the Sake of the Papoose (Dr.)

KALEM CO.

	Feet
June 26—Captured by Bedouins (Dr.).....1000
June 28—The Penalty of Intemperance (Dr.).1000
July 1—Tragedy of the Desert (2 reels Dr.).2000
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.)..1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.).....
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.).....
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.)..	875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.)	125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.).....
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.)....
July 15—The Lair of the Wolt (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.).....1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)....
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting).....

SELIG

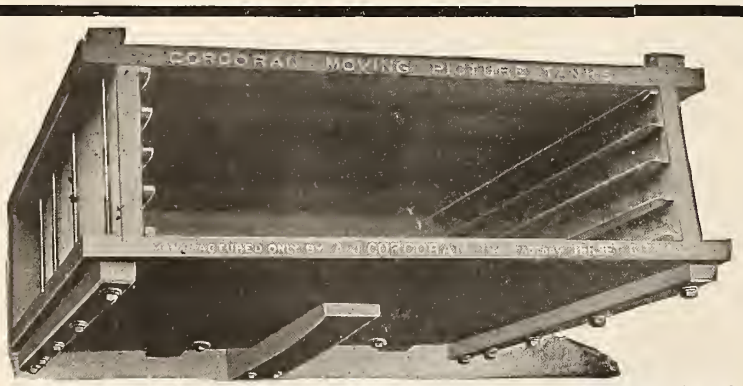
June 24—The Adopted Son (Dr.).....1000
June 25—Pansy (Com. Dr.).....1000
June 27—His Father's Bugle (Dr.).....
June 27—Elephant Butte Dam at Albuquerque (Edu.)
June 28—Murray, the Masher (Com.).....1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com. Dr.) 1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Bahy Betty (Dr.).....1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.).....
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.).....1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.)..
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.)
July 15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.).....1000
July 16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.)..1000
July 18—The Polo Suhstitute (Sporting)....1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.).....1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

June 19—Studies of Fish Life.....
June 19—Bergen, Norway (Sc.).....
June 26—The Music Hall Singer (Dr.).....1000
July 3—The Wax Model (Dr.).....
July 3—Scenes in Somerset (Sc.).....
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Grandmother (Dr.).....1050
July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.).....	485
July 24—The French Army in Action (Mil.).	505
July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.) 1,000

VITAGRAPH

June 28—Pseudo Sultan 1000
June 29—At the End of the Trail.....1000
July 1—After Many Years (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Church Across the Way (Dr.).1000
July 3—Lincoln's Getttysburg Address (Hist.) 1000
July 5—On the Pupil of His Eye (Dr.)....1000
July 6—The Troublesome Step-Daughters (Com. Dr.) 1,000
July 8—Her Old Sweetheart.....	500
July 8—Fate's Awful Jest.....	500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake.....1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets.....1000
July 12—The Foster Child.....1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance.....1000
July 15—Conscience, or "The Chamber of Horrors" 1000
July 16—A Persistent Lover (Com.).....	400
July 16—A Lively Affair (Com.).....	650
July 17—The Redemption of Red Rube (Dr.)1000
July 19—Honor Thy Father (Dr.).....1000
July 20—Rock of Ages (Dr.).....1000



For reference as to quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co., Kinemacolor Co. of America, N. Y. Motion Picture Co., Bison, Crystal Film Co.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 9½ JOHN ST., NEW YORK CITY

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication

Moving Picture News

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES

WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY

From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.

MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. N Omaha, Neb.

EXHIBITORS

WHY NOT HAVE A LOCAL MOVING PICTURE MADE?

Cost is low. A sure money-getter. We make 'em. Film titles. Any length. 3 Feet for 25c.

M. P. Machinery bought and sold. Cameras loaned. Announcement slides. "Best yet." 25c each, colored. Send for Sample.

Advertising Slides and Films made to order.

LECTURE SETS. ANY SUBJECT.
Plain, $2.00; Colored, $3.00 per dozen.

SPECIAL—Dante's Inferno, 12 Slides, colored, with Lecture and Posters—$3.00

GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave., New York. Dept. B.

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!

Every Exhibitor Can Do It.
Write Us To Show You How.

SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.
248 West 35th Street, New York.

We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.

Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.

SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERB ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

STOCK BRASS SLIDES

1. Good Night. 2. New Pictures Every Day. 3. Matinee To-morrow. 4. This Concludes the Performance. 5. Please Do Not Smoke. 6. Good Afternoon. 7. New Program To-morrow. 8. Hats Off, Please. 9. Intermission. 10. One Minute, Please. 11. All Out. 12. Welcome.

ORDER BY NUMBER

Price Each, CASH WITH ORDER, 25c.
Exchanges: Write for quantity price.

BEHREND M. P. SUPPLY HOUSE
30 Union Square, New York City.

Mackie-Flammer, Inc.

THEATRE BROKERS

Dealing in High Class Theatres
COMMERCIAL TRUST BUILDING,
1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ROLL TICKETS

LARGEST FACTORY IN THE WORLD

50,000— $5.90
100,000— 8.75
200,000— 16.00

CARTER TICKET CO.
DANVERS, MASS.

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year and the ART OF SCENARIO WRITING, by William Lord Wright for $2.00.

MR. THEATRE MAN

Send at once to us for an advertising slide to use on your curtain to get campaign business. It will tell your patrons that they can use your theatre to bring them before the voters.

Its cost to you will be four cents postage.

We also have announcement and advertising slides.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO.,
Lockport, N. Y.
Do This Now

HIGH ART FEATURES

We release one every ten days in two and three-reel productions.

Write us for our list and synopsis.

NEW YORK FILM CO.,
12 Union Sq., New York City.

David's War With Absalom

1,500 Feet. Ready for shipment May 10. Three styles lithographs.

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

HARD MAPLE

FOLDING CHAIRS

$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

Oliver Twist

has been a hero for more than a century. The little fellow was immortalized by the renowned Dickens. And the brutal FAGIN was even more conspicuous, domineering as he did the lives of weaker criminals. He is immortalized not only by Dickens but by our greatest actor, NAT C. GOODWIN, with the aid of motion pictures.

ONLY A FEW STATES ARE LEFT

which we are ready to close at a reasonable figure. State-rights men write or wire at our expense.

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.
145 West 45th Street
New York City

A gf A

Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

POWERS PHOTO-ENGRAVING CO.

The Fastest Engravers on Earth
154 NASSAU STREET
(Tribune Bldg.) NEW YORK CITY
OPEN DAY, NIGHT, SUNDAYS and HOLIDAYS
Phone 4200, 4201, 4202, 4203 } BEEKMAN
OUR CUTS ARE UNION MADE
New Process for Enlarging Half-Tones from Moving Picture Film

Independent Exhibitors

INCREASE YOUR ATTENDANCE
MAKE YOUR THEATER KNOWN
SECURE THE INTEREST OF YOUR PATRONS
HELP RAISE THE STANDARD OF THE WHOLE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

At No Cost To You

The Motion Picture Story Magazine is now printing Independent as well as Licensed Stories. Your patrons will want to read it. You can put it on sale at your theater at no risk to you.

We will ship you the magazine at ten cents per copy, cash in advance, giving you the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of ten cents each. This arrangement protects both you and us. We will send you slide and advertising matter free.

Thousands of exhibitors are now increasing their attendance by the use of The Motion Picture Story Magazine. Send in your order today. You will be surprised at the result. Just fill out the blank below.

Date.....

The Motion Picture Story Magazine,
26 Court St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Inclosed please find $..... for which kindly send me—copies of the Motion Picture Story magazine for the month of ..... It is understood that I am to have the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of 10c. each.

Name .....

Street and No......

Theatre .....

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Tel. Oxford { 3790, 2187

We advertise not only in Trade Journals but also in publications reaching millions such as The Christian Herald, Advocate, etc.

Best State Right
STATE RIGHTS WITH EACH SALE
Proposition Ever Offered
MORE OPPORTUNITY FOR BOOKINGS THAN ANY PICTURE EVER MADE
REFINED PRODUCTION BEST MONEY-MAKER
THE CHATAUQUAS IN YOUR STATE WANTS THEM
BOOKED IN FIRST-CLASS MOTION PICTURE AUDITORIUMS
A BRILLIANT PRODUCTION
The Life of John Bunyan
2000 feet
A JEWEL
of Magnificence
CHURCHES AND LECTURE ROOMS DESIRE THEM
LYCEUM CIRCUITS ARE ANXIOUS TO PROCURE THEM
The Pilgrim's Progress
3000 feet of Elevating Entertainment
NOT A ONE-SIDED RELIGIOUS STORY
A PERFECT PRESENTATION OF LIFE FROM ANY STAND-POINT
DRAMATICALLY SUBLIME ARTISTIC DIRECTION BY FRANCIS POWERS
PROPERLY EDITED from HISTORICAL and ECCLESIASTICAL VIEW BY O. I. LAMBERGER PH.D.
BEAUTIFUL COLOR TONE BY THE SECRET HOCHSTETTER PROCESS
More opportunity for bookings
than any production ever made

HOCHSTETTER UTILITY CO., Inc.

40 E. 12th Street 'Phone 2496 Stuyvesant New York City

"101" Bison Headliners

EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

In the trade papers of June 29th and July 6th, the Universal Program contained Bison releases not made by the famous "101 Bison" Stock Company. The Bison release of July 6th, "Restoration," also Bison release of July 9th "Reconciled," were not made by the NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE COMPANY, but were old Centaur Films bearing Bison titles. "Reconciled" was released under the name of the Centaur Film Co., under the title of "Dan Blake's Rival." "Restoration" was released under the name of the Centaur Film Co., under the title of "Love Wins." No release during the week beginning July 2nd and no release during the week beginning July 8th, but will resume releasing during the week of July 15th. Tuesdays and Fridays are the regular release days for the in 1, 2 and 3 reel subjects.

Genuine "101" Bison Headliners

COMING COMING

"Custer's Last Fight"

The greatest motion picture ever made by any manufacturer in the world.

TUESDAY, JULY 16th
"101" BISON HEADLINER

Snowball and His Pal

A single reel feature
Here is a picture we say others would call a "Masterpiece." So it is. We leave it for your judgment.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th
AMBROSIO

The Airman
The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

A corking good split reel

FRIDAY, JULY 3rd
"101" BISON HEADLINER

His Nemesis

Here is another single reel "101" Bison Headliner that will make your audience sit up and gasp.

SATURDAY, JULY 20th
ITALA

Magical Hat
An Eventful Day

An Itala split reel full of laughs in both subjects

New York Motion Picture Co.

A. KESSEL, JR., President. CHAS. O. BAUMANN, Secretary and Treasurer.

MONDAY, JULY 15

IMP HEARTS IN CONFLICT	NESTOR THE TRIFLER	CHAMPION FORAGING ON THE ENEMY

TUESDAY, JULY 16

GEM TWO MEN	BISON THE SHERIFF'S MYSTERIOUS AIDE	ECLAIR THE DREAMERS

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17

POWERS A GOOD DAY'S WORK THE RANSOM	NESTOR FUR AND FEATHERS	THE ANIMATED WEEKLY

THURSDAY, JULY 18

REX THE HIDDEN LIGHT	IMP Two Reel WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY	ECLAIR THAT LOVING MAN

FRIDAY, JULY 19

POWERS HER LIFE'S STORY	VICTOR THE PLAYERS	NESTOR YOUNG WILD WEST TRAPPING A TRICKY RUSTLER

SATURDAY, JULY 20

BISON DARE DEVIL DICK WINS A WIFE	IMP BUILDING A CHURCH IN A DAY THE FOREIGN INVASION	MILANO Two Reel THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE

SUNDAY, JULY 21

REX WHEN LOVE RULES	ECLAIR RIZZIO

THE EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

Gaumont

Gaumont

LIST! COMING!

TWO REELS, BLACK and WHITE (tinted and toned) TUESDAY, JULY 30

The PRISON ON THE CLIFF

Some exhibitors have been fortunate enough to see this on the recent tour of Mr. D. W. McKinney amongst their several conventions. It was shown at Chicago, Atlanta, Lexington, Cleveland, Wheeling, etc., and in each case the exhibitors have asserted their rights and demanded the exchangeman to place his order for it. There's a reason—Sensationality and Picturesque beauty were never more harmoniously combined.

TWO STYLES OF 1-SHEET LITHOS—ONE STYLE OF 3-SHEET HERALDS—BOOKLETS.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Sold through Film Supply Co. of America.

TUESDAY—JULY 23

THE SILENT CASTLE

(Hand-Colored)

THURSDAY—JULY 25

LOVE'S FLORAL TRIBUTE

(Hand-Colored)

THURSDAY—AUG. 1

THE ROMANCE OF THE PALM GARDEN

TUESDAY—AUGUST 6

DREAM-DRIVEN

THURSDAY—AUGUST 8

THE PHANTOM OF THE NIGHT

TUESDAY—AUGUST 13

ANDROCLUS AND THE LION

Scene from
ANDROCLUS AND THE LION

1 SHEETS—3 SHEETS—8 SHEETS

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

2 REELS THURSDAY, AUG. 15

Here's the Hugest Sensation of the season, barring none. Even more exciting than Attacked by a Lion, a film which every exhibitor in the country has eagerly booked and re-booked in his show houses. This feature is being shown in Chicago by Mr. Harry Igel, our Chicago agent. Arrange for an exhibition with him. Address him care of any Chicago Film Supply Exchange.

The Exhibitors will surely get THEIR Just Deserts in real profit and thereby enjoy their LIVES Forever if they avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity and start kicking FOR the most thrilling sensation ever filmed. To run it in your theatre means that you shall be rewarded with real GOLD

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

Gaumont

Gaumont

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

JUL 25 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 3

JULY 20
1912

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

"NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS"

Universal Film Mfg. Co.,
Victor Release, July 26th

THE

THANHOUSER

THREE-A-WEEK

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, and a Three-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"Lucille"

IN 2 REELS—TUESDAY, AUGUST 27

A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI OHIO

Getting the New SUNDAY RELEASES? The Latest:

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 28

Cousins

Featuring the "Thanhouser Twins" Again. Another Delightful Comedy Drama in Which These 'Zactly-Alike Kids Perform Admirably. A Hot Weather "Hummer."

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 30

Treasure Trove

A New Way of "Salting" a Mine—Filling It With Your Own Gold So It Will Be "Discovered" by the Brother of the Poor Girl You Have Loved and Lost. An Unsuccessful Suitor's Manly Deed.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 2

A New Cure for Divorce

It's the Film Cure. See a Moving Picture in a Moving Picture. A Fine Novelty for the Heated Spell. It Boosts the Whole Picture Institution.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Featureframe. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name .....

Address .....

Exchange .....

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" In 2 Reels

Charles Reade's Great Story

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

$500.00 Reward

For information leading to the arrest and conviction of certain unprincipled exchanges who are offering to exhibitors or miserable copies of films from our program. We hereby warn these exchanges to cease handling "Dupes" under penalty provided by law.

"DUPES!"

OUR FILMS CAN BE HAD ONLY FROM

OUR AUTHORIZED AGENTS

ANTI-TRUST FILM CO.,
128 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF OREGON,
385 Adler St., Portland, Oregon.
BUCKEYE LAKE SHORE FILM CO.,
422 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE,
Los Angeles, Cal.
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE,
166 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.
CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE,
Calgary, Alberta, Canada.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis Ind.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
32 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.
CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE,
32 Queens Street, East, Toronto, Canada.
GAUMONT COMPANY,
4 Queen Street, East, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.
H. & H. FILM SERVICE COMPANY,
98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
H. & H. FILM SERVICE COMPANY,
Des Moines, Iowa.
CONTINENTAL FILM EXCHANGE,
902 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
LAKE SHORE FILM EXCHANGE,
106 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Memphis, Tenn.
MAJESTIC FILM SERVICE,
216 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
Toledo, Ohio.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
422 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
81 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
729 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans, La.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
1509½ Main Street, Dallas, Texas.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Denver, Colo.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
97 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich.
PITTSBURGH PHOTOPLAY COMPANY,
415 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.
PROGRESSIVE FILM EXCHANGE,
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebraska.
SWANSON CRAWFORD FILM COMPANY,
723 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
VICTOR FILM SERVICE,
39 Church Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
145 West 45th Street, New York City.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
15 West 10th Street, Kansas City, Missouri.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

OUR REGULAR PROGRAM

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

"101" Bison Headliners

IN ONE, TWO AND THREE-REEL SUBJECTS
BE SURE AND GET A GENUINE BISON

MR. EXHIBITOR: Make your exchange man show you the trade-mark on title bearing the name: NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

COMING COMING

"Custer's Last Fight"

IN THREE REELS

The greatest feature and motion picture in the World.

TUESDAY, JULY 23d
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Double Life"

A single reel feature full of thrills from start to finish.

TUESDAY, JULY 30th
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Desert"

A single reel feature and sure is a masterpiece.

FRIDAY, JULY 26th
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Last Resource"

A single reel feature up to the standard made famous by the "101" Bison Stock Co.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2d
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Gambler and the Girl"

A single reel feature and a powerful story, too.

EXTRA EXTRA

BRONCHO FILMS

Ready for release week of August 12th. Two releases weekly, Mondays & Thursdays. One, two and three reel features just as good, big, elaborate and as full of action and thrills as our famous "101" Bison Headliners. "Enough said" for the present.

KEYSTONE FILMS

Ready for release week of AUGUST 12TH. Two releases weekly, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

WEDNESDAYS: A split-reel comedy and always a feature, supported and made by Mr. Mack Sennett, Mr. Fred Mace, and Miss Mabel Normand, the greatest comédiennes, all well known and popular players in motion pictures throughout the world.

SATURDAYS: A feature dramatic in one and two reels played by a strictly "ALL STAR" Stock Company, consisting only of "STARS,' 'and only of the most prominent and popular "STARS" in motion pictures playing all parts in the cast.

EXHIBITORS! EXHIBITORS!

Start right in this minute demanding BRONCHO & KEYSTONE FILMS, and be sure to get every release beginning with the first releases from your exchange. Holler, if necessary, your "head-off," and don't stop hollering until your exchange man has booked these films for you. If you can't get them tell us.

New York Motion Picture Co.

150 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

A. KESSEL, Jr., Pres. CHAS. O. BAUMANN, Sec'y and Treas.

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, AUG. 6th

"BECAUSE OF BOBBY"

Bobby acts as Cupid's emissary while "the foxy little fellow" is overworked at seashore, mountains and farm.

THURSDAY, AUG. 8th

"BOYS AGAIN"

Picture a conservative millionaire stealing apples from a tree and you'll have an idea of the fun there's in this film.

SUNDAY, AUG. 11th

"THE FOSTER-SISTER"

A comedy drama of a summer vacation. Both a flirt and her victim are taught a lesson.

On the same reel

CARLSBAD

A picture journey to that most famous European health resort.

ROBIN-HOOD

Ask your exchange—WHEN?

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42d St., New York City

NEWSPAPERS ARE GIVING COLUMNS OF SPACE EVERY DAY TO

THE PANAMA CANAL

THE MARVEL OF THE AGE

The Greatest Engineering Feat Ever Undertaken, the Construction In All Its Details, Including Scenes Along the Canal Zone, and

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW TAKEN WHEN AVIATOR DE GIERS FLEW OVER PANAMA

Shown in Two Reels of Motion Picture Film

WRITE IMMEDIATELY FOR STATE RIGHTS AND SPECIAL EXHIBITIONS

AVIATION FILM SALES COMPANY

Sole Distributors

Suite 711 203 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd

The Equine Spy

TWO REELS—Featuring that famous horse with $20,000 annual earning capacity and whose owner refused offers of $10,000

THE CRITICS SAY:

MISS M. J. MACDONALD, M. P. News:

This production is in two reels and is full of action, the scene of which is laid principally on the skirmish line. "Don," the wonderful performing horse, does all kinds of human tricks, even going so far as to bring a canteen of water to his master, who has been captured and imprisoned in an old tumble-down building by the Union soldiers. He also lights the bonfire which attracts the attention of the comrades of his master, when the Confederate officer by whom he is ridden bas been pursued and wounded.

The scene is particularly effective with the glaring red of the fire against the shadows of the moonlight. The film must commend itself to all lovers of a good horse, for "Don" is certainly a superb specimen.

LOUIS REEVES HARRISON, M. P. World:

One of the finest of his kind is "Don," in tbe Solax play, "The Equine Spy"—he looks like an Arabian—and he does his part with a modest dignity that should cause matinee idols to sit up and take protracted notice. His supporters are among the finest to be seen in moving pictures, nearly all the principals of the Solax bappy family taking part in the horse play.

The play was designed for the splendid horse, and it appears to have been brought into correct lines of construction. The work is satisfactory in all tbe many details that go to make up a complete photo-drama, and the rôles are admirably assumed. I know what the Solax Company can do. They work in harmony without losing individual values; work enthusiastically and impress their superior quality and fine organization upon whatever tbey attempt to interpret.

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 31st

Bottles--(Split Reel)

A "regular fellow" goes to his club—has a "few" on the boys and then finds his way home—the best he could. Before he reaches his nest he finds a note in his pocket which warns him that his wife is unfaithful. The "regular fellow" raises cain with his wife, and while in the midst of it, "Buttons" comes breathlessly rushing in from the Club and tells him "that he by mistake took Jones' coat and letters. Funny, eh? On the same reel is

Imagination

A woman imagines she swallowed her false teeth and is ready to undergo an operation, but her husband saves her.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 3d

Buddy and His Dog

Buddy is a newsboy. He finds a stray pup and takes care of it—even better than the folks take care of Buddy. When Buddy hears that the dog-catchers are about to shoot dogs without licenses, Buddy takes measures against the police and dog-catchers.

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, N. Y.

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

©CL.B256994

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI July 20, 1912 Number 3

AN IMPENDING STORM

Do you know that a storm is impending? A moving picture storm, which, if it breaks, will be most spectacular? The theatrical powers, the Shuberts, Frohmans and others, are all prepared to embark extensively into the production of moving pictures. The alarming inroads made into the regular theatrical treasure chests within the past two years is attributed to moving pictures, and the powers propose to break the popularity of the moving picture or control the industry. The statement is not imaginary; the details have been gathered by William Lord Wright from authoritative sources. If the plans of the theatrical syndicate are carried out, all their high-priced stars, Broadway productions, etc., will be filmed and released for the smaller communities. Prices of admission will be five and ten cents. The more farsighted of the present film manufacturers have read the threatening signs and are said to be prepared. A scramble is on by certain manufacturers to contract for all the high-class literary output suitable for moving picture stories.

Maude Adams, James K. Hackett and others may be seen fighting for popularity with Florence Lawrence, Costello, Baggot, Johnson and other film favorites, if what was decided upon at a conference of theatrical powers, held recently, is carried out. The theatrical journals and magazines are already beginning to press-agent the coming entrance of the syndicate into Filmland. And Mr. Wright predicts that if the fight is ever fought it will result in an open market and the ultimate triumph of the present film manufacurers. Read the story in next week's Moving Picture News.

TRUSTWORTHY AND INTELLIGENT MEN WANTED

NO, this is not an advertisement for employees, but an appeal to the better element of the community to take a hand in the Cinematograph Industry. We want men (as we said in our last editorial) with backbone and power and vim; men to whom the exhibitor and the exchange man can look up to and trust; men whose word is their bond, and who never go back when once their word is passed, and when once the word is spoken it shall be as hard as though it were made in legal document, stamped, signed and sealed. But even the stamping, signing and sealing of the bond is as wind to some men who are in the business, and as water is on a duck's back. Neither their word nor their bond is worth the paper it is written on, nor the breath that emanates with their promise. These are the men who are a hindrance to the advancement of the industry. These are the men who are putting a scotch in the wheel of progress, who have no principle, no thought, no idea, except to make money, any and every way they can; whose methods of work are cheeseparing in the extreme with their employees, and the highest priced of any to the purchasers of their products, and these products are not worth half the cost they are charging for them—in fact, that are so mediocre that we wonder the public, the exhibitor and the exchange man have patience to look at them on the screen or purchase them.

When we look back to the industry in its infancy, and some of our writings of that period, we feel stronger than ever that the great need of to-day is for a better element of manhood to take hold of the industry and work it for all the good there is within the fold. People fifteen years ago looked upon the moving picture as being something so very much beneath them, merely a common show attraction, and men of stability held aloof. The consequence was that every peddler on the street who saw a chance of bettering himself opened a moving picture show, and then, again, to be looked upon with dubiousness, and the respectable element gathered their skirts together, looking very askance at the man who opened the show, shook their heads and passed by on the other side. The showman gradually found that he had got a wonderful "Aladdin" lamp in his hands. He rubbed it and immediately gold appeared before his astonished eyes. He rubbed it again, and visions of the great wealth appeared before him. He took advantage of the lamp in his possession, and became an exchange man, all the time carrying cheating proclivities with him, trying to outdo his rival even as he did in his peddling days. The exchange flourished and became a vast source of wealth to its proprietor. Some of the worst element of manhood got into this exchange business and it was necessary they be eliminated. From the exchange they became manufacturers of film, still carrying their proclivities with them, their cheeseparing policies, their cheap-skate business with their scenarios, their actors and actresses, their managers and directors, until the result is seen on the screen to-day, that everything is shoddy; and now, when honest, upright, clean-minded men want to come into the business they are shut out. They invest money in wildcat schemes and lose it through the associates who have deceived and robbed them, but they have been tarred with the brush. The fever is in their blood; they are imbued with the fascination of Cinematography. It is a fever that grows, and, however much the loss is, the fascination is almost like the fascination of the gambler, who always thinks that he is going to retrench at the next throw of the dice or the next cut of the cards. It is like the growing influence of the drunkard in his cups, the growing influence of the tobacco fiend, almost impossible to throw off. These men are willing, anxious—nay, more than anxious. It is their soul's desire to turn out high-class subjects, subjects of an uplifting, elevating and educational quality. Why cannot these men do what their hearts desire?

People spoke to us ten years or more ago asking our advice. We told them then as we tell them now—Cinematography is only just in its infancy. It is growing with enormous, rapid, far-reaching proportions, and the time has come when the better class of men must take their part and lot in the industry. They must take hold of the reins and drive the horses in a straight furrow. They must help eliminate the worst element out of the industry. Commencing at the bottom, the public are demending better theatres, better conditions and improvements all the way round. People who looked with scorn upon the moving picture five or six years ago are now constantly seen among its most consistent and earnest patrons. They criticise, they watch every movement, they see every false step, they are keen and eager to point out the little idiosyncrasies of the actor or actress, to point out the glaring inaccuracies that often make a film ridiculous. These people—the better element of the population—are demanding a better class of houses and these must be catered for by a cleaner, better element of exhibitors. Men can go into this industry the same as they go into the clothing, grocery, the hardware or any other industry of the day, and when this evolution is gradually brought about the exchange man must be more particular in the selection of his subject. He must be a censor board himself to the film that he supplies his patrons, and when men who are clean in their dealings, giving a square deal, and always standing on the level to the exhibitor, then shall we see a rapid change in the ranks of the patrons of the moving picture theatre; then shall pass into oblivion the exchange man who is asked to supply a certain class of film and fails.

During the last few days exhibitors in outlying districts who only show a picture on Saturday (Sunday where they are allowed) and Monday nights, asking for certain film, were told by the exchange man that they had to take just what they could get; and, oh, the pity of it, to see the result of this "they could get"! It was enough to make one's blood boil. Then when this better element of manhood comes along the manufacturer must then back down and comply with the request of the exchange for a higher grade, better quality of film, and this can only be supplied by an improvement in the directors, the actors and the actresses used in each picture. It will mean the elimination of the cheap-paid class of actors and actresses, and the advancement of the higher-grade, better qualified pantomimists, who know how to act, and directors who know how to stage, and scenario editors who know how to select that only which is the best. It means the elimination of two-thirds of the pictures put on the screen to-day. It means the advancement of the whole industry. It means a general tendency, an uplift. The writing has already appeared upon the wall, and it now behooves everyone who has the real desire for the advancement of the industry at heart to set their houses in order and advance along the lines of progress. It is too late in the day to put the clock back and try and bamboozle the public and make them believe that every picture is a jewel. They are too well educated. Even the children know how to criticise and how to praise or condemn a film. The elimination of the worst elements is rapidly advancing, and in a little while it will be "the survival of the fittest."

INFORMATION FOR SCENARIO WRITERS

So many letters have come to us asking the question, where can they send their scenarios and who are in the market to receive them, and approximately what amount is paid for scenarios. After considerable inquiries we find the following scale among the manufacturers rules. Of course this scale is not to be taken as absolute, as owing to the excellence of some scenarios much more is paid for special subjects, even as much as $100 and $150, but these are very, very exceptional subjects. We will revise the list from time to time so that those who are constantly asking may keep the addresses and prices on file.

INDEPENDENT

American Film Mfg. Co., Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill., $10.00 to $15.00.

N. Y. Motion Picture Co., 521 West 19th St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Champion Film Co., 145 West 45th St., New York, N. Y., $5.00 up.

Comet Film Co., 344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Eclair Film Co., 225 West 42d St., New York, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Great Northern Film Co., 7 East 14th St., New York, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Imp Films Co., 102 West 101st St., N. Y., $5.00 to $15.00.

R. Prieur, 10 East 15th St., New York, N. Y., importer only. No scenarios.

Majestic Motion Picture Co., 540 West 21st St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Nestor Film Co., Bayonne, N. J., $15.00 up.

Powers Motion Picture Co., 422 West 216th St., New York, N. Y., $10.00.

Reliance, 540 West 21st St., New York, N. Y., $25.00 up.

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co., 573 Eleventh Ave., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Solax Co., Congress Ave., Flushing, N. Y., $20.00 up.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y., $25.00 up.

Feature & Educational Film Co., 104 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, $10.00 up.

Gaumont Co., Flushing, N. Y., $25.00 up.

LICENSEES

Biograph Film Co., 11 East 14th St., New York, N. Y., $15.00 up.

Thomas A. Edison, 239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J., $20.00 up.

Essanay Film Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill., $10.00 up.

Kalem Co., 235 West 23d St., New York, N. Y., $10.00 up.

Lubin Mfg. Co., 20th and Indiana Aves., Philadelphia, Pa., $20.00 up.

G. Melies, 204 East 38th St., New York, N. Y., value $15.00 to $50.00.

Pathé Frères, 41 West 25th St., New York, N. Y., $5.00 to $25.00.

Selig Polyscope Co., Chicago, Ill., $25.00 up.

Geo. Kline, 166 North State St., Chicago, Ill., importer only. No scenarios required.

Vitagraph Co., 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y., $10.00 to $20.00.

Marion, Ind.—C. E. Zink, of Monticello, Ind., has purchased the Star Theatre from LeRoy Tudor.

Telluride, Colo.—New Star Theatre opened under a new management.

Roswell, New Mexico.—The Majestic Theatre has been sold to Clarence Abel.

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

MICHIGAN EXHIBITORS MEET AT MUSKEGON

Headquarters, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

This morning at 8.55 a delegation headed by Mr. Carl Ray, with banners flying, automobiles, brass bands playing, met Mr. M. A. Neff, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, at the depot. Mr. Neff was escorted to the Occidental Hotel, where a reservation had been made for his special comfort and convenience.

The convention was called to order at the Orpheum Theatre at 11 a. m. by the state president, Mr. Peter J. Jeup, of Detroit, who delivered a short address. After his address, the following committees were appointed:

Committee on Credentials: Mr. William Ullman, Detroit, chairman; Mr. August Kleist, Pontiac; Mr. M. J. Carroll, Jackson.

Committee on Constitution: Mr. B. L. Converse, Owosso; Mr. Fred Rumler, Detroit; Mr. H. F. Fowser, Lansing.

Committee on Reception: Mr. Carl Ray, Muskegon, chairman; Mr. H. R. Hillier, Grand Haven; Mr. William Ullman, Detroit; Mr. Charles Wentzel, Detroit; J. B. Towner, Jackson; Perry J. Coady, Muskegon.

After the appointment of the committees, an automobile sight-seeing ride was taken and a musical entertainment. Meeting adjourned and met again at 3 p. m. President Jeup called the meeting to order. After a short address he introduced Mayor Harry A. Reitdyk. The address of the Mayor was well received and it was apparent that he had studied the motion picture from the educational point of view. His remarks were pleasing, enthusiastically applauded.

Mr. M. A. Neff, president of the National League, responded to the address of Mayor Reitdyk. Several that had heard Mr. Neff speak several times before a convention stated that the president improved with every speech that he made. His subject was "The Uplift and the Future of Cinematography." It dwelt upon the necessity of organization and the great good to be accomplished. He urged the Michigan exhibitors to perfect a thorough organization. He also spoke of the Chicago convention, not only inviting every exhibitor in Michigan to attend, but urged the necessity and importance of their attendance, stating that Chicago was expecting them and that they must not disappoint the big city, as arrangements were being made to entertain them and give them the time of their lives. Mr. Neff's address was well received and several who had never heard him speak before were very much pleased to know that they were representd by a man who understands and appreciates the situation fully.

Mr. Carl Ray was called for and stated the program for the next two days. Extended program has been arranged of business and entertainment winding up Thursday night with a boat ride on the lake and a big banquet.

The exhibitors were entertained by a band of forty pieces and high class vaudeville.

Prominent among the visitors were B. L. Converse, Owosso, Mich., who is a very able talker and a hard worker in the interest of the League; W. L. Levy, state secretary, Detroit, Mich., was at his post, always smiling and ready to assist in making the convention a grand success, which it is. William Ullman, national vice-president from Michigan, is always distributing encouragement and ready to assist any way possible to the comfort of the visitors. F. N. Harris, Amuse Theatre, Hart, Mich.; W. J. Connell, Bon Ton Theatre, Jackson; J. B. Towner, Ideal Theatre, Jackson, Mich.; J. S. Wentzel, Monarch Theatre and Olympic Theatre, Detroit; August Kleist, Eagle Theatre, Pontiac; Fred Rumler, Warren Theatre, Detroit; J. A. Pawley, Scenic Theatre, Saginaw; H. F Fowser, Vaudette and Boneta Theatre, Lansing; Harry S. Hillier, Temple Theatre, Grand Haven; George McArthur, Royal Theatre, Windsor, Ont.; P. J. Coady, Princess Theatre, Muskegon; C. A. Anderson, Hermosa Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Vice-President of the Illinois State League, Mr. C. A. Anderson, is in attendance and no exception to the rule of the Chicago "boomer," always speaking a good word for his home town and booming the League.

There is quite a number of manufacturers who are displaying their exhibit. Among those present: Mr. Pyle, of Chicago, Mr. George F. Keiwart, Carbon Company, of Chicago.

MICHIGAN HEADQUARTERS — MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE—CONVENTION HALL

July 10 meeting called to order by President Jeup at 10 o'clock a. m. After the report of the committees, a large number of delegates having arrived during the night, Mr. Neff, the National president, responded to a call for a speech. He dwelt upon what could be accomplished through organization. His speech brought new life into the convention and from the time he began speaking everybody was enthusiastic and harmony prevailed throughout the proceedings of the convention. Mr. Neff told of the early struggle of the organization, of the many things that had been accomplished through the organization in other States and pointed out that the organization now reached from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lake to the Gulf and inside of less than one year. The States that are now organized and belong to the League contain two-thirds of the population of the United States. No other organization in the history of the world has grown so rapidly and so strong in the length of time as the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America has grown. No other organization has ever possessed the wealth and employed so many people as our organization does. Mr. Neff stated that while the organization was not yet a year old, Australia and Canada were organized and he predicted within another year that instead of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League being confined to America, that it would be a world-wide organization, and that its power for good and disseminating education and amusing the world would be appreciated in almost every civilized nation. After Mr. Neff's speech he was warmly congratulated and many made the remark that it was easy to understand why the organization had grown so rapidly after hearing Mr. Neff speak. Mr. Neff urged the attendance of each exhibitor at the Chicago Convention.

After the speech making, the next thing in order was the adoption of the revised constitution. A motion was offered by J. J. Rieder of Jackson, National treasurer, that the sense of the convention was that the legislature pass a law whereby the Governor of the State shall appoint a Censor Board and that those appointed upon the Board should be appointed on account of their fitness to fill the position and not through or by reason of affiliation, or connected with any creed, ethics, financial or political interest; but that they should be able to answer all questions and be familiar with the motion picture business and cinematography and that their business, social and moral qualifications should be taken into consideration before appointment should be made. In other words, that no one should be placed on the Board except those who are qualified to serve upon a Censor Board to the best interest of the public at large and those engaged in the up-lift and promotion of cinematography. Provisions were made to secure a State organizer and it is proposed to push work until every exhibitor becomes a member of the organization.

After the business session the following officers were elected to serve one year:

President—Mr. Carl Ray, Muskegon, Mich.
Vice-President—B. L. Converse, Owosso, Mich.
Second Vice-President—J. J. Rieder, Jackson, Mich.
Third Vice-President—G. R. Durkins, Saginaw, Mich.
Secretary—W. Lester Levy, Detroit, Mich.
Treasurer—H. F. Fowser, Lansing, Mich.

Mr. Carl Ray was called to the chair to assume his official duties during the convention after his election.

Mr. B. L. Converse, Owosso, was elected National vice-president.

The following members were elected delegates to attend the Chicago Convention:

Carl Ray, Muskegon, Mich.
Peter J. Jeup, Detroit, Mich.
W. J. Carroll, Jackson, Mich.
Alternates:—
A. L. Brown, Lansing.
G. C. Nichols, Grand Rapids.
R. P. Leahy, Bay City, Mich.

The next annual meeting will be held in Saginaw on the 8th and 9th of July, 1913. When it came time to select the next place of meeting, Bay City, Jackson, and Saginaw made a bid for the convention. Saginaw won out by a majority of one vote.

C. A. Anderson, of Chicago, first vice-president, Illinois League, one of Chicago's most earnest representatives, who was the first to call the Chicago exhibitors together in a meeting, is in attendance at the convention. He is enthusiastic over the coming convention at Chicago and predicts a large gathering. He is a splendid mixer and is doing fine work for Chicago. Mr. Anderson has his own light-plant and in many respects it is the only one of the kind in Chicago. He seems to never tire of telling the grand time the exhibitors will have at the big Chicago National Convention.

Chicago is to be congratulated on having so enthusiastic a representative as Mr. Anderson. The newly elected officers are enthusiastic and are starting with the determination of showing the rest of the States how strong Michigan will be within the next few months.

Last night J. J. Rieder and several exhibitors arrived and found the hotels packed. They had to look around some time before they could secure lodging. The town is full of exhibitors and the doctors are having their State Convention here at the same time.

Mr. Carl Ray, the newly elected president, owns four theatres here in Muskegon and there is only one other theatre in the city. Mr. Converse, elected first vice-president, is an untiring worker, full of enthusiasm, good council and the right man in the right place. The delegate, Mr. Carroll, of Jackson, is an untiring worker in the interest of the League. Peter J. Jeup, who has served his term for one year, was renominated, but declined the nomination. Mr. Jeup, at the Orpheum Theatre, was presented by the League with a beautiful token (diamond ring) of the high esteem in which he is held by the Michigan League. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Neff. Mr. Jeup was very much pleased to receive the present and was very much surprised, as it was kept a secret from him until Mr. Neff presented it.

The badger fight which took place at the convention hall, Orpheum Theatre after the regular vaudeville performance was over, was very interesting and exciting. Mr. C. Ray had several large bets in real money. He took all bets that were offered him that the dog would whip the badger. Money was being bet $5, $10 and $20 at a time. Peter J. Jeup was master of ceremonies, and Mr. Hans A. Abt, chemist, representing the Edgar A. Murphy Co., insecticides and disinfectants, 80 Badgley avenue, Detroit, was the referee. Mr. Ray supplied Mr. Abt with a large pair of gloves and had his feet, legs and arms wrapped with large pieces of canvas so that the badger could not bite him when the dog would be taking liberties with the badger, as it was Mr. Abt's business to see that the dog and badger were separated when time was called. When the excitement grew at its height Mr. Ray gave the word for Mr. Abt to pull the string that was tied to the badger so that the badger would get out of the box in a hurry and be ready for the combat. Mr. Abt was so nervous and excited when he pulled the string, he ran behind the scenery and caused much confusion and the badger was almost thrown over the footlights. A large number of exhibitors were in attendance and quite a number of local citizens went to see this grand fight. Many ladies were in attendance and enjoyed the fight very much. Of course, the badger getting broke as he was pulled out, could not put up a very strong battle and the dog was declared the winner of the battle and Mr. Ray won all the money.

July 11, 1912

Convention called to order at 10 o'clock. In session until 12 o'clock. Large amount of business transacted. After the convention adjourned automobile rides were taken to the boat and a band of forty pieces escorted them where they were wined, dined, and fanned by the cool, invigorating breeze of the grand old Lake Michigan. This convention will bear fruit like "bread cast upon the water." The good that will be done will be seen many days hence.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Neff for his assistance. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Carl Ray for the efficient manner in which he handled the convention.

Cincinnati Local Branch No. 2 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America met in Parlor F at the Sinton Hotel yesterday. M. A. Neff, president of the National League, was requested to preside by the local president, Mr. John J. Huss.

Forty-one members of the League were present. Several delegates were elected to attend the state convention to be held in Toledo on the 16th and 17th of July. Some of the prominent delegates that are going to Toledo are: M. A. Neff, J. J. Huss, Charles Beeching, Fred Schottmiller, William C. Kitt, F. A. Botts and Charles Sternberg.

A motion was carried to assist Mr. A. C. Dinglestedt to the full limit in securing a square deal in Norwood. Local Branch No. 2 has decided to extend to him their assistance in securing his commercial rights.

The motion picture exhibitors view with alarm the vicious practices of trying to put exhibitors out of business by unjust taxation and exorbitant licenses, and from now on they are going to demand their commercial rights.

Fifty league buttons and fifty badges to be worn at the Chicago convention and a large number of canes and pennants were ordered. A brass band will be hired, and the delegates from Cincinnati, Dayton, O., and Kentucky will join Cincinnati and go on a special train to Chicago.

A CALL TO NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS

President Sam H. Trigger and myself will devote the entire week beginning Monday, July 22d, to the work of strengthening the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the State of New York, by visiting six of the important cities of the state, and organizing them into locals. Later other sections will be visited until the entire state is thoroughly organized.

We cannot impress upon you, Mr. Exhibitor, too strongly, the importance of your helping us along with this work. Your welfare is our welfare, your enemies are our enemies; single handed, none of us are strong enough to combat the forces which are actively and constantly working for our undoing. It is only by a united effort on the part of every exhibitor, large or small, in the entire state, that even a particle of justice can be secured for us who have made the motion picture business our life work.

Important legislation will be introduced at the next session of the State Legislature, vitally affecting our mutual interests, perhaps our very existence. Are you willing to stand idly by and permit our foes to carry the day, or will you use that intelligence which you must surely possess to be a successful exhibitor, and see the wisdom of joining with your fellow exhibitors throughout the State, and present a solid front to the foe when the time for battle arrives.

The itinerary for the week will be as follows:

Monday, July 22—Utica.
Tuesday, July 23—Syracuse.
Wednesday, July 24—Rochester.
Thursday, July 25—Buffalo.
Friday, July 26—Elmira.
Saturday, July 27—Binghamton.

The local conventions will be held in the forenoon, so as not to interfere with business. All exhibitors in these cities and adjoining territory are urgently requested to attend. I will notify all exhibitors as to the exact time and place of meeting. If you fail to receive such notice it will be because we have not your name on our list, so kindly get in touch with some fellow exhibitor in your territory and get the particulars.

Trusting to meet you all, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

H. W. ROSENTHAL,
Secretary.

HAROLD W. ROSENTHAL

We present above a likeness of Harold W. Rosenthal, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York.

Mr. Rosenthal is a member of the firm of Tuppack & Rosenthal, who operate the Apollo Theatre at 368 East 149th street, west of Third avenue. They are also building a new up-to-date theatre on Southern Boulevard between 167th and Home streets, which will be completed in time for the regular fall season.

Beside Mr. Rosenthal's activity in the moving picture business, he devotes considerable of his time to the interests of the local Exhibitors' League, of which he is a member of the Board of Directors, and as secretary to the welfare of the State League.

Next week, with President Trigger, Mr. Rosenthal will make a tour of the principal cities of the state, organizing the exhibitors into various local leagues, and it is a foregone conclusion that nothing but success can await them.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—J. Fieldman is removing his moving picture show from the Griffin building to Massonneau Hall.

Lebanon, N. H.—W. A. Wesley, of Gardner, Mass., has leased of Frank M. Greenough the moving picture establishment on Gates street, in the building known as Dreamland.

BUDDY AND HIS DOG
(Solax)

Buddy is a peculiar urchin. He is one of those little country boys who is willing to sacrifice his life for his pets. When he hears the legal edict that all dogs must have licenses before a certain day, with breaking heart Buddy begins to see visions of the time when he and his pet must part. He determines, however, to work hard and try to raise the money, but Buddy finds it difficult to raise money—enough to buy a license. So he writes the police and says:

"To the policeman who comes to shoot my dog cause I haven't the $2.50 to pay for his license. I got only $1.75 but honest I tried awful hard. I think that the law is bad to come and shoot my pet dog cause I love him very much so I will shoot the policeman that comes to shoot him. Thought I would tell you first.

Yours truly,

BUDDY SWEENEY.

"P. S.—If you would be good enough to take the $1.75 and let me keep Foxie till I get the rest and I will do anything for you.

"43 Pine Street."

Buddy's dog escapes the ban—in a very unique way.

GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL COMPANY VS. BIOGRAPH COMPANY

The application by the Greater New York Film Rental Company, headed by William Fox, for an injunction preventing the Biograph Company from terminating its contract to supply moving picture films, has been granted.

Mr. Fox's suit, filed on May 29th, charges a combination in restraint of trade and in contravention of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, and Judge Hand's temporary injunction was dated Saturday, July 13th. The Fox concern urged "pressing and absolute need" for its reuglar supply of films in fulfilment of its existing lincense agreement with the Motion Picture Patents Company, holding company for the subsidiaries' films, and Judge Hand observes that he grants the order to protect the complainant, which entails absolutely no hardship on the Biograph Company, "except a supposed humiliation at being obliged to furnish films."

EXHAUST AND VENTILATING FANS IN DEMAND

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports a splendid trade this season for his 110 and 220-volt 60-cycle reversible exhaust fans with speed controllers. These fans have the feature of being serviceable either as exhaust or blower fans. Mr. Hallberg has made special arrangements so he can make prompt shipments of these fans as well as the stationary and oscillating wall fans.

THE LITTLE ARTIST OF THE MARKET

By VIRGINIA WEST

Adapted from Edison Release

The boy was first discovered lying on his stomach beside his father, as he sat painting on the Riviera. The little bare feet waved up and down, up and down, with slow rhythm, and the bright eyes gazed intently at a paper before him upon which he drew with a crayon.

The child's father was an obscure and struggling artist who had come from the common people of Italy.

Something in the man's earnestness attracted the attention of the passers-by from time to time. But usually they stopped for only a second and passed on.

One day as the father and son were thus occupied a noted American architect with his wife and small son were strolling along the Riviera. The man was, like the others, attracted by the artist's air of earnestness, but unlike the others, when he had stopped he continued standing.

It was not, however, the artist who held the attention of the American so long, but the boy. He was drawing what seemed to be an ancient ruin. The result was somewhat crude, but showed marks of unmistakable genius.

The architect stood for so long that the painter looked up from his work.

"Your boy has great talent," said the American.

The Italian's face did not change its expression. He shook his head.

The American pointed to the child, "Good," he said with emphasis, "Good."

The artist nodded his head and smiled.

The architect and his wife and boy passed on, and in a short time the little artist was forgotten.

But the boy did not forget the look in the man's face when he had praised the childish effort. The American was the only person beside the child's father who had ever praised his work.

The little boy stored this praise and the memory of its giver away in a very special corner of his mind. And when, a year later, his father died, leaving him an orphan, and his uncle sent for him to come to New York, he was willing to go, in the hope that he would again see the strange American who had praised his drawing.

The child had never liked his uncle, for he was rough and coarse and his hands were dirty. The artistic soul of the little boy shrunk from this, but when he heard that the uncle wanted him to come to New York where he had a fruit store, little Joe thought of his critic and said he would go.

It was the last of April when Joe reached New York, so he didn't mind so very much sleeping in the cellar. Besides there was fruit there, and it smelled good if he wasn't allowed to eat it. It was pretty hard too, not to eat any when his stomach was not by any means as full as a little boy's stomach ought to be.

As the spring progressed the cellar was less unpleasant. Joe was usually very tired when night came, for his uncle kept him very busy all day, carrying boxes up and down the cellar steps, sorting fruit and sometimes delivering. But the boy managed to get pleasure out of his work. The fruit was beautiful and he liked to handle it. When he went to deliver goods he always kept his eyes open for the man he wanted most in the world to see.

One sorrow the little boy had which was very great. He had no crayon. He could manage to get a hold of bits of pencil but they would not make the bold beautiful lines he wanted. Often he lay awake at night wondering how he could save up pennies enough to buy a crayon. But somehow his plans never came to anything.

One day, when Joe was standing near his uncle, the man began to prepare for roasting peanuts. He opened a little door, and there, revealed to Joe's eyes were many little black sticks that looked just like crayon. He asked very quietly what they were. "Charcoal," said the man.

That night Joe couldn't sleep. Those beautiful black sticks danced before his eyes. Over and over he wondered if they would draw. He must know, he must.

Slowly, softly, he crept from his bed on the floor and climbed the rickety steps leading to the store above. As still as a little mouse he crept to the peanut roaster in the front of the store.

When he had opened the little compartment that held the charcoal, the child was almost afraid to touch it. Suppose, after all, it only looked like his father's crayon and wouldn't rub off at all?

Trembling, the boy put out his hand and touched the sticks of charcoal. Then by the light from the street he looked at his fingers. Joy unspeakable! It did rub off. And it had that same delicious feel when you rubbed your hands together.

In feverish excitement the child drew out a stick and closed the compartment.

He soon found an orange crate with a nice smooth end. Down on his knees he went. Anyone, seeing his face at that moment would have thought him kneeling in prayer.

A moment he hesitated, his eyes closed, then with sure, bold strokes he commenced drawing. He had known what he wanted to draw. His mind was filled with pictures of old, old buildings, ruins, and sometimes just a single column, the beautiful lines of which were indelibly stamped upon his brain.

When daylight began to break little Joe crept softly back to his cellar, a heavenly countenance on his face and grasped tight in his hand the stick of charcoal.

After that night, every smooth box that came into the fruit dealer's place, left it with a decoration on it.

Joe's uncle was one of a number of fruit dealers who sold their fruit to the peddlers as soon as it reached a certain stage of ripeness when they knew it would not keep if sold in small quantities from day to day.

As the summer advanced Joe was kept very busy sorting fruit. He didn't have time to run and play like the other children, and this lack of exercise together with the insufficient food and the bad air of the cellar was telling on him. His eyes were large and hollow and his cheeks thin and pale. He was very lonely and sometimes his hands would falter in his work of sorting fruit and his mind would wander back to sunny Italy where he was so happy and free and lived among such beautiful things.

Then his uncle would shake him roughly and tell him to get to work.

One day in the middle of the summer he was sitting at the top of his cellar steps when suddenly he heard a great uproar on the next street. Joe raised his head just as a big, boney dog cowered trembling against him. At that moment he heard the cry of "mad dog." He didn't know much English, but he had been in New York long enough to know what happened to a dog when a lot of excited men and boys got it into their heads that he was mad, and gave that cry.

As quick as a flash Joe seized the dog by the neck and dragged him into the cellar. The crowd went by, bent on murder, and ignorant of the fact that their victim was safe.

From that day all the love in the lonely little heart went out to the miserable looking dog and it was returned in full measure.

The cellar was the dog's home, and unknown to the boy's uncle and aunt he shared his already too-small portion of food with his new companion.

As autumn approached the cellar grew damper. It was only by keeping close to the stray dog that the boy could keep warm.

Gradually little Joe grew weaker. The dampness took deeper and deeper hold on his poor, frail body until at last, one morning he was not able to leave the cellar.

While all these things had been happning in the little Italian boy's life the American architect had continued to travel in European cities, until, in the late summer of little Joe's first year in America, he returned. But he returned a heart-broken man. His little son had died in Europe.

On his return to New York the architect found that he had been chosen to plan the building of the great exposition which was to take place in two years.

He tried to gather himself together and to get to work on his plans, but he seemed to have no inspiration—no idea of any kind. He could not concentrate long enough to decide what was the best line upon which to work.

One day he was walking idly along a street in the business section of the lower part of the city, stopping to look, now and then, at some building.

As he was standing near a curb a wagon drove up and stopped in front of him. He was about to move away when a voice said almost in his ear: "Wanta da sweeta da orange?"

"No," he said rather crossly, but as he made a movement as if to turn away he stopped still, staring before him at something on the man's wagon.

"Where did you get that?" he said, nodding toward the wagon.

"Comma from Californ, nica da sweet," answered the man.

"No, no," said the architect, "that box there—the one with the drawing. Who made the drawing?"

The Italian shrugged his shoulders and shook his head.

"Come, my man, you know where you got the box. Here's a dollar for you if you tell me where it was."

The peddler thought a moment deeply. Then his white teeth flashed in a smile and he said: "Toni, Houstona street, Seconda avenue.

The architect gave the man the dollar and hastened away.

He had seen in one of little Joe's drawings a great possibility. His one thought was to find out who made it.

Toni's place was soon found and the artist enquired for. At first the man appeared not to understand, but a second dollar bill persuaded him to acknowledge the existence of Joe.

"He vera seek," he told the architect, and showed him the way to the cellar.

There, on a pile of dirty, ragged bed clothes, lay the boy with the dog beside him.

In a moment they recognized each other. Toni explained how the little boy happened to be with him.

After much talking the architect persuaded the Italian to let him take Joe away with him.

"I will get him well and strong and make a great architect of him," he said. "If he stays here he will die."

At last the man consented and Joe was consulted.

"You taka da dog?"" he asked.

The architect said he would and the boy happily put himself into his benefactor's hands.

When Joe was on the way to recovery and the architect and his wife were hovering round him, anxious to do all in their power to please him, he was asked what he most wanted that he had not been promised.

The boy thought for a moment. "I draw her," he said.

He was handed pencil and paper and in a short time there appeared a most beautiful dog kennel.

"Dear little artist," said the architect, "your dog shall have just whatever you wish for him and you I shall make my very own son. You can have real crayons and paper and can draw as much as you wish. Will you like that, Joe?"

Joe nodded his head. Somehow the words wouldn't came. Then he closed his eyes to cover the happy tears that were bound to gather beneath his lids.

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan

Auxiliary Local 35, I. A. T. S. E.

OFFICERS

President—Frank Brennan.
Vice-president—Robert Goldblatt.
Financial Secretary—Gus Durkin.
Recording Secretary—Sydney Dignon.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Willie Cohen.
Business Agent—Henry Weinberger.

The Auxiliary meets at Teutonia Hall, No. 66 Essex street, the first and third Monday of every month at 12 o'clock midnight. Dues can be paid to Brother Weinberger at the Union Office, No. 133 Third avenue, or to Gus Durkin, care of Berkeley Theatre, No. 19 West Forty-fourth street.

Brothers, for some time past quite a number of you have been asking why we did not have any information on projection in our "Chat Column," and I have tried several times to tell you why, but some of the brothers forget too quickly, so I am going to ask you, each and every one, to send a few questions on anything at all in the projection line and it will be answered in the "Chat Column."

* * * *

I have received several letters from brother members who are working in poorly ventilated operating rooms and I want to tell you, brothers, that these have been put into the hands of the proper authorities and I believe this matter will be taken up immediately.

* * * *

Brothers, don't forget to be at our next regular meeting on Monday night, August 5, 1912, at Teutonic Hall, 66 Essex street, as that is the place you will hear the real and true report from the Convention. Don't forget the date, as this is of the greatest importance to each and every member of the Operators' Union.

* * * *

I took a trip to Coney Island a short time ago, just to see how the boys were getting along, and believe me, I saw some excellent projection in quite a number of places, and pretty rotten in others. I also saw quite a number of new wrinkles (at least they were new to me). One of them was having the theatre lit up with red and green lights, making a very pretty effect without seeming to affect the brilliancy of the picture in any way. At the following places the projection was very good:

Sparta Hall, Brothers Gunshor & Debella.
Numans Hotel, Jack Donnelly.
Stauch's, Al Smith.
Brooklyn Hall, Frank De Arrestea.
Weisberger's Hotel, Brothers Harvey & Batchelor.

* * * *

New York T. M. A. will hold their picnic and games at Boynton Beach, on the Jersey coast. Rain or shine, Steamer Apollo and Barge Starina leaves West Twenty-third street, North River, at 10 a. m. sharp. Delightful sail through the Kill van Kull. Music by Military Band and orchestra. Baseball game, New York Lodge vs. Jersey City Lodge; chorus girls' foot race and swimming contest. Arrangement committee: Brother Y. C. Boylan, chairman; J. E. Eakins, treasurer. Tickets without the seal of the association are fraudulent on Tuesday, August 6, 1912.

* * * *

Anyone requiring the services of competent operators for city or out of town work can have same by letting me know, in an hour's time.

* * * *

The increase in the license fee for moving picture machines has been followed by a material reduction in the number of licenses taken out by theatre proprietors. The number issued to date is 242, or about 60 less than last year's total. In a number of cases where two machines were in operation, giving a continuous show, the higher license fee has resulted in the theatre proprietor removing one of them. It has also meant the closing of a few theatres in small towns.

The changed definition of "film exchange" which brings the "film peddler" who moved from place to place giving exhibitions, under that heading has also reduced the number of machine licenses.

The higher license fee for operators reduced the numbers of that "profession," 260 being issued in addition to 57 apprentice licenses. The latter are issued for six months. After the applicant has satisfied Inspector Newman that he is qualified to operate a machine an operator's license is issued.

FILM MAN IN TROUBLE

Chester M. Freeman, of No. 55 Heller Parkway, Newark, was arrested at his home to-day on a warrant charging him with being a fugitive from justice. He is wanted in Troy, N. Y., where he was indicted on a charge of grand larceny, made by Margaret Jones.

The indictment followed the failure of the United States Film Company, of which Freeman was president. It is alleged that Freeman appropriated 214 rolls of moving picture films, valued at $1,500, which were the property of the company. A partner of Freeman's by the name of Milligan was arrested in this city recently on a charge arising out of the same transaction and was held in $4,000 bail.

kota Shokai, in addition to manufacturing 150,000 feet of Japanese films every year, imports 250,000 feet from American, French and English manufacturers.

Subjects Favored—New Halls Being Opened

The most popular kinds of pictures in Japan are pictures portraying: (1) Heroism, e. g., the story of a warrior fighting for righteousness; (2) pathos, e. g., the story of a son whose father has lost all his fortune and who strives hard, enduring many difficulties, to support and help his father; (3) magic; (4) comedy; (5) educational; (6) scenic. The kinds of films that are not welcomed in this country are: (1) Love affairs; (2) pictures of policemen or Government officers fooled or mocked by the people; (3) pictures which instill revolutionary ideas in the heart of the youth.

It seems to be the opinion here that American films are satisfactory as to quality of the film, but that the actors are inferior to those of other countries, especially as regards comedy and magic.

Numerous trade opportunities are being continually offered to this trade in Japan, and recently plans have been formed to utilize the foreign amusement hall in Yokohama as a cinematograph theatre, leasing the films from a Manila agency. Japanese motion picture halls are being opened in great numbers and all must be supplied with machines and films, and so far as the films are concerned a majority of these must be supplied from abroad.

EXHIBITORS' NOTES

Says the Macon, Ga., Telegraph:

"A meeting which had long been needed in the southern part of Georgia was held in Macon on June 18th, and the results obtained were as good as could be expected. The object of the meeting was one of many colors. First was the cause to bring a move before the body to have the next body of the legislature remove the royalty or tax from the exhibitors, namely $10 per month, on motion pictures. The next and a very important move was to bring the exhibitors of Georgia closer together in one grand move to upbuild the motion pictures of to-day, and to get more educational films before the public.

"The exhibitors may organize in order to bring about a closer relationship between each other. The public to-day likes and wants better pictures, better acts and better singers, and managers must organize to help in that grand march to bring about the desired results.

* * * *

The dispute as to the ownership of the rights to the motion pictures of "The Miracle" still rages. William Hammerstein asserts that he has the first right to them and that they will be shown on the Victoria Roof in September, despite A. H. Wood's denial. Mr. Woods also claims the pictures.

CARL LAEMMLE

Our old friend, Carl Laemmle, sailed for Europe on the Lusitania, Tuesday, July 16th, to take a very much needed rest. What the various enterprises that Mr. Laemmle is connected with, notably the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, The World's Best Film Company of Chicago and New York, The Paul Rainey's African Hunt Company of New York, and the Imp Films Company, New York, will do without their energetic head is hard to contemplate. However, all the various industries that he owns are left in very capable hands. We wish Carl Laemmle "bon voyage."

"A PHANTOM OF THE NIGHT"
Gaumont release Aug. 8th.

"DREAM DRIVEN"
Gaumont release Aug. 13th.

FOREIGN CONSULAR REPORTS—MOVING PICTURES ABROAD

ENGLAND.

(From Vice-Consul Rice K. Evans, Sheffield.)

Sheffield has 17 cinematograph theaters, whose total intake is about $7,300 per week. It is estimated that they expend an average of $1,460 a week in the rental of films.

Films are imported by the manufacturers' agents located in London, by whom they are exhibited to managers of cinematograph houses. Some weeks before the release date they are bought by film-renting firms at an average price of 4d. (8 cents) per foot. These renting firms then offer them at auction to the playhouse managers at various prices per week rental. So keen has the competition in these auction sales become that the price of films has advanced 100 per cent within the last year or so, during which period the manufacturer's price has not risen at all. Houses of good financial standing pay quarterly for the films received; others pay on receipt of goods.

It is estimated that the life of a film is five to six weeks' running. Of course, they are run much longer, but they deteriorate with use. This, together with the keen competition for the newest goods, makes a difference of 20 per cent between the price for the first run and the second run; 15 between the second and third run; and so on down as the film is more used and becomes more generally known. It is said to be quite the usual thing for a film to go out on its seventh run at a rental of 50 per cent less than it brought on its first time out.

The Middleman's Profits—Subjects.

It is said that a film that goes out six times nets the middleman who bought it from the makers 100 to 150 per cent. Hence the managers would gladly do away with the middleman and rent direct from the agents.

More than 60 per cent of the films used in this city are American. Italian films come next, amounting to about 15 per cent; the French 10 per cent, and British-made films 6 or 7 per cent. The reason given for the popularity of the American-made film is not that the photography is any better, but rather that the subject matter at present suits the popular taste. The American film generally portrays the so-called western drama, with stirring, forceful action, put on in the open. The French films tend more toward the comic, with close work, where facial expression and detail count. In the field of historical subjects in color the French makers easily excel. The Italian films have come on rapidly during the last year. In photography they are easily equal to the best, and in subject matter they are pioneering a new field, viz., weaving a minor plot about stirring historical events. They are also producing a class of very popular pictures dealing with actual events, where the action is rapid and exciting, as, for instance, swimming Italian cavalry horses.

The greatest advance, however, as far as the British market is concerned, has been made by the British manufacturers. Their photography has improved, and their subject matter is of the higher level, which the cinematograph shows are approaching. In a broad way it may be said the English makers are tending toward the military drama, maneuvers, and street scenes, and are generally along a high plane in that they educate and enlighten.

Changing Demands of Moving Picture Audiences.

Five years ago the popular film was the home drama, where the action was built on a purely fictitious plot. Roughly speaking, two years ago the American cowboy came on the stage and rapidly became the popular hero of the moving picture palaces. His erstwhile favor is now somewhat on the wane, and, though no bill is complete without him, he is not to-day the popular idol that he was six months ago. More and more is there a demand for real people and real things. Managers confidently state that the day is coming when the tragedies of history as subject matter will supersede entirely the mythical battles of the cowboys and "bad men" of the western plains, and the moving-picture entertainments of the future will run more and more to the educational and instructive. To-day a manager considers a bill incomplete if it does not include at least one scientific film, such as a set of pictures dealing with bird or animal life, industrial or commercial welfare.

In many picture houses films entitled "The Happenings of the Week" are now shown. These features were at first rather undervalued, but their popularity has so grown that now no manager can afford to omit them. The subjects are the political, social, and other news events of the week just passed, and the moving picture public has come to enjoy seeing their newspaper stories of yesterday enacted on the screen.

JAPAN.

(From Deputy Consul General F. R. Eldridge, Jr., Yokohama.)

Moving pictures are very popular in Japan. Once established, the business has continued to increase, and each year has witnessed the expansion of the enterprise.

Up to the present time most of the machines in use in Japan have been imported, although recently the manufacture was inaugurated on a very small scale. The chief virtue of these domestic-made machines seems to be their cheapness. One company, the Japan Cinematograph Co., manufactures a machine complete for $45. The cost is distributed as follows: Main lantern, $22.50; 3 to 5-inch lens, $2.50; arc lamp, gas tank, and all other appliances, $20.

That these machines are unsatisfactory is evidenced by their scarcity and the continued importation of foreign-made machines. Germany comes first as an exporter of cinematographs to Japan, followed by France, England, Italy and the United States. The makes imported have been New Urban "P. P.," Pathé's Reliable, Gaumont's M. C. Chromo, and the Edison.

Criticism of American Machines—Film Imports.

In commenting upon the American machines, one large importer states:

So far as the exhibition of the pictures on the canvas is concerned, the American machines do just as well as any other make, but they have the defect of wearing out the films much more quickly. Being a great manufacturing nation, we are sure that the United States can produce just as good machines as any other country; and if they are made cheaply enough they can be sold in great numbers in this country, for we alone can take at least 60 of them a year.

Of the 83 moving-picture halls in Japan 42 are owned by Pathé & Co. The number of halls in operation is increasing almost 50 per cent a year, but how long this ratio will be maintained it is hard to predict. In addition to the regularly established halls there are numerous traveling companies which visit the halls in the country districts about once every six weeks, generally exhibiting two days in each place.

There are nearly 2,000,000 feet of moving picture films imported into Japan every year. The imports of Pathé & Co. in 1910 were divided as follows: United States, 720,000 feet, both negative and positive, from the Eastman Co.; France, 72,000 feet, tinted and untinted; Italy, 60,000 feet, from Itara & Co.; 36,000 feet of Ambrosio films, and 36,000 feet of Mirano films, all untinted; Great Britain, 36,000 feet, from Urban Trading Co.

POSTER CRITICISM

The Solax Art Posters Defended—Much Better than Ordinary "Still" Picture Enlargements

The Solax Company's line of posters breaks away from the ordinary run. Their scheme is not to use an enlarged "still" picture, but incorporate in their lithographs a general scheme or a combination of artistic values which in total brings out the central theme of the pictureplay. At times human passions such as avarice or sensuality or criminality is represented—not by compromising poses, "give me those papers" or the flash of a big Colt gun, but these situations are represented in a more subtle manner.

REPRODUCTION OF ONE OF SOLAX ART POSTERS

As an example, in the production "The Call of the Rose," the poster shows a white rose of purity, a snake trying to poison the petals of the rose, a gentle girl extending her arms longingly, and her expression of anguish shows that she is suffering because a "snake" is trying to poison the purity of her existence and get in between herself and her husband.

In another poster, for the production "Father and the Boys," we see a typical soubrette dangling by a string an elderly man and his two sons. It is very evident from the poster that the soubrette has "Father and the Boys" on a String. In "Fra Diavolo," one of the sheets shows an arm. decked with jewels, and a pair of fierce looking eyes casting greedy and covetous glances at the pewel-bedecked hand. This, of course, is really the central idea in "Fra Diavolo"—the bandit's passion for pelf.

Yet Solax efforts to be original has aroused a degree of criticism from some sources.

Recently an exchange manager reported to the company that one of his customers objected to the line of "fake posters" the Solax Company was circulating on the market. The exhibitor took the stand that he and his patrons are mislead by posters showing a scene or an object that is not seen in the picture. The exhibitor maintained that such practices hurt the industry and had a tendency to arouse distrust. The poster problem is a difficult one to solve and it is still more difficult to make the solution satisfactory to all. None of the manufacturers are giving posters the attention they deserve. The last thing some of the manufacturers think of is the poster, and then they hurriedly rush to the lithographers some indifferent "still" picture taken perhaps by an indifferent and lazy camera man, and a director who doesn't understand a "still's" advertising value. With directors, "still" pictures are always an afterthought. Often when they do pose a "still" picture, the result rarely tells a story by itself, nor does it excite curiosity—which is the governing theory of posters. If it wasn't the object to help exhibitors to excite the curiosity of the passerby, manufacturers would not get out a poster and thus save nearly two hundred a week.

The Solax Company would like to hear from exhibitors and other interested persons relative to this subject.

Schuylkill, Pa.—D. M. Wagner is remodelling his theatre.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A moving picture theatre will be erected at Fiftieth street and Fifth avenue.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Plans for the erection of a new moving picture theatre at Sixth avenue and Fifty-seventh street were filed in the Building Department.

Red Bank, N. J.—Permit has been granted to Charles Morris and Henry G. Hecht for the erection of a moving picture show on the beach front.

Canton, Ohio.—H. H. Timkin is erecting a larger theater at the corner of Tuscarawas and Rex streets.

Lewiston, Maine.—A new moving picture show will open directly.

North Adams, Mass.—The Columbia Theatre will open shortly.

Troy, N. Y.—Permit was granted for the opening of a moving picture theatre in the building at 3025 Sixth avenue by Edwin O. Desrochers.

"A Midnight Encounter"

"Marriage on the Run"

"Love's Serenade"

THREE COMING GAUMONT RELEASES

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Even Dame Fashion makes obeisance to Pictureland. Filmy garments are now a la mode.

Ralph P. Stoddard, editor of the Photoplay Page of the Cleveland Sunday Leader, commends department editors of moving picture journals for exposing the scrip "schools." He urges all beginners to read the picture-play journals. He knows what he is talking about, too.

* * * *

Our apologies to Woodrow Wilson. After his nomination he willingly posed for the moving picture camera at the "Little White House" at Sea Girt, N. J. Woodrow received bureau clippings of our remarks on his position as outlined to a Sandusky exhibitor and he experienced a change of heart. All right, Governor, we are willing to let bygones be bygones.

* * * *

The moving picture camera is to be the final arbiter as to whom was the real winner of the Wolgast-Rivers prizefight last Fourth of July. While not favoring fight films, we confess that we would like to be satisfied in our own mind as to the victor, so that sport pages of the newspapers could turn to other subjects for space fillers. Thus will the pictures confer another boon.

* * * *

Twenty miles of new films is produced in America in a single week. This does not include the chase scenes, which have more length than breadth. Total box office receipts from moving pictures are estimated at more than $300,000,000. No wonder the theatrical syndicate is sitting up and taking notice.

* * * *

An item is going the rounds stating that the Nestor Film Company is circulating free copies of "penny dreadfuls in order to foster the popularity of Wild West photoplays. We hope that this story is another of irresponsible origin and that it is not true. The minds of many small boys have been inflamed by dime novels, and to connect these blood and thunder stories with cinematography is ill advised. It will give the "reformers" so-called, another opportunity to howl. Young America is better situated at the moving picture theatre enjoying a conservative Western picture containing a good moral lesson, than back of the barn devouring the adventures of "Deamon Dave." However, the sensational Western photoplay is no better than the "penny dreadfuls" and both should be tabooed. Neither has a place in the education of the young.

* * * *

Kalem's multiple reel production of "The Life of Christ" will soon be released. Every scene of this remarkable subject was taken in the authentic locations in Egypt and the Holy Land where the Biblical incidents occurred. It is believed that this release will advance the educational interest taken in moving pictures. Kalem's other Biblical subjects and scenes in Palestine will undoubtedly bring to the moving picture theatre a class of people not now considered moving picture enthusiasts. Kalem is to be commended for its endeavor to aid in the uplift of cinematography, and Kalem Bible pictures will be greatly appreciated by church and clergy. We have many inquiries from clergymen and others, active in religious circles, asking for information anent the Kalem Company's work in the Holy Land, and it has been our pleasure to reply at length to such letters informing the various pastors and others that Kalem can be depended upon to furnish historically correct and tactful productions of Biblical days.

* * * *

We are glad to note the improvement in the class of posters sent out with regular releases. Producers are evidently paying more attention to the poster subject and the sensational poster giving to passers-by an entirely wrong conception of the pictureplay being shown within the theatre, is becoming rare. It's a good thing. Many of those active in "crusading" against the moving picture have never visited a moving picture playhouse, but have conceived their ideas of the films from the blood-curdling posters so prominently displayed. Personally, we always took to the Vitagraph poster which gave real scenes from the playlet advertised and is printed in tasteful colors. Such posters have an air of refinement and conservatism which is in direct contrast, and an idea that will appeal to the discriminating picture fan who is becoming more and more numerous.

* * * *

While the social service workers attending the International Baptist Young People's Union at Toledo last week, endorsed a policy of providing church entertainments for young people that would "wrest public favor from moving picture shows and saloons," the Playground Association of Springfield, Ohio, completed plans to give moving picture entertainments twice weekly in public school buildings. The two cities are about one hundred miles apart. The endorsement of the Baptist Union has been given wide newspaper publicity because of the activity of the anti-moving-picture press agent. The Moving Picture News resents the coupling of moving pictures with saloons by the Baptist Union or any other Union. Moving pictures and saloons have nothing in common. Cinematography seeks to provide an hour's innocent amusement, educational and refined. The saloon seeks to provide questional entertainment, uneducational and unrefined. The moving picture is the saloon's most formidable enemy and, in many cities and towns, it has been the corner grog-shop politician who has been instrumental in keeping moving picture theatres closed on Sunday. The saloonkeeper says that picture shows hurt his business. Cinematography is the greatest temperance weapon existing in the civilized world today and the sooner certain of the narrow-minded discover this fact the sooner will they be enabled to successfully combat the liquor evil. We would like to see the Ohio Exhibitors League members at their Toledo meeting this month, administer a rebuke to the church organization that sees fit to class the moving picture and the saloon as joint evils.

* * * *

The descriptive list advertised for a sale of films at Turin, Italy, recently contained the following:

"The Nose of Cretinelli" (eighty yards long); "Eternal Love" (lasts about fifteen minutes); "The Solitary Worm" (about 170 yards); "Diogenes' Barrel" (cheap, but in excellent condition).

* * * *

We quite agree with the Kansas City jurist who has ruled that the wife up there who hasn't been to a show in twenty-three years must be taken to the picture theatre by her husband once a month hereafter—hang the expense. To be sure, the procedure of the Kansas court may seem to kind of pile up the cost of living. Granting this is true, however, and that in carrying out the judicial order the husband is shy ten cents every week above what his family operating expenses have heretofore been, the decision is nevertheless a wise as well as a humanitarian move.

The moving picture theatre once a week is none too much of a treat to give a good wife. We know bachelors who would, without a murmur, make it two and three performances every seven days for the sake of having a wife to treat so lavishly. The woman who is shown such consideration will doubtless repay her good man for the outlay by a greater exhibition of affection, shown in a myriad of ways. So the investment of a nickel or dime every week for his wife's pleasure—money thrown away it might seem at first thought—will, in reality, pay a handsome profit in tangible results, to say nothing of the feeling the husband will have of being a liberal spender and all-'round model man.

CHARLES HANFORD
Director of the Feature Film Manufacturing Co., of Washington, D. C.

MRS. CHARLES HANFORD
Member of the Feature Film Manufacturing Co., of Washington, D. C.

CHARLES HANFORD AS MOTION PICTURE DIRECTOR

Washington, D. C.

Another well-known actor of the legitimate stage has stepped into the motion picture arena. This is Charles Hanford, the Shakespearean tragedian, who only a year ago played Othello to Mantell's Iago. He has been secured as the director of the Feature Film Manufacturing Company, of this city, which is preparing to put out states rights propositions of several reels of the classics in a very pretentious manner. This company was recently incorporated with the following officers: President, Mr. B. V. Maxwell; vice-president, Mr. Barry Bulkley; secretary-treasurer, Mr. R. W. Bulkley, and general manager, Mr. H. M. Crandall. All of these are men well known in business and club circles of the city. Mr. Crandall, who has been connected with the motion picture industry for the past nine years, runs the finest equipped open air theatre in the national capital. The outlook is that the new company will be a big success.

Mr. Hanford, whose life has been spent with the Shakespearean and other classic dramas, is most enthusiastic over the work and pleasure in store for him. Few individual actors possess such an extensive outlay of scenery, props, accessories, together with costumes, as does Charles Hanford. All these will be placed at the disposal of the new company. The fact that the tragedian has always been particular about historical accuracy in his plays and paid great attention to the little points, will give to the productions which he will direct a fineness and exactness that few of the present manufacturers, who must of necessity improvise from one play the scenery for another, can boast of.

It is Mr. Hanford's desire to bring into prominence some of the details of the Shakespearean dramas which have heretofore only been touched upon by producers, but which lend much to the beauty of the plays. Scenes of thought and slow action will not be hurried over to get to one which dictates action. With his knowledge of pantomime, of passions and desires, he will make the mind speak as well as the hands. As far as possible he will insist upon the exact passages from the dramas being used, so that those who are familiar with the plays, as most people are with Shakespeare, may be able to follow the actor or actress. As Mr. Hanford has always been particular about enunciation from those connected with him, he will have a fine opportunity to bring out this especial point in the pictureplays of the classics.

Though this will be Mr. Hanford's first step into the motion picture as a business, he has employed it before in connection with his legitimate dramatic productions. This was several years ago in an elaborate revival of "Anthony and Cleopatra," when he preceded the play with a series of slides of Egypt and the Nile in the days of this famous queen, followed by several reels of that same country as it is to-day with the ruins of the past. "It was my purpose," said the actor, "to prepare the minds of my audiences for the play that was to follow, that they might the better absorb the atmosphere of that country so far removed from them at the time. Some of the theatre-goers and the critics thought this intervention a detraction and accused me of "introducing a novelty." I did it from an educational point of view, and since I won the approval of the students and professors, I was satisfied I had attained my end.

"I still have those reels, which I procured from England," he went on with a reminiscent smile, "and I still have the machine, which was the best in its day. I find the latter is rather antiquated, considering the improvements that have been made in motion picture machines in the past few years. The reels I had run off at a local theatre recently and I discovered the photography, though considered excellent then, is inferior to the work of to-day. Wonderful strides have been made since then."

Mr. Hanford has already organized his company, which will shortly be at work. He has already selected a large site in Washington that will permit of two stages, one at either end, so that pictures may be taken morning and afternoon. With his long acquaintance with the theatre, the Hanford productions should be of a very high order. Mrs. Hanford will assist her husband in directing and both will be seen in characters for which they have won public approval and plaudits on the legitimate stage.

Asked what he thought of the pictureplay, Mr. Hanford said: "The motion picture, whether educational, scenic, scientific or dramatic, has come to stay. It is working towards the highest aims and as such it should be encouraged. It should be given encouragement from the very best of arts, so that the mediocre will fall by the wayside, as it surely will, as has happened with all other enterprises. The public soon learns to be critical and demands and seeks only the best.

As a preservation of the dramatic arts of to-day for the future, the motion picture cannot be excelled, and to this end the best dramatic stars should give assistance. The pictureplay will not detract from such lights of the legitimate stage, but their popularity will be increased. It will, however, weed out the mediocre of the stage by making the masses attending the picture theatres capable of distinguishing between the good and bad acting. In this way a universally higher standard of dramatic art will be created—the motion picture producer will have to keep his company up to the top-notch, and so will the manager of the second-priced road shows. It will be my purpose to continue the underlying principle of educating, which has always dominated my work in the past, in the pictureplays that I shall direct."

WILLARD HOWE.

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Nestor

"The Little Moonshiner," Nestor's release for July 24, is fair. As the title would imply, the story centers around a whiskey still. The "little moonshiner" has a child's intuition regarding human nature, and displays at every opportunity her dislike to one for her sister's suitors, the villain of the play, who after the death of the distiller in order to gain the hand of his pretty daughter reveals the secret of the still hidden away in the mountains, blaming the deed on the real sweetheart of the girl. Eventually he himself falls in the trap set for another, and the story ends happily.

"Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit" is rather harum scarum, and is lacking in solidity of plot, though some excellent riding is exhibited.

Imp

"The Heart of a Gipsy," from Imp, is good. But why not give us a rough sea for a shipwreck scene instead of the millpond calmness too frequent in American pictures.

Powers

"Her Life's Story," from Powers, is a gem—a beautiful example of a noble character. Our only criticism on this picture is that it may be too full of sadness. Each scene is a picture in itself. Released July 19.

Champion

"The Call of the West," Champion, for July 22, is a well-rounded story with plenty of human interest. There is no particular jar in the production except where, in overjoy at an unexpected meeting, "Bill" and "Uncle Jim" forget themselves and hug each other like two silly girls. Gentlemen, please don't hug. This mode of joyful demonstration is not in vogue among manly males. Also remember that a picture to be pleasing must be true to life. Nevertheless this Champ is a good one minus the ridiculous hug.

Bison

"Dare Devil Dick Wins a Wife," Bison, for July 20, is a spicy production. "Dick" has the audience from the time he hits the stage.

"The Little Rancher," Bison, for July 23, is also commendable, but their release of the 20th puts one over it.

Eclair

"The Governor's Daughter," for July 23, is a well acted bit with a political tip that should hit it up to the mark at this time of national political ferment. Miss Tennant is to be commended on her dignified and pleasing portrayal of the "Governor's Daughter."

Solax

Solax offers a good laugh in "The Fourflush Actor," letting the audience at the same time into some of the secrets of the moving picture studio. Darwin Karr, Billy Quirk, and Mr. Fory show up well in this production.

This reel terminates with splendid views of the historic Moro Castle in Cuba, exterior and interior.

Reliance

"Grandpa" is a wholesome story in which the little Reliance child actor shows up to good advantage. The production, though not unusual, is good.

"Love Me, Love My Dog," release for July 20, is a good story whose title does not, however, tell the tale. One falls head over heels in love with Mister Doggie just the same in his role of one of the main actors in the pretty play. "Love Me, Love My Dog" will interest any audience, and has not a tiresome moment.

Gaumont

"Their Lives for Gold" is a splendid two-reel Gaumont production for release August 15, of which more will be heard in our next issue.

This week's issue of the Gaumont Weekly is of special interest. Among the interesting scenes culled from it are, "Regina Storm Swept," "The Young French Army," "Dancing the Big Muddy," "Paris Dog Show" (hand colored), "Prohibition Convention at Atlantic City," "Some Horse—Smallest in the World," "Good Old Dobbins Earns His Daily Oats." The latter shows a team of horses on a saw-log treadmill.

Milano Films

"The Triumph of Love," Milano release for July 20, is based on a mythological Pastoral legend, and is, we are sorry to say, one of the most ridiculously inaccurate of modern pretentious productions. The beautiful, barefooted, gracefully draped Diana of our dreams gets a sad jar when the large-nosed, sharp-featured, heavy-limbed type that is thrust upon us in the Milano production startles our disappointed eyes. She wears some sort of a tunic embroidered in a conventional design, also a skirt reaching scarcely below her knees and long leggings buttoned up the side. Her nymphs are for the most part fleshy maidens, and maybe some of them matrons, who flaunt about with clothing drawn so tight about abdomens as to add a decided tinge of vulgarity to the entire production. In this apparent attempt to modernize Diana and her nymphs, who, by the way, have ballet shoes on to execute a dance which in its demonstration is excellent comedy, the God of Love has joined the suffrage in sex as well as sentiment, and nothing but the bow and arrow, quiver, and newly sprouted wings remains to remind us of the Cupid of our dreams and of our loves. Diana's bath has taken flight from its mirrored woodland pool to a pretentious columned creation about which the fat nymphs in their blouse and skirted garb play before the amorous eyes of Atteon, who in concealment seeks his Lydia, also one of the sharp-featured, prominent-nosed type.

Well—enough said, but before quitting, will the Milano director please consult his book on the mythology of the ancient Greeks, take a stroll through the art galleries, and consult a competent maitress de ballet before attempting another production of this kind? The possibilities of the subject are such that a marvellously beautiful picture should have been the result.

Senator Brown has favorably reported to the Senate the Townsend bill amending the patent laws so as to limit the amount of the fines which may be assessed from "innocent infringers" in the case of moving picture films. The report says: "The new limitations do not operate as 'compulsory license.' They operate only in cases of innocent infringement. The protection terminates with notice, and thereafter the full arbitrary sums are recoverable. This fact and the great expense of making films, the right of the copyright proprietor to recover actual damages and profits, and the right to impound and destroy all infringing articles and all devices used in their production, are believed to be sufficient to induce the makers of films to continue to use all diligence to avoid any and all infringements."—Boston Transcript.

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

Below the Standard

George W. Terwilliger, editor Reliance Motion Pictures Company, has discovered many "new" writers and is himself an able and versatile writer. If a script merits $75 or $100 you will get that price for it. Terwilliger is a man of his word and has a circle of pictureplaywrights who are well satisfied to submit their work first for his consideration. He writes as follows:

> "Mr. Tony O'Sullivan and myself will handle the regular releases hereafter. You may say that the pictureplays we have been getting have been very far below the standard. I do not know how to explain this, except the majority of the best writers knew we were buying but little material the past few weeks. We are now in the market again and former prices quoted still prevail. We have just made arrangements with Mr. James Oliver Curwood for the rights to his 'Phillip Steele' stories. Mr. Curwood, as you know, is the author of 'The Honor of the Big Snows,' 'Flower of the North,' and 'Phillip Steele,' besides many short stories concerning the Northwestern Mounted Police. We will produce 'Phillip Steele,' in two reels. We intend to produce a two-reel subject once a month, and I am in the market for anything good along these lines. What we desire most of all, in one-reel subjects, are stories with exterior scenes that will permit their being taken here in the East. The majority of the pictures that have caused comment because of their exterior beauty have been those taken among wonderful Western scenery. I think we have some beautiful and unusual backgrounds right here in the East—and I want them! We have just produced a series of pictures around shipyards, boats, canal boats and city scenes, but I do not think we have yet reached the heart of the East. I find your department doing a good work in helping the pictureplaywright—and also the script editor."

Magazine Fiction

It is perhaps significant that Editor Terwillinger is turning to magazine fiction for film stories. Other editors are doing likewise, notably Edison, Selig, Bison, Nestor and Vitagraph. Bison and Nestor are using plots from Wild West yarns to a certain extent and the reason is that the "outside" writers are not supplying the demand. Mr. Terwillinger is in the market for two-reel and one-reel exterior subjects with Eastern locale. His prices are the best. A word to the wise is sufficient. Next week Epes Winthrop Sargent, critic and author, has promised to leave Epes Winthrop Sargent, Jr., long enough to give us his opinion on the present condition of the pictureplay market.

Wants Indian Stories

With its two Western companies, one in Santa Barbara and the other in Chicago, the American Film Mfg. Co. announces that it is in the market for some good Indian stories of one-reel length. Good prices will be paid for acceptable manuscripts. Writers are assured of courteous treatment from the American editor.

The Wrong Idea, Certainly

Mr. Matt Mereness, the Schoharie, N. Y., pictureplaywright, in whom we have taken great interest because of the fact that he has made good without the advantages of higher education, newspaper work, or studio study, writes the department as follows:

> "I received a letter from a script writer the other day who said he had read my last two communications to the News 'Plots and Plays' Department, and I take from his letter that he has a tonic idea as to my success, for which I am sorry. This writer has the wrong idea. He speaks of 'plot stealing,' of 'favored writers,' and says he don't believe all that he reads and what the 'inside men' write. He said he wanted to hear from one like myself who was writing from 'the outside.' Too many writers imagine they are going to sell four out of every five scripts they write. Right here is where the 'plot stealing' bug originates. When they don't sell, the writer feels discouraged and is ready to jump at any conclusion. They dream of easy money; things they will buy with this story money, from motor cars to steam yachts. They write with these visions in mind, perhaps four or five scripts weekly. Then this dream is shattered and the writer is ready to blame the script editor. Don't whisper 'plot stealing!' If you have an original idea, work it out logically if it takes a month. Work slowly, steadily and surely. Let the script get cold. Return to it later and consider it with an unprejudiced mind. Then see if such work does not spell success so much as any one can hope for by writing pictureplays. Do not believe the assertions of the 'universities' that you can make $50 weekly writing scripts. But believe what you read in the News and World and you can bank a thousand to one and win every time. I have learned a great deal from studying the News 'Plots and Plays' Department and ofttimes read between the lines with benefit. I am an 'outside writer' so much as anyone can be. I have been successful in my work, but I don't make my living at it. Enough has been said of 'plot stealing,' 'favored writers,' and every other delusion that tends to 'knock' the editor. When you can look at the profession optimistically, get down to business and write and write and write. Perseverance and optimism will win in the end."

Mr. Mereness is herewith accepted to membership in the Optimistic Club by President Powell.

You Are Wrong

To the few who by their communications have led us to think that they believe department editors "inside writers," and prejudiced in favor of the producers, we say: "You are wrong." There isn't a department editor of a trade journal in the field to-day that can be classed an "inside writer." These men, including the undersigned, are employed with explicit instructions to do their duty by the pictureplaywright without fear or favor. There isn't a department editor to-day who doesn't submit his pictureplays, when he writes them, just in the manner that the writer in Squedunk sends them in. When men like Thomas, "Spectator," and Sargent tell you to keep clear of "Schools," to forget the "plot stealing" idea; to study the pictures; to work hard and conscientiously; to pay no heed to the "favored writer" rumor, they are telling you the truth. These are all men of experience, otherwise they would not be employed in their present capacities. They are paid for their labor, not from film concerns, but from the editors of the various journals employing them. They are under no obligation in any way, shape or form to any of the film manufacturers; they take an interest in you, Mr. pictureplaywright, because they know your troubles—have experienced them all. When they write a script, they put it in the mail box and await its fate just as anxiously as you do. Of course, they are often successful because they are, without exception, pioneers in the profession, but their work also "misses fire" and is returned with the usual rejection slip. Mr., Mrs. and Miss Pictureplaywright, you should appreciate what the department editors are doing for you; they are looking after your welfare, earnestly, honestly and ably. As Mr. Mereness so tritely says: "When you see a pictureplay department statement in the News or other pictureplay publications you can bank a thousand to one that it is true." And when we repeat, that there are no "favorites" played among pictureplay department editors and that they are good, clean, honorable men, enthusiastic in their labors to advance the fortunes of the most humble pictureplaywright, we are telling only the truth. We know these men personally, and we also know what we are writing about. Otherwise, we would not be entrusted with this department.

Vitagraph Don'ts

The title of the Scenario Magazine will be changed with the July issue to The Photoplay Author. Editor Trudeau promises many improvements in his already bright journal, which comes monthly to our desk. One editorial pleases us. The magazine agrees with us in our attitude toward the "A. S. W. A." There is no need of a "protective association" of script writers because there is nothing to protect from an editorial standpoint. On the other hand, some writers need protection from "walking delegates" who endeavor to foster discord. By the way, what has become of the "A. S. W. A.?" Maybe our "Order of Optimists" has outclassed it. No dues and the password is "No Knocking." This great order and the "Use No Hooks" Club may hold a reunion at the fairgrounds next Fourth of July.

But we are wandering, Lucinda, wandering. To resume: Beta Breuil, editor Vitagraph Company, gives a special list of don'ts in the Scenario Magazine which should be heeded. Here are some of them:

Don't send us material from old books or poems which are out of copyright. We can write these up better than outsiders who do not know the business or requirements, so well as we, who are on the ground.

Give accurate address. Have your full name and address on the first page of the manuscript. We have a drawer full of photoplays for which we can find no owner.

Use the fewest and simplest words possible to describe a scene. Use commonsense in realizing what will and what will not "get over" if photographed.

Do not send us plays instead of photoplays. Do not write long letters of complaint to the editor. The editor is quick to find and encourage those playwrights whose ideas seem to suggest a future in this line. No matter how wonderful the writer of the photoplay may think his play is, it may not even be mediocre.

We do not want costume plays, fairy tales or nursery rhymes. We want strong, virile plots, with original or unusual business. Short and long light, society or farce comedies, and strong modern dramas. Western scripts are often available.

Pay heed to the wishes of Vitagraph. If Vitagraph accepts a script it means prompt and good payment.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT.

LUBIN'S No. 1 STOCK COMPANY LEAVE FOR PORTLAND

The No. 1 Lubin Stock Company, under the management of General Director Barry O'Neil, have left Philadelphia for Portland, Me., where they will spend the summer. The personnel of the troupe is as follows: Harry Myers, Charles Arthur, Peter Lang, Richard Morris, Martin J. Faust, M. Shannon Fife, "Cap." Towers, Paul Figel, P. J. McCaffrey, Barry O'Neil, Miss Ethel Clayton, Mrs. George W. Walters, Mrs. E. Middleton, Mrs. Florrie Lang, Miss Marie Wierman, Miss Anna Berry, Miss Bessie Stuart, Miss Mabel Harris, Miss Beatrice Oldfield, Miss Mildred Gregory, Mrs. Lynch and child, three carpenters, two property men, three chauffeurs. Three touring automobiles are carried and ten complete sets of interior scenery and props. The railroad equipment for the journey consists of two standard Pullman coaches, one day coach and three baggage cars. On arriving at Portland, the company will take possession of a large tract of land, a yacht and yawl, which have been chartered for the season.

Richmond, Ky., July 10, 1912.

Moving Picture News,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Please give a notice in your next issue to state right owners for Kentucky on such films as "St. George and the Dragon" and Nat Goodwin in "Oliver Twist," or Bernhardt in "Camille," to get in correspondence with the above theatre for a night's stand in our house while we are showing to capacity. Also make note that the Alhambra has just opened and are running three-reel pictures in a new and up-to-date house opened here June 19th.

Thanking you in advance, we are,

Very respectfully,
OLDHAM & CHENAULT.

NEWMAN MFG. CO. OPEN NEW YORK SHOWROOM

The Newman Manufacturing Company, with factory and main offices at 717-19-21 Sycamore street, Cincinnati, Ohio, who manufacture a large and complete line of brass easels, brass frames, brass rails and brass theatre fixtures of every description, and who are the largest manufacturers in the world of this particular line of goods, have leased a large and spacious showroom at Nos. 101-103 Fourth avenue between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, New York City. The same will be in charge of Messrs. S. Newman and E. Newman. Brass fixtures and announcement signs and brass goods of every description are on display, and goods will be carried in stock for immediate shipment.

Mr. Sam Newman, who is associated with his four sons in the business, established this concern in the year 1882, and originated brass theatre fixtures, which can be seen in nearly every city and town throughout the country. A cordial invitation is extended to exhibitors and managers throughout the country, either at their New York showrooms at 101 Fourth avenue, or at their main offices and factory in Cincinnati.

CLARA WILLIAMS

The above is an excellent picture of Clara Williams, the crack female rough rider of the Lubin Company. Miss Williams does not affect the dress or mannerisms of the cowboy girl; on the contrary, from her personality none would take her for a rider, but see her in a photoplay picture and she is a whirlwind. In a recent release, "It Happened in the Hills," the picture shows some riding that is terrific; a half-dozen of the Lubin cowboys are after her, but it is evident that she is outpacing them all. In mounting, her horse is off as soon as her foot touches the stirrup and is several paces ahead before the rider is settled in the saddle. Miss Williams, who plays the heroine of the story, has plenty to do in the picture and will be well remembered by those who see it for her handsome horsemanship.

WANTED

Competent Mechanic to Care for Machines, One Who Can Do Perforating.

Experienced Dark Room Men.

High Class Man to Edit Negatives and Positives.

Apply Evenings Only.

KINEMACOLOR COMPANY OF AMERICA

1600 Broadway, New York City

A gf A

Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative

AND

NON-FLAM POSITIVE

(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK

Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

OLIVER TWIST Charles Dickens' Masterpiece

IN FIVE REELS, FEATURING

NAT C. GOODWIN

A few good states left. State rights buyers take our tip and write or wire at once. Have you received our dope on "How to Buy a Feature Film"?

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.

145 West 45th Street, New York City

POWERS PHOTO-ENGRAVING CO.

The Fastest Engravers on Earth

154 NASSAU STREET

(Tribune Bldg.) NEW YORK CITY

OPEN DAY, NIGHT, SUNDAYS and HOLIDAYS

Phone 4200, 4201, 4202, 4203 } BEEKMAN

OUR CUTS ARE UNION MADE

New Process for Enlarging Half-Tones from Moving Picture Film

Independent Exhibitors

INCREASE YOUR ATTENDANCE
MAKE YOUR THEATER KNOWN
SECURE THE INTEREST OF YOUR PATRONS
HELP RAISE THE STANDARD OF THE WHOLE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

At No Cost To You

The Motion Picture Story Magazine is now printing Independent as well as Licensed Stories. Your patrons will want to read it. You can put it on sale at your theater at no risk to you.

We will ship you the magazine at ten cents per copy, cash in advance, giving you the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of ten cents each. This arrangement protects both you and us. We will send you slide and advertising matter free.

Thonsands of exhibitors are now increasing their attendance by the use of The Motion Picture Story Magazine. Send in your order today. You will be surprised at the result. Just fill out the blank below.

Date.....

The Motion Picture Story Magazine,
26 Court St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Inclosed please find $..... for which kindly send me—copies of the Motion Picture Story magazine for the month of ..... It is understood that I am to have the privilege of returning unsold copies and receiving a rebate of 10c. each.

Name .....

Street and No......

Theatre .....

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Tel. Oxford { 3790, 2187

Albu-Collodio (Wet Collodion) Lantern Slide Making

Copyrighted 1908 by Alfred H. Saunders. All Rights Reserved.

(Continued from issue of July 13)

A collodion filtering bottle, an eighth ounce collodion pouring bottle, an argentometer with test tube for silver bath, and the following chemicals:

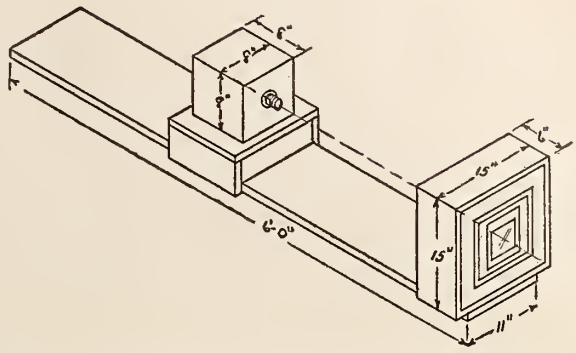
Glacial Acetic Acid 100 per cent	1 lb.
Acid Citric	1 oz.
" Nitric	1 oz.
" Pyrogallic	1 oz.
" Sulphuric	2 oz.
Alcohol Absolute	1 lb.
" 95 per cent	5 lbs.
Ammonium Iodide	1 oz.
" Bromide	1 oz.
Baryta Nitrate	2 oz.
Copper Sulphate	2 oz.
Cadmium Iodide	1 oz.
Collodion Medical	5 lbs.
Ether Sulphuric	½ lb.
Iron Protosulphate	2 lbs.
Mercury Bichloride	1 oz.
Platinum Bichloride	½ oz.
Potassium Cyanide	½ lb.
" Iodide	1 oz.
Potassium Sulphuret	2 lbs.
" Ferricyanide	½ oz.
" Bromide	1 oz.
Iodine	2 oz.
Sodium Sulphate	2 oz.
" Sulphite	2 oz.
Silver Nitrate	½ lb.
Uranium Nitrate	2 oz.
Varnish, best white hard	1 pt.

Water distilled or boiled and filtered, demijohn, funnel glass, bundle filter paper 10 in., 1 book blue litmus paper, 1 red, do., ½ lb. absorbent wool, 1 oz. union cotton, 2 enameled trays 14 x 16 graduates, beakers, stirring rods (glass), a case of cut glass (3¼ x 4), and four drying racks holding 36 slides each.

The quantities of chemicals given above are sufficient to make 1,000 to 1,500 slides, and may be reduced by one-half except the silver nitrate. We always advocate full baths of silver, as they tend to cleaner working and do not get out of order so quickly as smaller quantities.

If the reader is handy with tools an item of expense may now be saved; if not, get a jobbing carpenter to make a box without lid or bottom fifteen inches square and six deep (outside measure). Attach this to one end of a board eight feet long by eleven wide by one thick, tongued at each end and stayed in middle underneath, to prevent warping; fit a nest of carriers to outer end of box, from 10 x 12 down to 3¼ x 4¼, if the nest of carriers is made in a circular swing it will improve matters. Sometimes it is necessary to tilt the negative to one side or end. An elevated stage with runners on each side of board will center camera and keep it square with negative.

The following sketch will make our meaning clearer:



When a dark cloth is tacked on top and two sides of box, and carried over camera, the apparatus is ready and if a bench similar to half of a carpenter's bench is made and the above hinged on to one end, the upper part can be canted to any desired angle and pointed to the sky or window.

All the above may seem crude, but it is economical, and we have done some fine work with one of a series of twenty in studio. If our readers prefer to invest in, or already possess a ten by twelve, copying enlarging and reducing camera (or a size suitable to the negatives they use), by all means use it, and save a lot of trouble.

Presuming the foregoing apparatus and chemicals are acquired, we will turn our attention to the dark room. Those who have never used or seen a wet plate dark room will be surprised at the amount of light permissable. If it is a window simply cover it with orange fabric, if any aspect other than north; if north canary fabric is all that is required; if there is no window, an ordinary kerosene lamp for the bedroom, with an inverted yellow paper shade will answer; if electric light, tie a piece of grocer's wrapping paper over the bulb and there you are. A good supply of water is necessary, and the same precautions as to sediment are to be observed as for washing prints.

Now we are ready to begin. Into one of the enameled trays, pour water till it is ¾ full. Add to this 2 or 3 oz. nitric acid. This is our pickle (it may be kept in an earthenware pan, such as mother uses for baking). Into this drop one by one sufficient glass that we need, say six dozen pieces, and let it saturate the grease off and make the glass chemically clean. While this is going on, we will prepare our albumen. Take an egg (strictly fresh), break shell and drop contents into a beater or graduate, without breaking the yolk. Having accomplished this, next separate the white into a bottle (20 oz.), taking care no yolk follows. Add water 16 oz., and shake well until all the albumen is broken up and mixed with the water as much as it will. Return to a graduate washout bottle, or filter from this into another absolutely clean. A pledget of cotton wool or filter paper can be used, both answer well. After filtration it may be diluted to three times its bulk with water. Distilled water is best for this. We are now ready to albumenize the glass in pickle. Take a plug of cotton wool to act as a swab, and lifting a square of glass, well rub both sides in the pickle, then well rinse under the faucet both sides; now take a beaker, in which the albumen has been poured without bubbles, and hold the edge on the glass. Gently pour a stream of albumen over, seeing that the whole is covered, then place it into a wood draining rack to dry. Repeat until the whole are finished, taking care to mark the rack FRONT and keep the albuminized side that way.

N. B. Don't use the rack for anything else but albuminizing.

(To be continued)

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., July 15.—We have been congratulating ourselves all along that the fates have been exceptionally kind to this resort in giving the city the coolest spring and early summer that it has ever enjoyed, but probably we were boasting a little too much, for "Old Sol" has been blistering us to a frazzle. Gee, but it's hot here!

I merely mention the weather to show our love for motion photography, for in spite of the intense heat, the theatres where the silent comedies and dramas and travelogue reels are being shown continue to do a big business. The Photoplay Theatre, with its excellent run of first-class Independent material, isn't big enough to accommodate the crowd, and up at the New Central, the biggest picture house in the city—that is, a house devoted exclusively to pictures—they are asking before they enter: "Are there any vacant seats?" The general public of the city crys for pictures the same as children are said to let a yelp out of them for Mrs. Soothlow's Westing Syrup."

Park's Business Big

Business at Whittington Park, which hadn't been up to the standard, owing to the cool nights, has taken a decided brace, and I hear that the management intends to build a natitorium, where the "dear peepul" may take a dip after a day's hard work trying to keep cool. The main attraction in the vaudeville line there the past week was "Daredevil" Chick Wolworth, conceded to be the most daring roller skate artist now before the public, and I guess he is. I have seen a number of 'em, but Chick gets the blue ribbon, for he does on roller skates what many acrobats would not attempt "unshod." And he's a Hot Springs boy, too, which probably accounts for it. Dave Vanfield, the juggling fiend, the man who is said to juggle everything but the truth, is the big card there this week, and Dave, I hear, is some tossing lad. There is one youngster there at the Park who is booked indefinitely, owing to his voice and the manner in which he handles his songs, and that is Jack Connors. His tones are a treat to listen to. This week Jack is singing "At the Cathedral Door" and "I Miss You Most at Twilight."

"S. R. O." at Airdrome

The Airdrome is hanging out the "S. R. O." sign and Jack Bessey is holding forth there with a big company. Albert Taylor, who opened the Airdrome this season when we were wearing fur-lined overcoats and carrying individual oil stoves to keep warm, came back to cut into the summer receipts and took away a nice piece of change for the last half of the week. His company was good.

"Sterie" Puts One Over.

I am glad to see the Princess doing such a nice business. The house is not using vaudeville but straight pictures during the summer. They, too, are getting first run Independent material and they can thank a local newspaper boy for it, too, Brother Stevens, city editor of the Sentinel Record. "Stevie" is acting as publicity promoter for the pictures at the Princess. He didn't know what a first run reel was until he took to noticing the frights that were being sent the Princess when the house first started to use the "movies," and then he got to reading the Moving Picture News, and he noted the date of release of various films, and he saw that his friends were paying a big price for something the exchange should have been ashamed to lay claim to, and he wrote several letters for his friends, signing at their request their names—and "Stevie" can write, believe me. It's a wonder the postal authorities did not have him arrested for sending inflammable material through the mails, but he got results, so what t'ell, Bill. They tell me a certain big exchange in St. Louis just shivers and shakes every time a Princess envelope is delivered, for they think that it's an expression from "Stevie" as to what he considers their pictures like. I had the same kind of trouble with the same house when I had the old Lyceum and Orpheum, so I can appreciate what my colleague here is up against, but it's remarkable how the first indication of loss of business will bring the biggest boy in the place around, isn't it? And that is why the St. Louis firm is just so anxious now to ship first run material into the Princess. Score one for the great school of journalism, for "Stevie" did it.

Darwin, Was It You?

Solax sent a reel of pictures here the past week that was truly novel. "The Lady in the Baths" was with me in the Photo Play when it was on, I refer to "Love's Railroad." Solax, at first it was my intention to "slam" you on certain features of this reel, that bed chamber scene, for instance, but I will excuse you in view of the fact that a lady and a gentleman may be seen occupying the same alfalfa, with an heir between them, if such a scene makes for the promotion of the glorious cause you induced two of your stars to stifle their blushes and go through with. I will say this for you: It was a big hit, and it got the laughs. As the picture was being run off my better half said:

"I would be willing to wager your next week's salary that the 'hubby' in that picture is none other than my old acquaintance, Darwin Carr! I met him years ago when we were both with the Bennet and Moulton Company, in New England. Darwin has improved greatly and I am glad to see him getting along so nicely."

Now, Darwin, if it really was you, accept congratulations for your good work in that picture, both as to your acting and the successful effort you made to compel the census takers to record an additional citizen. Your work in "Indian Summer," where you tried to prevent the old man from tying up with the "gell" of his boyhood days, while the leading "loidy" made the same vain effort where "mommer" was concerned, delighted the Princess patrons. Here's to your continued success and happiness Darwin—on condition, remember, that it was you! If it wasn't you, will the real one kindly step forward and annex the foregoing bouquets.

Among Those Present.

"The Marauders" were also here the past week. That picture, I took it, was supposed to represent a scene years and years ago, when fashionable riding skirts were not in existence, that feature being the only slip to an interesting reel.

"The Photoplay" jammed 'em to the doors on the Bison's masterpiece, "A Soldier's Honor," another of the "101 Ranch" features. These reels can always be depended on to get the money, and the Photo Play can always be depended on to get them here.

We are awaiting "Under Two Flags." I played the lead in that in stock some years ago and look for it to make its appearance immediately after the "Soldier's Honor" reel. I hear that Thanhouser has done well with this picture.

The Vaniman airship picture came to the New Central the past week and was a big drawing card, as were also the two Biograph reels, "A Dash Through the Clouds" and "Man's Lust for Gold." Cinese sent a fine reel in "The Wandering Minstrels" and we were pleased with Vitagraph's "Never Again" and the "Carpathia" feature.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

ECLAIR NOTES

The American Eclair Company, whose product has given such excellent satisfaction to the public as well as motion picture exhibitors since the advent of this company in the field, have plans under way to broaden their output.

Eclair is about to establish a weekly, and will also inaugurate a regular weekly release of a strictly educational sort. Colored films are also to figure more extensively in the Eclair product.

An Eclair release which is being looked forward to with much expectation is "Robin Hood," for release about August 15th.

Oswego, N. Y.—The Gem was opened a few days ago.

Rochester, N. Y.—Permission was granted to the Lyndhurst Amusement Co. to construct a motion picture theatre at Lyndhurst and North streets.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

THANHOUSER

COUSINS (July 28).—One little girl lived in the country. She was a model child, everybody admitted it, but it cannot be denied that she was more or less of a cry baby and a coward. Her mother, a prim respectable country woman, was very fond of little Ann and she was a good child, as children go.

The mother had a sister, concerning whom she was more or less reticent, for the sister was a "lady magician," and was proud of the "time" she could land in vaudeville.

The lady magician, playing in the city near that of her old home, decided to run down to see her sister. She brought her little girl along and there were many exclamations of wonder when it was seen how much the two children resembled each other.

The children talked it over too, while they were alone together, and each told the other of her life. The country child was envious when she heard that her cousin lived in the beautiful atmosphere of the theatre, and the stage child wistfully expressed a desire to have "a real home," and not be compelled to make long jumps from town to town. The same idea struck both of them simultaneously. If each would be happier in the other's life, why not shift identities, so with many giggles, they exchange clothes, and the lady magician went away not knowing that strange little girl had been "palmed off" on her.

Now the little girls had been so busy chattering that they had been unable to post each other on their new lives.

The stage child was her mother's aid and accomplice. At one period in the act she was placed on the stage, a screen put on position around her, and when the screen was removed, there was no little girl but a moment later, the child tripped up the main aisle of the theatre having been wafted outside in some extraordinary manner.

On the afternoon of the country child's debut, however, something went wrong with the signals, and when the screen was removed, there was the dear little child, looking wonderingly around. Wild with rage, the magician made a grab for her, but the girl escaped, and made a bee-line for her home in the country nearby.

Luckily she got inside, unnoticed except by the former stage child. The latter was very glad to change identities, and the country girl was very thankful, especially when the magician arrived and grabbed her own child and punished her for the awkwardness of the other in the theater.

The little country child believed she had got the best of the bargain, but just then several boys arrived, boys who in days gone by had pulled her hair and made her cry. Now they were weeping themselves and their indignant mothers, who accompanied the delegation, explained to the unhappy country woman that her child had beaten their boys and attempted to assassinate them.

There was a tiny silver lining to the stage child's cloud, for her cousin got just what she did, and got it good.

TREASURE TROVE (July 30).—The millionaire, who had lived an idle, selfish life, was shocked and surprised when his doctor told him that his physical condition was such that he must abandon the city pleasures and lead a simple existence. On the advice of the physician the millionaire started out on a long walking tour, and there was nothing about him to indicate that he was a man of wealth.

In the course of his journeying, he sprained his ankle and was given open handed hospitality at a little farm house. His hosts were an old woman and her two children, a beautiful daughter, and a small and very energetic son. The family fortunes were not flourishing, and the boy was convinced that he would be able to restore them by discovering buried treasure. It afforded the millionaire much amusement, but he did not tease the boy, as almost from the start they became great friends.

The beautiful daughter made a great impression upon the millionaire and before he realized it, he was hopelessly in love. He dreamed of winning her as a poor man, and then after their marriage, having the delight of telling her that all the money she wanted was hers, but his dream was not to be.

By accident the millionaire learned that the girl had an accepted suitor, a poor young man who had just been forced to accept a position in a foreign land, which meant that the lovers would be separated for an indefinite time.

The millionaire was a man in a million. He realized that the girl he loved was not for him, but he determined that she should be happy, no matter how he might suffer himself, and little brother's hunt for treasure trove showed him how he could accomplish it.

The millionaire sent to the city for $5,000 in gold, and when it arrived he carefully "salted" the place where little brother was digging. The child brought the money to his sister and her sweetheart, and they accepted it as a fortune. All their troubles were wiped away. They married, and it is presumed lived happy forever afterward.

As for the millionaire, he started out alone in search of health and happiness, but he would have bartered all his millions had he been able to win the love of the girl who was not for him.

A NEW CURE FOR DIVORCE (Aug. 2). While a wealthy couple were out automobiling one day, they saw a moving picture factory and curiosity lead them to enter. They were much impressed with what they had witnessed, and it struck them that it would be an excellent idea to have a film made of the approaching wedding of their only daughter.

Desirous of surprising the young people the old folk took no one into their confidence and bride and bridegroom, minister and wedding guests, had no idea that they were posing before the camera.

The bridal couple went away on their honeymoon and had a foolish, silly quarrel, such as often befalls young married people. The bridegroom was haughty, the bride was indignant, and declared her intention of immediately proceeding to Reno. There is only one reason why a married woman, especially if she is young and attractive, goes to Reno.

The bridegroom said he didn't care, and at the time he really thought he meant it. Their matrimonial bark was just on the verge of being hopelessly shipwrecked, when a telegram arrived from the old folks at home. It invited the bridal couple to dine with the girl's parents and announced that the latter had a surprise for them.

The unhappy couple talked it over, and decided, for her parents sake, to pretend to be friends for a while at least, until the arrangements for their divorce were nearer completion. The wife knew her parents had an old fashioned prejudice against divorce and wanted to postpone giving them pain as long as she possibly could.

The surprise was really a surprise to them. It came off at a moving picture theatre and was a film story of their own marriage. As they looked upon it and realized how they had promised to love, honor and cherish each other, the differences between them became very small indeed. Before the film had been run off the bride was weeping in her husband's arms, and he was telling her that it was all his fault, which she remonstrated and declared she was alone to blame.

So the surprise was a surprise indeed, and it re-united a young couple who had been fast drifting apart.

AMERICAN

INDIAN JEALOUSY (July 22).—Dark Cloud loved one of his own kind in a pretty Indian girl. About the engineer's camp, both made themselves useful and were generally liked by the camp. One day the engineer's daughter came from the East and promptly adopted the Indian maid for her own. Dark Cloud watched the pretty Easterner until he found himself forgetful of his Indian love and more than interested in the white girl. Unthinking of danger, the white girl often went away for long strolls with him, much to the sorrow of her Indian maid. Ralph Whitcomb, foreman, made violent love to the Eastern girl and won her heart. They too, often went for walks closely followed by the jealous Dark Cloud. Sitting together on a great rock, Ralph made love to Margaret. High above them watched Dark Cloud, until suddenly unable longer to control himself, he nimbly climbed down to the loving pair and in the fearful struggle that followed, killed Ralph. Margaret hurried to camp where a posse was quickly organized.

A running battle followed. Dark Cloud sped from rock to rock turning only to fire at his pursuers. He reached the high rock on which the pair had sat, and with arms outstretched, received the bullet that ended his unhappy life.

On the same reel:

Some rarely beautiful views from San Diego, gateway to Panama. Highly interesting and instructive.

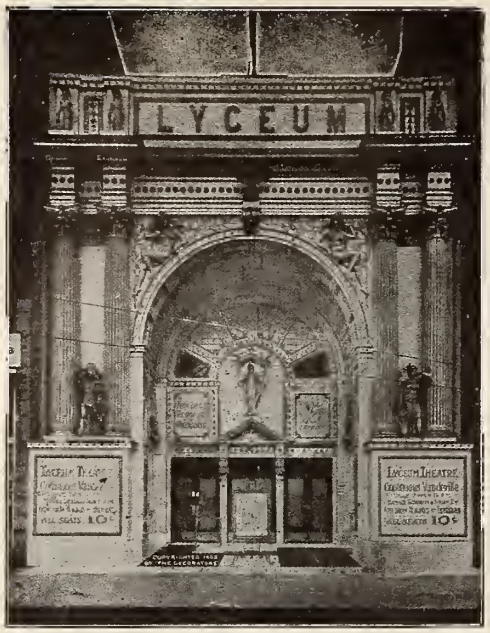
HOW HE MADE GOOD (July 24).— Jack Edwards was the younger son by the second wife, of Col. Edwards. He loved the Colenel's pretty ward, Vivian, who responded to his affection. Harold, his step-brother never liked Jack and lost no opportunity to say a defamatory word when the occasion offered. Jack came home drunk, one night, and Harold informed the father, who, in a fit of anger, drove Jack from the house.

He went West, secured work, after much suffering in the desert, in the Lazy Dog Mining Camp, where he was soon elected sheriff of the town. His letters to Vivian were always intercepted by Harold and both came in time to think that the other did not care for them.

One year after Jack left home, the Col. became interested in some mining claims in the Lazy Dog region. In company with his capitalists and with Harold, Vivian and his wife, the Colonel was held up in his auto close to town. In the flight that followed the mother escaped and made the town where she was met by Jack. A posse was hastily organized and with Jack at their head, effected the rescue of the party after a stirring battle. Reaching town, they went straight to the hotel. Before Jack could have a word with Vivian, Harold took him to the register showing him the names of "Mr. and Mrs. Edwards," and telling Jack that he and Vivian had been married. At that instant the Colonel entered and from him Jack heard the truth.

RELIANCE

PHILLIP STEELE (Aug. 22).—In 2 reels. —Bucky Nome, one of the Northwestern Mounted Police, steals the wife of Janette, a French Canadian. Losing the only thing that life held for him, Janette commits suicide. Bucky Nome soon tires of the woman whom he casts off. Some time later Phillip Steele another of the mounted police enters the deserted cabin and finds Janette's bleached skull and also a note stating why he committed suicide. Steele swears to have a reckoning with Bucky Nome. At this time a certain Colonel Beeckct and his wife are expected at the Hudson Bay Company's house. Steele is commissioned to meet them. He does so and soon falls under the spell of the girl introduced as the Colonel's wife, but realizing that she is married he is too honorable to display his admiration for her. Not so Bucky Nome. He tries to win the girl and to Steele's horror and surprise she encourages him. Seeing the expression in Steele's eyes she draws away Nome and the Colonel takes her indoors. Steele forces Nome to return to his cabin with him where he shows him the skull of Janette. To prevent him from paying attention to the Colonel's wife, Steele forces him to desert. Then Steele wraps up the skull and sends it to the girl with a letter telling her of Nome's villany. Later he learns that the girl received the skull and it had the desired effect of thoroughly disgusting her with Nome. But he also learns that she was not the Colonel's wife but his daughter, who assumed her mother's place as a joke. The train that the Colonel and his daughter left on is held up and the girl and the money taken by Bucky Nome and a band of his men. Steele is sent after them. With the help of a telegrapher he trails the men. Tired of carrying the half conscious girl Nome drops her in the road where she is found by Steele. He opens fire on the bandits who returns his shots. One by one the men with Nome are



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

shot until the leader stands alone. The telegrapher receives a bullet in his shoulder and Steele and Nome are alone. Steele receives Nome's bullet in his arm and Nome opens fire on him again but before he shoots the girl picks up her telegraph gun and leveling it at Nome she shoots and he falls. Steele turns in surprise to find that the girl has saved him. She comes to him and binds up his wounded arm and they confess their mutual love.

THE TWO FATHERS (Aug. 10).—Gertrude is engaged to Jim. Their respective fathers are pleased at the idea. The two old men are close friends but neither of the children suspect that they work together in committing robberies through the town. They plan to break into the bank and late that night they do so. They succeed in opening the safe and getting out the money. When they are getting away, however, the boy's father is captured but Gertrude's father makes his escape with the money. His friend had made him promise that if anything happened he was to look after the boy. The next day the papers are full of the robbery and the fact that it was committed by one of the prominent men of the town. When Jim comes to see Gertrude her father realizing the disgrace that will attach itself to the boy turns Jim out and refuses to allow his daughter to marry him. Jim writes to his father in prison telling him that he shares his disgrace. The old man hearing of his friend's falseness and realizing that he has broken his promise, soon finds a way to escape from prison. He goes to his friend's home where a serous quarrel ensues. During this Gertrude enters the room, hears Jim's father call her father a thief and he does not deny it. She then learns the truth. Her father is forced to make restitution and to allow the children to marry. Convinced that his son's happiness is secure the old man returns to his prison cell.

SOLAX

BOTTLES (July 31).—Mr. Johnson is at the club, having a pleasant little dinner with some friends and as they drain the last toast and he rises to go, it is very evident that he has gotten several drinks too many. Passing out of the room, Johnson with the assistance of one of the coat-boys, succeeded in getting into his coat and taking the proferred hat and cane, left the building. He enters a cab and starts for home.

He got out at the wrong block, however, being compelled to walk the rest of the way, and as he was swinging unsteadily along the deserted street, he happened to put his hand into one of his coat pockets and pulled out a sealed envelope. "Beware:—Your wife is untrue to you." Signed, "A Friend."

In the meantime, that evening, Mrs. Johnson's uncle, who had never seen Mr. Johnson before, unexpectedly arrives from the country to pay his niece a visit.

Entering his flat Mr. Johnson produces the note which he had found in his pocket.

Upon reading it, Mrs. Johnson was completely dumbfounded and earnestly proclaimed her innocence, but Johnson was deaf to her entreaties and taking a revolver from his pocket, made for the room in which his wife's uncle was sleeping. Mrs. Johnson begins to scream and in a few moments Johnson appeared again, holding the cowering old man by the neck and flourishing the revolver in his face, who believing the man behind the gun to be a burglar, took his valuables out of his night-cap and offered them to Johnson, but he knocked them out of the frightened man's hand to the floor. The old man then began to beg for mercy, which Johnson proceeded to show in the form of vigorous shakes and flourishes of his revolver.

Mrs. Johnson's screams, the old man's appeals for mercy and the racket Johnson himself was making, had by this time aroused the neighborhood and the police arrive on the scene and place Johnson under arest. While the old man, seeing the supposed burglar was powerless, hastened to gather his valuables from the floor.

Just as they were about to march off with their prisoner, a messenger boy rushed into the room, with a coat on his arm. He handed Johnson a note, which reads as follows: "Dear Johnnie:—I got your coat by mistake. Here it is. Please return mine with bearer." Signed Bill."

Johnson, who had by this time sobered up pretty well, was entirely nonplussed and had considerable difficulty in explaining the circumstances to the officers, who were extremely reluctant to give up their captive.

On the same reel is:

IMAGINATION.—The pith of the story is the comical mistake made by woman "blessed" with an undeveloped imagination.

Mrs. Dobbs is temperamental; she is always imagining things and is nervous as a cat. One day she removes her partial set of false teeth and places them on the bureau. Her four-year old daughter, just big enough to get into mischief, gets hold of the teeth and hides them.

Mrs. Dobbs makes a frantic search for the teeth high and low in vain. In her absent minded nervous fashion, she imagines she has swallowed them, especially as she has just read in a paper how someoody had had that experience. The suspicion soon becomes conviction. She imagines pains and a novel uncomfortable feeling "in her midst." The pains grow worse. She is on the point of collapse.

Nothing but an operation will save her. In haste the surgeon is summoned. By this time she is almost crazy. To save her preparations are made for an immediate operation. The knife is ready. At the last moment the teeth are found where they were hidden. Sensational but joyous scene, doctor nonplussed, mingled feelings of Mrs. Dobbs. Rejoicing by family. "All hands round."

BUDDY AND HIS DOG (Aug. 2).—Buddy, a boy of eight, helps his folks to the family support by selling newspapers. His folks were very poor and Buddy had a route that was the envy of the other village newsboys. Every morning at five he got up to go to the newspaper office. One morning a little stray dog came up to him and at the same time a window was opened and a lady told him to please take that dog away as he was a nuisance. Before the route was finished that morning Buddy and the dog were great friends. His parents he knew would object as they had a hard time to feed the hungry mouths. He took the dog to the woodshed and goes home. Dinner time he sneaked whatever he could into his pocket for his pet. He gets scolded but the boy refuses to give up the dog. The father lectures him and tells him that it is so hard to give the children enough to eat but Buddy is willing to eat less and give it to Foxie (the dog). A few days later the father calls Buddy and reads him a clipping in the paper, stating that dogs without licenses will be shot on August 1st. Then follows Buddy's hardships at getting employment. He lacks about seventy-five cents when the day arrives so writes a letter to the police. The letter is so oddly written that a policeman and Cady reporter go to his home with a camera and Buddy thinking the dog is going to be shot hugs the dog tightly and is shot by the camera instead. He is also given money to pay for the dog's license which makes him a very happy boy.

GAUMONT

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE (August 20).—Jack Seward, a well-known barrister, is a widower living with his daughter Colette, who unfortunately suffers with an affliction of the eyes. The barrister during the course of business meets with a pretty actress, with whom he falls in love, and arranges a meeting in the park for the next day. His daughter's affliction has got worse, necessitating a visit to the specialist, who advises an immediate operation. The operation is performed and proves successful. Meanwhile Jack's suit has progressed satisfactorily, and the actress becomes his promised wife. During a visit to the house the actress is introduced to Colette as her new stepmother, and the child's grief at the news is very distressing. She caresses the painting of her mother, rushes off with it and deposits it in her bedroom. Later she suffers a relapse and the specialist when called in states that the acidity of her tears will eventually lead to complete blindness, the only remedy being to remove the cause of the trouble. The actress, upon becoming acquainted with the specialist's opinion, decides upon the course of action to pursue in order to preserve the daughter's eyesight, and by that means sacrifices husband and home.

GRAZIELLA THE GIPSY (Aug. 22).—The artist, Andrew Darel, is anxiously awaiting the result of the Hermosa Competition, when his room is invaded by fellow artists, etc., who crown him with laurels, and inform him that he is the lucky winner of the purse of money. Amidst a scene of gaiety he takes his departure for Italy, and one day, when admiring the beautiful view from Sorrento, he hears a voice singing amongst the orange trees. A closer view reveals to him a beautiful girl clad in the picturesque garments of the country gathering oranges. Wishing to make her further acquaintance, he advances to meet her and learns that she is alone in the world, and named Graziella the Gipsy. The painter when engaged in painting the various views of the place is always accompanied by the gipsy, who falls in love with him and engraves with the point of a knife their initials on the bark of a tree. One day the painter, when taking a short sea voyage happens to meet a young Parisian lady, who captivates the young man with her graceful charms, and subsequently meets him when in the company of the gipsy. Graziella is not slow in recognizing that she has a rival, and implores the painter not to forsake her, but her advances are repulsed, and he departs with his fair charmer. The concluding pictures of this film show the tragic effect of the terrible blow received by the gipsy girl.

ECLAIR

BOYS AGAIN (Aug. 8).—Lyons decides to take a holiday and starts on an automobile trip, going through his home town, that he has not visited for fifteen years. He breaks down at the station. At the same time two old companions of his are just leaving the station when they see their old pal. They persuade him to join them as the automobile cannot be fixed for at least a day. Farmer Bassit rigs the two friends out and they go fishing and fall in the water, lunch and all. They then go to an orchard and Lyons climbs an apple tree. Mrs. Farmer Brown sees the robbers and chases them, leaving Lyons in the tree. The dog tears Bassit's trousers, but Lyons gets away, and falls worn out with laughter by the side of a road. While there, he hears a girl sobbing over a letter that she has received from her lover telling her that the factory (Lyons) has been shut down and they will have to wait to get married. Lyons finds out that the girl is a daughter of a former playmate and promises to alter affairs in general. He goes to the telegraph office and phones to the manager to rescind the order to close down and instead to raise wages five per cent. Two days later he goes home and meets the happy lovers on the road and goes on his way a happier and better man.

BECAUSE OF BOBBIE (Aug. 6).—Young Hilton is bored with society, and in search of a quiet place, goes to Harmony Inn. Marjorie and Bobbie leave a fashionable resort, because Marjorie is made conspicuous because of a scar that makes her wear high necked gowns, and go to Harmony Inn. Bobbie's woes with his sail boat brings Hilton and Marjorie together, which terminates in a pretty little romance and Hilton takes the girl, scar and all, which greatly pleases Bobbie who is much taken up with Hilton.

THE FOSTER SISTER (August 11).—Yvonne, the city girl, is visiting her foster mother and sister, Marietta, who lives on a splendid farm. Yvonne is royally received and enjoys herself immensely.

Marietta presents her fiance to Yvonne. The latter, being a sort of coquette flirts with him, and he falls in love with her, forgetting Marietta. Marietta overhears them planning a meeting and an inspiration as to how to get even comes to her.

By her scheme she succeeds in getting her fiance shut in the pig-pen. Returning to Yvonne she decoys her into the barn and locks her with the cows and oxen.

A short time later both are released from their durance, both cured of their flirting propensities.

On the same reel:

CARLSBAD.—A picture trip to one of the most fashionable of European health resorts.

REPUBLIC

EVIL TO HIM WHO EVIL THINKS (August 5).—The saying made famous by King Edward I, which caused the organization of the famous Knights of the Garter, is used as the theme of this modern story.

Hiram Perkins, a young farmer, has married a beautiful country girl, and after the novelty of the honeymoon had worn off, he becomes blind to his wife's charms and made of her a farm drudge. His main object in life was money and to increase his income he decided to take in summer boarders.

Dick Ravenwood and his mother were the first to come there and Dick, becoming charmed with Mrs. Perkins' personality, did everything in his power to lighten her burdens. Perkins' mind, too cramped for any broad thought, misunderstood these innocent attentions and did not hesitate to unjustly accuse his wife of unfaithfulness. Mrs. Perkins bore all this with the spirit of a martyr and was greatly relieved when upon her younger sister's arrival Dick concentrated all his attentions upon her.

Dick's impetuous nature knew no obstacles and he quickly won the heart of Mrs. Perkins' younger sister, Nellie. Nell would not name the happy day until Dick had spoken to her sister, so Dick sends a note asking Mrs. Perkins to meet him in a secluded spot (where Nell is in hiding) as he has something of great importance to tell her. This note falls into the hands of Perkins, whose brain becomes fired with jealousy and whose evil mind can see nothing but wrong in every action.

Perkins bides his time and upon seeing Dick alone in a canoe fires at him, causing Dick to fall into the water helpless. Mrs. Perkins hears the shot and looking toward the lake sees Dick slowly sinking. Without a moment's hesitation she leaps into the river and rescues him. Perkins is finally made to realize his mistake and also to appreciate his wife, whose drudging days are about over at the time when Dick marries her sister.

BISON

THE LITTLE RANCHER (July 23).—Mrs. Jenkins is struggling in her endeavor to educate her son, and is handicapped by the fact that her husband has an ungovernable passion for drink, and the cards. He comes home in an intoxicated condition after squandering his salary and demands their little savings. She shows him conclusively that he has spent all. As a final climax, he forcibly takes her wedding ring and pawns it for liquor. Twelve years later, we see the mother and son now grown to manhood living on a comfortable ranch in the middle West. Unexpectedly the husband, who has become a wandering tramp, comes to the ranch house, where he recognizes his former wife. He becomes insolent; son discovers the supposed tramp in his father and arrives just in the nick of time to save the father from what might have been a lynching at the hands of the cowboys.

REX

THE HAND OF MYSTERY (July 25).—When Cleo lost the new locket she had been given a mere little while before, the guests at the house were annoyed and displeased—such a situation always creates a little restraint and mutual suspicion. Yet—she had been walking with Fassett—and—a few eyes turned to him and interpreted unpleasant things. But when a day later as the hostess sat in her boudoir, a man's hand stole in through the door, passed over her secretary and picked up a brooch lying there, her belief that the locket had been stolen and not lost was confirmed. Hastily snatching the ink well, she threw it at the hand, and a moment later rushed to the door to find no one. Fassett was sitting on the verandah with Cleo, and a hand with an ink well in it spilled some ink over Fassett's sleeve in just the way and place his own was marred. In the meantime, the hostess summoned a detective, who mixed with the guests, was suspicious of all and trustful of none. Several times in the next few days the hand appeared, at divers times. At once, when a particularly bold theft had been committed, the detective summoned all the guests to the salon, deliberately walked to Fassett, lifted his sleeve and showed all the marks of the ink that had been thrown at him. Fassett was no less astonished than his friends, but the guilt was fastened upon him, and he was forced to leave the house in disgrace. Only Cleo believed in his innocence and honor.

A few days after he left, the valet was going through the guests' laundry, and came upon a shirt with ink spots upon the sleeve. A light dawned upon him. Fassett could not have been guilty. He hastily summoned Cleo, and advised her of his discovery. Cleo at once sent for Fassett, and he became the real detective. Through alertness and persevering diligence, he finally caught the real thief, who was none other than the detective.

THROUGH MEMORY BLANK (July 28). Her husband was just what she was not, cold and brutal and even a little criminal. He earned his living in God knows what way, but once he boldly boasted that he and a confederate were to rob a house. She pleaded with him to forsake the dishonest plan but he laughed and hurled her aside. She sobbed and begged, but he merely enjoyed her tears, and left the house.

Outside he met his accomplice. The little wife followed him, caught up with him on the corner, and again pleaded with him to return home. In his rage he turned and struck her on the head. The woman fell and did not rise again. The two ran off.

A little later she was found lying there by a farmer and his wife, who revived her. She did not know who or what she was. Her memory was a complete blank. But the good farmer took her home and made her happy.

And in the peaceful little farm house she was to learn again the sweetness and misery of love. A young farmer lad, sincere and earnest, whispered the old words to her and she said yes.

Her husband came out of prison one day, and came to the little place of the old days. He broke into the little grocery store, but escaped in time to avoid the wrath of the proprietor. He walked down the road and met—his wife. It was her wedding day. He walked over to her, and the blank in her mind became the record of the past. She suddenly knew all, realized the mockery of her new love—and told her sweetheart that she loved him but that her duty was to the other. Together they left, she and the criminal. But they had not reached the corner when the proprietor ran into them. A struggle followed. The thief tried to obtain possession of the other's revolver, and in doing so shot himself.

Suffice it to say that today she is happy in the love of a good man.

GEM

BREAD CAST UPON THE WATERS (July 23).—It required an effort for the old violinist to sell his instrument for food and heat. He loved his instrument as if it were something human, and dear and kind to him. But the little one was crying for food, and the instrument was compeled to earn it.

Walking away with the money that it procured, he ran across a little street Arab, soiled hungry and dirty, and his heart went out to the mite. He took the boy home, and gave him food and shelter.

A few days later a celebrated musician brought his violin to the old man to be mended. He took his overcoat off to explain the defects in the instrument, and the little erstwhile waif, in child play, put on the big overcoat upside down. As he did so, the wallet that the musician had carried in his pocket fell into an umbrella standing near by.

The musician left and later discovered the loss of his money. He at once returned and had the old violinist arrested.

It was before his trial that the boy found the money in the umbrella and hurried to the court to explain the circumstance. The musician saw his mistake, and returned with the liberated violinist. And as he passed from the house he put the roll of bills that the wallet had contained in the hands of the boy who had shown him his mistake.

VICTOR

NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS (July 26).—Flo is not like other girls, not like the other girls, the other girls at the Ferncliffe Seminary, in that she does not like the attention of the young men at the near-by college and their efforts to win her affection prove disastrous to their ruffled spirits. Flo has a guardian, John Strong, who has made some unfortunate speculations and to recover his losses uses his ward's fortune and in the end loses all. He writes to his son and tells him the truth and the only way to keep himself out of jail is a marriage between his son, Owen and Flo, his ward. Owen arrives home and after persuasion on his father's part, agrees to help him. Flo is invited down for a visit, she arrives and Owen is urged on by his father to try and win her. His first effort is to take her for a ride in his auto. On the way she has him stop to pick some wild flowers—while he is plucking the flowers, she starts the car, leaving him by the roadside. The car proves balky and finally stalls, and Flo is unable to start. Owen catches up to her, politely offers her the flowers, makes a few adjustments on the car and proceeds. They arrive home and Flo returns the compliment by presenting to him the bouquet, for his excellent driving, and runs off laughing. Matters run on and Owen becomes greatly in love with the boydenish girl, but does not progress very rapidly in his suit. The father also loses heart and is distracted nigh unto death. Finally Owen gives up after Flo has upset him in a canoe and tells his father that he hasn't "a ghost of a chance" to win her. The blow is too much for his father's weakened heart and death ends his troubles forever. Owen enters and finds his father dead. His heart is broken, as the father's misdeeds now fall on the son. Flo begins to soften at Owen's sadness and when Owen shows the letter written by his father, telling him of his misdeeds, Flo is greatly shocked. Owen tries to make reparation by deeding to her the house left him by his mother, leaving her a note to that effect, but when Flo finds him gone, she will have none of his gifts, and taking a short cut across the field, she heads off the auto in which Owen is in and orders the chauffeur to return home. There she upbraids Owen as only women can, orders him to stay and tells him she hates him for making her love him. Owen does not go away.

IMP

THE TRAITOR'S FATE (July 22).—Mildred has two lovers, Herbert and Will. Herbert is the favored lover. But Will is determined he shall never marry her. The day before the wedding Will sends her a note asking her to see him for the last time as he is leaving the country forever. Mildred's tender heart urges her to yield to his request and she meets him. After wishing her all happiness in her new life, he persuades her to allow him to drive her home. Then comes a wild ride.

Mildred faints, and Will seeing a cabin in the woods carries her to it and endeavors to revive her. She recovers from the swoon and begs Will to take her home; he refuses. He tries to embrace her; she pushes him away, and falling to the floor, her hand accidentally touches a hatchet. She grasps the weapon and warns the desperate man to keep off. She escapes from the cabin with Will in pursuit. He overtakes her and seizes the deadly weapon when Herbert arrives. He having seen the empty buggy is alarmed and goes in search of his sweetheart.

Will escapes in the woods, but is finally captured and the unworthy friend meets the fate he so richly deserved.

THE HEART OF A GYPSY (July 25).—Jan, a reckless young gypsy poacher, defies the game laws and is arrested for shooting and trapping on private ground. He is about to be given a long sentence when the little daughter of the squire prevails upon her father to release the trespasser. The gypsy boy's sweetheart is very grateful and vows to be of aid to the little girl some day. Later, the child goes on a long sea voyage and is shipwrecked upon a deserted coast. She is saved from the sea by the gypsy girl who nurses her back to health. The gypsy's protest against the presence of a hated outsider within their encampment and would drive the sick child into the wilderness, but the gypsy girl takes her under her protection and the two set out for a long walk through the forests to the father's home. They arrive there after many hardships and the gypsy girl is offered a home which she is about to accept, but the memory of her gypsy sweetheart is too strong and after a sad farewell she once more faces the wilderness and journeys to the tent of her own people.

A CASE OF DYNAMITE (July 27).—Johathan Jay, while waiting on a customer in his little country store, catches Cy, the village bad boy, stealing apples. He punishes him with a whipping and Cy plans revenge.

The opportunity comes when Jonathan gets a telegram calling him to the city. While he is buying his ticket Cy paints the word "Dynamite" on his grip, and as the train pulls in, Jonathan hurriedly picks up the case and dashes for the car, without noticing the word on it.

Upon his arrival in the city, he goes to a jewelry store where the clerk, seeing the word on the grip, offers him practically everything in the store to get him out quickly. Jonathan takes all he can and starts for the bank. The clerk rushes for a policeman and they give chase to the unsuspecting countryman, who gets into the bank to draw out some money. Here he meets with the same experience, as the cashier also fears an explosion. Jonathan is now well loaded down with money and jewelry, but is soon tracked by the clerk, cashier and policeman. After many amusing experiences he is captured and taken to jail where everything is satisfactorily explained and he is released and starts happily for his country home.

On the same reel:

LOVE'S DIARY.—Kate Morgan is in love with her employer, Clarence Irwin, a Wall Street broker, but he is unaware of this. Every day upon her return home she makes an entry in her diary saying how much she cares for him.

An adventurer, Charles Nally and his sweetheart, Marion, enter Irwin's office one day apparently on business but in reality to have Marion lure him with her beauty. And the plot is successful for he devotes his entire time to her and neglects his business. His shares in copper are almost swept away through his attentions to the fair charmer. Kate, of course, sees all this and is a very miserable little girl.

Finally, having spent a fortune on the scheming woman the crash comes, and she deserts him. Kate comes to the rescue and saves his reputation by covering his margins. This of course Irwin does not know until his broker comes with the good news that his copper shares are on the rise. When he does discover that Kate has rebuilt his fortune and saved his honor, he clasps her to his heart and at the same time she shows him her book of treasured thoughts—love's diary.

POWERS

BABY SHERLOCK (July 24).—In Baby Sherlock, another pretty child comedy is added to the list of the Powers Picture Plays which is a charming story set amid rural surroundings.

John Dobbs, an aged farmer, comes to the village with his family and while there makes the sale of a cow for a good sum. The farm wagon drives away, filled with pleased country folks, who have been to the hamlet to do some shopping. The payment of the money is witnessed by two tramps who follow Farmer Dobbs home. He is set upon and robbed and the tramps make their escape, running in view of little Margaret, a granddaughter of the old farmer. Another child discovers the plight of the robbed man, who is bound, and neighbors set him free. There is a search for the highwaymen and the irate farmers are aided by Margaret in a most ingenious manner to capture the tramps by reason of their leaving tell-tale evidence. The story is interpreted in a most charming manner. Baby Harley plays the role of the child detective in a most astute way and is rewarded for her vigilance.

On the same reel:

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.—Every loyal American was interested in the outcome of the Olympic games in Sweden in which the United States carried off the lion's share of the prizes and in this reel is depicted the feats of strength, fleetness and skill in which the American ensign was hoisted oftener than that of any other nation. It is a faithful reproduction of the games and will arouse interest wherever shown. The film represents an ambitious undertaking in photographing matters of international interest and will arouse enthusiasm wherever shown.

HIS MADONNA (July 26).—Miss Florence Barker and Mr. Edwin August, the two stars secured to appear in Powers Picture Plays, appear in their first picture under the direction of Mr. Frank Powell in "His Madonna," a story written especially around their talents and the result is a beautiful and touching drama that is replete with heart interest and cannot fail to please.

Edwin Gordon, an artist, loves Alice Eggleston, his model, but he is poor and loves her in silence. She is a beautiful young woman but is unaware of the passion of her employer and is much sought after by other admirers. The dream of Edwin is shattered when she leaves him for Ralph Gray, a debonaire man of the world, who sees in Alice only her beauty and charm. They marry and a child is born to them. Edwin, unable to remain in a locality that has been the scene of his one great sorrow, leaves and pursues his art in a distant city. He prospers and becomes prominent. He is given a commission to decorate a fashionable church and paints beautiful pictures on the windows. While at work an inspiration comes to him and he paints a picture of the Madonna and her child. He remembers and in his sorrow uses his brushes deftly and the result is a strikingly faithful likeness of his lost sweetheart, Alice, holding in her arms a child. In the meantime Alice has been deserted by Gray and wanders away from her native city. She is in destitute circumstances and seeks refuge in the church and there finds her portrait painted on the window. She intuitively knows that there is but one man in the world who could paint the picture and she seeks him out with the result that they find happiness at last, a pathetic and poetic finale of a strong and beautiful story.

NESTOR

THE RANCHMAN'S REMEDY (July 22). Colonel Brown, owner of Circle X Ranch, is very much interested in the study of medicine. The boys are aware of it, but it was left too irrepressible "Buck Hoover" to make capital out of it. Buck secures a patent medicine book and decides to have consumption in its worst form. He pours over the book and learns the symptoms of the dread disease by heart. The next day while the ranchman is passing through the grub tent, he coughs in a hollow manner; the ranchman turns quickly and questions Buck who recites his lesson and is ordered to bed. Then comes the softest period in Buck's more or less eventful life; beef tea, port wine and jellies are fed to him and then—enter the Green Eyed Monster of Jealousy.

Bill Dobbs feels that he, too, needs a little rest and incidentally a portion of the delicacies that fall to Buck's lot. "Buck refuses to part with his precious hook, but Bill coolly tells him, its either the book or exposure. Bill gets the book. After scanning the pages Bill decides he has a weak heart. That very day he gets his opportunity and when the ranchman is looking, he claps his hands to his heart and staggers. The ranchman is at his side in a moment and very soon Bill is resting comfortable in his bunk.

Buck and Bill carefully guard the patent medicine book, but the other boys cannot see why they should do all the work while Buck and Bill are living on the fat of the land. They demand that the book be turned over to them; the demand is refused and the hook is taken away by force. Very soon the ranch is turned into a hospital. The ranchman, of course, is delighted. At times he had almost hoped that one of the boys would fall ill hut to have eight of them down at once with various ailments—it was almost too good to he true.

It is the ranchman's custom to make periodical visits to town, telling his patients he would not he long, he rides off. He soon returns for his wallet. As he is about to enter the house he hears sounds of revelry and nearly collapses at the sight that greets his eyes. He sees Buck, the consumptive, smoking a cigarette, Bill with a weak heart, doing a breakdown with the paralytic, and altogether they appear to he the healthiest crowd of cow punchers that ever roped a steer. Almost overcome the ranchman steals away and then and there decides to teach them a lesson. How well he succeeds is evidenced by the fact that the boys of Circle X ranch no longer complain of even so much as a toothache.

THE LITTLE MOONSHINER (July 24).—The moonshiner's two daughters, Sue a child of five, and grown up sister, Betty, have just brought their father his dinner, when the old man is taken suddenly ill. Little Sue runs for aid and soon returns with their neighbor, Clay Harvey. They help the moonshiner to his cabin, but ere the doctor can arrive, the two girls are left fatherless. Later in looking over her father's papers, Betty finds the following note:

To my dear daughters:—It is my wish that you continue to operate the still until your sister is old enough to care for herself. Your father.

The next morning Betty sends little Sue out with a jug to place it as a sign to the mountain folks that her father's business would be continued. Clay loves Betty and would like to tell her of his love, hut feels that she may refuse him and this makes him hold his peace. Chad, another admirer, sees the jug, and tries to persuade her to give up the still and marry him. Betty refuses. Chad grows angry and tries to force her consent until little Sue comes to her sister's aid, driving him from the place at the point of her rifle. Out of revenge he informs the revenue officers of the illicit still, then returns to the girl and tells her that his rival, Clay, has betrayed her to the revenue officers. Fearing her little sister might be taken from her, Betty at last promises Chad that she will marry him as soon as he destroys the still. Fortunately, the doctor has overheard Chad inform the revenue officers, and at once notified Clay, who with the doctor hasten to the girl's cabin, and after a hasty explanation Betty and Sue are whirled away to love and safety, while the revenue officers arrive in time to arrest Chad, whom they find destroying the still.

YOUNG WILD WEST'S PRAIRIE PURSUIT (July 26).—Horse thieves stealing four horses from the Bar Y ranch are seen by one of the cowboys, who gives the alarm. The ranchman and his cowboys give chase. The horse thieves ride through the woods and coming to a small clearing almost run over a small party camping. They would have run the party down had not Young Wild West pulled the leader of the horse thieves from his horse, and then knocked him down, when he started to draw his gun. Not knowing that the four men have stolen horses with them, Wild West lets them go.

They are hardly gone when the ranchman and his men appear. Wild West leads them in the direction taken by the horse thieves. They lose the trail in the woods and return to the camp. The ranchman invites them to the ranch for a few days and asks their aid in running down the horsethieves. They accept the invitation and packing up they leave for the ranch, where on arriving they are made welcome.

In the meantime the thieves arrive at their house in the woods and hide the horses. The leader swears to get even with Young Wild West, so dressing like an old hunter and putting on a false beard, he goes to town alone. He is overheard talking to a man by Young Wild West, who has ridden to town with his sweetheart, Arietta and her girl chum. Wild West stops when he hears the voice and after making sure pulls the beard from the robber's face. The man however manages to escape. Wild then gives chase, followed by the two girls. The horse thief reaches his pals on the edge of the wood and they watch Wild West coming and decide to steal his sweetheart as she passes since she is far behind the others. Wild and Mabel pass the place where the thieves are, thinking the man they are after is ahead. And when Arietta passes one of the men rides out and pulls the girl from her horse and turning dashes into the woods. Wild West hearing the cries of the girl turns and gives chase. But again the villains get away and reach their house first but Wild West sees them from a clearing and is about to enter when he sees some of the men come out and walk towards the place where the horses are hidden. Wild West is about to untie Arietta when one of the villains appears, and is soon at Wild's mercy. A desperate fight ensues between our hero and the gang leader. Mabel returns with the cowboys just in time to capture the entire hand of bad men.

COMET

HER INDIAN GUARDIAN (July 20).—Jack Irving is a bad man and his field of endeavor is the plains of the Great Golden West. Our story opens in the days of early emigration when that part of the country was holding out inviting hands for homeseekers to settle on tracts of land which the Government had set aside for white families. In those days crossing the vast expanse of territory west of the Rockies was not without its attendant dangers. Desperadoes and criminals and adventurers of every conceivable character infested the trails. Irving was one of that ilk and his depredations form one of the pivotal situations in this beautiful and engrossing film. The primitive Indian had to be contended with too and history reeks with the crimes of the aborigine. One little family of four was massacred and the only surviving member was a little girl of five. She was pretty and sweet and the chief of one of the tribes, Kowpulek by name, adopted her. Years pass and Starlight as she becomes known grew up to be a beautiful woman. She becomes the idol of her foster father who presents her with a valuable rough diamond which has descended for generations from his forefathers. Irving knows of the existence of the jewel and plots to secure it. His opportunity arrives while Starlight is trying to acquire the mysteries of a camera which has been left in her charge by one of the tourists. Starlight, with the vanity of her people, desires to take a picture of herself resplendent in Indian garb. She is about to press the release bulb when Irving steals cautiously behind her and strikes her a cruel blow upon the head. The girl falls to the ground unconscious and Irving takes the diamond and decamps. In the meantime the tourist returns and seeing the wounded girl soon revives her. She tells him the story of the attack and theft and when the negative is developed the Chief recognizes Irving and sets upon his trail, swearing to avenge the wrong. After a long search he comes upon the assailant and the two engage in a fierce combat with bowie knives. The chief is the winner and at the conclusion we see him hurl Irving over a high bluff in realistic fashion to instant and deserved death on the rocks below.

REFORMED BY STRATEGY (July 22).—A ferocious lion has escaped from a visiting circus and the populace is searching high and low to capture the animal. The newspapers are full of accounts of the escape and one of the first to read about it is Tom Lane a young man about town, who has just returned to his home with a friend of his, Joe Baxter by name. The pair have been out most of the night before having a glorious time, and are much the worse for their carouse. Tom is married and his wife who has tried many schemes to reform her spouse suddenly hits upon the idea to make it appear that the lion has found refuge in her home. Just how to make the ruse effective is the question. She goes to a fur store and seeing a magnificent specimen of a lion's skin with a cured head has it sent home. The men have retired to another part of the building and while they are away she drapes the skin and places it in a conspicuous part of the room. Upon returning the men see the skin and imagining the lion is in the room run pell mell into the street. The first thing they do is to apprise a policeman of their discovery. The policeman with cocked revolver and urged on by the men, who demand immediate protection, enters the house and forthwith institutes a search for the lion. The only thing he can find naturally is the skin. Thereupon he accuses the men of making a fool out of him and puts them under arrest for disorderly conduct. They are about to be taken into the lock-up when Mrs. Lane, who has watched the entire proceeding from a vantage point nearby, explains the situation. It is the policeman's turn now and he laughs. He tells the men that drinking only colors the imagination and advises them to quit the stuff and reform. They promise and he departs leaving them to reflect and wonder if sobriety is not much more wholesome after all.

ESSANAY

THE UNDERSTUDY (July 23).—Pauline Raymond, leading lady of a theatrical company who are to open on Broadway with a new show, receives her part and goes to a small country place to study. Here she meets the daughter of the landlady and the two become fast friends. The little country girl is deeply interested in Pauline's part and studies it every chance she gets. Seeing her enthusiasm, Pauline makes her sort of an understudy and Mary helps the actress greatly with her prompting. Two weeks pass and Pauline prepares to return for the opening fight it out with himself. Suddenly he hears and leaves it behind at the cotage. Mary finds it and, although knowing it by heart, goes out into the woods to study the familiar lines. Meanwhile, Pauline's auto meets with a serious accident on the road and she is carried back to the cottage badly injured. Bradley, the theatre manager, gets the wire, jumps into an auto and arrives at the little town on the afternoon of the opening night of the show. Pauline's injury prevents her returning to the stage for weeks and Bradley is in despair. Failure of the show and ruin stare him in the face and he tramps away into the woods to fight it out with himself. Suddenly he hears a voice speaking aloud the lines of Miss Raymond's part and discovers Mary, who tells him she knows every line of it. Instantly Bradley whisks her into his auto and, after a wild dash, they arrive in the city in time to fit Mary out with a wardrobe and send her on the stage to play the star role. Mary makes a great hit and receives an ovation at the final curtain that insures her success and that of the play. Bradley instantly makes her leading lady of the road company and the little country girl is safely started on the way to fame and fortune.

MR. TIBBS' CINDERELLA (July 25).—Mr. Tibbs is a salesman with the Walk E-Z Shoe Company, and is an enthusiastic admirer of pretty feet. Everywhere he goes he is on the lookout for them, and is thoroughly disgusted when many charming women reveal feet of enormous proportions. One morning a shoe drummer leaves a plaster mould of a female foot, beautifully small and charming. It is handed over to Tibbs, who goes into ecstasies, fits a pair of shoes to the model, then puts a large sign in the window offering to give the shoes to any lady able to wear them. During his absence a veiled Venus enters, tries on the shoes and they are found to fit her perfectly. She leaves her own shoes and goes out wearing the new ones. Tibbs returns and, with one of her shoes in his hand, starts out in pursuit of his affinity. For a whole month he searches vainly, hiding under sidewalks and watching the passing feet for a glimpse of his Cinderella, but with no success. At last one day he catches sight of her through the window of a barber shop, wipes the lather from his half-shaved face and rushes out. The chase leads to the railroad station where Cinderella boards the train. Tibbs, after a hard dash, boards the train as it is pulling out, secures a berth and goes to bed. Next morning he is searching for his lost collar button when those fairy feet emerge from the opposite berth before his very eyes. Down on his knees Tibbs pours out his love, only to have Cinderella's face appear next and discover she is a toothless and frightfully ugly spinster. With a whoop of rage Tibbs dashes from the coach and, while Cinderella vainly tries to prevent it, dives from the train. A moment later he crawls up the embankment a human wreck and limps off for the city a sadder and wiser man.

PATHE FRERES

JANE SEYMOUR AND HENRY VIII. OF ENGLAND (July 23).—The historical intrigue of Jane Seymour to supplant Queen Catherine of Aragon in the affections of Henry VIII. of England is here re-enacted. The King and Queen become incompatible, and an anonymous note warns Catherine that Lord Crammer is responsible for the King's infelicity. The Queen sends for Lord Crammer and, in the presence of Jane Seymour and other ladies-of-the-court, fiercely upbraids him. Jane sees an opportunity to further her ambition to be Queen, and joins forces with the enraged Crammer in an effort to influence the royal ruler against his wife. They place the King in a compromising situation in which he is discovered by his Queen, whom he promptly divorces. Success seems assured to Jane Seymour, but an accident prevents her attendance at the King's country feast, where His Majesty becomes infatuated with Anne Boleyn, and discards Jane. The film is done in color and displays with remarkable faithfulness to detail this epoch-making event, conveying a vivid impression of the elaborate pomp and ceremony prevalent at the time.

HIS SECOND LOVE (July 24).—A trapper, badly injured, falls in love with the Indian girl who nurses him back to health, marries her and they have a child. While he is away on a long hunting trip his wife dies and the child is taken care of by friends. On the trapper's return he finds a telegram awaiting him, calling him back East to the bedside of his dying mother. Arriving there he finds his mother in the last throes of a long illness and agrees to her last request that he marry her ward. The marriage, however, is unhappy and eventually they separate, he going back to his child in the West. His second wife, ultimately realizing the sterling worth of her husband, joins him at Rainbow Lodge and a reconciliation takes place.

A REDMAN'S FRIENDSHIP (July 25).—A redskin, injured, receives assistance at William Dodd's cabin. The white man is later captured by the Indians and condemned to die at the stake. He asks for a brief reprieve to bid his wife and baby good-bye. The chief demurs, but the befriended Indian, Eagle Feather, recognizing his benefactor, offers to sacrifice himself if the white man does not return, and the chief grants the request. Dodd's wife tries to prevent his fulfilling his promise by killing his horse, but Dodd finally returns to meet his fate. The bravery of Eagle Feather in offering to make such a sacrifice touches the old chief's heart and he gives his warbonnet to the younger man. The new chief thereupon releases his white friend, who returns to his grieving wife and lonely little boy. The story will reach every heart.

A BOLD GAME (July 26).—An adventurer and his wife, posing as mere acquaintances at a summer resort, make an effort to trap a wealthy man into separating himself from a lot of money. The plan is unique and would have been highly successful but for the eleventh hour repentance of the wife, who confesses her share of the plot to the police, thus saving her victim whom she has learned to respect.

On the same reel:

OVER MONACO IN A HYDRO-AEROPLANE.—A series of beautiful views of the famous European gaming resort in all its splendor.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE PAPOOSE (July 27).—The daughter of a pioneer family, left an orphan at a tender age, is adopted by the Indians and, when grown, marries one of their number, the son of Chief White Horse. When their boy is four years of age the Indian husband dies. The young widow meets Dr. Bob Ray, a frontier practitioner, who, smitten by her charms, proposes marriage. Chief White Horse allows her to go, but will not let her take her baby. The wife fears to tell her doctor-husband of her child and keeps the knowledge from him, but not for long. The boy is taken sick and Dr. Ray is called. The mother cannot resist the desire to see her child and, risking all, follows her husband. The baby calls her the most wonderful name of all. The doctor, suspicious of the deceit, renounces his wife to the Indians, but in leaving the country meets with a bandit and is wounded. He is found by White Horse and the latter's grandchild, and upon learning the truth of his wife's former marriage, there is a reconciliation that ends a story in which tense situations are constantly developing and the heart throbs many, many times.

EDISON

THE SKETCH WITH THE THUMB PRINT (July 23).—A gripping newspaper story showing how a reprimand from the city editor puts a reporter sufficiently upon his metal to make him "dig up" a live story where apparently none existed.

Mr. Harry Furniss, the famous English cartoonist, and his daughter are visiting New York in search of various American types. While passing a Fifth Avenue jewelry store the daughter calls his attention to a rough looking man who stands gazing at the diamonds displayed in the window. As the artist finishes the sketch his daughter accidentally drops a sketch of herself; the rough looking man picks it up and in handing it to the girl leaves his dirty thumb print upon it. Later the artist leaves the sketch book on a park bench.

The reporter, wandering in the park and discouraged by lack of news, reads a heading in a newspaper of a great diamond robbery and wishes he were lucky enough to locate the criminal. He finds the sketch book, sees the name and address of the owner on the inside and returns it to him. He asks for a sketch in return and selects the one of the daughter upon which is the dirty thumb print. In glancing over a newspaper which he has been reading, the artist recognizes the name of the jeweler who was robbed as the one in front of whose store he sketched the rough character. He tells the reporter of the incident and shows him a sketch of the man and also shows him the man's thumb print. The reporter's news gathering propensity immediately begins to assert itself and he proceeds to the Rogues' Gallery to find out who the original of the sketch is.

Later, in looking over the scene of the crime he finds a thumb print on a bit of broken glass in the jeweler's smashed window. He learns of the haunts frequented by the man he suspects and by some clever detective work secures another print of his thumb. The three prints prove conclusive evidence and the criminal is arrested. The reporter gives his paper a "scoop" which reinstates him in the favor of the city editor and the closing scene shows him in high favor with the artist's pretty daughter.

THE ESCAPE FROM BONDAGE (July 26.)—This is the first of a series of stories concerning a girl called Mary and it shows her first adventure at the age of a few weeks when she is brought in a basket and secretly left in the store of one Billy Peart. The note which accompanies her, promises Billy that if he provides for her and finally sees her married to some village boy, a thousand dollars will be sent to him in addition to the five hundred which is left with the child. Of course the note is unsigned and of course Mary's parentage is therefore in doubt.

After this prologue the story takes up this action: Mary is eighteen years of age and Billy has made up his mind that it is about time to fulfill the suggestion of the note and marry her to some village chap. He finds a young country lad, Tuck Wintergreen, who shows a decided preference for the girl and invites him to go ahead and win her, promising his own influence as backing for his suit. But Mary has become a dreamer and is no mind to marry. She has made a friend of an old fisherman and sails with him in his boat, listening to tales of the great world.

On one eventful day a magnificent yacht anchors in the harbor and Mary hears of the life of people who own such boats. The old fisherman, gives her a twenty dollar pocket piece of his, telling her to keep it until the time comes when she goes forth to see the great world and that it will help her on her way. When she returns to the ice cream parlor kept by Billy Peart, she finds the yacht people to be served with ice cream and while admiring their smart yachting suits and good breeding, she thinks of the twenty dollar gold piece. Billy Peart sees her fondling it and takes it from her, the result is a quarrel which drives the yacht folks away from the store and sends Mary, hot for revenge, to the sitting room up stairs. There she remembers seeing Billy lock something in a drawer and in her frenzy she tugs at the drawer until the front, which has not been firmly glued, comes off and she finds herself in possession of a roll of money and a note. The note which she reads, makes her realize that she does not belong to Billy Peart and that she has a right to flee from the life of the little country store. She defies Billy and runs to the wharf where she begs the old fisherman to take her to the mainland. When Billy follows her, her staunch friend holds him on the pier while Mary sails away with the boat to freedom and the future which will be told in some other stories.

We are introduced in this film to a number of fascinating personalities and Mary is surely destined to be a national character. The special cast plays the story with distinction and the photographic and scenic effects are exceptionally beautiful.

VITAGRAPH

ROCK OF AGES (July 20.)—Talented as a sculptress, Madeline Bates, a young widow, carves a cross which she afterwards erects on the seashore in memory of her husband, who was lost at sea. Madeline lives with her old father in a small fishing village on the coast of Maine. One day, while resting on the monument, a celebrated artist visits her home and recognizing her ability, induces her to go to the city and study art under his tuition. She accepts his offer and becomes famous. Among her acquaintances is a married man, who pays marked attentions to her, regardless of her indifference to his advances. Another woman, jealous of Madeline, writes her father that his daughter is compromising herself with other men.

Madeline's father hastens from his home and calls on her. At the same time, her insistent wooer happens to be in the studio. The old man excitedly comes to the conclusion that the reports he received are true. He will not listen to her explanations and returns to his home, forever disowning her. Later, she goes back to her native village and devotes her life and means to helping the sick and poor. While nursing a sick child she contracts a fever and one night, in a delirium she wanders in her nightrobe, her hair streaming in the wind, and visits the cross she erected in memory of her husband. Sinking to her knees at the foot of it, she clings to it, in remembrance of the one she loved most. In this position she reproduces a living picture of "The Rock of Ages." The rising waters of the ocean dash around her. She dies upon the cross, crowned with Eternal life.

WANTED A SISTER (July 22.)—In the college play, Tom, and his room-mate, "Bunch," take prominent and successful parts, Tom as the hero and "Bunch" as the heroine, in which he is an excellent female impersonator. The day after the performance, "Bunch" makes an engagement to take a real chorus girl to dinner. Unexpectedly his mother comes to college to visit him and he makes Tom take the girl. He reluctantly consents, as he is engaged to Evelyn Marshall. While Tom and the chorus girl are dining in the restaurant, Evelyn comes in with a party of friends. She is astonished, and exceedingly vexed when Tom's companion pats him under the chin. Evelyn makes her presence known to Tom and breaks their engagement. He tells her that the young lady is his sister and he would like to have her call at her room the next day and see her.

Tom hurries to his room and tells "Bunch" the mess he has got him in, and that he will have to help him out of it by impersonating his sister, using the same costume as he used in the play the night before. "Bunch" agrees and succeeds in carrying out his part of the contract until Tom places him in the box couch to give him a chance to talk to Evelyn alone. While Evelyn and Tom are sitting on the couch, "Bunch" succeeds in releasing himself from his imprisonment, and rushes from the house, where he is arrested for masquerading in woman's attire. He induces the policeman to go to his room and get Tom's identification, which Tom tantalizingly refuses to give, until he sees the joke has gone far enough. The policeman smilingly withdraws. Tom and "Bunch" explain matters to Evelyn and she consents to forgive Tom, and reaccepts her engagement ring.

LUBIN

WON AT HIGH TIDE (Aug. 19).—George Jones loves Sally Brown, but Old Brown who is a sufferer from the gout obects to their marriage. Old Brown has to be wheeled around in an invalid chair by an attendant, this attendant is wise to the love affair between the two and aids it all he can, several times in spite of the care of the attendant who attracts the old man's attention whenever George appears on the scene, and the watchfulness of Sally the old man catches George and Sally spooning behind his back. George and his sweetheart then resolve on a desperate plan to bring the father to terms; they meet the attendant and George bribes him to quit the job. George then disguises himself with a mustache and applies for the position, which he gets. This gives Sally and her lover a great deal of time together as she always accompanies her father on his little rides. One morning George wheels the old man down to the water edge where he leaves him reading a newspaper while he and Sally seek a secluded spot to spoon. The tide rises upon the old man without his taking notice of it and when he sees it he roars for help. George takes advantage then of this opportunity and rushes to him and pulling off the false mustache asks for his daughter's hand as a reward for getting him out of his predicament. The old man sternly refuses and George leaves him there to his fate and returns to Sally who has been watching the progress he makes on the beach. The old man is getting deeper and deeper in the water on account of the rising tide and roars louder and louder. George again goes to his side. He again asks the old man for Sally and to save himself, the father gives his consent. George pulls him out of the water and the picture ends in the happy union of the young couple.

On the same reel:

THE HOBO CLUB.—It happens one balmy day in June, a dozen of the clan of the "Four Hundred Brotherhood of the Road" reached the town of Philadelphia, and after viewing the surroundings and the kindly faces of the people decide to hold one of their most important meetings. The Secretary balanced the books, in which it is discovered that some members are short from one to three cents dues. The usual reprimand is administered and each member is sent on his way to procure the necessary funds to keep in vogue the old custom of refreshments after the meetings. After many trials the clan return and between all the members the necessary amount of ten cents is counted into the treasurer's hands, who handed it to the commissary department. At this moment the old trusty tin kettle is brought into play and sent on its merry way to bring back amber liquid. But the fact that by such constant use a hole had been worn in the bottom is overlooked and a trail of the precious beer was soon along the street. The disgust of all the members on the return of the kettle is indescribable. The blame for the great loss is placed with the commissary who tries to explain, but is handled very roughly and placed beyond the portals of the great brotherhood 400 of the road.

THE CONVALESCENT (Aug. 21).—Henry Devereux, a young New York millionaire, is informed by his physician that he has consumption and is sent out to California as a guest-patient to a medical friend of the doctor. Devereux is installed in the home of the physician. There he meets besides the doctor's daughter Alicia, a young man named Holden, who is engaged to Alicia. On one oc-

No. 1000—A MOTIOGRAPH

How Motiograph Character Has Succeeded in Bringing Sales Into the Thousands

The success of the 1912 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH in the last year has been nothing more than the buying public's appreciation of real worth and value in moving picture machines.

One MOTIOGRAPH has sold another; and that, in turn, another and another; and so on until sales have multiplied into the thousands.

Please keep before you, in your study of the MOTIOGRAPH, three thoughts:

1st—Every part of the MOTIOGRAPH machine is made in our own factory.

2nd—Only the very highest class of material is good enough.

3rd—The importance of both parts and material in determining value efficiency, economy of up-keep and length of service.

Wm. M. Brown, Sec'y and Treas. of the Solvay Theatre, N. Y., writes us June 14, 1912:

"Kindly send catalog for your 1912 model machine. I expect to open a new house ——— and would have a MOTIOGRAPH by all means. Have run this 1910 Model one year and this is first parts I have had to buy."

———Manufactured by———

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

casion Holden saves Devereux's life and the two young men become warm friends. Holden goes on a prospecting trip and in his absence Devereux's malady becomes worse and he is forced to take to bed. Believing himself dying, Devereux explains to the doctor the terms of his father's will whereby if he, Devereux, dies unmarried, the entire fortune passes as a memorial to the birthplace of the elder Devereux; and he wishes Holden, his preserver, rather than his father's birthplace, should inherit his fortune. To this end he proposes a formal marriage to be solemnized between himself and Alicia, so that through her, as his widow and as Holden's future wife, he may leave legally to Holden, his vast fortune. Dr. Chambers consents, and a marriage between Devereux and Alicia takes place. Then, to the dismay of both, Devereux recovers. Holden, on his return from his trip, makes haste to call on Alicia, not having been told of her marriage. Coming upon her unawares, he playfully seizes her and is about to kiss her when she pushes him off, telling him of her marriage and showing him her wedding ring. Holden is naturally amazed and hitter. Finding, however, that the girl still loves him, he proposes that she elope with him on the Overland leaving that afternoon. After much pleading, and on Holden's threat to kill himself, she consents. On her way down, as she starts to go to the station to meet Holden, she passes Devereux's bedroom door. It stands open. Entering she takes off her wedding ring and places it on his desk. In doing so she sees a note addressed to her. She opens and reads:

"Goodbye and God bless you. I loved you. Off to New York to settle my estate on you and to kill myself. Make that noble fellow happy. It is my wish. Your husband."

In a flash Alicia realizes the noble self-abnegation of Devereux and the selfishness of Holden. Her attitude changes. The girl hurries to the station and passes Holden at the entrance without seeing him. On the departure platform, when Holden hurries up at the last moment before the train starts, searching for Alicia, he finds her in Devereux's arms.

Free moving picture shows are to be given in the Montreal Parks, the Board of Control granting permission for the carrying out of the scheme to a large delegation which waited on them. The plans will be quickly matured, and it is expected that the first show will be put on July 15th.

* * * *

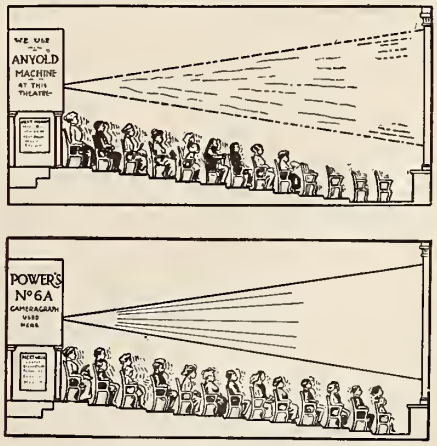
Seven moving picture houses in the downtown districts of St. Paul have been inspected by members of the special investigating committee appointed by Mayor Keller to look into conditions of minor show houses. In practically every case minor violations were found, either in regard to ventilation or the rules about ventilation.

W. D. Nevils, Dallas, Tex., who has been engaged in the moving picture business in this city for the past seven years, and who now owns the Palace, Candy and Nickelodeon theatres, has just completed negotiations whereby he will open what he says will be the most elegant and elaborate moving picture theatre south of Chicago. Plans are now in the hands of architects and will be turned over to the contractors in a few days. The new theatre, which will be known as "The Washington," will be located at 1613-1615 Elm street.

I have ordered a pipe organ through the Will A. Watkin Company which will cost me $10,000, says Mr. Nevils, and my monumental designs and staff work alone will run into the thousands. M. D. Singleton will be manager.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A

MEANS A FULL HOUSE



Have you ever noticed that the first three or four rows in a pboto-play theatre are very often unoccupied? Do you know why? Because imperfect projection is especially apparent when close to the screen—especially trying on the eyes.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has always heen noted for its perfect projection. Our new 6A with larger lamp house, more adjustable arc lamp, carrying capacity of 100 amp., and stand made entirely of iron with 14" magazine built in, bas placed POWER'S on a higher plane of excellence than ever before. Also, our patent loop setter will automatically reset the lower loop without stopping.

A POWER'S NO. 6A MEANS NO MORE DARK SCREENS AND INTERRUPTED PICTURES. IT MEANS A FULL HOUSE RIGHT UP TO THE SCREEN ALL THE TIME.

Catalogue gives full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 90 Gold Street, NEW YORK

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
May 29—The Optician's Dream (Com.)
June 14—If I Were King (Com.)
June 14—Italian Lakes
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels) (Hist.)	2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.)	1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.)	1000
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	1000
July 22—Indian Jealousy
July 24—How He Made Good
July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.)
July 29—It Pays to Wait (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun

BISON

June 29—The Colonel's Peril
July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.)
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.)
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)
July 9—Reconciled (Dr.)
July 13—Just in Time (Dr.)
July 3—His Nemesis
July 16—Snowhall and His Pal
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)
July 20—Dare Devil Dick (Dr.)
Julq 23—The Little Rancher

CHAMPION

June 12—A Western Child's Heroism	950
July 1—Pat's Breeches
July 1—Little Old New York
July 8—The Gypsy Bride
July 15—The Call of the West
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy

COMET

July 6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days	1000
July 8—The Intercollegiate Regatta, Poughkeepsie	975
July 13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky	1000
July 15—Reggy Breaks the College Rules	1000
July 20—Her Indian Guardian (W. Dr.)	1000
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.)	1000
July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000

ECLAIR

July 14—Across the Caucasus
July 16—The Dreamers
July 18—That Loving Man
July 21—Rizzio
July 23—The Governor's Daughter
July 25—The Double Cross
July 28—The Lady Barrister
Aug. 6—Because of Bohhie
Aug. 8—Boys Again
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister

GREAT NORTHERN

July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.)
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.)
July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	694
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.)	305
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Dr.)	666
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000

GAUMONT

	Feet
July 9—A Tenacious Hubhy
July 11—The Silent Castle
July 16—Love's Surest Proof
July 18—Lion's Revenge
July 30—Prison on the Cliff
July 30—The Isle of Marken
Aug. 1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug. 6—Androclus and the Lion
Aug. 8—A Phantom of the Night
Aug. 13—Dream Driven
July 23—The Silent Castle
July 25—Love's Floral Trihute
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 22—Graziella, The Gipsy
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin

GEM

June 25—The Reason
July 2—The Medal of Honor
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters

IMP

July 8—The Parson and the Medicine Man
July 11—Caught in a Flash
July 13—The Wrong Weigh
July 13—In and Around Chicago, Ill
July 15—Hearts in Conflict
July 18—Winning the Latonia Derhy
July 20—The Foreign Invasion
July 20—Building a Church in a Day
July 22—The Traitor's Fate
July 25—The Heart of a Gipsy
July 27—A Case of Dynamite
July 27—Love's Diary

ITALIA

Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli
Feh. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

LUX
By Prieur.

June 28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)	259
July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)	860
July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)	567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)	393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)	970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 8—The Flower of the Forest
July 10—A Gentleman of Fortune
July 12—Young Wild West Cornered hy Apaches
July 15—The Trifler (Dr.)
July 17—Fur and Feathers (Com.)
July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Hustler (Dr.)
July 22—The Ranchman's Remedy
July 24—The Little Moonshiner
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

June 26—Their Day's Work
June 26—The Helping Hand
July 3—The Coming Generation
July 5—Mates and Mis-Mates
July 10—Tangled
July 17—Getting Even
July 24—Bahy Sherlock
July 26—His Madonna

RELIANCE

	Feet
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog
July 24—The True Love
July 27—The Soldier Baby
July 31—Where There Is Soap There Is Hope
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels)
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers

REPUBLIC

July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks
July 6—The Girl in the Auto
July 15—The All-Seeing Eye
July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
July 29—A House Top Romance
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg

REX

July 18—The Hidden Light
July 21—When Love Rules
July 25—The Hand of Mystery
July 28—Through Memory Blank

SOLAX

July 17—Slippery Jim
July 19—The Four Flush Actor
July 24—Broken Oaths
July 26—The Requital
July 31—Bottles
Aug. 2—Buddy and His Dog

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 14—The Finger of Scorn
July 16—Vengeance Is Mine
July 19—Story of "The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird"
July 21—Only a Miller's Daughter
July 23—The Portrait of the Lady Anne
July 26—The Merchant of Venice
July 28—Cousins
July 30—Treasure Trove
Aug. 2—A New Cure for Divorces

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.)
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.)
Jan. 1—The Thunderholt (Dr.)

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr. 22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May 8—Through Trials to Victory	2500
May 20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

July 2—The Flat Upstairs
July 2—The Burglar Alarm Mat
July 7—The Cook Came Back
July 9—Father's Bust
July 9—The Widower's Widow
July 14—Father's Bust
July 14—The Widower's Widow
July 16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.)
July 21—The Alibi Club (Com.)
July 23—The New Clerk (Dr.)

MILANO

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (Dr.)
July 20—The Triumph of Love (Myth.)

SHAMROCK

May 25—A Cold Reception
May 28—White Fawn
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTOR

July 12—In Swift Waters (Dr.)
July 19—The Players (Dr.)

VICTORGRAPH

June 4—The Outlaw's Sister
June 11—In the Clutches of the Loan
June 14—Not Like Other Girls (Com.)

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEWMANN

BERLIN SW 68 Fruchstr. Berlin O. 17.

Annual subscription abroad 12 sh. Write for specimen copy.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,

la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.

Best advertising medium in North Europe.

Subscription 6 shillings.

Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com. Dr.)
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.)
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.)
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.)
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.)
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.)
July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.)
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.)
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.)
July 22—The Sands of Dee (Dr.)
July 25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)

CINES
C. Kleine

July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.)
July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.)
July 6—In Wrong (Com.)	1000
July 9—Lear Learns to Dance (Com.)	400
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.)	595
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.)	1000
July 16—Disowned (Dr.)	1020
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.)	995
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.)	900
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)	1000
July 30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.)	1090
Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.)	640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)	903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.)	1067

EDISON

June 26—Pennsylvania State Police, Troop "B"	500
June 26—The Wooden Indian (Com.)	500
June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.)	1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.)	1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution	1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com. Dr.)	1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.)	1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.)	700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)	300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.)	1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.)	1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.)	1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.)	300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)	700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.)	1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)	600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves	1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)	1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.)	1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)	1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.)	1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.)	1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.)	1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr)	1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.)	1000
July 11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.)	1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.)	1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.)	1000
July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.)	1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.)	1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Understudy
July 25—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella
July 26—Twins
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart

LUBIN

Aug. 1—The Two Gun Sermon (Dr.)
Aug. 2—Housecleaning (Com.)
Aug. 2—Man Wanted (Com.)
Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)
Aug. 5—A Prize Package
Aug. 7—The Sand Storm
Aug. 8—Buster in Nodland
Aug. 8—A Double Courtship
Aug. 9—A Fly Time
Aug. 10—The Missing Finger
Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw
Aug. 14—The Stubbornness of Youth
Aug 15—Baseball Industry
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Com.)
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Com.)
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.)
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.)
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.)

G. MELIES

July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.)	1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.)	1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls

PATHE FRERES

July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.)
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.)
July 20—The Half-Breed Foster Sister (Dr.)
July 22—Pathe's Weekly No. 30
July 23—Jane Seymour and Henry VIII of England (Hist. Dr.)
July 24—His Second Love (W. Dr.)
July 25—The Redman's Friendship (Dr.)
July 26—A Bold Game (Dr.)
July 26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Travel)
July 27—For the Sake of the Papoose (Dr.)
July 29—Pathe's Weekly No. 31
July 29—Don Juan and Charles V. (Dr.)
July 30—The Martyrs (Dr.)
July 31—Anona's Baptism (Dr.)
Aug. 1—In God's Care (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Travel)
Aug. 2—The Lightning Paper Hanger
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Travel)
Aug. 3—Memories (Dr.)

KALEM CO.

	Feet
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.)	1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.)	1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.)	1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.)
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.)
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.)	875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.)	125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.)
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.)
July 15—The Lair of the Wolf (Dr.)	1000
July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.)	1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting)
July 22—The Thief (Dr.)	1000
July 24—Fantasca, The Gipsy (Dr.)	1000
July 29—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.)	1000

SELIG

June 28—Murray, the Masher (Com.)	1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.)	1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com. Dr.)	1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.)	1000
July 5—Baby Betty (Dr.)	1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.)
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.)	1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.)
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.)
July 15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.)	1000
July 16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
July 18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting)	1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.)	1000
July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.)	1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.)	1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.)	1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.)
July 26—In Maorland (Edu.)

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July 3—Scenes in Somerset (Sc.)
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.)	1000
July 17—The Grandmother (Dr.)	1050
July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.)	485
July 24—The French Army in Action (Mil.)	505
July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.)	1,000
Aug. 7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)	390
Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel)	220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)	390

VITAGRAPH

July 8—Fate's Awful Jest	500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake	1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets	1000
July 12—The Foster Child	1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance	1000
July 15—Conscience, or "The Chamber of Horrors"	1000
July 16—A Persistent Lover (Com.)	400
July 16—A Lively Affair (Com.)	650
July 17—The Redemption of Red Rube (Dr.)	1000
July 19—Honor Thy Father (Dr.)	1000
July 20—Rock of Ages (Dr.)	1000
July 22—Wanted a Sister	1000
July 23—The Adventure of the Thumb Print	1000
July 24—Martha's Rebellion	1000
July 26—The Barrier That Was Burned	1000
July 27—The Light of St. Bernard	1000
July 29—The Miracle	1000
July 30—A Juvenile Love Affair	1000
July 31—The Adventure of a Retired Army Colonel	1000

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication

Moving Picture News

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES

WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY

From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.

MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. N Omaha, Neb.

EXHIBITORS

WHY NOT HAVE A LOCAL MOVING PICTURE MADE?

Cost is low. A sure money-getter. We make 'em. Film titles. Any length. 3 Feet for 25c.

M. P. Machinery bought and sold. Cameras loaned. Announcement slides. "Best yet." 25c each, colored. Send for Sample.

Advertising Slides and Films made to order.

LECTURE SETS. ANY SUBJECT.
Plain, $2.00; Colored, $3.00 per dozen.

SPECIAL—Dante's Inferno, 12 Slides, colored, with Lecture and Posters—$3.00

GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave., New York. Dept. B.

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!

Every Exhibitor Can Do It.
Write Us To Show You How.

SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.
248 West 35th Street, New York.

We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.

Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.

SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERB ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

IF you want to keep your name and product before the Moving Picture Trade ADVERTISE in the MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Mackie-Flammer, Inc.

THEATRE BROKERS
Dealing in High Class Theatres
COMMERCIAL TRUST BUILDING,
1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ROLL TICKETS

LARGEST FACTORY IN THE WORLD

50,000— $5.90
100,000— 8.75
200,000— 16.00

CARTER TICKET CO.
DANVERS, MASS.

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year and the ART OF SCENARIO WRITING, by William Lord Wright for $2.00.

ROSS LENSES

For Projection Machines and Cinematograph Cameras
Ross Zeiss Tessar Lenses, F 3.5
No. 1—2-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
No. 1a—3-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
Send for our Catalogue of Cinematograph Lenses

GEORGE MURPHY, INC.,
57 East Ninth Street, New York

HIGH ART FEATURES

We release one every ten days in two and three-reel productions.

Write us for our list and synopsis.

NEW YORK FILM CO.,
12 Union Sq., New York City.

David's War With Absalom

1,500 Feet. Ready for shipment May 10. Three styles lithographs.

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

HARD MAPLE

FOLDING CHAIRS

$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

MONDAY, JULY 22

IMP	NESTOR	CHAMPION
"A Traitor's Fate"	"The Ranchman's Remedy"	"The Call of the West"

TUESDAY, JULY 23

GEM	BISON	ECLAIR
"Bread Cast Upon the Waters"	"The Little Rancher"	"The Governor's Daughter"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24

POWERS	NESTOR	THE ANIMATED WEEKLY
"Baby Sherlock" 'The American Olympic Victors'	"The Little Moonshiner"

THURSDAY, JULY 25

REX	IMP	ECLAIR
"The Hand of Mystery"	"Heart of a Gypsy"	"The Double Cross"

FRIDAY, JULY 26

VICTOR	POWERS	NESTOR
"Not Like Other Girls" (Two-reel feature)	"His Madonna"	"Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit"

SATURDAY, JULY 27

BISON	IMP	MILANO
"The White Saviour"	"Love's Diary" "Case of Dynamite"	"Blind Man's Sacrifice" (Two-reel feature)

SUNDAY, JULY 28

REX	ECLAIR
"Through Memory Blank"	"The Lady Barrister" "Life in Bulgaria"

THE EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

1, 3 and 8 SHEET LITHOS

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

2 REELS — THURSDAY, AUG. 15

Here's the Hugest Sensation of the Season, barring none. Even more exciting than Attacked by a Lion, a film which every exhibitor in the country has eagerly booked and re-booked in his show houses. Don't miss it. Watch the next few issues of this publication for criticism and review. They'll tell you it's a knock-out.

The Exhibitors will surely get THEIR Just Deserts in real profit and thereby enjoy their LIVES Forever if they avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity and start kicking FOR the most thrilling sensation ever filmed. To run it in your theatre means that you shall be rewarded with real GOLD

TUESDAY, JULY 30—Two Reels

The PRISON on the CLIFF

Two Styles, One Sheet Lithos
One Style, Three Sheet Lithos

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8

THE PHANTOM OF THE NIGHT

THURS., AUG. 1

A ROMANCE OF THE PALM GARDEN

Scene from DREAM-DRIVEN

TUESDAY, AUG. 13

ANDROCLUS AND THE LION

Another Lion, Hand-Colored

TUESDAY, AUGUST 6

DREAM-DRIVEN

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22

GRAZIELLA, The Gypsy

Gaumont

Gaumont

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Distributors.

WATCH OUT! OPEN YOUR ORBS!

Another big coming Gaumont two-reel hand-colored masterpiece is slated for Tuesday, Sept. 3rd. Mr. Exhibitor, don't miss this gazabo entitled

The Refugee's Casket

A MONSTROUS WINNER—HUGE AND SUPERB PUBLICITY GALORE WILL ACCOMPANY IT.

1 sheet lithos—3 sheets—still pictures—heralds—photo layouts—stupendous advertising of multifold variety.

JUL 31 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 4

JULY 27
1912

LIBRARY
PERIODICAL

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from
"THE EQUINE SPY"
Solax (2 Reels) released August 23rd.

THE

THANHOUSER

THREE-A-WEEK

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, and a Three-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"Lucille"

IN 2 REELS—TUESDAY, AUGUST 27

A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI OHIO

A Timely Story of the NEW YORK POLICE DEPARTMENT showing 10,000 New York Policemen

(One of the New SUNDAY RELEASES, Out SUNDAY, AUG. 4)

One of the Honor Squad

While the country is agog over the "crooked" policeman and his connivance at gambling and murder, we spring this story of the Honest Copper, the one who attains the Honor Squad. Take your mind off Police Corruption and think, for a change, of Police Heroism. This picture points the way.

RELEASED TUESDAY, AUGUST 6

BABY HANDS

This is our best "story of the sea" since "The Higher Law," than which it is 50 per cent better. A female flirt likes the brawny looks of a simple sailorman and attempts to lure him from his wife and baby. He is about to fly with her when Fate, the perfect card-player, lays the Baby Hands on the table of his life and calls the game off.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 9

OLD DR. JUDD

He was a wise enough doctor and of great renown in his certain neighborhood but here was a case that he never could have treated. For there was only one surgeon in all the wide world who could as much as diagnose it, and he was Head House Surgeon of the Hospital of Hearts—Daniel Cupid. HIS treatment saved the patient! A delicious story, with much trick work.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Featureframe. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name .....

Address .....

Exchange .....

Charles Reade's Great Story

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" In 2 Reels

"UNDINE," After the Famous Riverside Classic

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T C 3 A WEEK?

Don't Be Misled!!

By tricksters who offer our films for use in your theatre, claiming to be our agents.

SUCH FILMS ARE DUPES

unless you get them from one of the following

AUTHORIZED EXCHANGES

ANTI-TRUST FILM CO.,
128 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF OREGON,
385 Adler St., Portland, Oregon.
BUCKEYE LAKE SHORE FILM CO.,
422 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE,
Los Angeles, Cal.
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE,
166 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.
CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE,
Calgary, Alberta, Canada.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis Ind.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
32 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.
CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE,
32 Queens Street, East, Toronto, Canada.
GAUMONT COMPANY,
4 Queen Street, East, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.
H. & H. FILM SERVICE COMPANY,
98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
H. & H. FILM SERVICE COMPANY,
Des Moines, Iowa.
CONTINENTAL FILM EXCHANGE,
902 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
LAKE SHORE FILM EXCHANGE,
106 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Memphis, Tenn.
MAJESTIC FILM SERVICE,
216 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
Toledo, Ohio.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
422 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
81 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
729 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans, La.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
1509½ Main Street, Dallas, Texas.
MUTUAL FILM EXCHANGE,
Denver, Colo.
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
97 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich.
PITTSBURGH PHOTOPLAY COMPANY,
415 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.
PROGRESSIVE FILM EXCHANGE,
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebraska.
SWANSON CRAWFORD FILM COMPANY,
723 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
VICTOR FILM SERVICE,
39 Church Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
145 West 45th Street, New York City.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
15 West 10th Street, Kansas City, Missouri.
WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE,
307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

WE ARE SOLE DISTRIBUTORS OF

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

Address all communications

133-135 West 44th St., New York

"DEMAND THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM"

MONDAY, JULY 29

IMP
"Reunited by the Sea"

NESTOR
"The Undoing of Slim Bill"

CHAMPION
"The Poisoners"

TUESDAY, JULY 30

GEM
"Back to Her Own"

BISON
"An Even Break"

ECLAIR
"A Brother's Jealousy"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 31

POWERS
"In the Sowing"
"The Rose Festival"

NESTOR
"The Obligation"

THE ANIMATED WEEKLY

THURSDAY, AUGUST 1

REX
"The Lash of Fate"

IMP
"Adrift"

ECLAIR
"Running For Congress"

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2

VICTOR
"Taking a Chance"

POWERS
"Dora"

NESTOR
"Young Wild West's Washing Gold"

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3

BISON
"His Partner's Share"

IMP
"The Cure That Failed"
"In and Around Chicago"

MILANO
"The Battle of Two Palms"
(Two Reel Feature)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 4

REX
"The Hour of Peril"

ECLAIR
"The Price of Blood"
"Beautiful Vintage Time"

Universal Film Manufacturing Co., 1 Union Square New York

ECLAIR

THREE REELS of
LOVE, ROMANCE, COMEDY and ADVENTURE

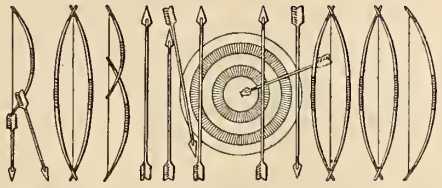
The Finality of Perfectly Finished Production



A Quintessence of Rarest Photographic Qualities

FILMS of QUALITY

RELEASED THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd

Nine out of ten persons who pass your Theatre know the story of ROBIN HOOD—eight of those nine will want to see the play—and seven of those eight will make it a point to see it.

WORTH BOOKING, ISN'T IT?

TUESDAY, JULY 30th	THURSDAY, AUGUST 1st	SUNDAY, AUGUST 4th
"A BROTHER'S JEALOUSY"	"RUNNING FOR CONGRESS"	"THE PRICE OF BLOOD" and "THE BEAUTIFUL VINTAGE TIME"
A drama with a moral	Clean, cleverly conceived comedy

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42d Street, New York City

NEWSPAPERS ARE GIVING COLUMNS OF SPACE EVERY DAY TO

THE PANAMA CANAL

THE MARVEL OF THE AGE

The Greatest Engineering Feat Ever Undertaken, the Construction In All Its Details, Including Scenes Along the Canal Zone, and

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW TAKEN WHEN AVIATOR DE GIERS FLEW OVER PANAMA

Shown in Two Reels of Motion Picture Film

WRITE IMMEDIATELY FOR STATE RIGHTS AND SPECIAL EXHIBITIONS

AVIATION FILM SALES COMPANY
Sole Distributors
Suite 711 203 BROADWAY
NEW YORK CITY

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"A MASTERPIECE—FULL OF ACTION—SENSATIONAL"
SAY THE CRITICS

The Equine Spy

TWO REELS

Featuring in striking military story the most intelligent horse in the world. The horse that can light bonfires, steal papers and ammunition, fetch water and carry messages.

DON A THOROUGHBRED WORTH $10,000

THE HORSE THAT DOES EVERYTHING BUT TALK

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd

ADVERTISING MATTER INCLUDES:

One Sheets—Three Sheets—Special Lobby Displays—Magnets—cuts and other special dope.

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7th

TWO LITTLE RANGERS

A spirited story of the West, dealing with the adventures of two little girls, the daughters of a postmaster, who track down a desperate criminal and get him only after setting fire to the desperado's shack and burning him alive. Sensational and thrilling.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 9th

THE PINK GARTERS

One of those comedies for which the Solax Company is famous. All star comedy cast. The story concerns a summer girl and her adventures in Luna Park, Coney Island. Showing Shoot-the-chutes, Toboggan slides, Frankfurters Festival and other sights. A delightful summer comedy.

COMING

Wednesday, August 14—THE BLOOD STAIN (Melodrama)
Friday, August 16th—THE STRIKE (Problem Play)

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, N. Y.

© CL.B257173

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI July 27, 1912 Number 4

THE EXHIBITORS CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

Are you going to Chicago? If not, why not? Chicago, of the week commencing August 12th, will be the Mecca of all filmdom in the United States. Everybody who is anybody will be there. Manufacturers, exchange men, machine manufacturers, will be there in person to put their claims before the exhibitors. Prominent exhibitors all over the country, the best men of their States who have been selected as delegates, will be there, and from the deliberations of this assembly much good to the whole industry will follow. The keenest, brightest intellects from the ranks of exhibitors will there decide a policy that will be far-reaching and of great value to cinematography at large, and we urge every one of our readers, whether delegate or alternate or visitor, to be present if he possibly can, and if it is within the length of cable tow to be at the La Salle Hotel during this week. Put the date in your notebook, mark it with a red mark on your calendar, and whatever you miss—vacation, mountain streams or anything else—don't, whatever you do, miss Chicago. Boost Chicago and boost M. A. Neff, the Wellington of the moving picture exhibitor.

THE SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

IN referring again to this subject we do it with a strong feeling in the righteousness of our cause. Our editorial has been quoted in many of the provincial papers, and we trust that good results will accrue from our opening up the subject, and to show our readers that we are not alone in our work we give the following, clipped from the Lincoln (Neb.) Journal:

> The tendency of motion picture production toward the feature type of subjects of two, three or four reels has been frequently noted in these columns, and the warning was early uttered against the publication of inferior material miscalled under this class. It was pointed out that motion pictures had, from the first, increased in length only and solely because they had so improved in interest and artistic quality that the public had gradually become willing to accept them. This had reference to the growth of films from the short lengths to the full reel. It was argued, therefore, that the multiple reel pictures must show still greater improvement if they were to be expected to attract and hold public attention, and the fear was expressed that too many manufacturers and importers were not alive to this necessity.
>
> Present conditions more than justify the early apprehension. The success of a few notable subjects of considerable length, and more particularly the splendid results attained with a great many full reel pictures during the past two or three years, paved the way for feature films with their greater advertising possibilities, and the demand thus created among exhibitors has been followed by a flood of inconsequential and, in some cases, positively worthless trash, that if issued alone as the only example of so-called feature pictures would inevitably retard the popularity of all motion pictures to a dangerous degree. Many exhibitors, without discriminating carefully, have taken the trash for exhibition in the expectation of increasing their business, only to be disappointed and to form an unfavorable opinion about all feature subjects generally. Thus the reputation of this important class of films has been injured, though not irretrievably. The feature films of merit may be expected to survive and win their way, while the worthless offerings must eventually be forced into the oblivion they deserve.

We trust other journals will follow the attitude as above outlined by the Journal. It is not a very pleasant subject, because we are putting ourselves in direct antagonism with those who make a specialty of feature films. We have no desire to curtail the sale of really good subjects, such as those subjects which will elevate and do real good work to the public at large. We might instance in this paragraph "The Pilgrim's Progress," "The Life of Christ," "The Life of John Bunyan," "The Travels of Christ," "Travels in Our Own Country" and several others that are now being brought out by well-known highly esteemed producers. Pictures we would question are the Carnegie so-called Educational Committee's Alaskan trip. That this is a good film we admit, and great credit must be given to Ludwig E. Erb, of the Crystal Film Company, for the admirable manner in which he intensified and reduced under and overexposed negatives and made a very creditable picture from it. The great trouble with this picture is that it drags out torture too long, especially the swimming of the Polar bear and her cub and the dragging of animals through the water. This, cut down to about half, would make an admirable reel. The one great question we are asking is, Why does Andrew Carnegie allow his name to be used in an educational film which has to be exploited in the manner it is by selling State rights, instead of being given, like his libraries, free of all cost to educational institutions? We have written Andrew Carnegie asking what authority he gives for the use of his name, and on receipt of his reply we will have something more to say. We want all provincial newspapers to copy the following and to tell all their readers to be very cautious concerning the holding of their money and investing in wildcat schemes. The desire on the part of the State rights people culminates in sending out a fairy with a fairy story who borrows a diamond stud and a diamond ring and a roll (whether stage money or genuine is hard to define); whether to some out-of-the-way village—say in Connecticut—and advertises in the local paper somewhat as follows:

"Partner Wanted—To boost State rights on ——— Film. Capital needed only $3,000. Five hundred per cent. can be made on the money. Apply to advertiser at such and such hotel,"—generally the best in the village, where the fairy exploits everybody around and is hail-fellow-well-met.

Some poor farmer who has laid aside his three thousand or four thousand dollars bites at the bait, goes in to see the fairy who holds out such wonderful visions before his gaze, and the confidence trick is played over again. Three thousand dollars cash is put down to make the eyes of the poor farmer glisten. He reluctantly takes out his roll and gives it to the fairy, and State rights are assigned. The fairy gets $500 of this for his trouble. The poor farmer gets $3,000 worth of experience and no dividends on his outlay. This confidence game has been played too often and must now stop. The State rights proposition of $6,000 or $7,000 or $20,000 is a thing of the past, and we want every editor to quote and requote this article until every man who has money to invest knows the true story of the State rights proposition. We have stopped several promising investments like this, but it is so hard to reach individuals that we want the public at large to become advised of this scheme to fleece the unwary from their hard-earned savings. We will have more to say of this proposition, with facts, in our next issue.

KINEMACOLOR—HEADLINER IN VAUDEVILLE

It will no doubt interest our readers immensely to learn that Kinemacolor is to be presented for one week at New York's highest-class vaudeville house, Hammerstein's, as the headliner. As an illustration of the position Kinemacolor takes, it is to occupy the tip-top position on the bill, and the way it will be featured we might compare with such artists as Vesta Victoria, Eva Tanguay, Harry Lauder and other variety stars. For this one week it takes the position of the star cast. The particular films to be shown at Hammerstein's, commencing July 29th, may be taken as the following: "The King and Queen Arrive at Bombay in the Durbar," "Preparing for the Calcutta Pageant with Pageant Procession." We must point out to our readers that Kinemacolor is in no sense and in no wise to be treated as an ordinary moving picture as a finish of the vaudeville act, but is made the special attraction and feature of the week.

It is already rumored in vaudeville circles that this act is being paid the highest salary ever known in vaudeville for a twenty-five-minute performance. While on this subject we may say that two nights during the past week we have been favored with a private exhibition of pictures shortly to be released to the public. We want specially to mention the dramatic picture made in America under the able directorship of Mr. Miles, who is well known to motion picture fans. The picture is unique and excellent in every detail as a first attempt of this well-known director, and we predict wonderful possibilities for the American subjects produced by the Kinemacolor Studio of New York. They are sparing no pains, money or time in bringing before the public of America some of the most excellent pictures it is possible to procure. We want to make another prediction after what we have seen, and that is, after the public has seen the effects of these beautiful, natural-color dramas, that they will go crazy for color pictures. The demand will be so great that many manufacturers of black and white pictures will seek a license from the Kinemacolor Company to manufacture in their studios subjects that they are bringing out to be produced in natural colors. While black and white photography will not go out of existence, the effects obtained by Kinemacolor will in a very short while supercede what is being now produced. We predict a phenomenal success, and we feel assured that under the able management of Mr. Brock a complete revolution of the picture industry will take place in the immediate future.

FIRST MOVING PICTURE FILM IN AMERICA, 1873

William Dietrechson, of New York and Newark, who was employed by E. H. Anthony as chemical man and expert, was a photographer in Newark, very prominent and a well-known figure in the days of the Civil War. Was an original inventor. Among his inventions were artificial ice, by ammonia process; a railway gate; breech-loading, self-ejecting shotgun; zinc etching for process and line work; dry plate (bromo silver emulsion), the formulæ in use to-day by one of our leading dry-plate manufacturers; also the first user of emulsionized paper, especially prepared and made translucent. This was made in long strips with pictures and drawn through a lantern or stereopticon, giving an intermittent motion. This inventor also made a camera to take the pictures as well as the projector for the same.

Poor beggar! Poor inventor! His body lies to-day in Potter's Field.

What is the use of inventive genius allied with drink?

THE HISTORY OF THE CINEMATOGRAPH

An extremely interesting sketch of the historical development of cinematography was recently given by Liesegang before the Gesellschaft fur Geschichte der Naturwissenschaften. An Englishman, Dr. Fitton, in 1825 first invented the Thaumatrope. Prof. Stampfer in 1833 mentioned the fact that the pictures must be moved by steps, and further gave indications as to the use of stroboscopic images, which foreshadowed the present moving picture show. The wonder wheel was described under the name of Dædelum by Horner in the January issue of the Edinburgh Philosophical Magazine, and this was patented in 1852 by Duboscq, in 1860 by Desvigne and 1867 by Lincoln. The first to use a series of negatives which were moved in the camera was the famous physiologist Marey, and he showed his results before the Paris

Academie des Sciences October 15, 1888. But a description of a somewhat similar arrangement was given by Wallace Gold Levison before the Brooklyn Academy of Photography on June 13, 1888, and in describing his process Levison stated that the apparatus could be so altered as to take a negative band of any desired length, and showed a drawing of such a camera. A complete report is to be found in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle of June 14, 1888. The reporter showed photographs of Levison's plate apparatus as well as three pictures prepared with it and the scheme of the camera with the negative bands.

THE COMING NATIONAL CONVENTION

By J. M. Bradlet

The coming national convention seems to promise us a repetition of the Republican convention of Chicago or of the Democratic convention at Baltimore. As in the two political conventions, powerful outside interests are at work against the harmony of the Exhibitors L. of A.

In the issue of July 20th of the M. P. World, Mr. H. F. Hoffman gives a very clever view on the present situation in claiming that Mr. M. A. Neff is the right man in the right place, and this sentiment is well shared by all the exhibitors using common sense. We know what Mr. Neff did for the exhibitor; he was the only man able to get the boys together and to keep them there. The League of to-day is a powerful organization that can accomplish much work, and it is imperative that the interests of the exhibitors should not be jeopardized by trying to remove Mr. Neff as the head of the League, to put in his place a less active man. We know what Mr. Neff has done, we know what he can do, and it would be a grave mistake to make a change at this time. The League, still young, needs hard workers to get the remaining States into line.

All intelligent exhibitors eager to safeguard their interests will agree that we have to face other elements:

We have a class of indifferent exhibitors, those who did not believe in organization, who refused to help the movement by their presence, work or financial assistance, and who to-day, realizing the importance of the League, have one ambition—to occupy the chairs of the men who had the nerve, the courage and the will power to work for the good cause and rob these good and faithful exhibitors of the glory justly their due. This is human nature. We have men always willing to preen themselves with the feathers of the heroes.

The licensed manufacturers do not take very kindly to such an organization, and these are the most dangerous enemies because they do not work openly, but work from under. While they seem to accept the League, are willing to donate money for the entertainments, are willing to entertain the visitors, they have men at work to undermine the strength of the League. In other words, all their gifts have a string. They will recognize the League, but the League must obey orders.

We cannot blame the manufacturers, as the League is talking of spoiling their graft game. "The Coming of Columbus" was a good picture, but it was not worth an extra $50 per day without reduction on the regular service not used while showing the special films. We do not suppose that the General Film Company asked an extra $50 per day to show us big palm leaves growing at the ends of wires, to show us some modern American suspenders on the back of supposed Spanish sailors of the fifteenth century, etc While these supposed fine special releases are getting very numerous, the regular releases are suffering so much in quality that an exhibitor cannot find enough good films to make his weekly program, and is consequently forced to take some of the special releases at an extra cost, without any reduction for the films of his regular service that he cannot use. This graft, because it is a graft, should be stopped and the League can stop it, provided the League is strong and harmonious and not under the instructions of the licensed manufacturers.

Mr. Neff is not a man to sell the League to please certain manufacturers, and, as his active and progressive policy is too well known, his downfall is desired by certain persons who would like to put in his place a more indifferent and less active man.

The M. P. World has always acted on the impulse of the moment. The New York office thought that the article of Mr. Hoffman was great dope, and it is, but Chicago has another view. Mr. Hoffman, in claiming that Mr. Neff is the right man in the right place, has displeased the gentlemen who meet at the Union Cafe with the Chicago editor of the M. P. World, and the articles of Mr. Hoffman is killing their pet idea of placing someone else at the head of the League.

The Chicago editor of the M. P. World is inconsistent. He claims that a trade paper should not dabble in politics, and he blames the New York office for violating such etiquette. On the other hand, he has started a campaign to defeat the re-election of Mr. Neff.

The great drawback on the part of the exhibitor in general is his indifference and his willingness to allow the others do the fighting, and unless we have at the head of the League a man able to keep up the good spirit, a man able to enthuse even the indifferent ones, the League will go down.

I don't know what took place at the meeting of the Indiana exhibitors of December, 1911, but in January, 1912, although no longer with the M. P. World, the late Mr. Chalmers urged me to go on the road, to visit the exhibitors of Indiana and Ohio and to take in the convention of Indianapolis, February, 1912. Mr. Neff was notified to this effect, and I had several personal messages from Mr. Chalmers for different members of the League.

When the great Dayton convention was on sight, Mr. Chalmers asked me what he should do, and I told him that, while his presence was sufficient, I advised him not to bring anyone from Chicago, as I had good reasons to fear some troubles. Mr. Chalmers fully agreed with me, but great was my surprise to see his Chicago man. I don't know and never will know why Mr. Chalmers had changed his mind, as he died before I had a chance to talk to him.

Was I right or was I wrong to fear some trouble? I claim that I was right, as the insult to Mr. Neff was more than I had anticipated. The Chicago editor insulted Mr. Neff in the lobby of the Algonquin Hotel in the presence of over 100 persons. The insult was uncalled for, but was the result of a mind looking for a chance to injure Mr. Neff's character and to produce a theatrical coup. Mr. Neff did not refuse the notes of the meeting, but, on the contrary, he had promised them, but it was none of his fault if he could not give them at the time of the insult, as the stenographer had failed to deliver them on time.

We cannot blame the men who have made fortunes by dictating their own will to the exhibitors to feel somewhat shaky at the work accomplished by the League. Some 15 months ago Mr. Chalmers told me that I had a wrong view, because a high manufacturer had told him that they did not fear a League. "No, we do not object to a league," said this high manufacturer. "This is not the first time that they try to get together. Let them form an association; they will drink, be merry and disband." This manufacturer made a mighty poor guess. The League has not disbanded, but has increased, has done some good work and is getting in shape to do still more efficient work. The League is here to stay and must be recognized. The League can work in harmony with the other interests for the mutual good of the industry, and let us hope so for the future of cinematography.

GAUMONT LOBBY PHOTOGRAPHS

Two styles of photographs of the Gaumont Stock Company, one in sepia and one in black and white, have been prepared by the Gaumont Company for the exhibitor's lobby. There are half a dozen different pictures, which comprise a complete gallery, consisting of Suzanne Grandais, Yvette Andreyor, Rene Carl, Mr. Navarre, Bebe and Mr. Manson. These are the principal actresses and actors that have performed for this eminent French concern. They are selling a complete gallery for the nominal sum of 60 cents, a price which the exhibitors will recognize as extremely reasonable. There is no reason why the lobby of every Independent theatre should not contain a complete set of the Gaumont Stock Company.

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

WISCONSIN BRANCH OF THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA MEET AT MILWAUKEE

The Convention of the Wisconsin Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America opened at Milwaukee on Friday, July 19, was called to order at 2 p. m. by M. A. Neff, the National President, who addressed the meeting.

Following Mr. Neff's address came the appointment of various committees for the efficacious handling of the business of the organization. A thirteen-mile trip by automobile to the noted resort, Donges Bay, was taken. The merry party, after satisfying their appetites to the full at the sumptuous banquet prepared for them, at which jollity reigned supreme from beginning to end, visited the vaudeville and picture theatres in the vicinity, returning to Milwaukee at as late an hour as propriety would allow in automobiles that sped the faster for the mirth of their burdens.

Saturday's meeting opened at 10 a. m. with an address by Mr. Neff. After the preliminary business of the meeting had been attended to the following delegates and alternates were elected to attend the coming convention at Chicago: Ray Cummings, Madison, Wis.; Neil Duffy, Appleton, Wis., and Max Weisfeldt, Plymouth, Wis. Alternates: Mrs. F. S. McNamara, Milwaukee; W. E. Smith, Fond du Lac, and Jacob Moelke.

Several new names were added to the membership list and 50 membership certificates were taken. Harmony and enthusiasm attended every moment of the convention, which was in every respect a success. A large delegation of members is expected to be present at the Chicago convention in August.

Just before the convention opened an incident occurred which must indeed have been gratifying to Mr. Neff, the national president. One of the members had arranged to give him a surprise and had secured from Toledo about one hundred buttons, and when Mr. Neff entered the convention hall each one had pinned across his Wisconsin badge a button whose inscription read: "M. A. Neff for President of the M. P. E. L. of America."

Moving pictures of the convention were taken by Gaumont and Kleine camera men. A parade which was to have taken place was obliged to be called off owing to the downpour of rain, much to the disappointment of both visitors and camera men.

M. P. E. ASSOCIATION OF GREATER NEW YORK COMING BALL

The Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Greater New York have appointed a committee, consisting of Mr. A. Coleman, chairman; Mr. Harold W. Rosenthal, secretary, and Mr. Grant W. Anson, treasurer, to boost their coming ball, which will take place on Thursday, November 14, 1912, at Palm Garden.

Those that were present at the last ball will remember the successful affair. We may casually state that an invitation has been accepted by Mr. Maurice Costello, and Miss Alice Joyce to lead the march on that auspicious occasion.

FILM SUPPLY CO. CHARTER SPECIAL TRAIN FOR CONVENTION

The Film Supply Co. of America have chartered a special train to convey members, adherents and invited guests to the big event at Chicago, namely, the Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, to be held in that city August 12 to 17.

There will doubtless be a gala time aboard the special, boarded with congenial spirits, and the soul of mirth let loose among them.

Representing the Film Supply Company will be Mr. C. J. Hite, Mr. H. R. Raner and Mr. Geo. A. Magie.

The manufacturers will be represented as follows: Mr. Daniel W. McKinney, for Great Northern; Mr. and Mrs. Cobb, for Reliance; Mr. Hiernand, for Lux; Mr. Gray, for Comet; Mr. A. K. Greenland, for Gaumont, and Mr. Edwin Thanhouser, for the company of that name.

The press representatives expected to accompany the party are Messrs. Farnam and McArdle, of the Telegraph; Mr. Hoff of the Moving Picture World, and Alfred H. Saunders of the Moving Picture News.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS ASSOCIATION OF GREATER NEW YORK

Local No. 2, of the New York State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, was launched with a charter membership of forty Friday, July 19th, at the New Kenmore Hotel, Albany.

Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Watervliet, Amsterdam, Saugerties and Cohoes were represented.

The work of organization was perfected by State President Samuel H. Trigger and National Vice-President Sidney Ascher, who arrived in Albany Thursday evening and visited every picture house in the city, later going to Troy, where an informal meeting of exhibitors was held.

At 11 a. m. Friday exhibitors from all of the cities above mentioned gathered at the New Kenmore Hotel, and Mr. Trigger opened the meeting with an address on the advantages of organization. He then introduced Mr. Ascher, who pointed out the benefit that had accrued to the New York City exhibitors since they had been operating as a body.

It is gratifying to note that on the call from Chairman Trigger for members, every man in the room enrolled his name. After the permanent organization had been effected, the following officers were elected: President, Geo. F. Wright, Albany; first vice-president, E. O. Weinberg, Troy; second vice-president, L. C. Smith, Schenectady; treasurer, J. C. Rosenthal, Troy; secretary, J. E. Weidman, Albany.

After the officers had been installed the hustling spirit of Local No. 2 was evidenced by the fact that the ball progress was immediately started rolling, and resolutions on more liberal Sunday laws and recommending the amending of the Penal Code to permit the admission of minors to moving picture theatres during certain hours unaccompanied were introduced.

Mr. T. A. Keppler, counsel for the New York Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, made an address, as did all of the newly elected officers as well as many of the members, and Local No. 2 bids well to be a factor in the National League.

A meeting for electing a delegate and making preparation for attending the Chicago convention has been called for an early date.

Copy of Night Telegram

Moving Picture News,
30 West 13th St., New York.

Utica, Syracuse and Rochester thoroughly organized. Practically every exhibitor in each city joined the League. Everybody enthusiastic for organization. Before returning I will organize Buffalo, Elmira and Binghamton, thereby effecting a State organization.

H. W. ROSENTHAL,
State Secretary.

HAPPY MOMENTS IN THANHOUSER FILMS.

Thanhouser pictures not only make the spectator smile, but even get a smile from the players themselves. Take the latest issues of the Three-a-week for easy example. There is the picture of "Cousins," released Sunday, July 28, in which two little girls who are related, as the title implies, decide to change places. They bear a wonderful resemblance to each other. So wonderful, indeed, that even their parents are kept guessing as to their exact identity when the children are together and dressed alike. One is a farmer's daughter and the other a stage magician's daughter. The latter assists her father while the farmer's child merely assists around the house. Both think a transfer in positions would be highly diverting. In the accompanying view you catch them talking the matter over, and the prospect for an interesting time makes them smile. As a matter of fact, the plan doesn't work out at all well. The magician's daughter makes a horrible mess of her new household duties and the farm girl finds she is a poor stage assistant to the delight of a large audience.

The smiling bonneted girl in the next "happy moment" (from "Treasure Trove," Tuesday, July 30) is the sister of the little chap who has discovered a gold mine. The tiny, lucky brother has just brought her news of his great find, but she continues at her simple duties around the old homestead, the only change in her caused by her good fortune being the happy smile that glows from her face. She doesn't know that the mine was "planted" by a wealthy man who had courted her unsuccessfully. Even with his suit rejected, the rich man still loves her, and with her life happiness in view, buries a small fortune and then contrives that the little brother locate the burial place.

The next scene from "A New Cure for Divorce," released Friday, August 2, doesn't especially feature a smile, but as a matter of fact it follows one. The man has just told his wife a yarn that has caused her to laugh, and then has told her that the story had no foundation in truth, whereupon she makes a wry face, and wants to know why he must tell "fibs." In fact, the pair don't get along well together at all, and a little later contemplate a divorce, when a wise relative shows up with a new cure that is the excuse for the alluring title.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Work was begun on the Broadway Theatre on west side of Broad street north of Snyder avenue, for Gardner, Hopkins & Milgram.

Oakland, Calif.—Adjoining Castle Hall on Twenty-Third avenue will be constructed a moving picture theatre.

Cincinnati, O.—The moving picture show at 306 W. Fifth avenue is being remodeled.

Dexter, Maine.—The new Park Theatre on Main street under the management of Haines and Wyman opened its doors to the public.

Woonsocket, R. I.—Zenon G. Dauston has bought the lease of the Bijou Theatre.

Rochester, N. Y.—Permit has been granted for the erection of a concrete moving picture theatre at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Whittlesey street.

"ADRIFT"
Imp release, August 1st.

A PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR

By Virginia West

Adapted from Rex Release

WHY is it we can never recognize a great man when he is born among us? Truly "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country.' '

In a certain small town some time ago there was born and grew to manhood a wonderfully beautiful male child. He was never like other children, always being gentle and quiet and liking to be alone.

The boy's parents died when he was not yet grown and left him enough money to live on so that he was enabled to work at anything he chose, regardless of whether it brought him a living.

The boy's name was like any other boy's name might have been—just John Stone.

When the boy had become a man and had possession of all his inherited property, he was looked upon favorably by many young girls of the town. But the parents of the girls shook their heads, and said he would never amount to anything. One girl, however, believing that he was the only young man who could support her so that she would not have to work, made her own plans. And he, being so childlike and trustful, believed that she loved him. So they were married.

No sooner were the two young people married than the wife began to try to change her husband. She tried to change his dress, which was free and comfortable. She tried to alter his habits of walking alone and of playing his flute out in the woods. Everything he most loved she tried to make him give up.

But he only looked at her gently and shook his head. The habits she would uproot were of the spirit and not of the mind. He was a law unto himself and he must do as he wished.

As the years passed the wife threw off her disguise more and more. Realizing that she had gained all that she could by it, she became her own shrewish self.

Consequently the husband was more and more away from home. He was always meek and gentle with his wife, but whenever he could he would take his flute and wander over the hills and along the roads through the woods, among the birds and wood creatures and the simple country folk he loved.

The wife was not alone discussing her husband with her neighbors. He was a great trial to her, she said. She had tried to get him to go to church with her. She never failed to go to church—never—but he wouldn't put on a stiff shirt and collar, and of course he couldn't sit in God's house in those limp shirts he liked to wear. "And besides," she said, "he's always got a lot of talking he wants to do away from home. I guess he knows nobody would listen to him here. I'm sure I wouldn't. He never has anything interesting to say."

"Well, I'm sorry for you, Mrs. Stone. You have a great cross to bear, but I'm sure you do your duty," said a next door neighbor.

Mrs. Stone sighed. "Yes," she said. "I do my duty. I always see that his meals are on time if he doesn't come to eat. And I always have his clothes mended. And I go to church and pray for him. I never miss a Sunday nor a prayer meeting nor a missionary society meeting. I don't see what more a dutiful wife could do."

"Nothing, I'm sure, Mrs. Stone, and I do think you have an ungrateful husband."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Stone, "but I mustn't let you speak ill of him, though I do have a great deal to bear."

"Yes, you are a great sufferer, I know."

"Thank you, Mrs. White."

Practically the same conversation took place from day to day with some neighbor on one side or another.

And then, of course, Mrs. Stone's very best friends always told her what the different persons of the town were saying about her husband. According to them, he was everything from shiftless and good-for-nothing to insane.

But through all this John Stone went his own way. He had found the work God sent him here to do and he was content.

Many people of the farms and villages had come to know him, and to love him. Many a christening or wedding or laying away of the dead awaited the coming of John Stone.

Many a broken heart was soothed and many a misunderstanding adjusted by a word from this man.

One evening as he strolled along just after sundown he heard a great volume of oaths pouring from the lips of a boy. He listened a moment to get the exact location of the sound. Then he stepped through the bushes and stood before the boy. He was alone.

"At what are you swearing?" asked John Stone.

"This blamed gate. She won't open," replied the boy.

He looked up and caught the look of gentle reproof in the man's eyes.

"Well, she won't," he said sullenly, hanging his head.

"Do you think swearing at the gate will make it open?" asked John Stone, quietly.

"Do you?" when the boy did not answer.

The boy shook his head.

"Then why do you swear? The gate can't help it because it won't open."

"'Cause I had to."

"I don't think you had to. How do you feel now, after swearing like that?"

The boy hesitated a moment and then looked up into the man's eyes. "I feel durn mean," he said.

The man smiled. "I'm glad you do. Now I'll tell you what you do to feel better. You tell the gate you're sorry you swore at it and promise to mend it to-morrow. Don't you think that would be right?"

The boy grinned. "It seems kinda silly, but I guess 'tain't no sillier'n swear at her."

"No, I don't think so," said the man, with a smile in his eyes.

"All right," said the boy, drawing a long breath. "Gate, I'm sorry I swore at you. I'll fix your hinge to-morrow—there."

"Do you feel better now?"

"You bet," cried the boy, his eyes shining. "Say, Mister, won't you come in an' have some supper?"

John Stone smiled and thanked the boy, but turned back to the road.

At twilight he came to a little glade, cool and green, by the side of a little stream. Here he seated himself.

He had not been there very long when he heard voices on the otner side of a huge oak tree that he was near. First a woman's voice and then a man's, but he could not distinguish the words. He arose so that they might know they were being overheard. But the voices did not cease; instead they became louder and louder.

John Stone soon realized that it was a quarrel and when finally the words reached him he knew that both persons were young and that they were lovers.

Lovers! What a wonderful word. Lovers, and in June. But the words that they were saying made the tears come into the gentleman's eyes.

Quickly, instinctively knowing that he was doing the right thing, he stepped to the other side of the oak tree. Putting a hand on an arm of each one of the quarrelling couple he stood looking at them with tears in his eyes.

"Don't," he said, his voice deep with emotion. "Don't."

The lovers did not question who he was, nor what right he had to speak to them. They lowered their eyes.

Long and searchingly John looked at them, and then he said to the young man: "You love her?"

"Yes," he said, "Oh, yes."

"And you?" asked John, turning to the girl, "You love him?"

"I love him," she said tremulously.

"Then why do you waste time in harsh words? Look," he said, pointing through the trees, "look,the moon is just rising. See how she casts soft shadows on the water. And listen. Do you hear the whippoorwill calling to his mate? And there, a night-moth has just brushed your face. He, too, is searching for his mate." He paused.

"Do you smell the wild grape bloom? They are all for love and youth and you have both. You may always love and have each other, but this great night in this great June you will never have again. Think of that. How terrible to look back upon this night and say: "Nature made all things perfect for our love and we took them not, but quarrelled."

The girl was silently weeping and the man stood with downcast eyes.

"The night is young. Will you waste it all?" asked John Stone.

"No, no," cried the lovers, and as the wandering man turned to look back from the road there was but one shadow beneath the old oak where before there had been two.

So along the road he wandered, happy in the knowledge of the happiness he had brought about.

John Stone knew his power, but in his humbleness he said, as the Master of old: "Of myself I can do nothing."

On this particular night he had just turned into a by-way when suddenly he knew that someone was near him. Again it was a man and a woman, but older than the others.

"You must come; you promised," said the man firmly.

"No, no. Think of my babies. I know I promised, but that was in a moment when I was not myself. Release me from my promise," pleaded the woman.

The man seized her roughly in his arms. "I love you," he said passionately, "and I want you. You must come."

"Don't, don't," begged the woman. "You know what a power you have over me. Please, please let me go back."

"No, you must come," was what the man answered.

"Do you want to possess a woman's body when her mind and soul are with another man?"

The man and woman started.

"Who said that?" he asked.

"I don't know," answered the woman, "but it sounded like an angel's voice.

"It is only a plain man," said John Stone, "but I can see into the hearts of you both. Man, leave the woman to her family. She does not love you. The appeal you make to her is only to her body. Her soul you cannot touch. You desire only her body and you will tire of that and there will be misery for you both. Leave her alone."

So sweet and loving were the tones of the speaker's voice that even the man listened. When John had stopped speaking he turned with a muffled curse and strode down the lane.

The woman knelt by John Stone and kissed his hand. "I thank you, whoever you are. Oh, I thank you more than I can ever show. God bless you."

"Mother," called a baby voice. Gently she was raised to her feet and turned toward the house. "Good night," said John. "You have shown me your gratitude."

And the woman sped up the path as one returning home after a long absence.

John Stone smiled to himself. Three adventures in three hours—three opportunities to do good. God was very kind to him.

And so his life went on. Sometimes he stayed at home for days at a time and sometimes he was away for days. Sometimes he stayed away at night and sometimes in the daytime. Just whatever seemed to him to be right, he did.

The people through the country loved him so, and had such faith in him that they asked him to talk to them on Sunday afternoons. This he did gladly, and always they went away greatly helped.

One afternoon when he was giving one of these informal talks to a crowd in an open grove, he saw at the edge of the crowd a strange face and one he knew to be from among a different class of people than those around him.

After John had finished his talk the strange man came up to him.

"My good Sir," he said, "will you please tell me your name? I have never heard such a wonderful talk in my life, and I've heard a good many."

"My name is John Stone. I'm glad you liked my talk."

"I am Dr. James Lane, of the Reform Church at Alderson. We are having special meetings this next week. Will you come and talk to the people?"

"Why, I am not a minister," said John, "I only talk to these people because they want me to."

"Surely that is reason enough," replied the minister enthusiastically. "No matter what you are, I want you to come over and talk to my people just as you talked to these. Will you come?"

"Yes, I will come."

So it came about that John Stone went to Alderson to talk to a strange congregation. He prepared nothing beforehand. He only said what was in his heart. He recalled to them the simple teachings of Jesus and told them not to put obscure meanings to what he said, but to take the simple statement as it was.

He brought home to them the sins common to any community—gossip, idleness, thoughtlessness, evil-mindedness, lack of love—these and other things he touched on so gently, so truly, so searchingly that he seemed to be speaking to every heart individually.

Night after night he spoke and many were the souls that were comforted.

After the meetings were over and John Stone had returned to his home, Dr. Lane wrote to the minister of that town and advised him to hold meetings also and ask John to speak.

The minister was astonished beyond speech at first, but such was his faith in Dr. Lane that he went to John Stone's home.

"Will you come?" he was asked after having read Dr. Lane's letter.

"Will the people here care to hear me?" asked John. "They do not think I have anything to give them, although I have always been ready to give them all I have."

When the people asked who was to address the meetings, nobody seemed to know. Not even Mrs. Stone knew.

On the night of the opening meeting a large crowd assembled. After the opening prayer and hymn the minister simply said: "One whom you all know and yet do not know will address us to-night."

There was a deathlike hush over the church. When John arose and stood before them a look of horror passed over the faces of the congregation.

John seemed not to know it. With a look of tender love he stood gazing into the eyes of the people. Over his face spread a radiance that seemed not of this earth.

"Oh, my people," he said in a tender, passionate voice, "I have so longed to be of service to you. I am only a man among you, but God has given me the power to see and the power to serve. Let me love you as a mother does her babe. That is all I ask."

In this way he spoke to them for a while and then he spoke of love, of what it means and how divine it is, and how all-healing. "Love will cure all ills," he said, "and without love nothing is well."

So great was the truth of his words and so deep the sincerity, and so all-reaching the sympathy that even those hardened people wept.

After the meeting was over the congregation left the church in absolute silence, not one stopping to speak.

The old minister looked at John anxiously. John read his thoughts and answered: "Do not fear, it is well. But they are a proud people and we must give them time. If I may, I will go home with you. Even my wife is best alone to-night."

The minister gladly took John home.

Before they said good-night the minister said: "I have not believed in you either; can you forgive me?"

And John Stone answered: "There is nothing to forgive. I am only a plain man who has found the work God has given him. You did not understand, that is all."

Port Jervis, N. Y.—The Airdrome has opened.

Rye Beach, N. Y.—The Rye Beach Theatre has been sold to Fred R. Tyrrell, of Harrison.

Wilmington, Del.—The Red Moon Moving Picture Theatre, at 411 Market street, has reopened.

Lafayette, Ind.—The Lyric Theater is being remodeled.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

A new camera for photographing the aurora borealis has just been constructed for Prof. Carl Stormer, of the Christiania University. The apparatus will be used to measure the relative brightness of the northern lights at different periods, and to enable a cinematograph reproduction of the phenomenon to be made afterward. The pictures are to be taken at night, and will consequently require a long exposure, which will extend from 2½ to 8 minutes each. It is expected that the result will prove of the greatest scientific value.

* * * *

The great Consistory Hall of the Vatican, the scene of last year's historical pageant for the investiture of the new cardinals, was strangely transformed recently when a moving picture show was held for the Pope's benefit, of the recent dedication of the Campanile at Venice.

The first moving picture show held in the Vatican is the outcome of the Pope's strong yearning to see once more the scenes so familiar to him. It was a strictly family affair, the guests being limited to the Pope's three sisters, his nephew and a party of intimate friends from Venice, with whom Pius X had formerly been associated in his work. Some of them had taken part in the ceremony and were able to fill in descriptive details which the Pope listened to eagerly as the films succeeded each other.

At the close the Pope expressed regret that no phonograph record had been kept of that portion of the liturgy, which he had specially prepared for the chants composed by Perosi, the celebrated director of the Sistine Choir. The Pope asked for a repetition of the films, but was reminded that they could not be finished by the closing hour of the Vatican. "Then that settles it," he remarked, and punctually to the time, the guests left, the great bronze doors of the Vatican closed for the night.

* * * *

The Board of Park Commissioners, Denver, Col., have authorized bids to be submitted on furnishing moving pictures for six or eight of the public playgrounds. Moving pictures heretofore have been confined to City Park, and the commissioners propose to have pictures of an educational character shown every evening in the playgrounds. If they prove satisfactory in those in which they are first placed, they will be given in every public playground in the city.

* * * *

Boston is to have the first church in America with a roof garden. It will be built on the site of the Clarendon Baptist Church, at Clarendon and Montgomery streets.

The roof of the church will be flat and the conventional steeple will be omitted. The roof will have crenelated borders and steel girders, making it a safe place for children to play. Services will be held there in the summer time when weather permits.

Moving pictures will be utilized to increase the interest in Bible study.

* * * *

The following, gleaned by the New York Evening World, is interesting:

"A new use for moving pictures has been discovered by the French Army.

"At a recent shooting practice a big, specially prepared screen was set up at one end of the parade ground. At the other end, some hundred yards away, stood a company of soldiers with rifles.

"At a given signal cinematograph operators projected on the screen an extended moving view representing a regiment of riflemen creeping forward in open order over broken country, protecting themselves behind trees and rocks from the enemy's fire. When the advancing figures on the screen reached a point where they assumed the size of real men seen at a hundred yards, these phantom soldiers suddenly sprang into full view and seemed to charge furiously upon their living opponents.

"At this moment came the order to fire. The real soldiers took aim, kneeling or lying down, and received the charge with a steady fusillade.

"The effects of their fire were, of course, perfectly recorded on the screen. The results as showing range, accuracy, speed, etc., are said to have been in the highest degree successful.

"Man has already welcomed the 'movies' among his amusements. He is beginning to put them to more serious use in 'preserving' weddings, document signings and like spectacles in private and public life. But, as with other inventions, he will never feel he has put them to the highest use until they serve him in war!

"However, here's a chance for a new kind of war. Why not settle the whole thing with 'movies'? When we fight another nation let us send them 'movies' of our armies and forts and ships and things to shoot at, and they in return can send us 'movies' of themselves which we will perforate. Then we will exchange 'fillums,' count up the holes, and the best score wins."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTES

Articles of incorporation of the Film Exchange Corporation were filed through the local office of the United States Corporation Company of New York City July 6th.

The capital of the company is $2,500,000 and the charter authorizes the company to carry on the business of the film exchange and to stage and produce plays and theatrical productions of all kinds.

It is understood that a majority of the important film manufacturers and producers are behind the company.

* * * *

The Detroit Universal Film Company, capitalized at $20,000, has been organized by Detroit men to supply the hundreds of film theatres in Detroit and the state with films and film accessories. Frank Drew is president; J. A. Fitzgerald, vice-president; Arthur Blankmeyler, secretary and Charles Wesch, treasurer. W. J. Campbell and Sam Levey hold stock. An office has been opened at 87 Woodward avenue.

* * * *

The Chicago Motion Picture Exhibitors' League convention will be held in August, beginning on the first Tuesday of that month, and it is expected that thousands of exhibitors from all parts of the United States and Canada will attend. Two special trains will be run from the East, one to start from New York and run via Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Huntington, W. Va.; Cincinnati, and Indianapolis. The other will start from Albany and run via New York, Buffalo, Erie, and thence to Cleveland. Exhibitors from Pittsburgh and Youngstown, O., will join the Albany train at Cleveland and proceed to Sandusky, Toledo, and South Bend to Chicago. These trains will be solid Pullmans and will be equipped with every convenience and comfort.

Big preparations are being made for the entertainment of the visitors in Chicago. Headquarters will be at the La Salle Hotel, where two large halls will be at the disposal of the exhibitors. The entire eighteenth floor of the hotel will be devoted to those who wish to make exhibits. Headquarters of the local committee has been established on the third floor of the Orpheum Theatre building.

M. A. Neff, president of the League, will make a trip East in the interest of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America for the purpose of organizing state organizations and promoting the interests of the Chicago state convention.

The following is the Chicago executive committee on arrangements: W. J. Sweeney, chairman; R. R. Levy, C. L. Hull, C. C. Whelan, C. A. Anderson, S. I. Levin, I. Natkin, C. Abrams, F. Schaeffer, J. A. Olcock, H. A. Hill.

* * * *

The St. Louis Star has this amusing bit:

"Now, what do you think of that?" inquired Sergt. Thomas Callahan, father of thirteen children, as he responded to tapping inside a moving picture show place at Sixth and Franklin avenue last night, opened the door and liberated a seven-year-old boy.

The sergeant was speaking to one of his patrolmen, but there was kindness in his voice because of his own precious ones at home. Then he stopped to question the weeping lad. The boy was Bennie Schwartz, whose parents live at 2219 Carr street. Bennie got hold of a nickel and wandered down to the picture place. He paid his way in, saw one complete performance, and then hid under the seat for the next. This he saw through and then under the bench he went to get his money's worth once more. But this time the show house closed up. Bennie waited and while he waited slumber came to him. It was about midnight when he awoke. Frightened, he went to the door in front. He cried out and pounded until Sergeant Callahan happened along, heard him and released him. Bennie was sent home.

* * * *

An Ohio exhibitor has applied for a patent on a refrigerated fresh air apparatus which he thinks will solve the problem of the stuffy theatre and, incidentally, make him a fortune. If our friend would invent anything to offset the hot air so abundant around certain of the studios, winter or summer, he will earn the gratitude of many.

* * * *

With a capital stock of $10,000, the Tulsa Film & Supply Company opened for business in the Robinson Arcade, Third and Main streets, Tulsa, Okla., on July 8th. They are reported to have had on their lists at the time of opening over thirty motion picture houses in Oklahoma and adjoining states.

DON, THE WONDERFUL HORSE, ATE FILM

Solax Wasted 1,800 Feet of Film Taking "The Equine Spy"

The production of the two-thousand-foot masterpiece, "The Equine Spy," was successfully consummated after a total waste of eighteen hundred feet of negative. This waste was not due to any oversight or the lack of efficiency of the director in charge or the bone-headedness of the camera man. A combination of unavoidable accidents or, rather, incidents, caused the waste to stretch to such extraordinary lengths. While it is true that the producer worked with the most intelligent animal in the world, it is also true that intelligent animals, like some intelligent persons, will sometimes misunderstand and thus cause waste and trouble. As, for instance, Don, who plays the title role in "The Equine Spy," was told to fetch a tin pail. Instead he stretched forth his sinuous neck, opened his jaws and tried to swallow Darwin Karr's head. It is certain this intelligent animal didn't mean this as a reflection on Karr—for Darwin's head is not as empty as a tin pail—any intelligent horse with the horse sense of Don would know this. At any rate, this incident was registered at the cost of a hundred or more feet of film and some odd pennies for this linotype history.

Don wasted some more film through a steadfast opinion that Fannie Simpton was excess baggage and so refused to let her mount him. He also mistook a "super's" red crop of hair for a bonfire and imagined Harvey's left hand was a biscuit, and gave George Paxton a joy ride which George thought would end with his poor remains on a slab in the morgue. Billy Quirk also got a taste of Don's "high spirit" by almost having his pedal extremities flattened by Don's hoofs with as much nicety and exactitude as with the modern steamroller.

But Don can afford to live in high spirits and eat up a manufacturer's raw stock. His earning capacity is $500 a week, or more than $20,000 a vaudeville year. Compared to the earning capacity of human beings, Don can earn more than a Supreme Court Judge—honest or otherwise—a bank president, an insurance collector, or a trolley car conductor (where they haven't pay-as-you-enter cars). Don can even challenge the opulent taxi chauffeur or a Waldorf waiter. The film that Don wasted could have been wound around him and completely covered him and served as a protection against rain or snow. Why, you could almost have ribboned the Eiffel Tower or London Bridge with the eighteen hundred feet of good negative that extravagant Don converted into "leader."

But final results tell the tale. Only an inveterate grouch of a manufacturer would grumble at the mere waste of even ten thousand feet of negative after an exhibition on the screen of compelling and dominating Don, delightfully going through his capers with almost human intelligence. Really, Don is a horse with a personality. He is as endearing and delectable as a remarkable child. He steals papers and lights bonfires with more than animal instinct or training. He does things with a natural grace that is seemingly born to him.

"THE TWO FATHERS"
Reliance, August 10th.

Anna Lehr Paul Scardon Mabel Trunnelle

MEMBERS OF "MAJESTIC" STOCK COMPANY

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Some of the elderly gentlemen with expansive white waistcoats and heavy golden watch fobs, who claim to control theatrical affairs, have been getting their heads together and they find that the day of the $1.50 seat for inferior companies in rural districts is over. Great discovery!

"This here 'farmer element' must be catered to; they have the money and we'll give it to 'em cheap," said one dignitary.

The others attending that momentous confab nodded their heads solemnly.

"Give 'em moving pictures and make the price five cents to one and all," exclaimed the most courageous, and immediately plans were discussed for the launching of stock companies. Smaller communities are to be given four and five reel films showing practically all of the big theatrical successes of Broadway, and with the genuine stars. The trap is to be sprung this Fall and is intended as a surprise party to the other film producers who are charged with making rapid inroads in regular theatrical finances.

According to our friend, Archie Bell, in the mad rush to be in on the game, everything is being "cinched" for the pictures. The representative of a big film concern said the other day that his firm is contracting for moving picture rights for as many popular novels as possible in addition to plays. Actors and actresses of note have quietly consented to pose and their names have been attached to contracts. Arrangements have been made for pictures that will not be shown for at least ten years. It is to be war to the knife between the Frohmans et al and the regular film producers.

Now all these facts are supposed secrets, but nothing is too good to keep from Moving Picture News readers, and when we assert that within a year such stars as Blanche Bates, Otis Skinner, Maude Adams and the rest of the "legitimates," backed by the Theatrical Syndicates, will probably be competing in the smaller communities for popular favor along with Arthur Johnson, Florence Lawrence, Costello, Anderson, Marion Leonard and the rest of the film favorites, we are not drawing the long bow. Many of the regular film concerns have "sniffed a mouse" and there is a general scramble to improve the film plots and stories. Magazine publishers are being contracted with for moving picture rights to their stories both past and present. McClure's, Street & Smith, Frank Tousey and others have already entered into negotiations with film producers who wish exclusive rights to their output.

Nor is this all. Orders have been issued by some of the leading film manufacturers to corral the popular authors themselves before the Theatrical Syndicate gets to them. Such writers of fiction as Richard Harding Davis, George Hibbard, George Randolph Chester, Morris, Owen Johnson, Jack London and others have been approached by pictureplay editors with propositions. One is that the star writers furnish themes to the film editor. If the plot or idea is acceptable it will be rewritten in the studio, the author to retain his literary rights. In other words, he can sell an idea to a film producer, receive $50 for it and the use of his name, perhaps, and then rework his plot into a magazine yarn. It is said that many of the fictionists are taking kindly to the idea.

That the Theatrical Syndicate is cognizant of the maneuver of certain film manufacturers to corral the literary output is shown by the fact that a counter movement has been put forward, and Brand Whitlock et al have contracted with the Shuberts and others to furnish dramas which may first be tried on Broadway but in any event will be filmed with a star cast and released for the various inland theatres for five and ten cents admission. The magazine and book publishers are also aware of what is going forward. McClure's Magazine, on its title page, reserves all dramatic rights to stories published, giving prominence to "moving picture rights."

The decks are being cleared in readiness for bitter warfare, for the Theatrical Syndicate proposes to fight fire with fire, metaphorically speaking.

The Theatrical Powers were long in seeing the light. They have held to the tradition that people had always paid $1.50 to visit the theatre and would always be willing to do so. Then they saw their high-priced theatres losing the old-time clientele, excepting on those occasions when big names and big productions were offered. A quiet scouting expedition into the country proved to these Powers that educated and refined people preferred to see Sarah Bernhardt, Nat C. Goodwin and Taliaferro in the moving pictures to "Ned No One" in the regular theatre; that these people, former patrons of "legitimate" theatres, liked to pay five and ten cents admission rather than the $1.50 and $2 scale in these days of high cost of living.

So the conservatives have conceded that the moving pictures have come to stay and the Powers of the "legitimate stage" propose to monopolize this branch of the amusement industry, if possible. They have theatres and the sympathy of many theatre managers in small communities, they say, and they propose to throw every resource at their command into the game including high-priced stars, new plays, literary talent, and will have the backing of the theatrical journals and theatrical magazines in the coming campaign. Talent alone will be recognized and the prominent actor who is unable to pose in the pictures may be relegated to the rear. It is said that the regular theatrical productions will be offered as before on Broadway and in the larger inland cities, and then the identical productions will be filmed for smaller cities and towns to be in competition with the regular moving picture theatre. Other than this, as above stated, other plays will be produced for regular releases.

Daniel Frohman has for years stood for what is best and biggest. He has become the managing director of a $25,000 company to produce moving pictures. He says that these pictures "will be shown in hundreds of towns too small to induce visits from great actors and great productions." Bell says that Frohman has arranged for Sarah Bernhardt's pictures in her latest production, "Queen Elizabeth," with James O'Neill in "Monte Cristo," with James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and many others. And Frohman's company is one among a half dozen to be controlled by the Theatrical Powers. Everyone with a big name and a big production is to be filmed.

The more far-sighted film manufacturers now in the field and who, starting modestly a few years ago, have built up the popularity of the moving picture and have labored hard for the uplift and refinement of the industry, do not propose to have the fruits of their labor snatched from them. They have been busy. Not only have they been preparing for the storm but they have been making inroads among the regular stars. Many actors and actresses of note have been engaged for studio work within the past few months, and more will be contracted with. Goodwin, Bunny, Bernhardt, Nat Wills, and others have been on the payrolls, and it is whispered that such stars as Eddie Foy, et al., may join licensed or independent picture forces when the fight waxes warm. Early this Spring Carl Laemmle issued what might be called an ultimatum to the Theatrical Powers in an interview granted the writer and Mr. R. P. Stoddard, of the Cleveland Leader, at the Ohio Exhibitors' League Convention at Dayton. He stated that the film manufacturers wished for no trouble with the Theatrical Syndicate; that he believed the pictures fostered new patrons for the other branch of the amusement enterprises; and he attributed the cause of bad business to too many theatres and conditions other than the moving picture show. At that time he told Mr. Stoddard and the writer, in confidence, the names of several theatrical stars who could be engaged for moving picture work by the Imp

Films Company at any time. Other concerns have just as many irons in the fire.

From information gathered from divers authoritative sources, we believe that the Big Battle is impending. When the storm is over it will probably leave an open market. And those film manufacturers, either licensed or independent, so-called, who have won the favor of the great moving picture audiences through painstaking productions, will continue to do business as before. And to quote Archie Bell, the smile in it all is that the people whom New Yorkers have called the "boobs" are now the dictators and express a willingness to spend only dimes instead of dollars, but demand the best theatrical entertainment that is going for their money.

HELPING THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS TO HELP THE TOWN

Making Education Entertaining and Securing Entertaining Education Co-operation with the Shows So That They Can Help More. Substituting "Boosts" for "Kicks"

Moving picture shows, at least most of them, are run to make money. To make money they must show the pictures the people will pay money to see, and then they must have the people to come and pay and see.

Films illustrating health, civic, education and other special topics will be shown when there are enough people to see them.

Thus is it partly up to the school people, the church people, the health people, the commercial club people, and all the other people who wish entertainment to be more than merely entertaining, and those who wish the entertainment of the moving picture shows to carry some lessons for the betterment of people and city conditions.

Any club, society, league, school, committee, or individual can make a start.

Send a note to the moving picture show manager. Call upon him. Invite him to a conference. Either way, or all of them, may be followed.

At least let him know that you are interested and that you stand ready to co-operate in any reasonable fashion. Of course his house, his attendants, and his pictures must be above reproach. That condition is fundamental. See also that every reasonable effort is made to have the highest type of machine, that the machine is properly mounted, and that it is expertly or carefully operated, with the films in good order so that eyes of children will not suffer unduly.

Ask him how you and your associates can help him. Ask him what he can offer to help you.

You can offer to work for the reasonable support of your constituency. You will ask him for early information as to what films he will offer covering any of the kind of subjects you are interested in. You will from time to time give him the addresses of a few people or groups of people to whom he can send announcements. You will yourselves agree to send information bulletins to interested groups telling of the special films you wish to have emphasized and supported.

Then you will plan thoughtfully how best to get people to go to these selected shows. Try to secure a modest fund for stenographic work, postage, some printing, etc. If you can afford a small advertisement in the papers it would be useful as an official advertisement, in addition to mention that will almost surely be given you as a matter of news. Try to do this work in the name of some organization, possibly as the "motion picture committee" of the club, society, men's brotherhood, etc. But you can have a "committee" without it belonging to any society or any other body.

Of course you will remember that you actually are not helping to "boom" the moving pictures as a "business." You are trying to get from the moving picture all possible good for your community. The moving picture is here. Let's use it.

For a plan of campaign, or for special information, or for help in any difficulty, address E. G. Routzahn, Bureau of Civic Co-operation, Hyde Park, Chicago.

A LUBIN SMOKER

A jolly little smoker took place at the Lubin Plant, Philadelphia, Wednesday. The Lubin Company has a baseball team who think they are somebody and they invited the Athletics who played that day in the city. Aside from the executives of the firm, reporters and special friends, there were about forty of the baseball fraternity. The guests were entertained with a moving picture show for about two hours and then a cold collation and cooling beverages were served in the plant restaurant. Speeches, jolly talks, songs and other smoker pastimes kept the party busy until midnight and automobiles cleared the grounds. The directors of the jamboree were Ira Lowry, Charles Goldsmith, Joe Smiley, Lawrence McCloskey and Will Kerry and they filled the bill.

Miss Jean "Billie" Acker and Catherine Tower are now on a vacation at Long Island. Miss Tower has been engaged for leading role in the coming New York production "Within the Law." Little "Billie" will return to her post with the Lubin Home Stock Company at Philadelphia. She has had offers for stock, but is satisfied with moving picture work and just loves the studio.

MOVING PICTURE TAX

Toronto (Ont.) Globe

The incidence of taxation is well illustrated in the results which have followed increases in the tax on moving-picture proprietors and operators. It is an indirect tax to be paid by the patrons of these entertainments. The notion that there is something mysterious about taxation, and that the inventor of a new tax is a benefactor, has a strong hold. Many fancy, with more or less definiteness, that the levier of taxation makes something out of nothing. This has a strong influence in sustaining obstructive tariffs. The delusion with which Sir James Whitney is obsessed, that a people's ability to pay taxation is increased by increasing the number of things taxed, is among the confusing influences.

The natural effect of the tax on moving pictures has been a reduction of about sixty in the number of proprietors taking out licenses. This will provide for the shifting of the tax to the public without any increase in the charge for admission. The reduction in the number will cause greater crowding in those remaining. This will be necessary to financially recoup those continuing in the business for the higher license fees they are made to contribute. The patrons will find less accommodation than heretofore. Additional seats will be crowded in, and the room will be materially curtailed. In spite of laws providing for aisles, exits and seating room, the crowding will be effected. Less competition will make managers less accommodating. Not only in the treatment accorded patrons, but in the actual standard of the entertainment furnished will the tax be collected from patrons. The films in use will not be changed so frequently, and there will be less need of maintaining a high average of quality. All these changes will go to make up the contribution of the public to the tax on moving pictures.

The situation is interesting as showing the certainty of the burden of taxation. The stupid notion that foreigners can be made to pay our taxes by levying on ourselves when we buy their goods or sell them ours is responsible for many wasteful and burdensome obstructions. Whether we levy import taxation or export taxation we must pay it ourselves, and bear an additional loss through the obstructive interruption of exchanges. Such taxation also imposes many burdens when yielding no revenue. The trade prevented yields no income, however great the loss entailed. The moving-picture show suppressed, for example, pays no tax, though the suppression may be a disappointment and deprivation to a large number of would-be patrons.

New Haven, Conn.—M. T. Slepack, of 29 Church street, received a permit for alterations of his present building into a moving picture theatre.

Rochester, N. Y.—Another moving picture show will be built in North street, between Grove and Achille streets, at an estimated cost of $12,000.

DETROIT CENSORS FIND IMMORAL FILMS AND PUT THEM OUT OF COMMISSION

In their report to Captain Burtis Garardin of the Central division, Theatre Censors Baker and Potter declared that there seems to be an epidemic of bad pictures which is the cause of the surprisingly large amount of film condemned, 23,628 feet.

"Wild Rose of the Hills" was condemned as immoral, and melodramatic "A Lucky Fright" suffered amputation of 20 feet, in which a child was choked. "Sheriff Outwitted" was condemned for ridiculing law and order. "The Bull Fight" was condemned as gruesome. "Tale of a Rubber Boot" showed a girl doing the "bear dance" and robbing a drunken man, and 40 feet of film was cut off. "Her Father, the Sheriff" was bad and totally condemned. They cut 120 feet out of the "Garden of Allah" showing a torture scene and a suggestive dance. "The Easiest Way" was totally condemned as immoral, as was also "Sin's Wager," 1,000 feet. "Young Wild West" was again put out of business for 2,000 feet.

Pictures of suicides, hangings, nude men in bathing, and too much gun play furnished the rest of the eliminations, a record amount.

Boyertown, Pa.—J. William Schaefer will build the first moving picture theatre here.

Whitestone, Long Island, N. Y.—A new moving picture show will open here within a few days.

Bay City, Texas.—Manager Korn, of the Grand Opera House, has let the contract for the erection of an airdrome, where he will exhibit his picture shows for the summer.

Two Killed in $100,000 Exchange Fire in Albany

Two men were killed and more than $100,000 damage caused by explosion and fire Thursday night in the storage room of the General Film Company, an agency for moving picture films, in North Pearl street. The victims were Abraham Lieberman and Iver Strafford, employes of the company.

Strafford made a gallant attempt to save his life. With his clothing in flames he crept slowly over a window sill on the fourth floor, and make a feeble attempt to extinguish the blaze that was burning his garments. He then grasped a shutter and swung from it until he was forced to release his grip, falling to the ground. He was removed to the hospital, where he died.

Lieberman, in an attempt to reach the elevator, plunged into an open well and fell to his death.

The flames were confined to the storage room. The cause of the explosion is unknown. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Richmond, Va.—R. C. Broaddus has purchased the Victoria Theatre.

Cleveland, O.—The new Gordon Theatre at Detroit avenue has been opened.

Zanesville, O.—John Smith and Frederick Drake are now in control of the Weller Theatre.

New York, N. Y.—Plans have been filed for a moving picture show at 112 and 114 West 105th street, by William H. Heddendorf.

Reading, Pa.—Julius G. Hansen changed his cigar factory at the southwest corner of Tenth and Spring streets into a moving picture theatre called the Gem.

THIEVES ENTER PLANT OF NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY

Evidently in Search of Valuable Olympic Negatives

Some time between Sunday night and Monday morning last, the premises of the Novelty Slide Company, at 20 East 14th street, New York, were broken into by burglars, resulting in quite a loss.

Some of the missing articles are as follows: One Bausch & Lomb (Zeiss Tessar) lens, Series I. C., No. 881,656; one Bausch & Lomb 5 x 8 lens; one Hall 5 x 7 camera; one dozen plate holders; a quantity of raw material and plates; several stereopticon lenses and a quantity of postage stamps.

That the thieves had some definite object in mind and were looking for some particular article is evidenced by the very careful search they made. Every desk and every drawer was emptied on the floor, the art and coloring departments were rummaged through and the several dark rooms were turned topsy turvy.

A peculiar feature of this robbery was the fact that the large stock of slides remained intact. The negatives, however, were very much upset and had been well looked over. In fact, considerable time must have been consumed in examining these.

The Novelty Slide Company had just secured the exclusive and authentic scenes of the 1912 Olympic Games through their special representative at Stockholm. These negatives are considered very valuable, and it is the opinion of Joseph F. Coufal, the general manager of the company, that these plates were the principal object of the burglary. Fortunately, the Olympic negatives had been locked in the safe, into which the thieves did not gain access.

Business was not suspended or orders delayed, but new apparatus was immediately installed and within one hour after the discovery of the crime, everything was in smooth running order.

Secret Service men have the matter in hand, and an early solution and recovery is hoped for. In the meantime, should any of the above articles be offered for sale to the readers of this column, the Novelty Slide Company will greatly appreciate being notified, either by phone, 3092 Stuyvesant, or by wire.

JACK BINNS VS. VITAGRAPH CO.

Jack Binns, who, it will be remembered, was employed as a wireless telegrapher on the steamship Republic at the time it collided with the steamer Florida, whereby the lives of the passengers, numbering about 1,700 were endangered, but were ultimately saved by means of wireless messages sent out to other ships by him, and who for his gallantry received the commendation of many nations and of the press of the world, brings suit in Binns vs. Vitagraph Co., of America, 132 New York Supplement, 237, to recover damages. Defendant, engaged in manufacturing and selling films for moving pictures, immediately after the collision of the Republic, made certain films entitled "C. Q. D., or Saved by Wireless," etc., which were alleged to represent that the various pictures were photographs of Binns, while in fact the films were made by an actor who represented him. In this action Binns contends that the pictures made him appear ridiculous, and were a reflection upon him, for they showed him fiercely puffing a cigarette during the crisis, and that one film exhibited him in a ridiculous posture, smiling and smoking a cigarette, and winking and making grimaces for the amusement of the spectators. Binns claims that as a result of these pictures, and the inference which would be drawn therefrom, that he had commercialized his fame, thus accidentally received, he was greatly disturbed in mind and his feelings injured. The result of the litigation was a verdict for Binns of $12,500, whereupon an order was made setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial unless Binns stipulated to reduce the verdict to $2,500. The supreme court, appellate division, of New York, in the above-entitled action holds that since the civil rights law authorizes a recovery of exemplary damages for the unlawful use of the name or picture of a living person, the verdict allowing $12,500 is not excessive. The order is reversed and the verdict reinstated.

THE GAUMONT WEEKLY

The Gaumont Company has notified the trade that after the issue of July 24 it will cease to manufacture the Animated Weekly. As it is well known, the Gaumont Company has been producing this film for the past five months, although the Animated Weekly has been issued by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company. The Gaumont Company will continue to release its Gaumont Weekly each Wednesday and has arranged to produce many decided improvements over any other motion picture weekly now on the market. The Gaumont operators are this week covering the Cadillaqua celebration in Detroit and the military maneuvers in Canada. Last week its operators photographed the Selkirk centennial at Winnipeg and Joaquin Miller's home life at Oakland, California. A number of additional camera operators have just been engaged by the Gaumont Weekly, so that its battery of camera men is now the most complete in America. As most of the trade is aware, the Gaumont Weekly is issued in conjunction with the Gaumont Weekly films of Paris and London, with whom it exchanges negatives. By this means, practically every section of the world is covered, a condition with which only one other weekly success fully competes. The fact that any other manufacturer attempting to issue a topical film is limited almost entirely to locate American events has prevented any widespread effort in this direction and this has left the field almost entirely to those film producers maintaining camera corps in all parts of the world.

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported Especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Willson & Co., Patent Attorneys, 715 Eighth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of Any of These Patents Will Be Forwarded to Any Person by Messrs. Willson & Co. on receipt of ten cents. Persons Ordering Copies Must Give Number of Patent.

1,031,750. Moving Picture Projecting Machine. O. T. Weiser, Philadelphia, Pa. Assignor to Siegmund Lubin, Philadelphia, Pa.

1,031,786. Developing Camera. S. D. Hajjar, Lawrence, Mass.

1,031,820. Photographic Printing Machine. Eberhard Schneider, New York, N. Y.

1,031,857. Automatic Exhibition Mechanism. R. E. Lippincott, Worcester, Mass. Assignor to C. H. Burleigh, Worcester, Mass.

1,031,863. Sign-Flasher. S. A. Palmer, San Diego, Cal.

1,031,879. G. W. Smith and W. B. Thomas, Columbus, Ohio.

1,031,906. Printing Machine. C. A. Blodgett, Hicksville, O. Assignor to F. W. Jeffries, Hicksville, O.

1,031,961. Photographic Printing Frame. F. E. Phillips, Sioux Falls, S. D.

1,032,260. Time Exposure Meter. E. M. Woodworth, Lacolle, Que., Can.

1,032,297. Photographic Shutter. Jules Richard, Paris, France.

1,032,048. Portable Flashlight Apparatus. North Dowling, Philadelphia, Pa.

1,032,065. Condenser Cell for Cinematograph and Optical Lanterns. Leo Kamm, London, Eng.

1,032,098. Mazagine Camera. Tony Zabrocki, Winona, Minn.

1,032,172. Process for Reducing the Size of Pictures on Cinematograph Films and of Projecting such Pictures to their Normal Proportions. Ernest Zollinger, Turin, Italy.

1,032,614. Camera-Stand. C. C. Lamb, Joliet, Ill. Assignor to W. M. McEwen, Chicago, Ill.

1,032,615. Flash-Light Apparatus. E. P. Lehmann, Brandenburg-on-the-Havel, Ger.

1,032,648. Envelope for Photographic Films or Plates. J. W. Berwick, Brooklyn, N. Y.

1,032,728. Portable Dark Room. A. V. Baikay, Budapest, Austria-Hungary.

1,032,798. Transparency-Holder for Picture Machines. W. A. Zimmerman, St. Louis, Mo.

1,032,839. Photographic-Print-Drying Frame. Chas. Kemler, Chicago, Ill.

1,032,867. Film-Camera. F. M. Steadman and H. W. Hales, Ridgewood, N. J.

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

A Consistent Improvement

Epes Winthrop Sargent, well-known author and picture-play expert, in a recent letter tells us his views on the condition of scripts:

"You will find the answer to the alleged poor grade of scripts in the studios and in the numerous advertisements which exploit the fact that literary skill is not required of the pictureplaywright and that the pay is generous. It is not that the grade of scripts has fallen off or that there is a smaller number of good scripts written. There has been a steady and consistent improvement in scripts in the last three years, a growth well balanced and most promising, but meantime the percentage of production of the half-baked script has increased out of all proportion to the whole. As nearly as I can figure there are now between thirty and forty schools, colleges, bureaus, associations, or whatever they elect to call themselves, where three years ago there were none. Courses are offered for sums ranging from $30 to $2, and even less, and I have yet to find a single enterprise of this sort that is headed by a practical man, or which includes a practical man in its personnel. The blind blindly lead the blind, turning out 'graduates' by the score, who in turn produce from five to twenty manuscripts each before they realize that they are not qualified to write. These flood the mail with their products, and the editor, who does not stop to study the matter, declares that the average of scripts is lower than it was a year or so ago. In one sense he is correct. The average is undeniably poorer, in that there are fewer practical scripts in each hundred submitted, but it cannot be denied that there are more really good scripts offered for sale to-day than a year ago. Three years ago there were not fifty persons outside the studio who could write a script that did not call for complete revision by the editor or producer. I question whether there were that many. I am more inclined to place the number at twenty-five. To-day there are some two or three hundred writers who can turn out good grade scripts in which the ideas are properly displayed with a due regard for technical development. For the greater part these are the men in the second flight of magazine fiction; not the stars but the men who can write good stories for the 15-cent magazines and sell occasionally to the better grade publishers. They have found that it would pay them to study camera limitations, studio conditions, censorship rules, and styles of productions, and they have. But opposed to these are several thousand men and women of all grades of intelligence, who have taken some course and, with this provision, have sent their stories broadcast, and it is these who hold down the average. There are perhaps thirty themes—standard plots—that every beginner, it would seem, has to write before good work can be done. These come to the studio week in and week out, and as soon as the obvious themes have been exhausted by one writer, another steps into his place. The editors, seeing the same themes week in and week out, declare there is no originality and are prone to send back all submissions and turn to a few favored friends for material. These are they who raise the cry that the business is going backward. Since the moveable types were invented there have been rolled manuscripts. Since the days of Guttenberg there has been copy written on both sides of the paper. No typewriter can abolish the pen-written script, and so long as this world is populated there will exist criminals who will write on onion-skin paper with a soft lead pencil and escape the horrible death they merit. These things all existed before pictureplays, were invented—they will last as long as life shall last, but there is growing up a class of pictureplay writers so small that it is lost in the mass of correspondence-school-incubated incompetents who outnumber them a hundred to one. What is needed is not the payment of several hundred dollars for a script from Richard Harding Davis, but a willingness on the part of the manufacturer to pay $50 for a decent script instead of making over some reel of five years ago or using a studio-produced script because it costs nothing. When editors edit and do nothing but edit; when producers produce and do nothing but produce; when players play and confine their efforts to playing; when the open market gives the exchange and the exhibitor the right to choose between studio spawned junk and original themes, and when the conduct of spurious schools and the publication of lying advertisements that coax the butcher from his block and Bridget from the range is made a misdemeanor, then will the golden days of the pictureplay have dawned. But so long as out of one hundred scripts produced not thirty are purchased in the open market, there will be no incentive to many men who can write to make a serious business of the game. In spite of the handicap there is a steady, irresistible increase in quality. It is up to the complaining editors to appreciate this quality and reward persistence and honest effort."

Encouraging to Authors

Mr. Sargent's above statements should prove encouraging to those authors who are devoting time and study to pictureplaywriting. He finds a consistent improvement and at least two hundred accomplished writers where three years ago there were about twenty-five. This is something gained. Mr. Sargent's assertions regarding studio conditions are also true, and we agree with him that when producers stick to producing; when Mr. Baywindow of the Doorknob concern devotes his entire attention to his acting and kindly permits those who can write to devote their entire attention to writing, there will be more meritorious work all around. The open market is something we have long advocated, and as for the mushroom "correspondence schools," they are gladsomely succeeding in keeping the prices down for the efficient few who have learned their business, not through mail-order houses, but keeping their noses to the typewriter keys and taking a course under Grandma Experience. Fifty dollars is little enough for an original working script, but there are few in the game to-day that average $50 a script no matter how good their output.

Perseverance Conquers

A friend sent us a "correspondence course for script writers" to look over before he started a fire with it. It is one of the later courses and some one of our many friends had neglected to send us pages from the "lessons" accompanied with a cry of despair. We get an average of three wails to high heaven daily from "students" who have been "stung." The usual sample scenarios which can be obtained from Lubin, Imp, Essanay, et al., for a few stamps composed most of the course, but there was one admonition the professor handed out to his victims that was worth the price of one lesson, at least. It was this: "Don't give up. If your first scripts come back keep at it." It is good advice, school or no school. Perseverance in script writing, as in other pursuits, conquers all things. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again. Maybe your first three or four scripts are just the preliminary training you need. Keep studying and thinking over that idea to the exclusion of all else. Look at it from every angle, try and imagine what you would do in this or that situation; let the technique care for itself, you stick to that story and develop it logically and rapidly; remember you are not telling a magazine story but are writing a pictureplay. What is worth doing is worth doing well, and so, if you enter the script writing profession, give it a thorough tryout and put your very best into your efforts.

Naming Your Script

A good original title for a script is everything. It gives a decided polish to the whole and shows to the editor that care, thought and originality can be expected when he glances through the pages. It is not generally known how Kipling chose the title "The Light That Failed" for the book that helped to make him famous. He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was somewhat dissatisfied with this rather prosaic title. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight, the light went down suddenly, when Kipling exclaimed:

"By Jove, I've got it! 'The Light That Failed!'"

A good title to a pictureplay often comes by like inspiration. It should be attractive, appealing and, at the same time, terse. Don't write such stereotyped titles as "A Woman's Jealousy," "Revenge Is Sweet," "The Convict's Remorse," etc. Try and get the soul of your story into your pictureplay title. Of course, the editor can rewrite the title, but if the editor has to revise too much, your script may be returned to you. Not enough attention is being paid to pictureplay titles by many producers. See that your pictureplay goes out bearing an apropriate and thoughtful name.

The Sub-Title

While on the subject of titles let us touch for a moment on the question of sub-titles. There are too many writers at present who spend time rigging up what they believe to be snappy sub-titles that could well be utilized in changing scenic action in order to eliminate the sub-titles altogether. The best pictureplays are those that tell the whole story without the use of a single sub-title. Make your sub-titles as few and far between as possible; make 'em short; and if you make your play clear, natural and real, you will have no need of shooting your script into shreds with sub-titles. We sometimes think that the beginner should abolish the use of sub-titles altogether for we have seen so many plots that have been ruined by attempts at technique. Technique is all right when the author gets further along, but, in the beginning, the author had better throw his heart and mind into his story rather than to fuss about sub-titles. An editor can furnish the sub-titles, if needed, but he cannot furnish originality to the pictureplaywright. We saw a script the other day the writer of which stated that he was afraid that he had not enough sub-titles. He had a half-dozen and there were only two needed in the entire script. He had spoiled a big story with sub-titles!

Miss Van Buskirk Busy

Miss Christine Van Buskirk, assistant to Giles R. Warren, editor of the Victor Film Company, has been unusually busy the past few weeks looking after the affairs of the department during Mr. Warren's absence at Asbury Park, N. J. Mr. Warren suffered a breakdown through overwork but expects to be at his desk within a short time. Miss Van Buskirk has made rapid strides in the profession since she joined the Powers script department a year ago. She has already made many warm friends among writers and others. She is a prepossessing young lady, energetic and full of business ability. Editor Warren says he is fortunate in having her as an assistant, and Miss Van Buskirk says she is fortunate in having the advantages of instruction under such a versatile editor as Mr. Warren. Miss Van Buskirk is meeting with success as a pictureplaywright and is taking many burdens from off the shoulders of Mr. Warren. She is a comer in every sense of the word, and we predict a bright future for her in the moving picture world.

WM. LORD WRIGHT.

Parkesburg, Pa.—Adam Spangler has bought out a moving picture show.

Mount Pleasant, N. Y.—W. J. Miller has sold the Bijou Theatre to M. J. Brower, of Schenectady.

New York, N. Y.—A nickelette will be built at 169th street, West of Fox street, by A. Mancus, 44 West 125th street.

Richmond, Va.—Spiegel Motion Slide Company. Geo. B. Hutchings, president; J. F. Tilley, vice-president, Washington, D. C.; F. L. Middleton, secretary, Washington, D. C.

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Lux

"The Mysterious Mr. X. and the Unfortunate Heiress" is one of the best of the recent Lux offerings. It is unique in that the hero neither courts, kisses nor marries the heroine. The photography is good.

* * * *

American

"The Canyon Dwellers," for release July 25, is strong in dramatic interest. The story is unusual in that the "neglected woman" fights for the life of the sweetheart of the woman for whom she has been thrown aside. Miss Bush has succeeded in making this big role of the neglected woman stand out well.

* * * *

Majestic

"The New Clerk," Majestic release for Tuesday, July 23, is a cleverly thought out story of a dramatic trend, well produced. The ease with which the Majestic players handle the production is commendable.

* * * *

Reliance

"The True Love" is another conquest for Gertrude Robinson. She plays her part as the poor little girl of the slums to her place in the mansions of the man who befriends her and whom she afterwards learns to love with an ease and simplicity of manner that is refreshing. In one scene of this picture a pretty innovation consists in the portrayal of a nest of young birds in the bough of a tree.

* * * *

Thanhouser

"Lady Anne," for July 23, is a winner. That such words as "creepy" and "gooseflesh" were heard flitting in awed whispers about the projector's room is a fact that tells more forcibly the deep impression made by the picture on its audience. The story opens in the year 1770, when the beautiful Lady Anne, played in a charming manner by Miss Flo Lobadie, in a jealous fit throws over her lover, who goes away to the war and is killed. She marries another and a child is born. From here we are transported to the year 1912, when a descendant of the Lady Anne is entertaining Much the same happening occurs, and the spirit of the Lady Anne steps from its frame, and so on.

* * * *

Thanhouser

"A New Cure for Divorce," for August 2, is good. The Nobel cure for the desire for separation in the newly married pair, who have quarreled over so small a matter as learning to swim, which the young bride refuses to do, is the exhibition of a moving picture of their wedding which was taken unawares to them.

"Cousins," for July 28, is an amusing and unusual bit, in which the two central figures, both children "as like as two peas," change places, the country cousin finding her Waterloo in trying to take her city cousin's place on the stage.

"Treasure Trove," July 30, intermingles heart interest with childhood dreams. The "Thanhouser Kid" more than fulfills what could be expected of a child in this production, and when the banker, out on his vacation in the country, drops the bags of gold into the hole dug in the ground by the child with its little shovel, where he is seeking for hidden treasures, and the child's eyes grow wide with antonishment and pleasure, we are satisfied with the dreams we, too, have woven in childhood.

* * * *

Solax

"The Requital," for July 26, is one of their best. Darwin Karr has played his part of the poor young husband well, and has continued his work with the part of the convict equally well. The Solax actors have done this production justice.

* * * *

Majestic

"The Mighty Hunter" is a good bit of comedy. The character of the "Mighty Hunter," who kills a calf, shoots a man's hat off, is kicked and beaten in consequence, and finally buys in a curio shop the "wonderful trophy" which he sends home to his wife, saying he has been almost gored to death in his desperate attempt to secure it, is splendidly played. This is a scream.

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

It is absolutely astonishing to note the perils to which the motion picture actor subjects himself, and apparently not under protest either. "Their Lives for Gold," from the Gaumont Company, is a startling example of this. It is seldom that so many hairbreadth escapes occur in the course of one picture.

This production is a thrilling "Western," remarkable in incident, excellent in photography—the photography peculiar to the Gaumont Company—and superb in action and conception. The story is one full up with the fire of adventure, sensational without being offensive, and is one of the liveliest "Westerns" that has been shown in some time. There is a leap from a signal station to the top of an express train, such as makes one wonder what valuable bait must really have been offered the dare-devil actor who performed the feat in order to coerce him into risking his life. And, again, there is the actual derailing of the engine with one of the actors on it. The locomotive is seen plunging down the embankment and the man rolling out. And perhaps most vivid and realistic of all is the dynamiting of the building in which the leaders in the play give up "their lives for gold."

This production is in two reels, and the story is of a race between two young fellows, formerly comrades, for a gold claim of which they were told, and to which they had been directed by an old miner on his death bed. The young men, as in many another instance, become bitter enemies over the question of who shall arrive first at the claim, for, according to the American law, the man who first sets foot on the ground and files his location notice is the man who has the right to its hidden treasures. The one pursues the other, placing obstacles in each other's way whenever possible, not barring attempts to kill. The conclusion shows the two men lying dead, the one having set the fuse to dynamite the building in which he is hiding as the other approaches. Sure of certain death if he meets his foe, he determines to kill both.

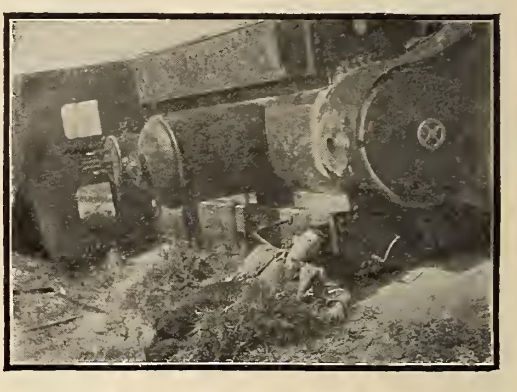
"Their Lives for Gold," released August 15, is certainly a thriller, and should prove one of the best sellers on the market.



ENTERPRISE OPTICAL COMPANY, CHICAGO

We are asked by the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company to call attention to another new Motiograph improvement for the 1912 Model Motiograph, consisting of a heavier balance wheel, for use on their latest model machines.

There are six parts necessary to the successful use of the heavier balance wheel. So that all users of the 1912 model may take advantage of this new improvement, the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company is making a special offer on the six parts of a minimum sum, further details of which will be found in their advertisement contained in this issue.

If any further information is desired, we suggest that you write direct to the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, whose address will be found in their advertisement.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

One hundred persons, including Producer Emerson, two camera men, property men, stage carpenters, etc., left on Saturday, July 20, for Starved Rock, Ill., on a special train over the Rock Island. This was the big company employed by the American Film Manufacturing Company to produce a series of historical two-reel subjects on the famous ground. The company will all be camped on the great rock by special permission of the State of Illinois. The story of Marquette, Joliet, La Salle and Tonty is the first big subject to occupy Producer Emerson's mind. This will be followed by "The Battle of New Orleans," a spectacular production, centering around the life of Andrew Jackson. A number of 1,000-foot Westerns and several additional two-reelers is expected to be the result of the company's stay on historic ground.

HOW THE AMERICAN SOLVED THE CAMERA PROBLEM

In establishing three big companies at Chicago the American found itself beset by that puzzling question of where to secure competent camera men. This was effectually settled, so far as Producer Emerson's company was concerned, by the voluntary application of Jack Gill, assistant factory superintendent and well known in the technical departments of Eastern houses. It was not known that Mr. Gill numbered the camera among his other accomplishments, and Producer Emerson is now congratulating himself on having obtained one of the really few camera men worth while.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

AMERICAN

THE CANYON DWELLER (July 25).—James Dickson, miner, worked with his pals at placer mining. He fell in love with Jessie Berger but Jessie never cared for Jim. Her lack of affection was more than replaced, however, by the worship of Marjie Brannon, who loved Jim with all her heart. Marjie had often pleaded with Jessie not to encourage Jim and Jessie had promised faithfully.

One day Bob Wentworth joined the camp and it was love at first sight between him and Jessie, much to Marjie's delight. Bob seized Jessie at the stream one day and had carried her over before them all, much to the disgust of Jim and the amusement of the others. Charlie Berger, Jessie's brother, a close pal of Jim's, did not like the newcomer and told his father so. Old man Berger, therefore, kept a close eye on his daughter and several times, when catching her in Bob's company, threatened Bob and securely locked up his daughter. Marjie, meantime, watched developments and lost no opportunity to throw the couple together.

Berger and his son decided that they must make way with Bob, so, in company with Jim and several rough characters, they hunted for him through the hills. Jessie, hearing through Marjie of her lover's peril, hurried to him and together they fled. A battle followed when the two factions met in the mountain passes. Marjie, with gun in hand, watched the combat carefully, and when one husky miner drew deliberate aim at Bob, she shot him dead in his tracks. Rushing around the face of a giant boulder, Bob and Jessie came face to face with Jim. He had the drop on Bob, and with an evil laugh, slowly raised his revolver, taking aim at Bob's heart. Marjie saw him, a horrible fear seized her, and then, mastering her emotion she pointed the gun at Jim and fired the fatal shot, which robbed her of all future happiness but gave a corresponding joy to her two friends.

IT PAYS TO WAIT (July 29).—Old Ben Hoover with his wife and two pretty daughters managed to eke out a precarious livelihood raking alfalfa and helping generally on the big ranch. John Rich, foreman, had long made love to Mabel but she did not return his affection. A day came when Rich went to her parents. They readily gave consent, thinking it a fine match for their daughter.

Out of the prairie rode a handsome young man, dressed in fashionable riding garments and mounted on an expensive, sleek-looking mare. He dismounted in the bushes and hastily changed his clothes, appearing before the foreman as a day worker in quest of labor. Rich eyed him carefully and finally handed him a rake. The young man proved a poor workman, however, for he soon found Mabel's company much too enticing for heavy work. On the way home that night he made love to her and found a not unwilling listener. Rich also called, and finding but little comfort in Mabel's unresponsive mood attempted to kiss her by force. Just then the newcomer stepped in and an inspiring fight followed. The following morning Rich peremptorily discharged father, mother and the two sisters while the newcomer leaned on his rake and blandly smiled. Then Rich turned to him. The newcomer with a well-aimed blow laid Rich on his back in the alfalfa, and turning to the other workers, quietly drew a card from his pocket. Rich rose from the grass in time to hear the name of the ranch owner and to discover that he had been kicked about by that very person.

Later the newcomer called on the old folks and formally asked the hand of their daughter. The old man refused to hear him at first, believing him the cause of their trouble but when his magic name was whispered in the old fellow's ear, a transformation took place, and, you can easily imagine, there was but little trouble in convincing the girl that the time to marry had come.

COMET

RECONCILED AT RENO (July 29).—For action, humor of the wholesome sort and interest this engrossing film is in a class by itself. There is not seemingly a dull period and attention is held from start to finish. The theme is novel and the treatment is out of the ordinary. Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones are two families who have never felt that they would like to be separated from each other for a moment. They alternate in dining at each other's home and at the opening of the tale we find them making merry over an appetizing and enjoyable dinner. The husbands suddenly elect to play cards and the wives are peeved over what they term uncalled for neglect. "I know how to make them pay some attention to us," says Mrs. Wilson. "How is that?" returned Mrs. J. "You make love to my husband and I will make love to yours." They agreed and the plot is carried out forthwith. Of course such schemes go awry as have thousands and thousands before since the world began. Whether it was Mr. Wilson whose love making took too ardent turn to suit his wife, or whether Mr. Jones' attentions to Mrs. Wilson were misconstrued as too realistic to meet with the standard of decorum practiced by Mr. Wilson is neither here nor there. Suffice to say the innocent plot caused a heap of trouble and strained the former friendly relations existing between the families and winding up for solution in the divorce court at Reno. Many complications ensue before the quartet are reconciled. Mr. Jones secures a position as barber and Mr. Wilson comes to the former's place of business to get shaved. Mr. Jones recognized Mr. W. and wonders whether he should not put him out of the way with a slash across the throat or by cutting off one of his ears. Just as he is about to put the idea into execution a gleam of recognition flashes over the minds of both and the result is that they have a mix-up all over the place. When matters become too unhealthy for all concerned Mrs. Wilson confesses to the plot and a reconciliation follows. The picture has the advantage of capable interpretation. The cast includes such well known players as Mark Sullivan, Eddie Garvey, Mabel Miller, Clara Stanton and the regular Comet Company.

IMP

REUNITED BY THE SEA (July 29).—Joe Layton and Jim Coburn are hard working fishermen in the little village of Rayton, where pretty little Emily Dobson is the belle. Joe and Jim are pals until love for Emily enters the heart of each.

One day their fishing smack is overturned in a storm and both seek refuge in a desert island, where they build and share a rude hut. For days no sail is sighted. For days the thoughts of each wanders to the little girl at home who realizes that she loves Joe Layton the better of the two. Her heart yearns for a sight of her sweetheart but two weeks pass and no sign of either of her friends.

One day Jim is wandering along the shore of the island when he sights a vessel. The temptation comes to him to hoard the ship and leave Joe behind, thus returning to his home and marrying Emily. The fishermen see Jim waving to them, put off a boat to the island and rescue him. Just as they are passing out of sight Joe rushes to the beach, but too late. He realizes his friend has b him and slowly wends his way back to his lonely hut.

Jim woos Emily and is accepted. In the joy of the moment he takes more from the "flowing bowl" than is wise, and falls from his boat into the water. His body is washed ashore on the very island where they were marooned. Joe walking along the shore finds his enemy and the boat. The sea has avenged him. Emily thinks he is a ghost and runs away, but is soon reassured and Happiness is King.

ADRIFT (Aug. 1).—Marion Larkin, a pretty but frivolous girl, is beloved by James Dalton, a ne'er do well son of a lawyer, and Robert Smith, a young broker, who is rapidly making a name and fortune for himself on Wall Street. Marion loves Dalton, but dazzled by Smith's success, she accepts the broker. Just before the wedding a turn of the market reveals the true nature of Marion. She jilts Robert and elopes with Dalton. A few years later we find the pair in poverty and the old adage "Marry in haste and repent at leisure," is holding good in their case. Dalton, a scoundrel at heart, deserts his wife and child. The wife, unable to cope with this new test of fortune, places the child in an orphan asylum and takes the easy road that appeals always to the weak.

Five years later Smith, who has recouped his losses, and is now leading a lonely bachelor life, is advised by his partner to adopt a child, give himself a new interest in life. He does so and chance causes him to unknowingly adopt the child of his former sweetheart. She grows into womanhood and falls in love with her guardian. The mother after years of dissipation, poverty and forgetfulness has the spark of motherhood awakened in her heart and returns to find the daughter she deserted is now the affianced wife of the noble man that she had cared for and deserted as a girl. We then see this weak woman make the sacrifice that only a mother can or ever will make. The picture closes with a moral lesson that cannot help but strike home to the hearts of all who see it. A truly noteworthy pictureplay of the higher order. A clean story capably acted in an appealing environment displaying unusual backgrounds of photographic excellence.

LUX

THE MYSTERIOUS FLOWERS (Aug. 2).—Roger Maclean spends a quiet healthy life on his farm, where dwell also his father and his sister, a charming girl of eighteen summers. He is energetic and skillful and soon transforms his old-fashioned farm into one of the most up-to-date in the countryside.

One day he visits the chateau of a wealthy landowner, who is his neighbor. The landowner proves to be a charming lady, who had lost her husband whilst she was extremely young. Roger conceives a violent passion for her. She shows him some flowers she is trying to cultivate which can only be grown in the Far East. Roger succeeds in cultivating the flowers in his own greenhouse and every day places a bunch secretly in a place where Mrs. Montfort can find them.

One day his sister is visiting the chateau and is insulted by one of the male guests. Roger rushes to the chateau and demands an apology, which is refused. He is removed forcibly by the grooms. Some time later he meets the Countess riding upon one of his private roads. He orders her off and henceforth a peculiar animosity exists between them—thus making it impossible for Mrs. Montfort to conceive who is placing the flowers in their usual spot.

Later Roger stops Mrs. Montfort's runaway horse, he is dangerously hurt, and she escapes uninjured. During his illness Roger refuses to see Mrs Montfort but he arranges with his sister to still place the flowers in their usual spot Roger's sister arranges that the lady shall find out who it really is placing the mysterious flowers in her path daily and thus leads to a happy ending

A RACE FOR LIBERTY (Aug. 8).—Jim Ryder, and his charming little wife Ada, live contentedly until Jim's brother, Joe, is suspected of horse-stealing. Jim becomes mixed up in the affair, and the two brothers slip away from the settlement as quietly as possible, making arrangements with Ada beforehand to join them at a distant town as soon as she can leave without creating suspicion

The two brothers get lost whilst crossing an awful desert. Joe dies of thirst and, after much weary toil, Jim manages to retrace his steps to the settlement. His little wife is glad to see him again and is giving him a drink of water, which he badly needs, when footsteps are heard approaching the cottage. Hastily dropping the cup to the ground, Jim seeks to hide himself. A moment later the Sheriff enters. Suspecting that Ada knows where her husband has taken refuge, the Sheriff frequently visits the cottage in the hope of making her divulge her secret. He notices the fallen cup and his suspicions are aroused. Before he can take action, however, Ada promptly covers him with a revolver and he soon finds himself bound securely to a chair whilst Ada and her husband are dashing across the plains once again.

Uncertain of the road, Jim dismounts from his horse, about an hour after and proceeds on foot a little way. The sheriff, who has broken his bonds and tracked him up, surprises him and covers him with his revolver. Jim is forced to place the handcuffs upon his own wrists. At the vital moment, Ada appears upon the scene; picking up a stone, she dashes the revolver out of the sheriff's hand, and thus turns the tables. Thus her husband is enabled to cross the State line beyond which the sheriff has no further power. Mounting their horses, he and his brave little wife dash off to freedom.

THE POSTMAN'S ESCAPADE.—Jimmy Jones, the postman, is not satisfied with the speed by which he covers his rounds. As he wants to get done in time to go to the cricket match, he borrows a pair of roller skates from a little boy, and then proceeds upon his rounds. Jimmy has a lively time, but does not feel very much like going to a cricket match when he is done.

POWERS

THE SOWING (July 31).—Baby Harly is given an excellent opportunity to display her cleverness in "In the Sowing," and her acting is little short of marvelous. The little girl and David Wall are the principals. How the outcast, a social pariah, shunned by everyone, leaves his native village to return even more degraded, is converted to Christianity and snatched like a brand from the burning by the simple reminder of the child, makes one of the most beautiful stories ever told. The reminder "God died for you" brings about the transformation. The gentle reproof is a revelation. Latent thoughts are revived and the man sees that all is not lost; that he still retains his manhood and the effect is magical. He is welcomed by his old associates, reclaimed, purified and saved by the grace of God.

And on the same reel:

THE ROSE FESTIVAL.—A scenic film that will be a revelation to those who live remote from the land of flowers. The film is a beautiful picture of a fete day in the West—flower day in which roses are literally banked on the streets and vehicles are covered with roses making grand and imposing spectacles of joyous, happy people glorying in their climate and flowers.

DORA (Aug. 2).—In Dora the Powers Picture Players have produced a classical dramatization of Tennyson's beautiful poem in a forceful and convincing manner, bringing out all the poetical and dramatical qualities of the well known story.

Miss Florence Barker and Mr. Edwin August, the stars of the Powers stock company, appear in the principal roles of Dora and William, ably supported by Charles Manley and Fritzi Brunette, a notable cast and a very capable one. The character Dora is portrayed in an exquisite and well chosen manner while William, the son of Farmer Allen, who is loved by Dora and Mary, has a grasp on the part that makes it true to the conception of the celebrated bard.

In the strong scenes the principals are shown at their best—and the dramatic version is replete with tense moments. In the scene where Farmer Allen discovers that he has been tricked, Mr. Manley is grand and Miss Barker is given an opportunity to display the emotions that bring out the best that is in her.

The plot is strong and unique and when Dora takes the child of the man she loves and the woman who has won him from her and represents to the simple farmer that it is her offspring that the son may be forgiven and his wife and son owned, nothing can be conceived of greater dramatic worth and the incident is touching and will appeal to all of those who love romance and can appreciate the appeal. The story is replete with tense situations and of the sacrifice of Dora, her unselfishness and fortitude, it can be said that nothing more touching has ever been conceived in the way of dramatic attributes.

Miss Barker and Mr. August are to be congratulated on their efforts in playing this drama. The settings are beautiful and chosen with excellent taste and the picture is faultless when viewed from a critical standpoint.

RELIANCE

ORDER IN THE COURT (Aug. 14).—Judge Casey sits on the bench and dispenses Irish and other justice in a way that will bring a laugh to the lips of the most pessimistical person. He has a busy morning of it, and so do the counselors, who find themselves in a wrangle over the Judge's decisions from the very beginning. He has successively a pathetic case where a boy stole bread for his mother; a drunk who came practically in the arms of two policemen; a young shoplifter who sets the hearts of the entire court, including the Judge, in a flutter; and two prize fighters who have been caught in the act of breaking the boxing law. The latter case is of intense interest to Judge Casey, for he prides himself on being a bit of a boxer himself. Upon the promise of acquittal if they will give an exhibition bout in court to determine whether or not they broke the law, the boys have a one-round bout that is excitement from start to finish. At the finish the judge, policemen and lawyers get too close in their interested way and each in turn receives a knockout blow from the boxers, so that the boys are enabled to leave court comparatively unmolested.

On the same reel:

THE OLD SWIMMING HOLE.—This is a subject that will appeal to every boy and man as well as to their sisters and mothers. The story is of a little schoolboy, his love affair with a little school girl, and a fight at the old swimming hole with his rival, the bully. While they are fighting in the water the bully is suddenly seized with cramps and is rescued by the other boy. The mothers get together and compel the constable to put up a sign at the swimming hole that there will be no more swimming allowed. The boys and girls see this sign but pay no attention to it. They get into the water and indulge in a free-for-all swimming and diving contest. The constable arrives in the midst of the fun, but the boys and girls all duck under the water and he passes on, content that his orders have been obeyed. As soon as he is out of sight the children come up from under the water and the scene fades out with all hands enjoying themselves in the old swimming hole.

A MAN AMONG MEN (Aug. 17).—Tom, a lumberman, is in love with Jessie, daughter of the foreman of the camp. Her father objects to the match and there is a quarrel between the men. Jackson, another lumberman, seeing Jessie's father leaving the office on pay night with a large roll of bills, follows him and knocks him prostrate. About this time Tom decides to leave the camp and leaves a note under the door of Jessie's home addressed to her father telling him that Jessie and he alone know the reason for his departure. After his crime, Jackson passes the house and seeing the note he reads it. He has an idea whereby he can place the crime on Tom's shoulders. He places the wallet he stole in Tom's cabin. Later Jessie finds her father's body and rushes to the men to tell them what happened. Tom is missing and this rouses suspicion against him. Led by Jackson the men search Tom's cabin and find the wallet. The men start after Tom and get him. He is led back to camp. The letter is produced. Jackson makes a pretense of opening it but Tom, afraid its contents will be misconstrued, and to get it back unopened, takes the guilt on his shoulders to save Jessie's good name. Tom is condemned to die within the hour. He is led off to be hung. In the meantime Jessie and a woman are working over the supposedly dead man. He recovers consciousness and Jessie rushes out to bring the men back with Tom. Upon learning that the foreman is not dead Jackson hurries to the bedside of the injured man. Tom is exonerated and the truth proved. Consent is given to the marriage of Jessie and Tom. A lone, riderless horse testifies to the accuracy of the men's shots, tries to get away. The men realize the truth and fire after his departing horse.

REPUBLIC

THE OCTOROON'S SACRIFICE (Aug. 5).—There are many and varied tales told of hardships and cruelties of the South before the war. In spite of the nobility of the genuine Southern families, there were many alien slave holders whose treatment of the slaves was anything but laudable.

The beautiful Octoroon was the property of an unscrupulous French adventurer whose son was a typical "chip of the old block." After being accosted time and again with insulting propositions from both father and son, she finally runs away and by a clever ruse evades the bloodhounds and negroes that have been put on her track.

About this time Eveline, a little Southern beauty, in a teasing mood jumps into a row boat to evade the caresses of her sweetheart, Frank Lee. As the boat nears the center of the stream she laughingly waves to her sweetheart on shore and in so doing loses her oars; in an effort to regain the oars, the boat is capsized and the girl is thrown into the stream. The Octoroon, who is hiding in some bushes nearby, sacrifices her chances of freedom by leaping into the water and rescuing the young girl.

Eveline becomes very fond of her and finally persuades her father to buy the Octoroon from her French owner. The young Frenchman when he meets Eveline falls madly in love with her in spite of the fact that the young lady shows her preference for Frank Lee, a handsome young Southerner.

The Frenchman, through his father, manages to almost ruin Eveline's father, and when all honorable methods of love-making have failed to win Eveline, he does not hesitate to threaten her father with ruin unless she accepts him. The Octoroon hears of this and, thinking to save Eveline by sacrificing herself, she makes an appointment with her former master and, during a struggle, the man is thrown over the cliff and is dashed to pieces on the rocks below.

Young Lee is accused of the murder on circumstantial evidence and is locked up in the county jail. In the meantime, the Octoroon, weak and ill from exposure, comes to the hut of a poor "white trash" family—here she learns that young Lee is being held for the murder of the Frenchman and, in spite of her weakened condition and the fear that she might again fall into the hands of her former owner, she braves all dangers and, appering before the authorities, confesses how the young Frenchman came to his death.

Her sacrifice brings happiness to two loving hearts and peace to her before she dies, as the result of her painful experience.

BISON

AN EVEN BREAK (July 30).—Don Carlos, a Mexican gambler, who has been imbibing too freely, falls out with his little sweetheart, Elvira. He becomes fascinated with Maria, a frequenter of the dance halls. Elvira is aware of the fascination of the other girl; she accuses him and he rudely thrusts her aside.

Elvira wanders to a secreted spot, sobbing as if her heart would break, when suddenly Jack Diamond, the exceedingly young and good-looking foreman of the I. X. L. Ranch, discovers Elvira. He sees she is in trouble and a natural bond of sympathy arises between the two. Their conversation is heard by a sneaking hanger-on, who for a mere pittance reports to Don Carlos that his sweetheart is in company with the foreman. In a drunken, jealous rage he overtakes her and is trying to force a confession from her.

In her excitement and fear she accidentally falls over the precipice. Don Carlos, thinking he may be accused of the murder, runs away. Her body is discovered at the foot of the cliff by a ranchman, who reports the fact to Jack Diamond. They immediately go in search of the supposed murderer. Jack Diamond leaves his men, goes alone, and overtakes Don Carlos hiding in the bushes.

On their return to the ranch they become lost on the prairie, and Jack, in a famished condition, can go no further. Don Carlos, in fear and hate, but the better man within him asserting itself, carries the rancher on his back. By accident he comes across a pool of water, where he revives Jack, and for this act Jack sets him free.

Don Carlos then discovers that the man is his rival and a struggle ensues in which Jack gets the worst. The cowboys, who have been vainly searching, get the trail and arrive just in time to save the young rancher's life.

VICTOR

TAKING A CHANCE (Aug. 2).—Captain Mills and his wife, Flo, with their little child, Blanche, are a very happy family. At the post where he is stationed is Lieut. Fuller, who is a constant visitor to the home of the Captain and is madly infatuated with the Captain's wife, but Flo is too happy in her love for her husband to notice the admiring glances bestowed upon her by Fuller. The Captain's sister, Jane, pays a visit to their home and proceeds to make herself objectionable to his wife by interfering with the raising of Blanche. The Captain is called away upon military service. During his absence the sister's action becomes so objectionable to Flo that she is glad to while away the time with Fuller. The sister interrupts the Lieutenant and Flo while she is telling him about her troublesome sister-in-law, who mistakes her earnestness for admiration. She interrupts the tete-a-tete and forbids Fuller coming near the house. In the meantime Flo has discovered that Fuller has a wife who is being neglected by the Lieutenant and tries to bring them together. Fuller having been forbidden the house, writes a note to Flo saying that he must see her alone that night. The note falls into the hands of the sister-in-law, who sends a message to the Captain saying his wife is carrying on dreadfully with the Lieutenant and to come at once. The Captain spurns such slander against his wife, but his jealousy is aroused and he starts for home. The sister sees that the note written by the Lieutenant is delivered to Flo who, after reading it, is greatly shocked, but in it sees a way to bring his neglected wife and Fuller together. She sneaks his wife into her boudoir, dresses her in one of her own gowns and awaits Fuller's coming. The Captain at this moment arrives home and sees the Lieutenant sneaking in through an open window. His sister's story seems to be verified, and he decides to shoot both his wife and Fuller when he catches them together. The Lieutenant sneaks upstairs and enters the boudoir, where he is confronted by his own wife. He is severely lectured by Flo. He leaves the room, followed by his imploring wife, to make amends. They enter the library. The Captain fires, but his aim is deflected by Flo, who has come downstairs. Fuller immediately pulls his pistol, but seeks flight through the open window, followed by his wife. The Captain, when he sees what a fool he has been made by his sister, orders her from the house and seeks forgiveness for having doubted his dear little wife.

GEM

BACK TO HER OWN (July 30).—Zingara, a gipsy woman, to revenge herself on her husband, who has treated her cruelly, leaves the child on the doorstep of a wealthy family, who adopt the child. In the palm of the baby's hand is a birthmark.

Twenty years later, Juditb, the gipsy child, becomes engaged to John North, a nepbew of her foster parents. While out motoring in the country with her foster parents and fiance, they discover a gipsy camp and Judith has her fortune told. When the gipsy woman, who is Zingara, takes Judith's hand, she discovers the birthmark and recognizes her daughter. She does not reveal herself, but tells Judith's fortune, which is that she will come back to her own some day and marry the son of a king.

Pedro, the son of the gipsy king, is attracted by Juditb, and she is impressed by him. A few days later Judith feels the call of the blood and slips away to the country. She again meets her motber and Pedro, and the latter fascinates her more than ever. She returns home and that night Pedro meets her in the garden. Some time later while waiting for him, she has a quarrel with John, who returns to the house. Shortly after Pedro comes and takes her in his arms, just as John appears. Pedro draws his knife and John takes out a pistol, but Judith separates them and John orders Pedro from the place, and takes Judith into the house. Later Pedro returns. Judith is in her room. Pedro throws a pebble against the windows, and she answers it. He persuades her to go away with him. She leaves a note for her foster parents, climbs down the ladder Pedro places against the house, and they go off to the gipsy camp.

CHAMPION

THE POISONERS (July 29).—The Count DeMel bas saved the life of the Count DeBraggart. The latter, though a splendid looking fellow, has shown himself to be an arrant coward. DeMel, however, takes a strong liking to him and invites him to his home. DeMel's wife falls in love with Count DeBraggart, thinking him a fine, heroic specimen of manhood. Madam Jessica, an actress, who was with DeBraggart when DeMel rescued him from the hands of the assassins, discovers the love affair that has grown up between these two, and instantly informs DeMel (the latter having just started on a journey) who returns and surprises his wife in DeBraggart's arms.

The guilty pair are startled by DeMel's reappearance in the scene, but the latter, pretending not to have seen what occurred, gives them re-assurance, to a certain degree.

The Countess, however, decides to poison her husband, slowly but surely, and DeBraggart tacitly agrees in a cowardly and abject way, the Countess, in her blind passion for the man, not perceiving his true character. The Count DeMel now decides on a peculiar revenge.

His faithful old body servant, having been discharged by the Countess, and his friends being denied entrance to his room, he secures the services of a doctor and nurse. Those become his faitbful attendants though the Countess and her paramour seem to be gaining the desired goal in spite of tbe physician and nursing sister.

DeMel is on his last legs, the deadly drug doing its work to their heart's content, when lo!—DeMel suddenly denounces them as "poisoners!" The pair are horrified by the accusation, and DeBraggart shows himself in his true colors, a cringing, cowardly poltroon, putting all the blame on the Countess for the dastardly deed.

Then the sister throws off her robes and stands revealed as the actress Jessica, and tells the true story of DeBraggart's "heroism."

The Countess now comes to regard DeBraggart with the utmost scorn and detestation and turns conscience-stricken to her husband, but too late! He forces her to sign a document that she will wed DeBraggart when he has divorced her, or failing to do so, she will be denounced to the authorities. She finally agrees to do this, though death would almost seem preferable to living now with DeBraggart. And so these two worthies go out together, disgraced, despised and forever wretched.

DeMel now throws off the role he was enacting under the tutoring of his nurse, the actress, and stands forth hale and hearty.

All along he had been pretending to take the poison. The physician—who was really his old servant, "made over" by the actress, and that worthy lady herself aiding bim in his undertaking.

As a result of the devotion of Madam Jessica he takes her in bis arms and offers her his future. Then he turns and blesses the loyal old servitor who helped to save him from "The Poisoners."

NESTOR

THE UNDOING OF SLIM BILL (July 29).—Slim Bill, an outlaw, succeeds in evading Sheriff Allen and his men by climbing up in a tree. As soon as the Sheriff has gone, Slim Bill comes down and hurries away. On another road he sees a man dressed as a parson, but who in reality is "Two-gun Joe" disguised as a parson and for whom there is a big reward offered. He forces Joe to deliver his parson's suit, and also his guns, although Bill is somewhat surprised to see a parson so heavily armed. Joe, now dressed as Slim Bill, goes sorrowfully and angrily on his way, only to be taken by Sheriff Allen and his men and hustled off to jail. Bill in the meanwhile, now a parson to all outward appearances rides off to a hotel and gayly invites the astonished cowboys to have a drink. He remembers himself at the last moment, however, and drinks water. Then he comfortably settles down to a little game of cards, and promptly wins everything in sight, after which he mounts and rides away again. But in the meanwhile, Buck, a half-breed, who from the hushes had watched the exchange of clothes of Slim Bill and Two-gun Joe, hastened to the jail and informed Sheriff Allen that he had arrested the wrong man, so that the Sheriff, taking Joe with him, rode off with his men to find the real outlaw.

Scarcely had Slim Bill ridden away from the Hotel than Sheriff Dunn, who had met Bill there, received a telegram which read as follows:

Sheriff Dunn:—Look out for Joe Bangs, a desperate character, known as "Two-gun Joe." He is disguised as a parson and headed your way. Big reward for his capture. J. B. Hawley.

Sheriff Dunn at once called his men and hurried after Bill, overtaking him and bringing him back to the hotel just as Sheriff Allen arrived with Joe. So instead of getting back his parson's disguise, Joe was handed over to the other sheriff.

THE OBLIGATION (July 31).—Jack, a young miner, reads to his little sister, Fay, a part of a letter he has received from their brother, Frank:

Dear Brother:—I thank you for the money. I may be in the hospital for many months. If it were not for me, you could buy your mining books.

The next morning after Jack had gone to the big mine to work, Fay decides to pick some beautiful wild flowers and to take them to the big house on the hill to sell. The big house belongs to the mine owner, John Barry. When Fay arrives with the flowers Miss Barry promptly buys them, while John Barry takes the child back to her home in his auto, which he passes on his way to the mine. During the day Miss Barry discovers Frank's letter in the basket which contained the flowers, and upon her father's arrival that night, insisted upon taking Jack some mining books which she had selected from their own library. On the following day John Barry promotes Jack. Later when a strike is declared and Jack tries to argue with the angry miners, John Barry misconstrues his good intentions; and when he finds Jack calling upon his daughter, he angrily orders the young man from the house. Little Fay overhears the miners' plan to steal the dynamite from the powder house and blow up the owner's home. She tells her brother, who hastens to the powder house in time to hold the men at bay by declaring he will throw a stick of dynamite at the first man who advances. They leave the powder house only to fire Jack's cabin, and Jack barely reaches the cabin in time to rescue little Fay from the fire. Then he runs to the owner's home, and after an exciting scene with John Barry, succeeds in making the elder man see his fault and thereby secures not only a victory for himself, but his comrades as well.

YOUNG WILD WEST WASHING OUT GOLD (Aug. 2).—Young Wild West on his way to a mining camp saves an old miner from the hands of three bad men, who were trying to rob him. The old miner is very grateful. Wild West and his party camp for the night near the old miner's cabin. The bad men also camp in the vicinity.

Feeling that they have been handled roughly by Wild West, they go over to Wild West's camp to get satisfaction, but tbey get a good trouncing instead.

The old miner overhears the bad men plotting to shoot up the camp of Wild West that night and he hurries to the camp and informs the party, who thank him. The bad men sneak over to Wild West's camp and getting above it start a fusillade which is returned with interest by Wild's party.

The next morning Wild leaves for the nearby town. On crossing a dried up stream Wild discovers gold. They quickly dismount, put up their tents again and start to wash out the gold.

One of the bad men passing, sees Wild West's lucky strike and hurries back to the camp. The leader of the gang has a plan to get the gold and hurries back to town. They hire a few loafers out of the barroom to go back and help them overcome Wild West and his party. They start for the party's camp. But Wild West, who has left the camp to take some samples of gold to town, sees them coming and drawing into the bushes overbears their plans and at once goes for the sheriff. The party washing the gold sees them coming, and knowing their inability to fight the larger force, they run to the old miner's cabin for shelter, and are just in time for the bad men to come up and open fire at them. Suddenly those in the cabin stop firing, for they spy the sheriff and his men led by Young Wild West. The bad men rush toward the cabin, and are caught between two fires. Thoroughly beaten they are captured and led away by the sheriff.

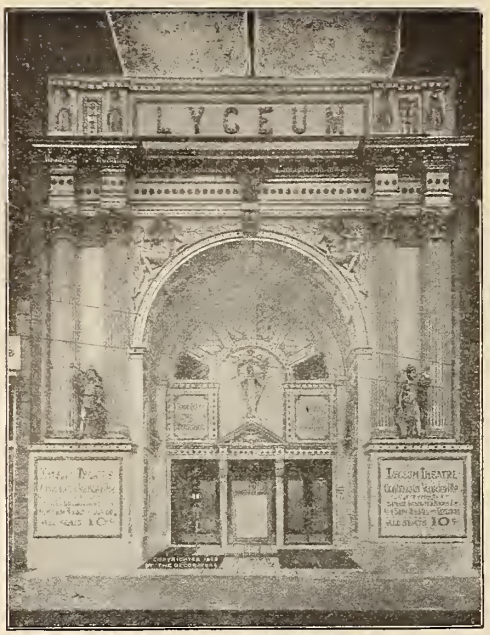
REX

THE LASH OF FATE (Aug. 1).—He wasn't a real father; something was lacking in his parenthood. If he didn't really hate his children, he at least disliked them. But, as if drawn together by their common need of love and sympathy, the two sisters and brother were united by a strong bond of tenderness.

One of the sisters was in love with a reckless young fellow who did drink a little too much. The father forbade her to have much or anything to do with him, but the brother and he were firm friends.

One day while the latter two were sitting in a cafe, drinking and chating, an enemy of the girl's lover began an altercation with him, which speedily developed into a more serious quarrel. The stranger was just about to snatch his gun, when the girl's brother fired his and killed the other. The two escaped. Word reached the old man that his son had committed murder, and he did all he could to assist the sheriff. But the four got together, sent the brother to safety and security and themselves sought the peace which they would never find in the scowls and savage selfishness of their father.

THE HOUR OF PERIL (Aug. 4).—The duty fell upon her. Her blind sister and her



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

two little children were absolutely helpless, and their support fell upon her. She found happiness in caring for them, found a sweet joy in struggling for their daily bread. But one came into their lives who—

Well, he loved her, and perhaps she liked him a little too. He was a drunkard, a brute, if you will; but he loved her, and was filled with all the unsatiated fury of the animal spirit that desires something for its own. He proposed to her, there might have been something in him, his masterful vigor, his tremendous masculinity, his aggressive animalism, that conquered and swayed her; and she was just about to go to his arms when—she remembered. She remembered her sister and nieces and her duty, and sorrowfully she explained all to him and asked him to release her.

He wanted her, and was of that type that will brook no obstacles. So—

A few days later a party was to be given to blind children by a philanthropist, and the two afflicted kiddies were hysterical with delight in contemplation of the joyous time. The drunkard heard of the event, and—poisoned the ice cream. Then in drunken braggadocio, he came to the girl and boasted of what he had done. There was just time enough to fly and warn the children, and she darted a look of surprised hate at the brute, and made to dash from the room. He stopped her, and in tense silence, they struggled. It meant the lives of countless little ones, already deprived of a great deal of life; it meant the saving of misery and anguish indescribable; but to him it meant only the girl; if her little family were destroyed, she would be free to marry him. They struggled, grim determination on one side, drunken desire on the other—and the wholesome strength won. She arrived on the scene just in time to avert the threatened disaster, and the hour of peril was past—as well as the faint gleam of love that had stolen unawares into her heart.

GAUMONT

THE SILENT CASTLE (July 23).—One of the most charming of the Gaumont colored subjects. The subject opens in the drawing room in the house of Paul Auhry, a well-to-do young man, only recently married. Already, however, he begins to feel the restraints of married life irksome; his wife's efforts to interest him are peevishly rejected, and at last she leaves the room and he turns to a book of old legends, but after reading a few pages falls asleep. In his dream he fancies himself transported to the legendary castle of which he has been reading, in which, on the day of the wedding of the beautiful Brunhilde and the man of her choice all in the castle have come under a powerful spell cast by a malevolent sorcerer, and have been struck motionless, in whatever attitude they happen to be, as if petrified. Paul finds the castle exactly as described in the book, the sentries at the doors, the courtiers apparently engaged in conversation on the stairs and in the courtyard of the castle; all are still and silent. At last he penetrates to the cell of the sorcerer, compels the latter to appear before him, and receives from him a ring and a phial of wine which will enable him to wake the beautiful Brunhilde from her slumber.

In the banqueting hall he finds the wedding guests, the bride and bridegroom and retainers motionless. He restores Brunhilde to life by the charm he possesses, and carries her away with him on horseback.

The scene returns to the Aubrey drawing room, and, still sleeping, Aubrey sees the figures of himself and Brunhilde seat themselves opposite him. His wife enters and wakes him. The vision fades and with his own charming partner opposite him, Paul realizes that the real happiness he enjoys is greater than that of his dream.

VITOGRAPH

THE MIRACLE (July 29).—This is a story of ancient Bagdad. A child born to Haroun al Rashid, the Caliph, and his beloved wife, Abbassah, dies shortly after its birth and Ahhassah loses his reason. The Royal Physician, The High Priest, the palace poet and musician, are all consulted, to aid in the restoration of her reason, but all to no purpose.

Mousali, a young and beautiful woman, poverty-stricken, deserted and friendless, sees nothing but starvation for herself and her babe. She prays to the Most High to help her in her distress. She goes to the palace with her babe clasped to her breast, and passing the window on which the Caliph's attendants have placed his dead child, she overhears Ahhassah, its mother, praying and beseeching her God to restore her babe to life, and give her the hope which she had so cherished, to retain the love of her husband. Mousali, with fear and trembling, takes the dead child, and puts her own living one in its place. Dashing away with the lifeless infant, she disappears. Abbassah sees the living babe. She lifts it to her lips and graciously thanks the Deity for giving heed to her supplications. Haroun, entering, sees his wife in the transports of joy, and in her right mind, and soon learns the cause. Dancing girls and musicians are brought into the palace court and general rejoicing takes the place of mourning.

Mousali is found wandering with the dead child and arrested by the palace guards. She tells them her story and they readily recognize the wisdom of keeping silence. They sympathize with the poor woman, and after disposing of the body of the dead child, they bring her to the Caliph and his wife, telling them that they have found a nurse for their infant. Mousali takes her child to her bosom, happy to be near it and radiant in the assurance that its future is provided for.

A JUVENILE LOVE AFFAIR (July 30).—Two little children, who think themselves very much in love with each other, imbued with the ideas of their elders, plan a romantic marriage. Alvin Strong, the boy, confides his intentions to the family's colored servant, Jaspar. Alvin arranges with Jane, his sweetheart, to elope in the usual way, through a window, with the assistance of a ladder. Jaspar, the negro servant, is instructed by Alvin to have the pony hitched to the cart and drive him to Jane's house. He enters into the scheme, greatly enjoying the amusement it affords him. He tries to deport himself with dignity while restraining his laughter, which almost convulses him.

At dusk, he drives his young master to the trysting-place, where Alvin meets his fiancee, and then drives them both hurriedly to the parson's. The good man, entering into the humor of the situation, makes some plausible excuse and the young couple go away greatly disappointed. Not to be daunted, Alvin tells Jaspar to drive him to his cabin, where he induces Jaspar's young son to play the parson and marry them. Jaspar's wife, taking it all as child's play, goes soundly to sleep, while Jaspar peeps through the window and almost laughs himself sick.

The ceremony over, Alvin directs Jaspar to take them to an ice cream parlor. It is now getting rather late for the youngsters and both fall asleep over their refreshments. Alvin's and Jane's parents are distracted when they miss them and immediately start a search for them. Finding them in the restaurant, they lift them tenderly in their arms to their carriage and take them home. Alvin wearily shakes his hand in an effort to be gallant.

Jane, in dreamland, is driven home, and put to hed.

It is very amusing for the youngsters and their elders while it lasts. It ends just where it began, in childhood's happy hours.

THE ADVENTURE OF A RETIRED ARMY COLONEL (July 31).—The last man to suspect of crime is the one who is employed to protect our lives and property. Mr. Morrison occupies a heautiful home in a suhurhan town. Policeman Prior, the night patrolman, is dishonest. He enters Mr. Morrison's home when the family are asleep and rohs it. In the morning the rohhery is discovered. The chief of police is haffled in his efforts to detect the thief. He sends for Lamhert Chase, the detective, who makes an investigation, draws his conclusions, states he is unahle to solve the mystery, and apparently gives it up.

Later he comes hack to town disguised as an army officer and rents a furnished mansion for the season. It is announced in the papers that the military gentleman who has lately hecome a resident of the place is extremely wealthy. To still further impress this point, Chase, in his remarkahle disguise, requests Officer Prior to keep a close watch upon his house, as he is a sound sleeper, and it contains many valuahles. He tips Prior from a well-filled pockethook to confirm his pretensions of wealth.

Two nights later, Prior enters the Colonel's home and makes his way to the library. The room is dark. Flashing his pocket lantern ahout, he sees the Colonel's well-filled pocket hook on the tahle. Chase has heen watching for the officer's visit and the moment he reaches out for the wallet and places it in his pocket, the detective draws his pistol, turns the electric light and holds the thief at hay. He removes his false mustache and goatee, making himself known. With his unengaged hand, he calls up the Chief of Police on the 'phone. When the chief arrives, Prior confesses the Morrison hurglary, and heing taken red-handed, he is unahle to escape the consequences. The handcuffs are placed on his wrists and he is led away hy his chief and fellow officers.

ESSANAY

TWINS (July 26).—Gay Mr. Mullane has a pretty wife and hahy girl, hut is tired with the humdrum domesticity of his home and longs to spread his wings and flutter in the alluring circles of his Bohemian friends. Wifie sees this and on receiving a wire from her twin sister saying she is coming to 'Frisco, she hits on a scheme to teach huhhy a much needed lesson. Gaining his permission to go to 'Frisco and meet Lolita she leaves, only to stop and send hack a wire supposedly coming from Lolita saying she will arrive that evening. Mrs. Mullane now returns home decked out as the real Lolita and captures the hearts of Mullane and his gay friends who start an outrageous flirtation. Mullane is the worst of all, and, never suspecting it to he his real wife, pours forth his love on hended knee and finally gets her to agree to elope that same night. Meanwhile, the friends swamp Mrs. Mullane with flowers and attentions, much to the disgust of Mullane who finally drives them from the house. Again they return with more floral treasures and Mullane is green with jealousy at their attentions when suddenly his hahy girl enters the room with her nurse, recognizes her mother and rushes to her with outstretched arms. Mrs. Mullane manages to keep up the deception hy ignoring the child, but suddenly the real Lolita arrives, greets her sister, and Mullane and his friends are dumhfounded when they realize they have heen making love to his own wife. Mullane hegs for mercy on his knees, hut Mrs. Mullane and her sister sweep from the room, leaving him to his sad reflections while his friends give him the laugh and hasten out for much needed refreshments.

A MOONSHINER'S HEART (July 27).—Old Seth Stevens and his pretty daughter, Vedah, live in their rough hill-shack. Stevens conducts an illicit "still" in an ahandoned shanty, and the "moonshine" whiskey is concealed in loads of hay and sold in the nearhy town. One of the moonshiners is Tom Jackson, who loves Vedah with all the sturdy passion of his hill-born life. Stevens encourages Tom's attentions, hut Vedah declares she does not love the young moonshiner and his heart is hroken in consequence. Meanwhile, word of the "still" trickles out to civilization and the county Sheriff dispatches Ross Chalmers, a young deputy, into the hills in the guise of a wandering artist to run down the moonshiners and destroy the "still." One morning, as Chalmers is tramping the hills, he meets Vedah and speaks with her. The girl is attracted hy his culture and good looks, and in succeeding meetings their friendship ripens into love. Driving to town one morning with a load of whiskey, Tom discovers Chalmers and Vedah in each other's arms. Later, word is hrought to the moonshiners that Chalmers is a revenue officer and Tom instantly takes to the hills with his rifle, locates Chalmers and Vedah and is ahout to savagely shoot the deputy down, when Vedah desperately promises to marry him if he will conduct Chalmers to safety. For a moment Tom hesitates, then lowers his rifle and leads them off down the trail. Coming to the parson's cottage, Tom surprises them all hy calling him out and ordering him to marry Vedah and Chalmers. Realizing what the young moonshiner is sacrificing, Vedah thanks him with tears of gratitude in her hrown eyes and Chalmers wrings his hand warmly. Then, while Tom strides away to the hills stifling the love that cries out within him, Vedah and Chalmers are united in marriage.

G. MELLIES

THE RANGER'S GIRLS (Aug. 8).—The Rancher, notified that cattle thieves were coming his way and fearing the loss of his herd, arms himself and assistant and starts out to round them up. Whilst searching through the mountains they are suddenly attacked hy the thieves who are hiding in amhush. They open fire and the rancher falls from his horse a wounded man. His assistant fearing the worst, retreats and rides home for aid.

Arriving at the ranch he tells the rancher's daughters what had happened. Taught hy their father from their earliest childhood to protect themselves in case of danger from roving had men, they are expert markswomen and so, arming themselves with pistols they rush to the rescue of their injured father.

By skillful riding and careful reconnoitering they surprise and capture the hand and release their father who was ahout to he tortured. The neighhoring ranchers hearing of the capture, turn out to congratulate the girls on their hravery and success, thanking them in the name of the community for ridding the country of so great a pest.

EDISON

THE LORD AND THE PEASANT (Aug. 2).—The story of a tragedy that took place at Glenwood Keep is the latest contrihution of the Edison Company to the Motion Picture world, the theme of which is intensely dramatic and replete with romantic and pathetic episodes. It is hound to hold one's attention and cause deep heart throhs at its close for the tragic fate of the two fond lovers.

In a peasant's cot we find a fair, young maiden who is loved hy an honest, true-hearted peasant lad, while yonder stands the manor of Glenwood with its nohle lord who chanced to pass hy one fair day and there nohle eyes met peasant meekness and love found work a-plenty to do. But maiden thought naught of my lord o' the manor, nor so much as gave him cause to hope that all his castles and lands could win her heart from her true peasant lad who had gone forth in the world to win humhle living for his bride to be.

It was then that Dame Poverty came knocking at the peasant's door and upon her heels crept a fever which held the young sister close within her hreast only waiting for death to knock gently at the humhle cot. And still no word from the loved one in a foreign land! Had he deserted his fond-hearted lassie? Weeks passed hy and still no word nor sign of the one held most dear, and then my lord of Glenwood Keep came suing for her hand. On one side poverty, silence and perhaps death to her heloved sister, on the other riches, honor and life for her who needed it so much. If he would only write, her peasant lad. Little she knew that he lay ill raving with fever in a foreign hospital. And so the hattle of poverty and riches was fought and her heart grew sick. In a few weeks Glenwood Keep had a new mistress in the maid of the peasant cot.

Months later, worn and weary, a peasant hoy wandered hack to his own land to find the idol of his heart close within the gray walls of a rich man's mansion. Silently at night he stole into her chamber and there learned from her lips the sad story of her love and struggle. Ere they could part forever the lord of the manor returned and the peasant hoy gave up his life for the honor of the woman he loved. But ere the sun went down we find the lad and maid clasped at last in each other's arms, the kiss of death upon their hrows.

A tragic tale with tragic ending excellently played and illustrated.

NINTH INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS CONFERENCE, WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 7TH TO 17TH, 1912 (Aug. 3).—The meeting of the Ninth International Red Cross Conference held at Washington, D. C., is of universal interest from the fact that its tender arms reach around the world of suffering in emhraces of relief for humanity. Delegates from all parts of the world are to he seen upon their arrival at Exhihition Hall. A view of the field exercises of various "first aid detachments," some of them in competition, turns the tide of what would ordinarily he monotonous and tiresome to the keenest of interest. The latest inventions of medical science are all depicted in this film. One in particular, known as the pulmotor, is nothing less than omnipotent in power, having heen known to revive persons hy artificial respiration, one hour after apparent death. This device was purchased for the U. S. Navy.

A scene showing the "Cyclonette" amhulance, the most perfect vehicle of its kind in the world capahle of traveling on any roads is a novel sight to say the least.

The interior views of the Exhihition Hall reveal an accumulation of devices that show the gigantic steps the Red Cross Society is making in rendering practical first aid assistance.

In conclusion, the photography of the picture is all that could he wished.

MARY HAD A LITTLE LAMB (Aug. 3).—Without douht the greatest modern classic that was ever written is the little poem with the above title. From the child who is old enough to talk, to the gray-haired centenarian, who does not know of Mary and that wonderful lamh of hers? Teaching a moral, a lesson of kindness to dumh animals and how the dumh animal shows its gratitude for its care. This is essentially in one sense of the word, a child's film, hut to the older ones it will prove just as interesting in awakening memories of childhood and schooldays.

The clever little child-actress who plays "Mary," hy her sweetness and natural manner, will appeal to you, and will make you think, when seeing her, that it is not a part that is being acted hy a little girl, hut that in reality you are looking at the famous Mary herself.

The little lamh who hears the name of "Sister" was especially trained for this part. Unless one is well acquainted with the manufacture of motion pictures, he will not realize the care and patience that it has taken to make even this short film. It is a gem delightfully refreshing and altogether a novelty.

ECLAIR

THE PRICE OF BLOOD (August 4).—Pretty Maud is well liked hy her mistress, who took her, while quite young, into her service and consequently had almost hrought her up. She is hetrothed to a petty marine officer who has just returned from a long voyage. Proud of him, Maud introduces him to her master and they spend the evening together. Maud's master has remained at his club very late and is followed home hy tramps. In crossing his park, he thinks he hears footsteps following him. He turns several times. Excited, he loads his revolver. He notices a shadow. In his fright he fires. The man falls. He hears a cry from his wife and Maud. It is her lover who has just heen shot. He seems dead. The unfortunate man is in despair. He has the wounded man carried to his home and calls for a doctor. The wound is very serious. The young man has lost a lot of hlood and is very weak. It is necessary a strong man should give him some of his hlood.

The master, who cannot forget his terrihle mistake, even at the cost of his life, will make it good. He is willing to give his hlood to save his victim. Owing to his generous offer, the young marine officer is saved. Maud and her lover will know how to appreciate what the master has done for them.

On the same reel:

THE BEAUTIFUL VINTAGE TIME.—How nice it is during the vintage time! While everyone is husy picking up the golden grapes to fill the hig haskets, the small vintagers hidden hehind the wine stocks pick also, but don't put the grapes in haskets. It must he tasted, it is so delicious. Notwithstanding the day's fatigue, at nighttime the vintagers gather around a big fire and dance to celehrate the harvest.

ECLAIR

RUNNING FOR CONGRESS (Aug. 1).—Old Judge Kent is at last persuaded to run for Congress in the small country town where he lives with his beautiful daughter Dolly. His friends, all of the old-fashioned politician type, are confident that they will get theirs, and they get him to put money into the campaign funds. Dan Dartmouth, a handsome young chap who has been practising law, with poor success but many friends, decides that he, too, will take a chance at it, and so he goes in opposition to the judge. The trouble begins when the Judge starts campaigning. Dolly takes a hand and every time her father starts to deliver a speech through the town, she and Dan show up with a lot of girls and they draw away the listeners from the Judge's speech to the one Dan is making. Dan plays the women folks good, and as a consequence he makes such an impression that when primary voting day comes the women scold and "pick on" their husbands until they agree to vote for Dan, which they do. Dan wins the nomination and he and Dolly go up and ask Dad for his consent. The Judge is furious, until finally Dan asks him: "Well, why not hold the job in the family? You'll be my father-in-law, and I'll have you for boss anyway." The old man consents, and they are happily married.

A BROTHER'S JEALOUSY (July 30).—Why, oh why, does jealousy ever insist on following its own misfounded conclusions? Will it ever learn to justify its suspicions?

In this tale are two brothers, both fishermen. One is married to one of the best little women on earth and they have a little boy. The brother is most fond of the child. His attention to the babe as it rests in its mother's arms is one of the first causes for jealousy on the part of the husband.

A day comes—some action which the husband sees, looks like a kiss to his jealous eyes. He takes his baby child and steals away.

The mother misses the child—down on the beach she finds a baby's wrap which the husband had dropped in his flight. She imagines her baby has been drowned and grief drives her insane. Years pass—the husband returns and discovers his mistake. Through a trick of suggestion the wife's reason is restored and jealousy is lowered to its grave.

SOLAX

TWO LITTLE RANGERS (Aug. 7).—"Wild Bill" Gray is a renegade and a wife-beater. He is about to start on some expedition of crime and his good little wife implores him to stay at home. She receives a beating for her trouble. Jim, a cowboy, rides past the shack, hears Mrs. Gray's screams and interferes and takes Mrs. Gray over to his friend, the postmaster so that she may have a good home. "Wild Bill" plans vengeance.

Paxton, the postmaster, starts for the station with money and gold and is accompanied a short way by Jim. Gray sneaks after them. After going with Paxton a short distance, Jim takes a turn in the road and Paxton rides on alone. Gray closes up on the postmaster, gets the drop on him, but Paxton is quick and there's a hand-to-hand struggle. Bill, however, worsts Paxton and finally sends him over a precipice.

But in falling, Paxton falls into a tree and thus is saved from sure death. In the meanwhile Paxton's horse comes back to his general store. When the riderless horse arrives there is naturally considerable excitement. Gray arrives on the scene and he makes things look pretty black for Jim, the man who was last seen with the postmaster. Jim is placed under arrest—but the boys, as well as the postmaster's young daughters, May and Gladys, do not believe Jim to be guilty. May and Gladys ride the trail and finally find their father. Then lots of things begin to happen.

Gray stoutly asserts his innocence and manufactures evidence incriminating Jim. May and Gladys, the "two little rangers," however, untangle the evidence and their father's story cinches things. When things begin to look pretty black for Gray he retreats to his shack and turns it into a sort of barrack. The girls, however, are determined to get him and after seeing that their volleys of bullets have no effect, discharge a firebrand from a bow. The firebrand sets the shack on fire and Gray perishes in his own tomb.

THE PINK GARTERS (Aug. 9).—No one would have known the deliberate secret that Miss Fluffy Fewclothes was badly in need of a new pair of garters if she hadn't lost the parcel containing them immediately after having made the purchase.

But the secret was let out and at the same time it got innocent Billy in an awful scrape. You see it happened this way: Miss Fewclothes took a day off and went to Coney Island. And she carried with her a parcel containing pink garters. In the crowd at the gate in Luna Park, Fluffy loses her package. Fluffy didn't know it—and what she didn't know didn't worry her. Billy, however, picked up the package and attempted to restore it to its rightful owner.

But Fluffy, who is a wise little girl and also wise in the ways of men, thought she was wise to Billy's little game. So when he approached her with a parcel she gave him a north pole greeting. Billy, however, had the whole day on his hands and so he vows he'd make her take back her package. Well, Billy persistently follows her about—from ferris wheel to shoot-the-chutes, from merry-go-round to the kiss waltz, from the toboggan to the airship and from the frankfurter stands to fire and flames—and even into the surf. Billy tries to give her her pink garters but she rebuffs him. At last she has him arrested—but friends rescue him from a cell and poor Billy vows he'd rather look at elephants than look or have anything to do with pink garters.

MAJESTIC

THE NEW POLICEMAN (July 28).—Jim Brennan is the proudest man in town when he appears in his new uniform and takes his place on a conspicuous corner where his duties as a policeman begin.

Anxious to make good with his captain, he is delighted when a chance comes for an arrest. He proudly leads a small boy to the station house only to find that he has arrested the captain's little son, Tommy. He thinks that he has redeemed himself when he holds up an automobile for speeding, but finds that he has taken the captain's pretty daughter into custody.

The small boys make his life miserable and the pretty girls keep his head in a whirl. As a traffic policeman he finds that his troubles have only begun, and his downfall is complete when, after a long chase, he arrested a man for stealing a ham, which is the man's own property.

Back at his old job on the pipe-laying gang, Brennan views with envy his former comrades in uniform.

THE MIGHTY HUNTER (July 30).—Ambitious to be a mighty hunter, R. Buffington Blink makes elaborate preparations to go deer hunting. His wife and daughter fear for his life and beg him not to indulge in such a dangerous sport. But Blink is determined to show his skill as a hunter and promises to bring home a deer's head to hang over the dining room door.

Mrs. Blink receives a letter from him shortly after his departure telling of a terrific encounter he has had with a large deer and that he has shipped the head and antlers to her as proof of his success. In reality, Blink has a very unhappy trip. He trails a small calf which has strayed away from a neighboring farm, and finally shoots it. The farmer explains that the calf is his property and is not a deer, much to Blink's disgust, especially when he pays a handsome price for the calf.

Undaunted, he renews his efforts to bag big game, and after taking several shots at his guide, who in the distance looks like a deer to Blink, he succeeds in shooting the guide's hat from his head. A fall in the lake from which he is rescued after nearly drowning completes his experiences, and the account he gives his wife and family of his wonderful success makes him a conquering hero in his own home.

THANHOUSER

ONE OF THE HONOR SQUAD (Aug. 4).—A young policeman, detailed on plain clothes duty, had a sweetheart, and they planned to get married as soon as he could save enough money to furnish a home. He was an honest young policeman, and consequently he saved but slowly, and the wedding day seemed far off. When he reported at the station one day the desk lieutenant called his attention to the fact that the French government had offered a $10,000 reward for the capture of one of the Paris auto bandits, who was believed to be hiding in New York. The detective wistfully hoped that he might get the desperado and the reward, and took the newspaper which contained the criminal's picture and record so that he might have something to refer to.

He called upon his sweetheart that evening and showed her the account. Her little sister also looked at the picture and delighted him by telling him that she knew that man and

GUARANTEED—Why POWER'S CAMERAGRAPHS No. 6 and No. 6A are MACHINES TO BE TRUSTED

A guarantee is strong only as the reputation behind it is strong. We are, by long odds, the largest manufacturers of Moving Picture Machines in the world; our reputation is, and always has been, without a flaw.

That the merits of our machines are recognized, is shown by the volume of our business. On April 3rd we sold machine No. 5000, and on July 13th machine No. 6000 was shipped to Clinton Square Theatre, Albany, New York, through the Albany Motion Picture Supply Company, Geo. Wright, Prop.

Our No. 6 mechanism is used on the No. 6A machine. It is backed by the strongest guarantee of any mechanism or machine made, and it proves more than anything else can, our absolute confidence in it.

OUR GUARANTEE

We guarantee the mechanism of every POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6 and NO. 6A to be free from defects of workmanship or material, and will replace free of charge within one year from date of sale, every part showing a defect of any character or which becomes worn out in service, provided such part is returned to us, charges prepaid for inspection.

Let us send you bulletin D of our No. 6A machine.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 90 Gold Street, NEW YORK

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

he lived next door. They were sitting near an air shaft, and suddenly the girl pointed off excitedly, saying, "There he is now." The detective looked, and in the room across the court, the shade being down, he saw the silhouette of a man that answered this description of the desperado, preparing to leave the house.

The detective was strong, fearless and impulsive. Bravely he leaped across the air shaft and climbed into the room, expecting to meet one man. To his surprise there were three. But he tackled them just the same, and when the reserves, summoned by his sweetheart, arrived, the prisoners had been thoroughly subdued.

Revolvers were found upon all of them, and in accordance with the rules of the New York Police Department these weapons with all others confiscated were taken far out to sea and sunk. As an additional reward for his bravery the detective was on the squad assigned to take charge of the deep sea burial. Furthermore, for his bravery he was awarded one of the department decorations, thereby becoming a member of the Honor Squad, a distinction to which every policeman strives to attain. This decoration was conferred upon him at the annual police parade where the mayor and other high officials did him and his associate heroes honor. The cash reward came to time also and the detective married the girl he loved.

BABY HANDS (Aug. 6).—A well-to-do young man imagined he was very much in love with a certain actress. He lavished presents upon her, and expected that shortly they would be married. Much to his surprise and grief, however, he found that she was only mocking him, and in rage and disappointment he forsook his old friends and determined to live a simple life in the country. Being young and impressionable his grief did not last, and meeting a sweet girl in the surroundings he married her and decided he would be happy after all.

Five years later the actress and a party of friends who were on a yachting trip happened to land at the little seashore village which was now the home of the once man-about-town. The actress met her old sweetheart, and the fascination she once exerted was again experienced by him.

At the suggestion of the girl he took her out for a sail on his little boat. She flirted with him and he had no desire to withstand her fascinations. Suddenly, in the midst of one of his impassioned speeches, he experienced a feeling that someone was looking at him. Glancing up he saw his four-year-old daughter, who, unknown to her father, was aboard the boat, gravely regarding him, and evidently not knowing what to say or do.

The actress was pettishly angry because the third party had spoiled her afternoon. The man was humiliated and conscience-stricken. Still under the spell of the fascination the woman exerted, he tried to remove the baby hands that were tightly clasped about his neck, but she clung to him, and he realized that the ties that bound him to his simple life were as tender, yet as firm, as the clasp of the child he loved. Reverently he kissed the little hands and without another word to the woman he turned the boat and put back to shore, the spell of the siren being broken forever.

OLD DR. JUDD (Aug. 9).—Jerry Judd was not a noted specialist, he was just a country doctor, and was called upon to treat all kinds of cases and diseases.

To see the shabby little physician driving wearily about on his rounds, one would never suspect that romance had once entered his life. It was a pitiful little romance at that, for when he called to propose to the girl he was just in time to receive the news of her engagement to another.

Hence it was a great shock to Doctor Judd when the girl's father called to tell him that she was critically ill. He hurried to the house and was shocked to see how badly she looked. Then he felt her pulse, prepared some medicine, and hoped, only hoped, that it would cure her.

Just at this minute, although he had not been summoned, Dr. Dan Cupid entered. He informed his colleague that the patient's illness was due to the fact that the man she loved had been driven from her by her stern father.

"In this case," Dr. Dan Cupid summed up, "I would prescribe a marriage license."

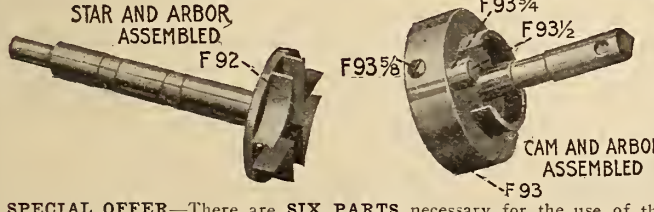
Dr. Judd agreed, but was afraid to broach the subject to the girl's father. He bridged the difficulty in a professional way by announcing that he insisted upon a "consultation." He rushed away but speedily returned with two strange bewhiskered individuals.

The consultation was held, father being banished from the room a few moments. Later he was called in and with joy and astonishment heard that his daughter was "cured." In his happiness at her recovery he did not long object to the fact that the eminent specialist had prescribed and administered—a wedding ring.

"BOYS AGAIN" Eclair release, August 8.

YOUNG WILD WEST WASHING OUT GOLD
Nestor release, August 2d.

Another Motiograph Improvement



HEAVIER BALANCE WHEELS

(ONLY for the 1912 Models)

Just the thing to hold down that Heavy Star and Cam on 1912 Models.

Easily fitted, either by yourself or by your operator. We send you all the parts necessary to make the change.

Your machine runs easier and will last longer with this improvement.

SPECIAL OFFER—There are SIX PARTS necessary for the use of this HEAVIER BALANCE WHEEL, having a value of Thirteen Dollars. Send us Your order accompanied by Draft, or Money Order, for only TEN DOLLARS, and we will send these six parts.

NOTE:—Your order will not be accepted unless accompanied by the number of the Motiograph mechanism for which these parts are wanted.

SEND TEN CENTS, in stamps, for THE LATEST MOTIOGRAPH HAND BOOK, which also includes complete instructions for operating and complete parts price list.

THE MOTIOGRAPH IS THE MACHINE OF QUALITY. It has the largest and heaviest ARC LAMP: the best and largest LAMP HOUSE: the most perfect Shutter, and contains more quality than any two machines of other makes. GET WISE.

Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
June 14—Italian Lakes
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.)	1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.)	1000
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	1000
July 22—Indian Jealousy
July 24—How He Made Good
July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.)
July 29—It Pays to Wait (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. "101 Bison"

July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.)
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.)
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)
July 3—His Nemesis
July 16—Snowball and His Pal
July 30—An Even Break
Aug. 3—His Partner's Share

CHAMPION

July 1—Pat's Breeches
July 1—Little Old New York
July 8—The Gypsy Bride
July 15—The Call of the West
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy
July 22—The Call of the West
July 29—The Poisoners

COMET

July 8—The Intercollegiate Regatta, Poughkeepsie	975
July 13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky	1000
July 15—Reggy Breaks the College Rules	1000
July 20—Her Indian Guardian (W. Dr.)	1000
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.)	1000
July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)

ECLAIR

July 14—Across the Caucasus
July 16—The Dreamers
July 18—That Loving Man
July 21—Rizzio
July 23—The Governor's Daughter
July 25—The Double Cross
July 28—The Lady Barrister
July 30—A Brother's Jealousy
Aug. 1—Running for Congress
Aug. 4—The Price of Blood
Aug. 4—Beautiful Vintage Time
Aug. 6—Because of Bobbie
Aug. 8—Boys Again
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister

GREAT NORTHERN

July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.)
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.)
July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	694
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.)	305
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Dr.)	666
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000

GAUMONT

	Feet
July 16—Love's Surest Proof
July 18—Lion's Revenge
July 30—Prison on the Cliff
July 30—The Isle of Marken
Aug. 1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug. 6—Androclus and the Lion
Aug. 8—A Phantom of the Night
Aug. 13—Dream Driven
July 23—The Silent Castle
July 25—Love's Floral Tribute
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 22—Graziella, The Gipsy
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin

GEM

June 25—The Reason
July 2—The Medal of Honor
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters
July 30—Back to Her Own

IMP

July 18—Winning the Latonia Derby
July 20—The Foreign Invasion
July 20—Building a Church in a Day
July 22—The Traitor's Fate
July 25—The Heart of a Gipsy
July 27—A Case of Dynamite
July 27—Love's Diary
July 29—Reunited by the Sea
Aug. 1—Adrift
Aug. 3—The Cure that Failed
Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago

ITALA

Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

LUX
By Prieur.

July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)	567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)	393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)	970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)	983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (W. Dr.)	580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)	272

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 15—The Trifler (Dr.)
July 17—Fur and Feathers (Com.)
July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Hustler (Dr.)
July 22—The Ranchman's Remedy
July 24—The Little Moonshiner
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill
July 31—The Obligation
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

July 3—The Coming Generation
July 5—Mates and Mis-Mates
July 10—Tangled
July 17—Getting Even
July 24—Baby Sherlock
July 26—His Madonna
July 31—In the Sowing
July 31—The Rose Festival
Aug. 2—Dora

RELIANCE

	Feet
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog
July 24—The True Love
July 27—The Soldier Baby
July 31—Where There Is Soap There Is Hope
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels)
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers
Aug. 14—Order in the Court
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men

REPUBLIC

July 15—The All-Seeing Eye
July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
July 29—A House Top Romance
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice

REX

July 18—The Hidden Light
July 21—When Love Rules
July 25—The Hand of Mystery
July 28—Through Memory Blank
Aug. 1—The Lash of Fate
Aug. 4—The Hour of Peril

SOLAX

July 17—Slippery Jim
July 19—The Four Flush Actor
July 24—Broken Oaths
July 26—The Requital
July 31—Bottles
Aug. 2—Buddy and His Dog
Aug. 7—The Little Rangers
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 21—Only a Miller's Daughter
July 23—The Portrait of the Lady Anne
July 26—The Merchant of Venice
July 28—Cousins
July 30—Treasure Trove
Aug. 2—A New Cure for Divorces
Aug. 4—Story of "One of the Honor Squad"
Aug. 5—Baby Hands
Aug. 9—Old Dr. Judd

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr. 22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May 8—Through Trials to Victory	2500
May 20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

July 7—The Cook Came Back
July 9—Father's Bust
July 9—The Widower's Widow
July 14—Father's Bust
July 14—The Widower's Widow
July 16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.)
July 21—The Alibi Club (Com.)
July 23—The New Clerk (Dr.)
July 28—The New Policeman
July 30—The Mighty Hunter

MILANO

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (Dr.)
July 20—The Triumph of Love (Myth.)
Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms

SHAMROCK

May 25—A Cold Reception
May 28—White Fawn
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTOR

July 12—In Swift Waters (Dr.)
July 19—The Players (Dr.)
Aug. 2—Taking a Chance

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEWMANN

BERLIN SW 68 Fruchstr. Berlin O. 17.

Annual subscription abroad 12 sh. Write for specimen copy.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE

ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,

la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.

Best advertising medium in North Europe.

Subscription 6 shillings.

Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
July	1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.)
July	4—One Round O'Brien (Com.)
July	4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.)
July	8—An Indian Summer (Dr.)
July	11—Man's Genesis (Com.)
July	15—The Speed Demon (Com.)
July	15—His Own Fault (Com.)
July	18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.)
July	23—The Sands of Dee (Dr.)
July	25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)
July	25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)
July	29—Black Sheep (Dr.)
Aug.	1—The Narrow Road (Dr.)

CINES
C. Kleine

July	2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.)
July	2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.)
July	6—In Wrong (Com.)	1000
July	9—Lear Learns to Dance (Com.)	400
July	9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.)	595
July	13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.)	1000
July	16—Disowned (Dr.)	1020
July	20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.)	995
July	23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.)	900
July	27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)	1000
July	30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.)	1090
Aug.	3—Law and the Man (Dr.)	640
Aug	3—Cartbage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)
Aug.	6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)	903
Aug.	10—The Danger Line (Dr.)	1067

EDISON

July	2—The Close of the American Revolution	1000
July	3—Partners for Life (Com. Dr.)	1000
July	5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.)	1000
July	6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.)	700
July	6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)	300
July	9—After Many Days (Dr.)	1000
July	10—The Artist's Joke (Com.)	1000
July	12—For Valour (Dr.)	1000
July	13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.)	300
July	13—Madame de Mode (Com.)	700
July	16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.)	1000
July	17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)	600
July	17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July	19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves	1000
July	20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.)	1000
July	23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
July	24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July	26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)	1000
July	27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.)	1000
July	30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)	1000
July	31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)	1000
Aug.	2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912	700
Aug.	3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)	300

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July	6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr)	1000
July	9—Signal Lights (Dr.)	1000
July	11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.)	1000
July	12—Down Jayville Way (Com.)	1000
July	13—A Story of Montana (Dr.)	1000
July	16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
July	18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.)	1000
July	19—Hearts of Men (Dr.)	1000
July	20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.)	1000
July	23—The Understudy
July	25—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella
July	26—Twins
July	27—A Moonshiner's Heart
July	30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)	1000
Aug.	3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Aug.	1—The Two Gun Sermon (Dr.)
Aug.	2—Hosecleaning (Com.)
Aug.	2—Man Wanted (Com.)
Aug.	3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)
Aug.	5—A Prize Package
Aug.	7—The Sand Storm
Aug.	8—Buster in Nodland
Aug.	8—A Double Courtship
Aug.	9—A Fly Time
Aug.	10—The Missing Finger
Aug.	12—The Minister and the Outlaw
Aug.	14—The Stubbornness of Youth
Aug	15—Baseball Industry
Aug.	16—The Hindoo's Charm
Aug.	17—The Deputy's Peril
Aug.	19—The Hobo Club (Com.)
Aug.	19—Won at High Tide (Com.)
Aug.	21—The Convalescent (Dr.)
Aug.	22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)
Aug.	23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)
Aug.	23—A Water Fight (Com.)
Aug.	24—The Government Test (Dr.)
Aug.	26—The Deceivers (Dr.)
Aug.	28—The Burnt Cork (Com.)
Aug.	29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.)
Aug.	30—Pinned (Com.)
Aug.	30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug.	31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.)

G. MELIES

July	4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.)	1000
July	11—The Man Inside (Dr.)	1000
July	18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July	18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July	25—A String of Beads (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	1—The Will of Destiny
Aug.	8—The Ranger's Girls

PATHE FRERES

July	18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.)
July	19—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.)
July	20—The Half-Breed Foster Sister (Dr.)
July	22—Pathe's Weekly No. 30
July	23—Jane Seymour and Henry VIII of England (Hist. Dr.)
July	24—His Second Love (W. Dr.)
July	25—The Redman's Friendship (Dr.)
July	26—A Bold Game (Dr.)
July	26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Travel)
July	27—For the Sake of the Papoose (Dr.)
July	29—Pathe's Weekly No. 31
July	29—Don Juan and Charles V. (Dr.)
July	30—The Martyrs (Dr.)
July	31—Anona's Baptism (Dr.)
Aug.	1—In God's Care (W. Dr.)
Aug.	1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Travel)
Aug.	2—The Lightning Paper Hanger
Aug.	2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Travel)
Aug.	3—Memories (Dr.)

KALEM CO.

July	10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.)	875
July	10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.)	125
July	12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.)
July	12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.)
July	15—The Lair of the Wolf (Dr.)	1000
July	17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.)	1000
July	19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)
July	19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting)
July	22—The Thief (Dr.)	1000
July	24—Fantasca, The Gipsy (Dr.)	1000
July	29—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.)	1000
July	31—The Soldier Brothers of Susanna (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	2—The Barefoot Boy	1000
Aug.	2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Sc.)

SELIG

July	9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.)
July	11—His Masterpiece (Dr.)	1000
July	12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.)
July	12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.)
July	15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.)	1000
July	16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
July	18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting)	1000
July	19—A Day Off (Com.)	1000
July	22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.)	1000
July	23—The Double Cross (Dr.)	1000
July	25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.)	1000
July	26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.)
July	26—In Maorland (Edu.)
July	29—The Three Valises (Dr.)	1000
July	30—The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	1—Officer Murray (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	2—The Wreck of the Vega
Aug.	2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Edu.)

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July	3—Scenes in Somerset (Sc.)
July	10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.)	1000
July	17—The Grandmother (Dr.)	1050
July	24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.)	485
July	24—The French Army in Action (Mil.)	505
July	31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.)	1,000
Aug.	7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)	390
Aug.	7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel)	220
Aug.	7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)	390

VITAGRAPH

July	12—The Foster Child	1000
July	13—Aunty's Romance	1000
July	15—Conscience, or "The Chamber of Horrors"	1000
July	16—A Persistent Lover (Com.)	400
July	16—A Lively Affair (Com.)	650
July	17—The Redemption of Red Rube (Dr.)	1000
July	19—Honor Thy Father (Dr.)	1000
July	20—Rock of Ages (Dr.)	1000
July	22—Wanted a Sister	1000
July	23—The Adventure of the Thumb Print	1000
July	24—Martha's Rebellion	1000
July	26—The Barrier That Was Burned	1000
July	27—The Light of St. Bernard	1000
July	29—The Miracle	1000
July	30—A Juvenile Love Affair	1000
July	31—The Adventure of a Retired Army Colonel	1000
Aug.	2—The Awakening of Jones (Com.)	1000
Aug.	3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.)	1000

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan
Auxiliary Local 35, I. A. T. S. E.

OFFICERS

President—Frank Brennan.
Vice-president—Robert Goldblatt.
Financial Secretary—Gus Durkin.
Recording Secretary—Sydney Dignon.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Willie Cohen.
Business Agent—Henry Weinberger.

The Auxiliary meets at Teutonia Hall, No. 66 Essex street, the first and third Monday of every month at 12 o'clock midnight. Dues can be paid to Brother Bob Sanders, at the Union Office, No. 133 Third avenue.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union of New York held a special meeting on Monday night, July 22, 1912, at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street, to hear the report of the convention and Brother Goldblatt certainly brought a most encouraging lot of news. Our appeal has been heard at last and the Executive Board of the I. A. T. S. E. has taken the matter in hand and am informed that we will hear from them by next meeting as to whether they will give us an independent charter or amalgamate with Local No 35. All members are requested to be at the next meeting on Monday night at 12 midnight, August 5, 1912, as this is of the greatest importance.

In regard to last meeting, I must say it was the best meeting I have had the pleasure of attending in over two years. There were 118 members present and the business was gone through in the best of order and adjourned at twenty minutes past three.

Brother Members, Please Take Notice

Our new delegate, Brother Bob Sanders, has been elected pro tem, and all members are requested to pay dues and also report any other business to him.

* * * *

Brother M. R. wants to know what the laws are in Cleveland regarding the licensing of operators, and would like some information about the Moving Picture Operators' Union.

Would take it as a great favor if one of the Cleveland Brothers would inform us about same.

* * * *

Anyone requiring the services of competent operators for road or city work can have same in an hour's time. Call up J. Girvan, phone 4091 Chelsea, or 1522 Stuyvesant.

* * * *

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, San Francisco, Cal., has selected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. G. Woods; vice-president, P. Boyle; recording secretary, A. L. Noriega; financial secretary, D. B. Levin; treasurer, W. F. Rhea; business agent, L. G. Dolliver; sergeant-at-arms, John Ford; executive board, H. Lufbin, Charles Sweeney, N. Monyhan, William Lewis and William Osterfeldt; delegates to Labor Council, W. E. Butler and A. Werner.

HOUSTON LODGE'S NEW QUARTERS

Houston Lodge No. 15, T. M. A., have moved to their new hall and club rooms at 206½ Main street, which is convenient from all theatres. A cordial invitation is extended to all T. M. A.'s and the profession in general, when in Houston, to visit the new T. M. A. home.

At the last regular meeting of Houston Lodge, Brother John P. Morgan was elected president. The former president has left the city.

Beloit, Wis.—The Lyric Theatre will be enlarged.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—An airdrome will be erected at Nostrand avenue and Clarendon road.

WANTED
DARK ROOM, PRINTING ROOM DRYING ROOM HELP
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
251 West 19th Street, New York

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO. SEND EXPEDITION TO SOUTH AMERICA

The General Film Publicity & Sales Company has sent out an expedition of forty people, headed by Captain Fritz Duquesne, celebrated writer, soldier and hunter, in the wilds of South America for the purpose of taking a series of moving pictures such as have never been equaled before. These pictures will be more thrilling and exciting in every foot than the most thrilling of the Rainey pictures that are now being shown.

These pictures will portray the South American savage life and customs. Captain Fritz Duquesne was born of Boer parents in South Africa, educated in Europe (where he won considerable distinction as a swordsman), and has been a professional hunter of big game most of his life. At the age of seventeen he was a veteran of the Kaffir wars. He served in the Boer War and also in the Congo.

In the recent events of South Africa's kaleidoscopic history Captain Duquesne took a conspicuous part. He acted in many capacities during the hostilities between the Boers and British, being in turn spy, military detective, engineer, censor, dispatch carrier and propagandist. He was wounded twice in the fighting around Colenso.

When the British succeeded in cutting cable communications between the Boer Republic and the rest of the world, Duquesne carried the news of the Boer victories over the Mozambique border, and from there he wrote his dispatches to the Petit Bleu, the official European organ of the Boer Government. He was once captured by the Portuguese and thrown into prison at Lorenzo Marques. Later he was taken a prisoner to Europe at the request of the British Government. When the ship that conveyed him and his guard touched at Naples he was suffering from a fever, and in consequence was placed in an Italian hospital. On his recovery he was allowed to go free. He went to Brussels and was sent back to the front by Dr. Leyds, with plans for the seizure of Cape Town by the four commandos then mobilized in Cape Colony.

Everything was ready for the taking of the city when, a traitor having revealed the plot, Duquesne and a number of others were captured in Cape Town inside the British defenses. This was the climax of what has come to be known as the "Cape Town Plot." Some of the prisoners were shot and some sentenced to death who later had their sentences changed to life imprisonment. Captain Duquesne was among the latter. Ten months later he escaped from the Bermuda prisons, got aboard the American yacht Margaret of New York, while she was coaling at the dock, and was conveyed to Baltimore.

Back to Europe he went again as war correspondent and military writer, on the Petit Bleu, thence to Africa, where he took a commission on the Congo. In East Africa he hunted big game for sport and profit, and finally he came to New York to do newspaper and magazine work.

Through special concessions we have arranged for a weekly report by the United Wireless for the Captain to communicate with us results and experiences of our expedition. This expedition has involved a tremendous cost, and when the films are completed will be the marvel of photography in motion pictures. Not only is Captain Fritz Duquesne a celebrated soldier, hunter and author, but also one of the world's best photographers. It is the advance expedition that laid out the route which Roosevelt took in 1909.

T. M. A. NEWS

Robert C. Newman was the guest of honor at a celebration held at the Chateau Laurier, in Ottawa, Ont., July 3, upon the occasion of the fifty-seenth anniversary of his birth. A banquet was tendered Brother Newman by the Ottawa Lodge No. 49, at which Honorary Member Brother Gus Greening, with the officers and members, were present. Short speeches were made in keeping with the occasion. The menu was an excellent one. The same evening Brother Newman and the officers of Lodge No. 49 were the guests of Brother Greening, manager of the Dominion Theatre, Ottawa. Brother Newman made the report that the association was in excellent standing. He left for Toronto to attend the convention of the Grand Lodge officers, T. M. A.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

BE UP-TO-DATE
Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication
Moving Picture News

NIAGARA SLIDES
Means to you the best on the market. Just now six announcements for $1.00. Now don't think because they're cheap that they're not first class. They are, and we're bound to please you or refund your money. We buy stock in large quantities, we pay no big city rent; we're in the business to show you what a good slide means. Send for catalog, and let us tell you of our advertising and novelty slides.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

LOCAL PICTURES MADE
10c Per Foot
Film Titles, Any Length, 3 Feet For 25c
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
199 Third Avenue, New York
Dept. A.

SLIDES—ALL KINDS
Advertising
Announcement
Lectures
Send for catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM
130 West 37th Street, New York

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.
Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.
SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD
YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

PATENTS
promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats. Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,
H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

IF you want to keep your name and product before the Moving Picture Trade ADVERTISE in the MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Mackie-Flammer, Inc.
THEATRE BROKERS
Dealing in High Class Theatres
COMMERCIAL TRUST BUILDING,
1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ROLL TICKETS
LARGEST FACTORY IN THE WORLD

50,000— $5.90	CARTER TICKET CO.
100,000— 8.75	DANVERS, MASS.
200,000— 16.00

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year and the ART OF SCENARIO WRITING, by William Lord Wright for $2.00.

FILMS FOR SALE
$2.50 Per Reel Up
Biggest bargains in the country. Send for catalogue.
ACME FILM COMPANY
130 West 37th Street, New York

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!
Every Exhibitor Can Do It.
Write Us To Show You How.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.
248 West 35th Street, New York.
We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

HIGH ART FEATURES
We release one every ten days in two and three-reel productions.

Write us for our list and synopsis.

NEW YORK FILM CO.,
12 Union Sq., New York City.

David's War With Absalom
1,500 Feet. Ready for shipment May 10. Three styles lithographs.

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST
The Cleveland Leader
Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS
$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery
Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF
The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.
Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—ED. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

Abonnement 1 fr. pour le monde entier

CINEMA-REVUE

Journal indépendant d'Informations
Supplement mensuel à "Cinema"
Annuaire de la projection fixe et animée
Numéro spécimen sur demande
Bureau 118, rue d'Assas Paris

NAT C. GOODWIN
As FAGIN in
OLIVER TWIST

Five reel production. For information regarding States still open write or wire

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

To Writers:
THE EDITOR

(The Journal of Information for Literary Workers) published in your interest for eighteen years, is the magazine of which Jack London said: "I may not tell a hundredth part of what I learned from THE EDITOR, but I may say that it taught me how to solve the stamp and landlord problems." It is a monthly stimulus to the production and sale of more and better manuscripts. Besides articles of concrete, practical worth by editors or by writers successful or about to be successful, each number contains in "The Literary Market" all the news of all the magazines, new and old, that pay for manuscripts.

THE EDITOR is especially helpful to the scenario writer. It publishes from time to time helpful articles by those who are successful producers of photoplays. A copy of the current number will be sent for 15 cents. The yearly subscription is one dollar.

The Editor
Box 830, Ridgewood, New Jersey.

A gf A
Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

POWERS PHOTO-ENGRAVING CO.
The Fastest Engravers on Earth
154 NASSAU STREET
(Tribune Bldg.) NEW YORK CITY
OPEN DAY, NIGHT, SUNDAYS and HOLIDAYS
Phone 4200 4201 4202 4203 } BEEKMAN
OUR CUTS ARE UNION MADE
New Process for Enlarging Half-Tones from Moving Picture Film

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Tel. Oxford { 3790 2187

"101" Bison Headliners

IN ONE, TWO AND THREE-REEL SUBJECTS
BE SURE AND GET A GENUINE BISON

MR. EXHIBITOR: Make your exchange man show you the trade-mark on title bearing the name: NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

COMING COMING

"Custer's Last Fight"

IN THREE REELS

The greatest feature and motion picture in the World.

TUESDAY, JULY 30th
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Desert"

A single reel feature and sure is a masterpiece.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 6th

"The Reformed Outlaw"

A single reel feature, full of thrills from start to finish

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2d
"101" BISON HEADLINER

"The Gambler and the Girl"

A single reel feature and a powerful story, too.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9th

"The Garrison Triangle"

A single reel feature, up to the standard made by the famous "101 Bison Stock Co."

EXTRA EXTRA

BRONCHO FILMS

Ready for release week of August 12th. Two releases weekly, Mondays & Thursdays. One, two and three reel features just as good, big, elaborate and as full of action and thrills as our famous "101" Bison Headliners. "Enough said" for the present.

KEYSTONE FILMS

Ready for release week of AUGUST 12TH. Two releases weekly, WEDNESDAYS AND SATURDAYS.

WEDNESDAYS: A split-reel comedy and always a feature, supported and made by Mr. Mack Sennett, Mr. Fred Mace, and Miss Mabel Normand, the greatest comédienne, all well known and popular players in motion pictures throughout the world.

SATURDAYS: A feature dramatic in one and two reels played by a strictly "ALL STAR" Stock Company, consisting only of "STARS," and only of the most prominent and popular "STARS" in motion pictures playing all parts in the cast.

EXHIBITORS! EXHIBITORS!

Start right in this minute demanding BRONCHO & KEYSTONE FILMS, and be sure to get every release beginning with the first releases from your exchange. Holler, if necessary, your "head-off," and don't stop hollering until your exchange man has booked these films for you. If you can't get them tell us.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

150 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

A. KESSEL, Jr., Pres. CHAS. O. BAUMANN, Sec'y and Treas.

Gaumont

Gaumont

1-3-8 SHEETS

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

The most spirited sensation of the season, barring none. See the desperate leap from the bridge onto the fast flying train beneath, the race on horseback, the dash for life across the river, the wreck, the fire of death.

Even Attacked By a Lion beaten to a frazzle, and that's going some. Heralds—Pamphlets—Literature, etc.

It's a THRILLER—A FILLER—A CHILLER—A KILLER

The Exhibitors will surely get Forever if they avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity and start kicking

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

Just Deserts in real profit and thereby enjoy their the most thrilling sensation ever filmer. To run it in your theatre means that you shall be rewarded with real

TUESDAY, AUG. 6
DREAM-DRIVEN

THURSDAY, AUG. 8
THE PHANTOM OF THE NIGHT

TUESDAY, AUG. 13
ANDROCLUS AND THE LION
(Hand-colored)

Scene from A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

TUESDAY, AUG. 20
HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

THURSDAY, AUG. 22
GRAZIELLA THE GYPSY

TUESDAY, AUG. 27
THE STORY OF CHOPIN
(Hand-colored)

Gaumont

Gaumont

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Distributors.

COMING WATCH OUT!

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3

Publicity galore will accompany it.

EVERYBODY BOOK THIS HAND-COLORED SUPERB TWO REELER

1-3 sheets—sure

SENSATIONAL—STIRRING—SUPERLATIVE

The REFUGEE'S CASKET

AUG 12 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 5

AUGUST 3
1912

AUG 13 1912

PRICE TEN CENTS

Scene from
BLANCHE WALSH IN RESURRECTION (Four Parts)
Masko Film Co., New York

We're Going! Are You?

TO THE EXHIBITORS' BIG

Chicago Convention

We have arranged Headquarters for the convenience and comfort of visitors at The La Salle Hotel, Rooms 408-409-410-411

HARRY R. RAVER, Secretary and Manager

CHAS. J. HITE, Treasurer

GEO. A. MAGIE

The Committee in Charge

Together with Personal Representation by the Following Manufacturers:

Gaumont	Reliance
Thanhouser	Solax
Majestic	All Star
American	Comet
Gt. Northern	Lux

We Are Sole Agents

FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA

133-135 West 44th Street NEW YORK

"101" Bison Headliners

WARNING TO EXHIBITORS

Genuine "101" Bison films are produced only by the New York Motion Picture Co. Exhibitors should be careful to check the titles of the subjects advertised by us in order to prevent being imposed upon by exchanges who are substituting other films as "Bisons."

ONE REEL "THE BUGLE CALL" RELEASED TUES., AUG. 13

A stirring military subject, in which the Colonel's little son learns the bugle calls. A touch of comedy is introduced when he blows "Boots and Saddles" in the middle of the night and the entire camp is aroused. The stage coach is attacked by Indians, and the boy saves the party by the shrill blasts of his bugle which lead the soldiers to the scene of battle. The battle scenes are exceptionally well presented.

ONE REEL "THE OTHER GIRL" RELEASED FRI., AUG. 16

A romantic western subject of high dramatic worth. A summer boarder comes to the ranch and her presence causes a broken engagement between Jim Powers and Mary Dorn. Mary goes to the city and becomes a Salvation Army girl, and prevents the infatuated Powers from shooting the city girl, in a fit of jealousy. He is brought to his senses in a splendidly acted scene and secures Mary's forgiveness.

COMING! BRONCHO FILMS COMING!

1, 2 and 3 reel subjects of the same character as "101" Bisons, covering pioneer, military and frontier life. Watch for release dates. Two reels each week.

COMING! KEYSTONE FILMS COMING!

Two reels each week, consisting of a split comedy and a dramatic subject. The comedies will feature Max Sennett, the producer, and Mabel Normand, as well as Fred Mace. The dramatic subject is composed of popular stars who have been gathered together in an all-star company.

COMING! "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" (3 REELS)

This sensational and expensive production will be released very shortly. The most spectacular and thrilling war subject ever produced.

IMPORTANT NOTICE:—The Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, has taken the agency in the United States and Canada for "101" Bison, Broncho and Keystone films, commencing with the week of August 19. For films released during that week and thereafter orders should be placed with the Mutual Film Corporation.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
150 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

ECLAIR

Three one-reel subjects
One three-reel
ALL FEATURES

AUGUST 13th
"DADDY"
It's the 33rd degree in Comedy Frivolity.

AUGUST 15th
"AUNT HETTY'S GOLDFISH"
A swimming little sentimental comedy drama.

AUGUST 18th
"A CHILD TO THE RESCUE"
A Dramatic Tensity and
"EGYPTIAN RUINS"

FILMS of QUALITY

His fame and his deeds have been told and written and sung but never never pictured until August 22nd, 1912.

"Robin Hood"
IN THREE PARTS

One splendorous—one gorgeous and one most magnificent Lithos in three-sheet and one-sheet—three varieties showing five different scenes—a sure lure for "standing-room only" attendance. They'll cost you but little and make you considerable.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42d St., New York City

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Tel. Oxford { 3790 / 2187

EASTMAN
motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

THANHOUSER

THREE-A-WEEK TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucille" in two reels

"LUCILLE" IN 2 REELS TUESDAY, AUG. 27 A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

THANHOUSER "PERFECT PUBLICITY" FEATURE

PERFECT PUBLICITY Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, O. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column) 40 cents apiece from STANDARD ENGRAVING CO., 560 7th AVE., NEW YORK CITY.

RELEASED SUNDAY, AUG. 11	RELEASED TUESDAY, AUG. 13	RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 16
"Big Sister"	"Now Watch the Professor"	"The Wrecked Taxi"
She loved "Little Sister" with a great love and when sad circumstance separated them, she grieved until a handsome copper and a plan happened along, whereupon the sisters were re-united.	In fact, watch him pretty closely if you value Slippery Jake's advice. "Slippery" knows. He had a disastrous association with the Prof., and the picture depicts it.	A woman's reputation and a man's innocence rested on the woman's lips—if she would tell of the Wrecked Taxi the man would be cleared. Tell, she does. It is a splendid sacrifice, and makes a splendid story.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.
Send me FREE July Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name .....
Address .....
Exchange .....

Charles Reade's Great Story

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" In 2 Reels

"UNDINE," After the Famous Riverside Classic

THANHOUSER COMPANY
NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK
Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

NO FICTITIOUS PRICES

A chance for the state right man to buy a high-class production at a price that will net him a handsome profit in a short time

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY ABOUT

Blanche Walsh

IN TOLSTOY'S Resurrection

3600 FEET—4 PARTS TONS OF ADVERTISING MATTER

BUT DON'T TAKE THEIR WORD FOR IT

CONVINCE YOURSELF

MASKO FILM CO., 145 W. 45th St., New York

DON THE MOST INTELLIGENT HORSE IN THE WORLD. THE HORSE WITH A MILLION DOLLAR REPUTATION.

Featured in that remarkable TWO REEL production—the production in which DON demonstrates that he is more human than some humans.

The Equine Spy

TWO REELS

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912

A story which all the critics lauded to the skies. They agree it is remarkable for its action, incidents and sustaining interest.

DON IS WORTH $10,000 AND HAS AN EARNING CAPACITY OF $20,000 A YEAR

ADVERTISING MATTER INCLUDES

One Sheets—Three Sheets, Special Lobby Photos and Lobby Displays, "Magnets," Cuts and Other Dope.

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, 1912

THE BLOOD STAIN

A remarkable story—which revolves about an artist, a thug and a reporter. The artist is accused of a crime and is almost convicted on circumstantial evidence, but a star reporter on a metropolitan paper unravels the mystery. Shows the news department of a big paper in action, just before press time.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 16th, 1912

THE STRIKE

A big labor problem play, showing the human side of the employer. The picture shows the agitation of employees before the strike is declared, shows the strike on, the stoning of the factory and the climax is capped by a big fire in the ringleaders' home, where a hidden bomb almost explodes.

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, N. Y.

©CL.B257521

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News. 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI August 3, 1912 Number 5

ON TO CHICAGO

In the ranks of the exhibitors to-day all eyes are turned towards Chicago and the week of August 12-17. There are to be great doings in that city on those days, and we want to ask every exhibitor whether it is to be a business meeting or a pleasure jaunt, whether it is to be a shirking of work or doing the duties and performing conscientiously what they are called upon to perform, or are they going to shirk them and make it just wasted opportunities. We trust that every exhibitor who will be present at Chicago is going with the strong, powerful incentive of making himself a power and making his league the pivot on which the whole machinery of the industry shall revolve.

In our article on the first convention we voiced the sentiments of our readers when we expressed our views on the importance of that great convention. We stated our belief and knowledge, and we enforced it in as strong language as we possibly could, that the voice of the exhibitor must be heard and heeded in all the councils of the industry. The manufacturer to a large extent is pre-eminently the man of the film, but without the exhibitor he would be a mere cipher. Upon the exhibitor depends the manufacturer's chance of making money, and as the exhibitor pays the piper he should also call the tune; in other words, he should be able to select, from a wide-open market, those films that are absolutely necessary for the success of his business.

The Moving Picture News is the only organ in the industry that has had the courage of its convictions and dared to support the exhibitors in their legitimate efforts to be recognized as a factor in the industry. We would like to point out to our readers that no other paper has had the courage to publish their complaints; we have never consigned any of their letters or communications to the waste paper basket. The Moving Picture News has been the only paper that has given advice to the exhibitor on patent litigation or anything pertaining to the industry, and we want to say in this foreword that there is a duty before the exhibitors to protect their rights. It is good, exceedingly good, for the manufacturers as a whole to invite them to partake of their hospitality. It is simply giving a little back to the men who have made them the millionaires or semi-millionaires they are to-day, for them to give a little return in the shape of automobile rides and banquets. At the same time this must not be taken as charity or bribes. We want every man at Chicago to keep his brain clear and stick to business, performing to the full his duty to himself in the work that his hands will find to do during that week. The time has come when the exhibitor shall be the dictator, the censor board, and have full plenipotentiary powers to choose his own program, and we look to the exhibitors at Chicago to voice these sentiments, and demand, in the name of justice and right, the full, free selection of any and all films that they need.

NEFF SUITS US

"NEFF FOR PRESIDENT" will be the slogan of all the willing League workers at the national convention at Chicago the week of August 11. "He's plenty good enough for us" is the universal expression of exhibitors throughout the West, and the East, too, for that matter.

Politics is a detriment to the moving picture business in whatever department you may name. However, when politics are injected by disturbers who have fish to fry, it then becomes time that all exhibitors, manufacturers, exchange men and others having the good of the industry at heart to gird up their loins, prepare for the fray, and work the political hatchet as good or better than the other fellows.

It is the doubtful minority that is secretly opposing M. A. Neff for re-election as President of the National League of Exhibitors. And why, may we ask? Better come out openly with a candidate and trust to fair, square and above-board politics than to endeavor to undermine a man who is unbeatable if honest and honorable warfare is to be waged against him.

The Moving Picture News can play politics if necessary. We have deplored politics in the business since its inception as something detrimental to prosperity and good business. However, we think we know the political game, and, furthermore, we have within our no small circle of influence others who know the game and can sit in with a stand-pat hand.

We propose to play politics, if necessary, at Chicago. If we do play the game we will play like the gentleman from Oyster Bay—play with a meat axe and never overlook one best bet. We have hoisted the standard of President Neff and we will be found on the scene of action supporting Mr. Neff for re-election as National League president. He deserves the office. He is fearless; he is a man of sound judgment; plays no favorites; and remembers that the manufacturer as well as the exhibitor must prosper. We believe, likewise, President Neff has made the Exhibitors' League what it is—an organization working for the uplift of the picture, and, consequently, for the benefit of manufacturer and exhibitor alike.

President Neff is going to be re-elected president of the Exhibitors' League at Chicago. He is going to be elected unanimously. Moving Picture News representatives and the friends of this journal are going to do it.

Like Uncas, "we have spoken."

CHARLES O. BAUMAN AND ADAM KESSELL OUT OF POLITICS

The Mutual Film Corporation with its offices at 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York, has purchased all the rights, title, and stock of the film exchanges owned by Messrs. Bauman and Kessell who have sold out their entire outfit, and will no longer be engaged in the renting of film; in the future their eight exchanges in New York City will be able to secure all the releases of the Film Supply Company of America. The Mutual Film Corporation has also taken the sole agency, and distribution, of the "101" Bison, "Broncho" and the "Keystone" films. Messrs. Bauman and Kessell will in future devote their entire energies to the manufacture of film of an educational and elevating tendency. The great advances they have made up to the present will be some criterion of what their future releases will be. Mr. Bauman said to us that this film will henceforth be included in the list of the Film Supply Company of America, and will, commencing this week, be released in their programme. We asked Mr. Bauman if this was fully satisfactory to him, owing to the fact that he was a prominent party in the Universal, to which he replied, and Mr. Kessell coincided with the remarks, that they are both perfectly satisfied with the conditions as they now exist with the Film Supply Company of America, fully believing that this programme will be of far better quality and superior to any other Independent or allied combination.

In further conversation with Mr. Bauman, we learnt that the controversy and the legal matters brought by the Universal Company against Messrs. Bauman and Kessell in which the Universal brought suits of injunctions restraining Messrs. Bauman, Kessell, as well as the New York Motion Picture Company, from in any way being allowed to manufacture or sell moving picture films. It is well known that for some time Judge Gavagan had been going over the briefs. The result of his decision was given on Saturday, July 27th, in total, denying the injunction asked for by the Universal. Similar action was brought by William H. Swanson, representing the Universal in California, where the New York Motion Picture Company have their studios, and the result in this case is that the New York Motion Picture Company and "101" Bison Stock Company, have, by the order of the judge, retained their properties, and the work from these studios will continue to be done as before, making the famous "101" Bison pictures without any further interruption. To secure this the bonds required from the New York Motion Picture Company and the Bison Stock Company was $25,000 which was wired to California on the 30th of July.

Mr. Bauman stated, insofar as litigation is concerned the New York Motion Picture Company has proven to the courts in New York and California, that the Universal Film Company made a breach of contract, and, in addition to this, they proved the Universal was an illegal combination in the restraint of trade, hence Messrs. Bauman and Kessell were fully justified in breaking away from such an illegal combine. The outcome of this, as it appears at present from Mr. Bauman's remarks, is to the effect, that he with Mr. Kessell, have succeeded so far in scattering the combine by sending Wm H. Swanson to the Coast and our old friend Carl Laemmle (the man crowned with the horse shoe, and who carries the rabbit's foot in his pocket for luck) across the waters to take the waters at Carlsbad, Germany. Pat Powers is the only one left to handle the Universal Company as its general manager, and director for the making of the programme, and also director general of the pictures. Suffice to say he is well qualified in this respect, as to quality which may be seen in the films and subjects brought out by the Powers Picture Plays during the past two years. David Horsley, of Nestor Company, is continually pleading with Pat Powers to let him out of the Universal.

As a sequel to the above victories we learnt from Mr. Bauman that on Wednesday morning, July 31st, just before the employees of the New York Motion Picture Company, at their studio in Nineteenth street, had arrived for work, Pat Powers appeared with nine guerrillas just before 8 o'clock, and attempted to force his way into the studio and factory and take possession thereof. This move proved a boomerang on our good friend Pat. The breaking of glass and woodwork in forcing the doors awoke the two watchmen who are always in the place armed for such an emergency; fully realizing what was happening, the first one awoke, drew his revolver and fired in the air. This awoke his companion who immediately seized his gun and blazed away the six bullets therein, scattering the bad men by the firing in the air. The ten little nigger boys fled, tumbled, scampered, where, O where! At any rate we feel sure that Pat Powers Company missed a great scoop inasmuch as their camera men were not there to see their doughty chief and his henchmen fleeing from the New York Motion Picture Company men. It certainly would have made a comical film, and we are sure would have caused many a laugh in the realm of picturedom. What a picture! what a melodrama! was lost. We understand that proper legal steps have now been taken to protect the New York Motion Picture Company studios, and put under bonds the Universal Company from interfering in the future with the business of the New York Motion Picture Company.

UNIVERSALS AUTO IT TO CHICAGO CONVENTION.

Characteristic of the unique and effective way of doing things at the Universal is the announcement of the elaborate plans being perfected for the overland journey of the men who will represent the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by automobile.

When the line of machines leaves 1 Union Square there will be cars driven by Mark Dintenfass, P. A. Powers, Julius Stern, Ed. Porter, David Horsley, Joe Engel and J. Henkle. In addition there will be a goodly representative group of others identified with the Universal interests.

It is the intention of the party to drive their cars from New York to Chicago, leaving in time to pay a few friendly calls to exchange men and exhibitors along the line of the route.

JOHN C. HEMMENT

Our friend "Jack" received on Wednesday, the 24th of July, a cablegram from Paul E. Rainey asking him to sail immediately to meet him at Trouville, France, with a view to taking another trip in South Africa, for the purpose of photographing more big game in their natural haunts. Everyone of our readers by this time knows that Jack Hemment was the man who made the famous Paul Rainey South African hunt pictures, and through his lectures at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, popularized these to such an extent, that he proved himself to be the greatest aide-de-camp Carl Laemmle ever had. He made Carl Laemmle famous through the Rainey hunt pictures. We wonder who will be the lucky man to obtain the pictures secured by this new trip. Jack sailed on Saturday, July 27th, on the Olympic, showing his readiness to grasp the situation. We understood from him that he was going direct to Trouville, from there to the Lumiere factory at Lyons, where some special film was to be made for them, then making a call at London, looking after his interests in the Paul Rainey pictures there, thence to the field of operation. He has taken with him thirty dogs and a whole package of paraphernalia which weighs somewhat in the neighborhood of a thousand pounds which he is going to carry with him in his travels.

Jack is a mighty strong man, a splendid athlete, a man of the best physique, and one we like to meet as a good specimen of manhood. We certainly do not envy him his burden. How he carries it we will let our readers know when he returns. All we can do now is to wish him every piece of good luck, and full success, with a safe and happy return to America's shores.

"MOVIES" INVADE THE EAGLE

News Staff at Work Taken by Solax Company of Flushing

The following is a story from the Brooklyn Daily Eagle published July 24, 1912.

Yesterday afternoon the news room of the Eagle was invaded by a moving picture concern, which was anxious to catch the bustle and confusion of a large metropolitan newspaper as part of a pictureplay they are about to produce. As it is a known fact among newspaper men that this office is one of the best equipped in the city, the motion picture concern asked permission to take a film of the office at the time of its greatest activity, just before the Eagle went to press yesterday afternoon.

The negative taken is to be part of a film called "The Blood Stain," and is to portray the adventures of a young reporter working on a murder mystery. The scene in the Eagle news room showed the climax of the pictureplay as the young reporter rushed into the office with the last thread of evidence necessary to write a great story. Apart from the presence of one professional actor, the members of the regular news staff of the Eagle were taken in the midst of their work.

It is believed that this is the first time that a newspaper office has been taken in actual operation.

SCENARIOS FOR VICTOR FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY MUST BE ADDRESSED TO COMPANY'S OFFICE

The Victor Film Manufacturing Company wish to state that, as there has been a good deal of misunderstanding with regard to the sending of scenarios to this company, and as they are not in the Universal Film Company, but merely do their advertising and release their pictures through them, it is desirable that scenario writers send contributions direct to the office of the Victor Film Manufacturing Company, 575 11th avenue, New York city, and not to the Universal Company.

NEW FILM COMPANY ON THE MAP

The very latest venture in filmdom is that of the Bradley Film Manufacturing Company of New York City.

Will K. Bradley, along with a few other picture men of the city, are backing the venture. It is understood that Mr. Bradley, who is a well-known magazine writer and picture-playwright, will contribute the entire output of scenarios.

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Gem

"Back to Her Own," for July 30, is the story of a gipsy child, who, while her mother had left her for a moment crying on the ground, was picked up by a rich couple who were passing in their automobile, and thinking the child deserted cared for it as their own. When grown, however, the gipsy blood in her asserts itself, and she steals back to her own. This film has for subtitle lines, of which the scenes are emblematic: for instance, "The White Moth to the Closing Vine" as the girl was lured to the arms of her gipsy lover, and "The Bee to the Open Clover," which is represented by the girl leaving the conventional life of luxury for the freedom of the gipsy life. This film has been carefully produced, and is very charming in outline and action.

Powers

"In the Sowing" is a film specially adapted to church or Sunday school work. The story is woven around the life of a wayward young man, whose better instincts were awakened through the influence of a little child.

Eclair

"Because of Bobbie" is a pretty little romance if not an unusual character. All going well to the onlooker until the scar on the neck of the young lady is displayed. Whose fault was it that the scar looked like a dab of paint placed on her neck with a sign painter's brush?

"The Lady Barrister," from the Paris Eclair, is a masterpiece in way of production and action. The plot is good, and comedy and good humor prevail throughout.

"Life in a Bulgarian Village," on the same reel, is refreshing as a bit from the simpler life. Released July 28th.

Milano Films

"The Blind Man's Sacrifice," in two reels, in matter of interpretation is worth more than a passing word. It is our misfortune that we do not know the name of the actor who impersonated Prof. Favi, the blind man in the picture. His work is the finest we have seen for many a day. The man's conception and interpretation of the part is marvelous, and it is worth the price of admission to any theatre to behold an exemplification of pantomime and the dramatic art such as is seldom seen in pictures or out of them.

GAUMONT

"The Story of Chopin" is deserving of a page all to itself. This is one of their famous hand-coloreds, and each scene is an animated painting. To those who know the life story of the delicate young composer who was called from this earth all too early, some opportunities were lost, but, however, those that were taken advantage of were so splendidly grasped that the film is altogether satisfying. The Chopin of the picture may be a little too robust, and the George Sand of the picture may fill less of his life than we had pictured. The vision scene in the Cathedral, where Chopin gets his inspiration for the "March Funebre," is wonderful.

AMERICAN

"The Fall of Black Hawk," in two reels, is an all-around winner. It is a "Western" masterpiece, and contains some of the finest riding and swimming scenes that we have seen.

VITAGRAPH

"The Barrier That Was Burned," scenario by Rex Beach, and with Edith Storey in the lead, although satisfying in the production, and containing many scenes typical of Alaskan camp life, is not strong in plot. That the snow scenes have been made in the studio is too apparent.

SELIG

"The Miller of Burgundy" is a beautifully artistic production, in which both tragedy and comedy play a part. The authenticity of the staging is a delight.

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

The Motion Picture Exhibitors of the State of Indiana met in convention at the Dennison Hotel, Indianapolis, on Tuesday, July 23, 1912. Before the State meeting was called to order Mr. M. A. Neff, president of the National League, addressed twenty-eight of the Indianapolis exhibitors and organized them into a local organization. On the evening of the twenty-second, Mr. M. Neff, Dr. J. M. Rhodes, F. J. Rambusch and John A. Victor visited the downtown theatres in an automobile and they all agreed to attend the meeting. At 6.30 p. m. J. A. Victor and wife called at the hotel in his automobile and Mr. Neff, with Mr. F. J. Rambusch, visited at the north and west side motion picture theatres and they all agreed to attend the meeting. At 8.10 p. m. Dr. J. M. Rhodes picked Mr. Neff up at the big new airdrome, Plaza, after Mr. Neff, Mr. and Mrs. Victor and Mr. Rambusch had visited all of the theatres on the west and north side and had advised them of the meeting which had been arranged for nine o'clock, Wednesday morning, at the Dennison Hotel. Mr. Neff and Dr. Rhodes visited all the rest of the theatres in Indianapolis and the last one visisited Dr. Rhodes had to call the manager out of bed, but he promised to be at the meeting next morning.

When Mr. Neff called the local meeting to order twenty-one of the Indianapolis exhibitors responded, paid their initiation fee, named their local organization Indianapolis Local Branch, No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, appointed a constitution and by-laws committee and elected the following officers: J. A. Victor, president; T. M. Sanders, first vice-president; M. M. Miller, second vice-president; Dr. J. M. Rhodes, treasurer; Ed. Addy, secretary. After electing their officers and paying their charter fee to the State Secretary, they elected their delegates to attend the Chicago Convention. The delegates elected were J. A. Victor, Dr. J. M. Rhodes; alternates, John B. Hubert and Chas. Ferguson. The Indianapolis local has heretofore been working as a local organization, but they have not been affiliated with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America but just as a local body. They are enthusiastic, and are going about their organization in a business-like way, which means that they will accomplish much good. Mr. John B. Hubert was elected local organizer for the city of Indianapolis, to secure every exhibitor in the city as a member of the local. Several of the Indianapolis exhibitors joined the local in the afternoon.

After the local organization adjourned, President Dickson called the State Convention to order in the same hall. After the minutes of the meeting and the reports of the committees were read the following delegates were elected to attend the Chicago Convention: Messrs. F. J. Rambusch Shelbyville: Mr R. Deaton, Warsaw; S. B. Sampson, Anderson. Alternates, Messers. J. Bomerchan, Ft. Wayne; E. Rife, Logansport; J. A. Breeman, Evansville.

Mr. Neff in his closing address to the convention asked all of those who would attend the Chicago Convention to hold up their right hand. Thirty-two delegates held up their hand signifying that they would attend the Chicago Convention. The Indiana League is thoroughly organized and is doing splendid work. The State League took in several new members and the meeting was one of the most harmonious and enthusiastic meetings the Indiana League has ever held.

The following is a list of a few of the prominent exhibitors who attended the Indianapolis convention:

Dr. J. M. Rhodes, Indianapolis; D. P. Roberts, James Rushworth, Fred W. Sanders, John Servaas, Richard Staub, Guy C. Thompson, J. L. Van Buskirk, A. C. Zaring, C. F. Ferguson, Frank Green, H. W. Eddy, W. L. Overholser, F. J. Rambusch, C. H. Norman, M. M. Miller, Edward B. Kemper, Philip Ikora, John B. Hubert, S. T. Haynes, William H. Bruce, R. R. Bair, C. E. Adams, H. W. Summers, T. B. Simmons, H. F. Prentice, S. M. Grimes, J. F. Truelock, L. J. Brown, P. J. Dickson, H. S. Dickson, Dudley Williamson, Fred J. Wright, E. Cunningham, Chas. Murray, H. E. Campbell, Wm. Ham, R. H. Kidd, W. H. Johnson, J. R. Branin, E. P. Fuller, S. D. Kapf, Roy B. Parks, E. Clifford, Geo. L. Sanger, Geo. B. Grubb, Harry B. Elliott, Chas. Holb.

Secretary H. W. Rosenthal, of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, made a highly successful trip through the state during which he organized local branches of the League in Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Binghamton, Buffalo and Elmira. In all about a hundred and twenty moving picture exhibitors of these cities and surrounding towns enrolled as members of the organizations, and Secretary Rosenthal has received nearly a hundred letters from exhibitors in scattered towns throughout the state, expressing regret at their inability to be present at the various organization meetings, and asking particulars as to joining later.

Secretary Rosenthal reports the utmost enthusiasm among the up-state exhibitors for organization, as they all realize that to be the only way to successfully oppose any unfair legislation that may be proposed at Albany, and it will be only a short time before every exhibitor in the state will be within the fold.

STIMULATING ENTHUSIASM IN CHICAGO CONVENTION

Mr. Clem. Kerr, official organizer of the state of Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and Val. Rayburg, also of Dayton, have been in New York during the past week and are traveling the eastern states with a view of stimulating the interest of the exhibitors in the League. in working up the enthusiasm for the great convention of Chicago.

ALABAMA EXHIBITORS TO MEET

The exhibitors of the state of Alabama will meet Thursday, August 8th, at the Exchange Hotel, Montgomery, Ala., for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, and naming delegates to the National Convention of Chicago. Mr. Neff and others will be present.

The New York Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will hold a meeting on Monday night, at 11.30, at 136 Third avenue, when the election of two delegates will take place to represent the New York branch at the Chicago Convention during the week of August 12. Mr. Clem Kerr, official organizer of Ohio, will be present and talk, as well as Val Raysburg of Dayton.

HALLBERG SELLING M. P. MACHINES OF ALL MAKES

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the sale of an Edison Model B with Hallberg Economizer, and two 24" Reversible Exhaust Fans to Chas. L. Jourdan, Durham, N. C., one Simplex M. P. Machine to Central State Hospital, Central Islip, N. Y. Powers No. 6A with two Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizers to Seaside Hippodrome, Rockaway Beach, N. Y.

ECLAIR PRODUCTION OF ROBIN HOOD

One of the most artistic productions that has recently appeared in Motion Picturedom is that of "Robin Hood," staged by Mr. E. Arnaud, with the following cast, all of whom have impersonated the characters alloted them to the pink of perfection:

Marian Merwyn (maid Marian)..Miss Barbara Tennant
Housekeeper for the Sheriff.....Miss Julia Stuart
Maid at Merwyn's.....Miss Mathilde Baring
Fennel .. } (Marian's companions) { .Miss Isabel Lamon
Christabel } { Miss Muriel Ostrich
Robin Hood.....Mr. Robert Frazer
Friar Tuck.....Mr. M. Hannafly
Little John... } Some of { .....Mr. Guy Oliver
Allan-a-Dale... } Robin Hood's { ...Mr. George Larkin
Will Scarlet... } Merry Men { .....Mr. Chas. Hundt
Much..... { ...Mr. John Troyano
The Unknown (Richard Coeur de Leon)
.....Mr. Hollingsworth
Sheriff of Nottingham.....Mr. Alex. B. Francis
Guy de Gisbourne.....Mr. Lamar Johnstone
Thos. Merwyn.....Mr. John Adolfi
Sir Monceaux.....Mr. Burkell
Innkeeper .....Mr. Stowe
First Sentinel .....Mr. Richard Sterling
Second Sentinel.....Mr. Sheldon
Third Sentinel .....Mr. Fischer
Guards Halberdiers, Merry Men, Courtiers, Guests and Citizens, by a corps of experienced artists.

We are all more or less familiar with the story of the Young Earl of Huntingdon, who, in disguise, roamed the Sherwood forest despoiling the rich and distributing the booty among the poor. The production opens at Old Merwyn's, whose daughter Marian is being beset by suitors of her father's choosing. Robin Hood, however, has won her heart, and Friar Tuck, the friend of both, is at all times ready to improvise a loophole of escape or devise a meeting place for the two lovers. Guy de Gisbourne, one of the discarded lovers, vows vengeance on Robin Hood, and is told by Old Merwyn that if he succeeds in accomplishing the arrest of Robin Hood he may have his daughter in marriage. Guy repairs with his men to the Sheriff of Nottingham to obtain a formal warrant. Armed with the warrant they straightway set out in pursuit of Robin Hood, capturing him and also a couple of his colleagues, throwing them into prison. A plan is concocted by Marian and her two girl friends, and they lure the sentinels away from their posts, Robin Hood and his men in the meantime escaping over the prison wall. Following this incident Richard Coeur de Leon enters the story, is welcomed into Robin Hood's camp as a stranger, and the sword bout between the King and Robin Hood, where the King wins out, discloses the indentity of the former, when Robin Hood says, "There is only one man who is capable of disarming me." The stranger says, "Who may that be?" Robin Hood replies, "Our most gracious King," and herewith Richard throws back his mantle, saying, "I am the King!"

The close of the story shows Marian fleeing with Robin Hood to the fastnesses of the forest and the King ordering them to be made man and wife. Guy, the sheriff, and Merwyn, coming upon them, are buffeted and kicked out of camp, and Robin Hood is proclaimed by Richard Coeur de Leon Earl of Huntingdon, and is restored to his father's estate.

Special mention must here be made of the excellent work done in this production by Miss Tennant, Miss Stuart, Mr. H. B. Francis, Lamar Johnstone, Mr. M. Hannafly and Mr. Robt. Frazer.

Humboldt, Kan.—Oscar Reinart, intends building a moving picture show.

Bozeman, Mont.—H. O. Thayer disposed of his interest in the Lyric and the Gem Theatres to the Bozeman Amusement Company.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Claud B. Lansing has erected a new tent on the hotel grounds and will give moving picture exhibitions each evening this summer.

MR. TIBBS' CINDERELLA

By Virginia West

(Adapted from Essanay Release)

MR. TIBBS, salesman at the Walk E-Z shoe store, stood looking dejectedly out into the street "What's the matter Tibbs?" asked Jones, a fellow clerk.

Mr. Tibbs only sighed deeply.

"It must be the ladies. Has some fairy-footed creature stolen poor heart away?"

Tibbs gave a disgusted grunt: "Fairy-footed!" he said.

"For heaven's sake tell a fellow what's the matter," persisted Jones.

Tibbs hestitated long enough to heave a slow deep sigh. "Jones," he said sadly, "these big-footed women are killing me."

Jones looked at the man for a moment as though trying to decide whether he was sane. Then with a roar he dropped onto a bench and doubled up with laughter.

Tibbs did not smile. "Go on Jones," he said; "go on and laugh cruelly you do not know how my artistic soul is offended day after day—yes hour after hour by the largeness of the feet of our lady customers. Why, Jones, why do they all have big feet?"

Jones, choking down his laughter, went close to Tibbs and looking him solemnly in the eyes, said: "Tibbs, because the Lord made them so."

"No, no," cried Tibbs; "I will not believe it! These are monsters who come to us. Beautiful women with big feet. Oh, how horrible! The other stores must get the little feet."

By this time Mr. Tibbs was pacing excitedly up and down the store.

"Why not put up a sign," suggested Jones, "'Only small feet need come our way,' or something to that effect."

"Oh, you may joke, but—say Jones you have given me an idea."

Mr. Tibbs looked almost happy. "You know that beautiful model of a woman's foot that drummer left here yesterday?" Jones nodded.

"That is the very thing to draw them. I shall put on it a shoe that will catch the eye of every passing lady. It is a number two, and I shall say on a card that the first lady who can wear that pair of shoes may have them free of cost. Isn't that fine?"

"Yes, very fine," answered Jones. "But what will the boss say?"

"Nothing whatever, for I shall pay for the shoes out of my own pocket. And they cost seven dollars, too, Jones."

"Oh, you've got an artistic soul, all right; but I'd advise you to get your brain examined."

Tibbs was too thrilled with his new plan to mind what Jones said. He went happily to work to put his model with its dainty shoe in the front window. As he gave it a final loving pat the passers-by might have seen a joyous glow radiating from the top of his sparsely covered head as he leaned broodingly over the little shoe.

The next morning Mr. Tibbs arrived at the store bright and early. All night he had dreamed of the beautiful, fairy-like creature who was to wear the shoe.

Woman after woman stopped in front of the window. Many sighed and passed on, but many came in, to the great delight of Mr. Tibbs.

All day that little man was in a twitter of excitement. For even though the ladies could not wear the shoes in the window, they had small feet, and Mr. Tibbs had the unspeakable joy of holding in his hand and feasting his eyes upon feet that were beautiful. He was almost intoxicated with joy. His artistic soul for once seemed satisfied—or nearly so.

As the evening shadows began to lengthen over the pavement in front of the Walk E-Z Shoe Store a carriage drove up to the curb. From the depths of it emerged a sylph-like creature, heavily veiled. Lightly she tripped across the walk and into the store.

"Twos, please," said a very low voice to Mr. Tibbs, as he rushed to the lady's side.

"Have you seen the shoe and the sign in the window?" he asked with emotion.

"Yes."

"Would you like to try them?" tremblingly.

"Yes."

Almost overcome with excitement, Mr. Tibbs brought the mate to the shoe in the window and slipped it on the lady's foot. Joy! It fitted exactly.

"Cinderella!' exclaimed Mr. Tibbs, using all his will-power to keep himself from showering kisses on the dainty foot.

Quickly the shoe was brought from the window and placed upon the other foot.

The lady arose.

"Will you wear them?" asked Mr. Tibbs.

"Yes."

He picked up the old shoes and went to the back of the store to have them wrapped. But sorrow of sorrows. When he returned the lady and the shoes had disappeared, leaving Mr. Tibbs nothing but two well-worn number twos as a memory.

"What's the matter?" asked Jones when he saw the blank look on his brother-clerk's face.

"The beautiful creature has flown," he answered.

"Well, you didn't expect to hold her did you?"

"I don't know what I expected," declared Tibbs. "But I'm going to find that fairy again if it is the last act of my life."

The next morning Mr. Tibbs went to the head of the Walk E-Z Store and asked if he might have his vacation then. He had some important business to attend to he said, and if he could have his vacation then he thought he could manage to finish the business before the vacation was over.

In view of the fact that Mr. Tibbs was a tried and trusted salesman, his chief was very pleased to do him the favor of giving him his vacation at the time most convenient to Mr. Tibbs.

No sooner had the little man received this permission than he began to lay plans of campaign for the finding of the one and only woman he could ever love.

He remembered that his Cinderella had worn a long gown and was panic stricken for fear she always wore long gowns and he would not be able to see her feet even if she passed. Consequently Mr. Tibbs was driven to doing many things that ordinarily he would never have dreamed of.

One day he was walking along a boardwalk at the edge of town where the young ladies and gentlemen were in the habit of strolling in summer. He felt that hecould not stand and stare. He might embarrass the ladies—and then the police had to be taken into consideration.

Besides, all Mr. Tibbs wanted to see was the ladies' feet. He could only recognize the object of his affections by her feet.

Mr. Tibbs saw, beside the boardwalk—and in a depression below it—some friendly hazel bushes. Into these he crept, and placing himself in a position with his eyes on a level with the boardwalk, he waited.

And he waited. At dusk Mr. Tibbs crept from his hiding place cramped and chilled from the dampness beneath him—and a deeply disappointed man.

Instead of gaining in weight as any thin man should in his vacation, the poor man grew thinner and thinner.

One evening, at the end of the last week in Mr. Tibbs' vacation, he dragged himself disconsolately into a barber shop. The shop was below the pavement, and as Mr. Tibbs sat resignedly under the barber's hands, from force of habit he looked at the feet of the ladies passing along the pavement above.

When the barber was just beginning on the second half of Mr. Tibbs' face, Mr. Tibbs suddenly uttered an inarticulate and soapy exclamation and, springing from the chair, rushed from the room.

He had seen her at last! The shoes and the same dress she wore that memorable day had passed the window.

Wiping the soap from his face as he ran, Mr. Tibbs dashed down the street at a wild rate.

If he could only catch up with the lady and see her beautiful face.

Always she managed to keep just ahead of him and he could not catch even a glimpse of her face.

Corner after corner the lady turned, until at last she entered the railroad station. Mr. Tibbs followed. He saw her pass through the gate and enter the sleeper of the night train to Chicago.

Mr. Tibbs made a dash for the goal, but, alas, he was stopped.

"Where's your ticket?" asked a gruff voice.

"Why—er—I—I—I guess I better get one," he stammered.

"I guess you had. Stand aside, please."

Poor Mr. Tibbs hastened to the ticket office and hastily bought a ticket to Chicago—also a berth. In ecstasy he returned and was passed through the gate.

When he entered the sleeper and found his seat he sat down to get his breath and to look around him. The creature of his dreams was nowhere to be seen, but Mr. Tibbs felt sure that one of the hanging curtains concealed her fair form. At last he was happy. He was near her.

Mr. Tibbs went to bed. Oh, yes; but very little did Mr. Tibbs sleep. All night long he lay planning what he should say to the lovely queen, so near and yet so far. What should he say to her? How should he approach her? Would she remember him as the man who had fitted those shoes to those angelic feet?

When morning came Mr. Tibbs lay listening to every sound in the car. At the first sound of any one arising he sprang up and began hurrying into what few clothes he had taken off. In the terrible excitement the poor man's collar button slipped from his fingers and rolled goodness knows where. Down on his knees went Mr. Tibbs, and crawled from one side of the car to the other. At last, beneath the edge of the curtain on the opposite side from the berth he captured the recalcitrant button.

Just as he was about to arise what should appear before his astonished eyes but the two little shoes, thrust out between the curtains on two little feet.

Mr. Tibbs seized his opportunity. Remaining on his knees he showered kisses on the feet and poured forth his soul in passionate words.

"My angel, my beautiful one; come forth and let me gaze upon thy face. Long have I sought thee and now I have found thee. Let me see thy face."

Mr. Tibbs straightened up and separated the curtains. But only for a moment. With a terrible howl he sprang to his feet and ran toward the platform. Behind him ran a lady of uncertain age—very uncertain. In one hand she held a set of teeth and in the other a jar of face enamel. As she ran there spread across her face a broad and toothless smile.

With one jerk Mr. Tibbs opened the door and with one bound he left the steps of the car.

"My lost one," cried the lady.

"Escaped," groaned Mr. Tibbs, as he lay in the cinders. "Escaped, but you don't deserve it, you old fool."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTES

One company that has recently attracted the general attention of industrial circles is the Japan Film Co., started with $5,000,000 capital, says the Jiji Shimpo. The applications for its shares closed on June 12, and although the exact figures are still unknown, the safest estimates put the number applied for at twice, or even three times, the 15,000 available for subscription, the rest having been taken up by its promoters. Such is the popularity of cinematograph shows at present. The company proposes buying up all other concerns in the field.

ECLAIR NOTES.

Eclair has completed a new wing to their studio, which now makes it possible for three directors to work at the same time. Also their factory is completed to handle outside work, such as developing and printing. In view of Eclair's consistently perfect photography, this new department should prove a boom to the small or free lance producer, more especially if he is inclined to be finicky as to quality.

Saw their Mr. E. Arnaud, he who directed Holy City and Robin Hood, directing a forthcoming release. He was working without a scenario. He had found an engraving in a New York art store—it furnished an inspiration On the back of it were a score of words in French. This was a working scenario—hard on the poor scenario writer who has scripts to sell.

We marveled at this, whereupon Mr. Grisel—his right hand man—told us Mr. Arnaud had done all of "Daddy," an August 13th release, without a working script or a single word of notes. The idea or synopsis was read to him—that was sufficient.

We stopped in to say "hello" to friend Offeman, manager of the New York office. He ran off some of Eclair's colored films, which were just about perfect. Also saw the European edition of the Eclair Weekly and it was quite newsy, indeed.

Begins to look as though Eclair would bear watching by all the biggest producers. Anyway, it goes. We wish you luck, Eclair.

TO THE TRADE

The members of the Bison "101" Stock Company beg to inform you that the Bison Company did not produce the "Junk" reels released by the Universal Film Mfg. Co. under date of June 29 and July 6, and July 9, which purported to be made by the Bison Stock Sompany. The Bison Company made no release on these dates. The Bison Company did not write or produce "Restoration," "Reconciled," "Just In Time," "The Sheriff's Mysterious Ride," "The Little Rancher," and "Dare Devil Dick Wins a Wife." Members of Bison "101" Stock Co.

"THE MILL BUYERS"
Victor Release August 9th

"NONE CAN DO MORE"
Rex Release August 11th

NOTES BY THE WAY
By De Facto

Unique Black and White Screen Effects

At Mr. J. J. Fahey's Phoenix Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida, may be seen a most striking effect in moving picture projection. The theatre is long and narrow, about 25 x 90. The first sixty-five feet of the auditorium are decorated in the usual manner and with some scenic effects. The other twenty-five feet next to the curtain are painted a solid, heavy black, and covers the walls, ceiling and even the screen up to the point exactly required by the picture. To the observer, he appears to be looking into a long, black cavern as dark as that proverbial Egyptian Darkness, and when the picture is projected it has the effect of marvelously increasing the clearness, whiteness and brilliancy of the film. Managers on the lookout for good things can try this out and they will find it to be worth while. To get the best results a long and narrow theatre is needed. A singular circumstance is the optical illusion the scheme presents in the matter of distance. Standing in the theatre at the opposite end from the curtain, many bets have been made as to the length of the darkened part, most wagers being that it is less than ten feet, when to the astonishment of the loser he finds that it is exactly twenty-five feet.

"Rapid Fire" Reel Changing

De Facto has seen many quick changes of reels, but it remains for the operator at the Phoenix Theatre, Jacksonville, to hold the record for lightning changes, for at a recent test Mr. Eddie Bethel, the "man behind the crank," required the audience to wait only fourteen seconds between the removal of one picture from the screen and the flashing on of another. Can you beat it?

High Plane Picture Theatres in Jacksonville

Florida's metropolis can boast of the fact that her moving picture theatres are conducted on a higher plane than is common to any other city in the country, and of the additional fact that they are patronized by the opera-going classes as well as the general run of moving picture fans. Talking about "automobile trade," it is no uncommon thing to be able to count of an evening from forty to fifty automobiles in front of and in the neighborhood of the Imperial Theatre. This interest in moving pictures by the citizens of said city is due in part measure to the fact that the theatres are all conducted on high grade principles in well equipped houses with early run pictures, but most largely to the extensive advertising used by the several managers, it being no unusual thing to be able to pick up the daily newspapers and find quarter, half, and full page "ads" setting forth in catchy phrases the merits of their respective houses. In many cities, especially in the North, moving pictures are tabooed by the so-called "upper classes," being regarded as cheap amusement and intended only for those who can't afford season tickets at the opera or high grade drama, but Jacksonville can align herself with safety and credit alongside of Professor Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago, who in a recent address said that "the moving picture is no make-shift, but the highest form of amusement the world has ever seen." To get results, to break down the unreasonable, unseemly prejudice that exists in some quarters, moving picture managers in other cities are invited to imitate the hustling methods of "Busy Jax" as to houses, pictures and printer's ink.

New Theatre for Jacksonville

A fine new moving picture theatre will shortly be opened in Jacksonville, and will be known as the "Prince" When its doors are thrown open to the public it will see what can be done at an expense of $30,000. Beautiful decorations, artistic electric fixtures with unique lighting effects, handsome opera chairs, an expensive system of ventilation and cooling, a five thousand dollar pipe organ, a large and comfortable orchestra pit, the latest and most effective screen, cozy resting rooms for the ladies, an elaborate front and ample exists. Two No. 6A Powers machines will command attention in the operating room. Owing to the superior merits and the great popularity to which Independent pictures have attained, the management of the "Prince" has contracted to show this class of pictures.

War in Gainesville

Not a bloody one, but simply a moving picture war. For several years the Pastime has held the fort as the only moving picture theatre in that city. Lately a new show opened in opposition. Following suit, the owner of the Pastime has broken ground for another theatre that will have a seating capacity of nearly a thousand. And on top of that the Baird Opera House has recently been reopened under a new management with Independent pictures, and at the initial show played to S. R. O. So, when the State University opens in Gainesville in the fall, and the Chautauqua season comes along in the winter, the students, tourists, travelers, citizens, one and all, will have ample opportunity of deciding who's who and what's what along the moving picture line in the University City of Florida.

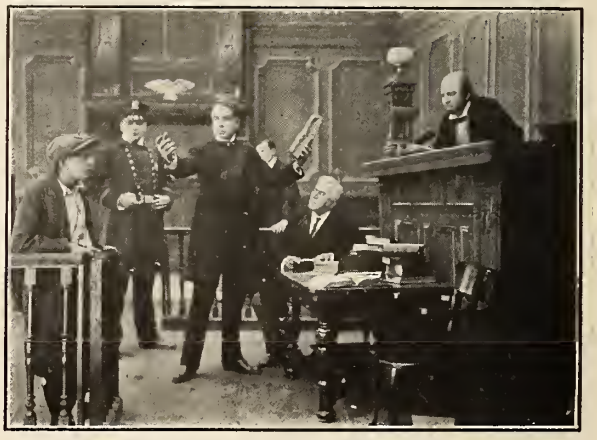
THE GAUMONT WEEKLY HEADQUARTERS AT SEA GIRT, N. J., ON GOVERNOR WILSON'S LAWN

This will give the public an idea of how the Weekly goes after big events. At the moment there are on the Governor's lawn a half dozen of the largest newspapers represented together with two telegraph companies. Motion Picture Weekly is the last word in modern newspaper making and consequently is as much legitimately entitled to prominent headquarters in such an instance as is any other publication.

Ogdensburg, N. Y.—George Kelly, of Watertown, purchased the Lyric Theatre.

Indianola, Okla.—A. C. Patricks and W. C. Tippitt, of McAlester, are installing an airdrome.

Port Jefferson, N. Y.—Fred C. Griswold & Co. have opened a moving picture house at King's Park.



"ORDER IN THE COURT"
Reliance Release August 14

The "Thanhouser Kidlet" and "Smiling Joe," the cripple boy who was responsible for the raising of $250,000 for the Sea Breeze Hospital at Coney Island, N. Y. This truly "young couple" appear in "Her Big Sister," released by Thanhouser, Sunday, August 11.

FOR THE PLAYGOER

By H. O. Stechhan, in the Town Crier, Seattle

The pictureplay's the thing.

To modernize one of the truisms of a certain Dane, of ancient stage celebrity. Only, he used the mummer's art to catch the conscience of a king, while the silent drama of the present is the medium for entertaining vast and ever-increasing multitudes.

The grip of the moving picture show has never been better illustrated than by the notations of a Seattle fugitive from justice in his diary recently. When he had barely enough money left for his meals, he recorded the expenditure of a nickel or a dime for this form of entertainment. During the several weeks that preceded his death, there were half a dozen entries of this sort.

In a remarkably short time motion pictures have developed from blurred flickerers and eye-rackers to perfect entertainments that amuse, stir the emotions, educate and always interest. The first pictureplays told very simple stories, because the actors did not have much of a grasp on their art. But they are strengthening it right along. The stories are becoming more subtle and points are now being made in the silent drama which could not have been put over, even a year ago.

Better writers are being attracted to the literary end of moving pictures and some of the best actors have joined the ranks of the movie players. And so it is with the producers—men with better equipment are being interested in putting on pictureplays. Who knows but what David Belasco may be tempted, for has he not lately gone into vaudeville production? And Seattle has seen his wonderful miniature productions. What couldn't a Max Reinhardt do, if he should attempt to mount a moving picture of such a big spectacle as he gives Berlin and London each year? And the time will come when such geniuses will take up the work, or some of those now engaged in it will perfect themselves to do the big things.

The vastness of the moving picture industry will be appreciated when it is known that there is said to be more money invested in it than in the Standard Oil Company. This latter commercial giant has been over a half-century in attaining its present growth, as against a little more than a decade since the first house devoted solely to moving pictures was opened. Already there is an enormous film handling trust and a very effective independent competitor. In every civilized country there are heavily capitalized companies devoted to the making of pictureplay reels. The most of these are placed through film exchanges, which are really sales agents or middlemen. The largest investment, of course, is in the theatres where views of the moving pictures are exchanged for comparatively small coins.

Every industry has its literature, for the information and instruction of those engaged or interested in it. In this country already there are several weekly periodicals and monthly magazines that treat only of moving picture matters. Moving picture journals are also published in German, French, Italian and other languages. There are also a number of text-books on the technique of the pictureplay scenario, and it is said that at least a million sons and daughters of Uncle Sam are busy pounding out pictureplays. When it is understood that the film producers of this country alone are putting out something like 200 pictureplays a week, it will be seen that there is a ready market for writers of moving picture scenarios.

No longer does the five and ten-cent show cater to the class of simple amusement seekers alone. The type of silent dramas produced is steadily improving. Within a short time the cowboy and Indian standbys are bound to give way to something more substantial. Already some of the best known classics have been borrowed from and with satisfying results. In addition thereto, it is noted that the moving picture house managers are strengthening their programs by special musical features, which weave in very nicely. Right here in Seattle accomplished musicians are being heard every day, who have acquitted themselves with distinguished credit before the most cultured concert audiences.

Picture drama is here to stay. True, it may be in a transitional stage; but it gives every promise of going onward and upward. In that it is available for the patronage of the big middle class, upon which all lasting institutions are dependent, is its greatest hope.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Do you like Bison 101 Ranch pictures? So do we.

* * * *

Congress seems to have handled prize fight films without gloves.

* * * *

Bible students who recently abolished hell should take a peek at Dante's Inferno.

* * * *

There're crazy about moving picture films in Iceland. Inclined to cold copies, probably.

* * * *

Hayti wants to sell her navy. Respectfully referred to the Universal Board of Strategy.

* * * *

The three-cent moving picture show has started in Cleveland. A little light thrown on the cost-of-living problem.

* * * *

The Photoplay Magazine prints a very interesting article on fly-swatters, but overlooks the fact that Mr. Tyrus Cobb would probably make a hit anyhow.

* * * *

One of the saddest phases of everyday life is to obligate yourself for a set of lessons in "scenario writing" before you realize how much worse you need a natural talent for writing.

* * * *

We can imagine nothing else so tends to ruffle Colonel Roosevelt's calm equanimity as to see in some conscienceless trade journal that Woodrow Wilson and Bill Taft are cavorting around considerably in moving picture films.

* * * *

A girl may appear to be intensely interested in a film climax, but we notice that she usually loses the thread of the story when another girl in a striking pannier effect comes in and sits down in front of her right at the crucial point in the scene.

* * * *

Now there's no use talking. That man Hunter, of the Majestic, is a genius for comedy. If Majestic continues those successful comic releases the concern will be the leader in the business, in that line, before long. Just stick a pin in this assertion.

* * * *

It is devoutly to be wished that quarters and equipment be furnished active scribes assigned to "cover" the National Exhibitors' League convention at Chicago. At Dayton, the correspondents wrote on the floor or the wall. They have to work hard and would appreciate consideration.

* * * *

The bold highwayman, in a recent release, held up an auto and took the sack of eatables to the poverty-stricken home. When he placed the groceries on the doorstep, "Toasted Corn Flakes" was prominently displayed. "Wonder how much that concern gets for free advertising," remarked the cynic. Nearly spoiled the picture.

* * * *

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Ohio condemned the display of moving picture plays embodying the plots of dime novels. It is mighty pleasing to us to learn that the intelligent exhibitors of Ohio have taken up the campaign that has been waged in the News for six months past against "penny dreadfuls" on the picture screen. We consider dime novels as a menace to Young America, and also that the concern that persists in filming such stories, is doing untold injury to the entire industry. Intelligent people do not want to read nickel novels or have their children attend theatres where such plots are pictured.

James M. Cox, of Dayton, Congressman and Democratic nominee for Governor of Ohio, is a picture enthusiast. During an address made to the Ohio exhibitors at Toledo, he said: "I always get a glimpse of something that does me good in a picture show. I hope to see the day when every school will have a moving picture machine. The motion picture is a tremendous force in awakening the impulses of the child, and is a great educational factor." Cox said the picture show is becoming generally recognized as one of the two great publicity forms of the nation, and he referred to the great good being accomplished by motion pictures in spreading the doctrine of fixed laws, of sanitation and correct living. Mr. Cox lives in a Republican stronghold. The National Soldiers' Home is in Dayton. Mr. Cox is the first Democrat in Ohio who has ever carried the three thousand votes of the old soldiers there. It is generally conceded that Cox will be the next Governor of the Buckeye State.

One interesting phase of Congressman Cox's address was his attitude on the Sunday picture show question. He said: "It has been an unwritten law that every public man should keep mum on Sunday observance. The time has come, however, when public men and candidates must state their position and each man must show his cards. I believe that pictures of a religious nature or high moral tone will do good. Many will be benefited who do not go to church, for each is playing its part in uplifting. The right kind of pictures will attract as many to the picture houses as go to the churches."

Mr. Cox, if he becomes Governor, will subscribe to a state board of censors, and he says that if it ever comes within his power to name such a board, it will be created with men who will give the matter a commonsense view.

* * * *

With the advent of the silly season-ho, for the moving picture show and all the beautiful impossibilities which clever film makers can givev us, not Little Nemo, Peter Ibbetson, the Brushwood Boy, or all the other good dreamers put together, can furnish such delectable, illusive, sense-soothing absurdities as the camera that has gone a wee bit wild. Usually we prefer them quite sane, ready to chronicle the thing as they see it. But in the summer time, if a camera goes crazy, the more power to it. It is a sign that even an inanimate object may have a little genius. To sit in a cool dark theatre watching streams run uphill and castles in Spain growing magically in the space of a few seconds, is not a bad occupation for a warm summer's day. And then the stories unfolded by the films. Since the days of Homer there never have been such story tellers as these cameras. It must have been pleasant to stand in the market place and listen to the bard of olden times; but after all, our way is not so bad. For pure enjoyment of the story, a comfortable theatre seat under an electric fan is more pleasing to the modern temperament.

In the literary and dramatic fields new and interesting subjects are constantly being filmed. "The Lady of the Lake," "The Miracle," "The Orleans Coach," are noteworthy. The beauty of moving picture productions is that one part of the country can see them almost as soon as another, and we do not have to wait for New York or Chicago to be through with them before they are granted the rest of the country. And, best of all, the more ambitious producers are not devoting themselves entirely to stories and imaginative themes. They are becoming practical and instructive. They place facts before us, they disseminate information, they give us propaganda and argue for causes.

And with all these high-class, elevating and instructive pictures being released, it seems a shame that ever and anon some thoughtless group endeavors to injure the general uplifting and artistic tone of the general output by advertising "dime novel" releases of the "blood and thunder" variety and boasts of the fact on the screen.

SCENE FROM "ANDROCLUS AND THE LION"
Gaumont Hand Colored Release of August 22d

GAUMONT PRODUCTIONS COPYRIGHTED

On Friday the 19th of July, the Gaumont Company took the serious and important step of protecting its American interests from infringement, both in bringing Gaumont productions into America from foreign shores, and also in preventing through the courts any such parasitic evil as duping, by having all their productions that they bring in and release in this country copyrighted. This action was deemed advisable because of an instance in violation of the copyright, that recently occurred in the East. Mr. Herbert Blache, general manager of the Gaumont Company, in discussing the copyright situation expressed the utmost determination to confine Gaumont films in America to the proper purchasers and assures that he will prosecute relentlessly any infringer of the Gaumont copyright. To this effect a general letter of warning was sent to every agency in America with the following instructions:

> We herewith advise you that all Gaumont productions are copyrighted in the United States as well as abroad. This means that we will prosecute anyone infringing on our American copyright to the fullest extent guaranteed us under the American copyright law.
>
> We desire to ask you to extend this warning to exchanges and exhibitors generally not to infringe on the copyright of any Gaumont films.
>
> Any Gaumont film being marketed in violation of the copyright of the Gaumont Company is liable to seizure or destruction by us, who are determined to proceed to the limit of our copyright.

OLYMPIC GAMES SLIDES

Moving picture exhibitors everywhere have been besieged with requests from their patrons for pictures of the 1912 Olympic games.

In fact the wonderful showing made by the American Team has been the talk of the whole country, and every man, woman and child is eager to see the track and field events in which our athletes distinguished themselves so nobly.

Through a special representative and at a great cost, the Novelty Slide Company of New York have secured the only original authentic and copyrighted views of all the important Olympic events.

These pictures are made up in beautifully colored slides, and a descriptive reading is printed beneath each, which tells the story in detail.

As a timely attraction, this subject is proving an immense success, and without any question exhibitors will profit handsomely by playing this feature.

Special attention is called to the fact that these views are genuine pictures taken in the Olympic stadium at Stockholm, and are not newspaper clippings. Furthermore, every slide is protected by copyright, and the Novelty Slide Company hold the sole and exclusive rights thereto.

Some of the largest pictureplay houses are playing this attraction to record attendances, and tremendous enthusiasm and interest is shown by the American public everywhere in these Olympic Games Slides.

POWERS CONTEST WINNERS

Competition Brought Out the Best Efforts of Hundreds of Scenario Writers

Over five hundred stories were submitted in the contest inaugurated by the Powers branch of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and it was no easy matter for the committee to decide on the prize winners. The scripts were read and passed upon by the readers and writers of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company scenario department, the task involving much work and thought.

Aside from the four prize winners many scripts were selected and bought which will be produced in due time and they will certainly prove to be successes in every particular.

To James Carroll, of 108 Madison street, New York City, was awarded first prize for his scenario "The Key of Life," one of the strongest stories ever written.

"The Crucifix of Destiny," written by R. D. Armstrong, of Santa Barbara, was selected for the second prize. It is an unique and original story, and the crucifix which will be photographed in the story was given to the Armstrong family direct from the Vatican.

Dr. J. R. Clemens, 3720 West Pine street, St. Louis, an eminent physician and writer, was awarded third honors for his story, "The Doctor's Secret," a powerful drama of the life of a physician with which subject Dr. Clemens is familiar.

"The End of the Straight Road" is the title of the fourth prize winner, written by Jere F. Looney, 3750 West Pine Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo. It is an interesting drama with a strong and convincing preachment.

Due notice of the release of these prize winners will be given to the moving-picture-loving public.

SCENE FROM "ANDROCLUS AND THE LION"
Gaumont Hand Colored Release of August 22d

BLANCHE WALSH—A GREAT ACTRESS IN A GREAT PLAY.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

When Tolstoy, the celebrated Russian novelist, wrote "The Resurrection" he breathed forth to the world a great thought; he traced with a heavier stroke the line separating the physical and the spiritual, body and mind, sex and soul; he chalk-lined the stepping over place in a manner which we cannot forget. The novelist has shown us the woman in the throes of her sexual self, insurmounted by mind; he has pictured her fall, her continuance on the downward path and into the prison cell, and the fanning into flame of the frail spark of a soul which remained. And then, O wondrous thing! the real awakening of the soul of the woman, the arising from the ashes of a dead self of that divine something which even debauchery had not been able to destroy.

Tolstoy gave us the word picture. With his wonderful gift of language he told us the story as it originated in his brain. His was a large mind, able to comprehend every human passion. His comprehension was mathematically correct; he figured that the pendulum which swung so far one way was capable of a reactionary movement of equal distance. His was a great soul that was able to realize the possibility of the existence of the divine spark beneath the debris of debauchery, and to create it into the life story of his heroine.

MISS BLANCHE WALSH

Then came the staging of the story which strikes home to every woman of us; and who that has ever seen it can forget the embodiment of the personality of the heroine of that tragic story in the talent of one of the greatest, if not the greatest emotional actress of which America can boast. When Blanche Walsh flung to the winds her own personality and stepped on the stage in the part of Katusha, the Russian peasant girl of Tolstoy's creation, there was but one thing left to be desired, that, as she interpreted the thought of the author, as she wove her physical as well as her mental self into the until then abstract personality of the brain fancy of a great writer, that the marvelous adaptation might be perpetuated, that the demonstration of the talent of the great actress might live, and that the story of the peasant girl whom she had lifted from her niche in the silence of a literary creation and made to live, love, struggle and conquer—and in the flesh—might repeat itself in the shades and tones, and intensity that she gave it.

And now, O happy thought! that one thing left to be desired has come to pass: Blanche Walsh has given her interpretation of Tolstoy's wonderful creation to posterity in the moving picture film. And it is this silent film that really gives the actress her unretractable place among the great interpreters of the dramatic art. It is this demonstration in film where not a sound is heard, not a word distinguishable that gives the final touch to the scales, that tells the story of a great interpreter.

This film is magnificent. It is a wonderful effort, for which a great deal of credit is due Mr. Joseph A. Golden, producer. Mr. Golden also arranged the scenario adaptation, in which, by-the-way, not a single point of the story has been lost.

I am sure that my readers would enjoy a little glimpse into the private life of the woman who with unusual womanly perception made animate the part of Katusha in "The Resurrection." Through her kindly generosity, I was recently invited to luncheon at her home among the hills of Connecticut, at Cos Cob, near Stamford. Her automobile with dear Mrs Kram, Miss Walsh's pal for seventeen years, met me at the depot. And then we wound in and out, in and out among the hills, until the white road led us to a cosy nook overlooking a wooded valley, out of which rose one above another the trees on the upland yonder with a profusion of greens and deep blues in the shadows.

As I alighted from the machine, Miss Walsh advanced to meet me with a kindly welcome. Her cool, comfortable appearance on a warm day delighted me, for she was clad in pongee silk knickerbockers and becomingly long pajama coat of the same material, reaching midway over her thighs. Tan stockings and tan oxfords completed the sensible costume. "We are living 'country,' and I want you to feel perfectly at home and just please be 'country,' too," she said as I seated myself in an easy chair on the big, wide porch.

It was a delightful household into which I had alighted I found on closer acquaintance. Each one is nicknamed. Mrs. Kram is "Muvver," Mr. Travers, Miss Walsh's husband, is "Bill," and Miss Walsh herself is distinguished by the name of "Pups." The origination of this latter is rather amusing. Mrs. Kram, in her motherly way, usually drew the bath for Miss Walsh in the morning, and arranged everything for her to make life as easy as possible for the woman whose genius she so admired. On this particular morning, although the actress had a special engagement, she was unusually slow in arising to the occasion. At last some well-known acquaintance entered and remarked, "Well, you certainly are a pampered pup," and ever after that the name of "Pups" has been applied to Miss Walsh by "Muvver," Mrs. Kram.

My interview with Miss Walsh was not a set, conventional thing. It was just a little friendly chat. A sort of a heart-to-heart woman's talk. Sometimes the conversation would drop, and in the comfortable silence I leaned back in my chair, gazing at the wooded hill beyond and the house with the tall chimneys and red-brown roof that blended so harmoniously with the lights and shadows of the landscape.

"How did you feel, really, when you saw yourself in the picture—when you beheld yourself for the first time in the world for which you had so many times been applauded?" I asked.

"Well," said she, "I looked upon it merely as an interpretation of the part. I watched the development with interest, and felt nothing personal whatever in connection with it, until I saw myself step out and bow, in everyday attire. Then it did seem uncanny—in fact, I felt positively idiotic."

"The story of 'The Resurrection' appeals to me very strongly in an analytical and elemental sense," she continued. "First the uncouth, ignorant girl in whom sex was the strongest consciousness, and her succumbing to the persuasions of the man of ignoble intention. Then comes her life of abandonment following the death of her child; and after all the awakening of the soul of the woman. Oh, it was a wonderful thought that Tolstoy gave out, and I am so proud to be associated with him in that thought. I am proud to have been the woman who was able to interpret that thought in such a manner that it 'got over'—that the public understood."

Blanche Walsh is a thorough genius. It is not in feature or form or coloring that she appeals to one. It is that something within her which steps forth and wields a gripping power over her audience. It is that electric spark of genius which electrifies the physique, which illumines face and feature, which flashes from the eyes, and steps forth with a conquering magnetism and a divine intelligence that is able to unlock the doors of the obtuse fact and stamps with burning letters its true name thereon.

In "The Resurrection" she has taken us collectively by the hand and led us to the doorway of the soul of woman, and has ever beckoned us across the threshold to behold the pure white light that is always burning there.

The Blanche Walsh "Resurrection" Film, which is in four parts, is being presented as a state's rights proposition by the Masko Film Co., Room 113, 145 W. 45th street, New York City. Harry L. Kovar and Herman Mason, the heads of the firm, are both of Russian parentage, and Mr. Kovar proved specially helpful in looking to the authenticity of stage settings, etc.

It is a matchless production of which much will be heard in the future.

Harry Lonsdale one of America's Leading Men.

Harry Lonsdale, long known to the American public for both stage and picture work, has recently joined the "Flying A" players of the American Film Mfg. Co., and will play leads in one of its several Chicago companies.

Mr. Lonsdale is an Englishman, but has spent nearly thirty years on the American stage, where he has supported such great stars as Richard Mansfield and Nat C. Goodwin. He has been for some time with the Selig forces.

"THE NEW BUTLER"
Majestic Release August 20th

"THE BURGLAR AND THE ROSE"
Powers Release August 9th

"THE HINDOO'S PRIZE"
Imp Release August 5th

Altoona, Pa.—Robert and Andy Gamble will erect a moving picture theatre at 11th Avenue and 14th Street.

New York, N. Y.—The Universal Film Exchange of New York, Inc., motion pictures; capital stock $25,000. George Garret, George W. Stout, William T. J. Siggo.

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

Read This, Ye Writers

We are pleased to print the following encouraging statement from Giles R. Warren, editor and secretary of the new Victor Film Company, which is headed by the versatile actress, Florence Lawrence. Mr. Warren is a busy man because he has written most of the picture-plays in which Miss Lawrence has made her great successes while leading lady for the Imp, Lubin and the present Victor concerns. It is not often that Mr. Warren is able to find time to write of his experiences for others. That overworked and in ill health, he has taken time to give some small measure from his store of knowledge of the pictureplay writing art, to our readers, we consider both as a compliment to ourselves and to the Moving Picture News. Mr. Warren's words should prove encouraging to the rank and file of script writers. He believes that the excellence of the output is steadily increasing and that there is a grand opportunity for every writer painstaking and studious to succeed as a picture playwright. Mr. Warren writes the editor of this department as follows:

> In my humble opinion, no one class excels in scenario work. Approximately, 26,000 scripts have passed my desk and the above opinion is the result of my observation. The reason that more magazine writers and newspaper men do not succeed better is because they do not, as a rule, seem to grasp necessary requirements of the business. They have worked so long on their own lines that it is difficult for them to change their viewpoint. I will say, however, that once a professional writer does understand the technicalities of the work, they naturally forge ahead rapidly. My experience is, however, that most of them consider that they know better than the scenario man what is really needed and feel that if they were permitted to have their own way, they would soon revolutionize the business. It is not their lack of ability, but their disinclination to adapt themselves to conditions that tends to work against them. The argument that all things equal, the magazine and newspaper writer should make greater headway as pictureplaywrights than the average, is good. Because as a simile, if one wished to employ a bodyguard he would scarcely employ a ribbon counter clerk, or a theological student, but would seek a trained athlete. I have a number of professional writers as contributors and I value their efforts very highly.
>
> I have no hesitancy in stating that the average script is one hundred per cent. higher grade than it was one year, or say two years ago. The reason for it is quite unmistakably evident; it is the result of a general and careful study of the art of scenario writing. Your work, as a pioneer has had quite a material effect upon the general result. In short, the public has been receiving for a long time, the very best instruction upon the subject and has profited thereby.
>
> It makes no difference to me whether the contributor is a magazine star writer or a stage carpenter—if his script contain originality, plot and convincing action it will be gladly considered. I have read the work of about every writer in the pictureplay business to-day, and have been happy to see that the ouput has consistently improved. Inpractical and conventional scripts, of course, are very numerous, but you never know when you will discover the nugget. Speaking for myself, I can assure writers that they are no more pleased over acceptance of their work, than I am in discovering a good story containing the "wallop." Writers are indebted to the honestly conducted departments in the trade journals for many beneficial hints, and they should appreciate what these department editors are accomplishing in the writer's behalf.

A Summing Up

Giles R. Warren's statements should be carefully considered by our readers. His words are emblazoned with hope for the modest pictureplaywright. One hundred per cent. improvement in contributions within the last two years, and a majority of the scripts written by other than professional writers, is interesting. By careful attention to details, any one of talent can seemingly meet success as a pictureplaywright. In the past few weeks we have published a number of interesting opinions from various editors. We shall quote others from time to time. Although editorial opinions vary, somewhat, it should be clearly proven to those writers who have closely followed the series that the " outside writer" has nearly as good an opportunity to succeed as the "inside writer" so-called, and that such expressions as "plot-stealing," "favoritism," etc., have no place in the profession.

Right In the Atmosphere

A well known pictureplaywright drops the following opinion into the hopper:

> I do not believe any person can make an unqualified success of script writing unless he is right in the atmosphere all the time. He sees the pictures produced and then sees them on the screen. He knows the possibilities of the camera, the tectnique of the picture, and all the little secrets of which the uninitiated are ignorant. If I were to advise my friends in the profession, my first tip would be for them to "hang around" some studio. Several of the more tooted film "yarners" including myself, spend some time in certain studios. When one gets the swing of it, things come easier. I have written four stories that have been put on at a plant within the past three weeks and have two more that will be produced soon. Now the advantage of it is this: don't suppose I could have sold many of these stories in the open market, but I was right on the ground and knew what they wanted; where the stuff could be put on; and the types of players in the stock company.

Everyone hasn't the opportunity to "hang around" a studio, and the management is not conducting a college, anyhow. The above correspondent has the advantage of thousands. He lives near the plants, and maybe had friends at court. By closely studying the film stories and the types of actors as given in the News, the free lance can do much to help in marketing his work. In fact such study has become essential to all of those who would succeed.

Hello! Here's Another

There is a fly-by-night theatrical manager in the Middle West who is advertising the merits of his "pictureplay correspondence course." He gives address as "Motion Picture College Building," or words to that effect. There is not a business building of any kind on the avenue he mentions except the very modest residence of the "Professor." He never wrote a script in his life and his course is composed of "steals" from several standard textbooks and from sheets sent out by various film companies.

"Optimism Pays"

The Editor received a pretty picture post card the other afternoon. On the reverse side was shown the placid waters of Lake Mahocap, N. Y. Right in the midst of the lake's mirror-like surface rose the greenery of Fairy Island. Seated in front of our mahogany desk, we brushed aside 2,122 inquiries and gazed upon that picture. Our coat was off, and so was our collar. In our mind's eye we could perceive the bosky dells and mossy retreats on that isle and the manly form of President A. Van Buren Powell, reposing midst the daisies and buttercups. On the card was written in our President's bold chirography these mystic words: "Optimism Pays; look where I am now." We glanced pensively down at our $5,000 Turkish rug; then across at the red-hot skyscraper opposite our bay-window. We sighed; and opened another petition. Nothing disturbed the silence but the whine of our electric fan and—— But what's the use!

Postage Problems

A lady in Colorado Springs, while interestingly describing to us how the spring cured her husband of Bright's disease, inadvertently explains how she "got the goods" on a poor pictureplay editor. To quote:

> Twice I have sent stories to a "trust company" and have both times sent two two-cent stamps. I always do this in order to have safe return of my MSS. This company always puts two one-cent stamps on and I have to pay the extra due two cents. (This last underscored). I make a record of where I send my stories; the kind ("kind" underscored) of stamps enclosed; so that I know what I am doing. This is the only film company that treats me this way. All the others use the very stamps I send, or the same kind. The Edison and Champion are very nice people. They have bought my stories and I have never had to pay "due" two cents. Also the American is good. I have had my plots stolen. But it doesn't deter me one single minute. I go right on digging away at my stories. I'd as leave they'd steal the plots as the stamps; one is as mean as the other. Lack of principle. There are "sharks" in all trades. The only way is to stay away from them. Will say, if anyone is suffering from "Bright's disease and want to get well, this place will do it—also paralysis.

We feel that no comments are necessary on the above terse and forceful statement. Upon reading it, we were inclined to take advantage of the beneficial properties of the springs—we were nearly paralyzed. We never had any occasion to write any "trust company," for we are poor in this world's goods. As to the postage problem, if the correspondent will enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope with her script, as has been frequently advised in this department, she will have no occasion to complain of "postage due" troubles.

Just the Dime—Ten Cents!

For a dime—ten cents—the twentieth part of a dollar—you can get complete instruction in the art of script writing from a New York publishing house. The "instructions" are printed on a single sheet. Under the head "Where To Get Subjects," the Bible is earnestly recommended. Probably the title "scriptures" appealed to the "instructor's" mind as being apropos. After paying your dime and getting instructed, a follow-up form letter goes forth a week later. It offers to typewrite your plays, for stated sum, and also to market them. Save your money for the picture theatre and study the screen you will find therein.

New Text Book

"How to Write Photoplays" is the title of a very pretentious text-book written by Herbert Case Hoagland, of Pathe. It is bound in cloth and is published by the Magazine Maker Publishing Company. Here is the author's truthful definition of a pictureplay editor: "He is a combination city editor, dramatic editor, poet, make-up editor, proofreader, re-write man, stage manager, human encyclopedia and statue of patience, and usually has dyspepsia and is entitled to your consideration. He must read all the manuscripts. He must be able to grasp the dramatic possibilities of a script, see its weaknesses, know how to straighten it, must be able to recognize a story lifted bodily or in part from some other pictureplay, magazine, play or novel, and must be just as keen and unbiased at the end of a long day as he is in the morning." The book is well written and contains much of value to the aspiring pictureplaywright.

Got 'Em Tangled

When the editor of an Indiana monthly publication for pictureplaywrights first heard of Giles R. Warren "he was with Lubin! Then he migrated to the Imp staff, then back to Lubin, thence to Powers." Then, to quote a little farther down the column: "C. B. Hoadley won fourth prize in the Imp Scenario Contest, following which Mr. Hoadley became Imp scenario editor." Warren was presiding genius at the Imp plant three years ago, leaving that company for a desk at Lubinville. Hoadley succeeded Warren at the Imp studio long before he wrote "Chesty Buys Tags." We're just straightening out the tangle so both gentlemen can find themsedves.

WM. LORD WRIGHT.

WHAT THE SPECIAL EVENT ARE DOING

They are taking educational subjects, such as a talking dog, the new method of capping machines on bottles for educational purposes. They also have taken the Motordrome race at Brighton Beach. They have taken a night view of Madison Square Garden as it now appears in full blast. They are also continuing making the regular pictures, which they expect to release in the near future. Mr. Beck expects to make an extensive tour throughout the United States in search of some new subjects for educational purposes for the schools. He expects to leave on this trip about August 1. They have added a new section of the business with the Special Event Film Mfg. Co. They expect to manufacture motion picture cameras and printing machines for the amateur trade. These cameras are expected to be made in September, and they will be placed upon the market complete for the amount of $75, and will guarantee same to take as good a picture as any professional camera on the market to-day. This is the motto of the Special Event Film Mfg. Co., Inc., Mr. Beck intends to live up to same.

Mr. Fred Beck, of the Special Event Film Company, and His New Auto

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO.

Mr. Fred A. Clark, the Eastern salesman and demonstrator of the Motiograph machine has been in Chicago, paying his annual visit to the plant of the Enterprise Optical Mfg Company, and on Friday noon of last week, he left with Mr. Woodward, the manager, for an automobile trip to the different lake resorts in the northwestern part of the State of Illinois, spending three days in going from place to place, during which time Mr. Clark and Mr. Woodward visited Crystal Lake, Waughconda Lake, Fox Lake, McKinley Lake and other points of interest.

Mr. Clark expressed himself as being both surprised and greatly pleased at the beauty of the land which they traveled through, and he was surprised to learn that over $150,000,000 is realized yearly on each of two crops in the State of Illinois, namely, oats and corn.

After a few days longer visit at the factory, Mr. Clark will again be in the East, making his headquarters with the General Film Company, at Boston, Mass., from which point he will take up his usual visits to the many exhibitors now using theMotiograph in the New England States.

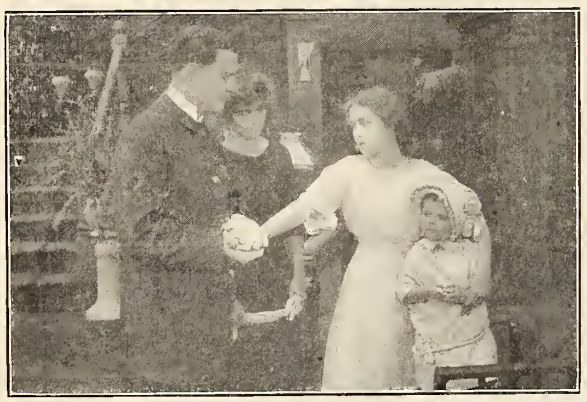
JAY HUNT, BURLESQUE MAGNET

Jay Hunt, the popular Vitagraph director, who has lately been affiliated with Thanhouser Company, has left the latter concern to start rehearsals of "Queens of the Follies Bergere," the Western Wheel burlesque show of which he is part owner. The fact that Mr. Hunt is a burlesque magnet will come as real news to many of his friends, since it is known that franchises on the burlesque wheels are held by an "inner circle" in which it is hard for the outsider to break. Mr. Hunt's active interest in the show extends, however, only to the producing end. As soon as rehearsals are over and the show on its way he will resume his picture directing, just with what firm is not yet known.

MORE THANHOUSER THRILLS

Thanhouser thrills us three times more in his 3-A-Week for the week beginning Sunday, Aug. 11th. That day "Big Sister" is the release. It shows the love of a poor orphan girl for her tiny sister. Desperate circumstances cause her to give over the baby to a rich family for adoption. But she cannot bear life without her infant sister, so through a kindly copper she gets a position in the kitchen of the home of riches and so is able to be near the little one. The policeman falls in love with "Big Sister" and they wed. Then the officer and his wife go boldly to the rich woman who has adopted the little sister, and persuade her to give over the child to them, whereupon their happiness is naturally made complete.

Then Tuesday, Aug. 13th, is "Now Watch the Professor!" Talking of thrills, the Professor assuredly gets his. It is thrilled through and through. He is gagged and then he is thrown into a mummy's coffin and humiliated to a great degree. But in the end he turns the tables and lands his enemy in durance vile—on a charge that was originally brought against the Professor himself!



"The Wrecked Taxi," released Friday, Aug. 16th, shows a real taxi wreck, and then some thrilling court scenes in which a woman confesses, and thereby almost loses her standing in society and the love of her husband—but she sends a guiltless man free and feels best for the accomplishment.

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Arkansas Hot Springs, July 24.—There's nothing like pushing a good thing along. Many times in this correpondence I have had occasion to mention the fact that the people of this resort like their motion pictures and patronize them liberally, so it was natural, then, that this patronage was bound to increase the coffers of ye managers. Well, one of 'em, or, rather, to be more explicit, two of the aforementioned magnates, have decided that their theatre was not large enough to accommodate the crowd, and they have, therefore, made arrangements to enlarge their theatre, taking a lease on the room adjoining their place of business, which will shortly be part of one of the prettiest theatres in the city.

This news should be of double interest, for the reason that Independent pictures have made this improvement possible. I refer to the Photo Play Theatre, where Messrs. Blaschke and Erickson have held forth for over a year. The little Photo Play has always done a big business. The house uses the mirror screen, has a lens that makes the pictures appear a "mile high," and runs first-class Independent material. Their success, of course, was to be expected. They are really going to have a great little house there.

By special arrangement the heating and cooling features will be a novelty. If one is sweltering in the heat of August, step into this house, where the temperature will be thirty degrees at least cooler than the outside. If it is winter and the atmosphere suggest a hot toddy or the acquaintance of the popular twins, "Tom and Jerry," flop into the theatre, where one will find it warm enough to use a palm-leaf fan. And speaking of fans reminds me that there won't be an electric buzzer of this description in the place. The house when finished will seat over 500 persons.

The management is also going to discard the name Photo Play, and is now offering a prize to the one who sends in the most appropriate one. Photo Play was selected when Essanay announced that this name had won their prize of $100, which was one of last year's interesting features in the news of the picture world, but Messrs. Balaschke and Erickson believe that they can pick another winner by letting the "dear pee-pul" decide, hence the offer of a five-dollar gold piece to the one who guesses to best suit their fastidious discrimination. The two firms that have done the most good for the Photo Play are the Bison, with their famous "101 Ranch" pictures, and the American Company, whose Western stories are very popular here. I remember reviewing the first reel the American people put out, which was a fright, and I go into the theatre now every time I see one of their posters. They are sure some pumpkins in the motion picture world.

There is another gentleman who is going to throw his hat into the ring and permit various exchanges to take a crack at it. He is George Walker, the city's leading post-card and novelty man. George has taken a lease on the old Majestic Theatre, on Malvern avenue, the house that the dusky population calls their own, the only house, in fact, that the negroes have in this city; and the kinky-headed sons and daughters sure like their pictures. George is turning the Majestic into a thing of beauty, adding interior decorations, putting in a new fire escape, enlaiging the stage and curtain, and intends to make the place most attractive. This house has always done a good business, and now that it is to be improved, and the fact that the dusky citizens have not had a theatre for such a long time, George is in for a lively session.

Out at Whittington Park the management of that place has also been quite busy. New concrete walks have been added, a swimming pool is being built and a lawn tennis court installed on the grounds used by the Pittsburgh baseball club. The tennis feature will be illuminated, making it possible to enjoy this pastime at night, for tennis is getting to be very popular. It's a game, though, I never could see. I am at present nursing a badly battered hand as a result of trying to emulate Ty Cobb, for the Moose have their nine in the field. A young lady once—just once—tried to teach me to play tennis. She slammed the ball at me so fast I couldn't duck. It struck me between the eyes and I tried to find the star that guided Peary to the North Pole. I heard a sweet, far-away voice murmur, "one love," or something like that. I grabbed that ball and with my tennis paddle landed on it with all the force righteous indignation can command. I believe it's going yet, and that happened six years ago. The last seen of it was as it sailed majestically over trees that grew 200 feet high, and that ended my tennis tuition.

Essanay sent two reels here this week that were well received, "The Butterfly Net" and a "Broncho Billy" romance. There were several good Imp reels here, "The Schemers" being interesting. Thanhouser also had several good ones at the Princess, which continues to do a good business. We also had "His Wife's Old Sweetheart," which one of the local papers persisted in calling "His Old Wife's Sweetheart."

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan

MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS' ASSOCIATION

President—Robert Goldblatt.
Vice-President—James Girvan.
Corresponding Secretary—Sidney Dignon.
Financial Secretary—McRea.
Sergeant-at-Arms—William Cohen.
Business Representative—Robert Saunders.

* * * *

Moving Picture Operators

ATTENTION!

At the last meeting of the M. P. Operators' Union known as the auxiliary to Local No. 35, I. T. S. E. the report of the Executive Board was submitted to the operators to decide as to what action they would take after hearing what International President Chas. C. Shay, and the other members of the committee had to say. The chairman at the request of the body asked all members of other organizations to leave the hall; then the matter was taken up and each and every member present decided that it would be much better to remain independent as they had got absolutely nothing in the past by being an auxiliary. All operators holding cards of the former union that wish to stay with us will do well to see our business agent, Bro. Bob Saunders, and he will supply them with all the information they want.

* * * *

I believe there will be quite a number of Operators who will ask why we took this step, and I will try to enlighten them as far as I can. In the first place when we held our first meeting in the old Dominion Film Co.'s office on Twenty-seventh street near Broadway, about the last week in April, 1908, we then had a body of about 150 members. We then moved to the Star Theatre, 527 Sixth avenue, where we continued to enroll members for a sum of 50 cents. After we had a good sized body together we applied to the American Federation of Labor for a charter, and they told us we would have to see the "International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees." We then went to Mr. Kelly, business representative of I. A. T. S. E. Local No. 1, who referred us to Secretary M. Hart, of Chicago, and he informed us that we would have to go into Local No. 35 for the time being as an auxiliary, and when convention time came around ask for a charter. We did so. We sent a No. 35 man to represent us. We got nothing then but promises. The following years 1909-10 and 1911 we got more promises, and this year we sent Bro. Goldblatt to the convention to ask for either an Independent charter, or amalgamation with Local No. 35 on an equitable financial basis. We were practically ignored, and as the I. A. has given No. 35 the power to organize a branch we refuse to jump from the frying pan into the fire, therefore from now on we will work for our own benefit and wait until we are recognized as a body and be given a hearing before an impartial committee.

* * * *

All moving picture operators that wish to join our new association are advised to be on hand at our next regular meeting Monday night, 12 m., August 5, 1912, at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

SOLAX

THE BLOOD STAIN (Aug. 14.)—A young designer is at work on an important sketch and all he requires for its proper completion is a Masonic emblem. He is about to give up his work temporarily and take advantage of an invitation to attend a week-end party. Before he leaves, however, the agent of the studio building enters and presents a bill for rent. The artist pays his rent and while he regards the agent making out a receipt he spies a Masonic emblem dangling from the agent's watch fob. The artist borrows the Masonic charm, while the agent promises to return for it after he has made other collections.

The agent next visits a chemist whose laboratory is located immediately above those of the artist. The chemist is busy on an analysis of blood. Some of the blood he pours into a graduated glass and places it in a cupboard. The chemist absent-mindedly pays his rent—pursues his chemical investigations and later closes up his shop.

In the meanwhile the artist has sketched the Masonic design, and then hurriedly leaves to catch a train and keep his appointment for the week-end, forgetting to return the Masonic emblem he had borrowed in his haste to get away.

The agent on his way downstairs meets "Butcher Bill," a thug, who tries to attack him. In backing away from the thug, the agent falls down a flight of stairs, cracks bis skull and dies immediately, while Big Bill robs him and makes a getaway.

The blood in the cupboard of the chemist's laboratory is upset by a rat. The blood gradually makes its way down the side of the wall—through the floor and ceiling of the artist's studio below and the drops stain the artist's working coat. Immediately after the agent's supposed murder is discovered, detectives come on the scene and after their burried investigations decide that the artist is guilty.

The artist is traced to the railroad station, is arrested and then detained in prison.

The Eagle, a metropolitan newspaper, assigns one of its best men on the case. The reporter makes investigations on his own hook and soon solves the mystery. He is aided by "Jim, the rat," a thug. The story abounds in sensationalism, besides showing scenes actually taken in the news room of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. The film also shows a splendid "Third degree" scene, a struggle in the back room of a low dive where "Butcher Bill" is rounded up.

THE STRIKE (Aug. 16.)—This is a big labor problem play and shows that the preconceived notions of laborers that their employers are brutes and oppressors are false notions.

The laborers employed in a large factory are disgruntled with the treatment accorded them. They decide to go on strike. Their employer receives their manifesto with indifference, in fact, he ignores their unreasonable demands.

A big mass meeting is held; after the factory is stoned. The mob is considerably agitated by a labor union orator. He arouses them to such an extent that they vote to blow up the plant. One of the young factory workers is selected for the placing of the bomb.

The men are desperate and are prepared to do anything. The night before the bomb is placed a meeting is held. Before the meeting proceedings are discussed in private at the home of Jack, the bomb placer. After the discussion he and the agitators leave to attend the meeting. In going out the agitator drops a lighted stub of a cigarette. About midnight Jack's house is in flames. His wife and child are caught in a trap. She telephones him and gets him in the midst of a tumultuous session.

Jack drops everything and runs to rescue his loved ones from sure destruction. He knows that if the bomb, which is hidden in his house, should explode his wife and child would stand no show at all of being rescued. He hurries along. It is three miles to his house and not a conveyance in sight. Suddenly two big auto lamps show up in the distance. Jack motions wildly. The car glides up. To his surprise Jack sees his employer. The employer inquires of Jack the cause of his excitement. Jack explains, and soon htey are away, breaking speed laws. They arrive to see the house encircled in flames. The employer valiantly assists in the rescue work while Jack dashes into a room full of smoke, gets the bomb and throws it out of the window into the street where it explodes and fortunately does no harm.

The employer wins Jack to his support and in winning Jack he also wins back the rest of his erstwhile dissatisfied men.

The story is full of thrills and sensational scenes.

G. MELLIES

A ROMANCE AT CATALINA (Aug. 15.)—Falling in love with a young fishing captain, Grace Sherwood disappointed the expectations of her father, who had introduced her to a young nobleman, Robert Hardwicke, desirous of winning her hand. Pursued by the unwelcome persistence of Robert she escapes to sea in a rowing boat, but is overtaken by his yacht and obliged to be his unwilling guest. Donning a life belt whilst Robert is in the engine-room she throws herself overboard in the hope of escape, willing to take her chance in the shark-infested sea rather than stay longer on board.

Captain Heral, out with a clergyman and his wife on a fishing excursion, is attracted by the splash and using his spyglasses recognizes Grace and cutting the fishing lines he goes full speed to her rescue. The presence of the clergyman suggests a great opportunity to the quick-witted captain and he loses no time in winning Grace's consent.

Arriving at the pier they announce their marriage to her now furious father, but as he thinks it over he comes to the conclusion that it is a good thing to have as a son-in-law a young fellow who was sharp enough to outwit both his rival and himself and who later on could shoulder some of the cares of his vast undertakings.

THANHOUSER

BIG SISTER (Aug. 11.)—They were two little orphans, one so small that she really couldn't work, and while the other girl was scarcely sixteen and small for her age she had to do the work of a full grown woman. One hot summer's day a kindly lady connected with a most worthy charity entered the poor home of the orphans, and asked the elder girl if she would like to go to the seashore with the baby. The girl was delighted but, she ruefully explained, it was absolutely necessary for her to keep on working, and she could not spare the time. Still if some way could be arranged whereby the baby would enjoy the fresh ocean breezes the elder sister would be more than delighted.

A way was found, for the visitor took the child with her as her own particular guest. There was a big party of them that went to Coney Island, but in the opinion of the visitor there was no child present who would compare with the child she chaperoned. On their return to town she spoke to the sister, told of the love for the child that had crept into her life and offered to adopt the little one. "Big Sister" realized what the offer might mean to the baby and consented to let her go, although with a heavy heart.

As the days passed the elder girl became more and more lonely. She haunted the vicinity of the baby's new home, and finally aroused the suspicions as well as the admiration of the policeman on duty at that block. He questioned her kindly. She told him about the baby, and he used his influence with the good-natured cook, an old friend of his, who willingly gave the girl a position in the kitchen. There she was able to occasionally feast her eyes upon the baby, but her position was so humble that the lady of the house never knew she was there.

In fact, the first intimation her employer received was when a policeman in full uniform came up the steps of her home and sent in a note by the butler. In this missive he explained that he was very anxious to marry the lady kitchen maid, but was unable to win her consent unless she regained her small sister, now living in luxury in the same house.

The astonished woman called in tbe policeman and also summoned the cook's assistant. On questioning them she was satisfied that the baby would have a good home and willingly surrendered the child, for while it was a sorrow to have to give up the child she had grown to love she had many other sources of happiness, and she was convinced that the little one was the only happiness and comfort the sister had enjoyed up to the time she met her big, good-hearted policeman suitor.

NOW WATCH THE PROFESSOR (Aug. 13.)—Professor Gregg arrived in New York on a liner at a time when news was very light, which explains why the reporters gave big displays to the fact that Gregg was returning with rare antique jewels which he had unearthed abroad. He also had a vast collection of other antiques, and the value of his belongings was set at an enormous figure.

The accounts were read with great interest by a number of persons, including a gentleman whose finger prints and photograph were highly treasured by the police of many cities. It struck him that the professor was far too wealthy, and he determined to see if they could not do business together, so he evolved a neat little plan whereby he hoped to meet the professor and the jewels.

The professor received word that a mummy was to be sent to him for inspection in the hope that he would buy it. For the mummy, who was the before-mentioned light-fingered individual, climbed out of his case, swatted the professor, and, assisted by the expressman, bound and gagged him, then interred him in the case and sent him away.

The professor spent a few unhappy hours a prisoner in a dirty room, then he managed to free himself, and started back toward his hotel. On the way he met a newspaper boy, and hearing him crying out "All about the smuggler" he bought a paper. It interested him to read that Professor Gregg had been captured in his hotel room on a charge of bringing in valuables without notifying the customs authorities. His admiration of speedy metropolitan justice was intensified on learning that his substitute had been arrested, tried and convicted within two hours, and was already beginning to enjoy a six months' sentence. That the prisoner refused to tell the police where the gems were hidden also pleased the professor.

The substitute was moodily brooding in his cell. He had been afraid he would convict himself of burglary, which meant a long sentence up the river. Still, although he had saved time for himself, he was far from being cheerful.

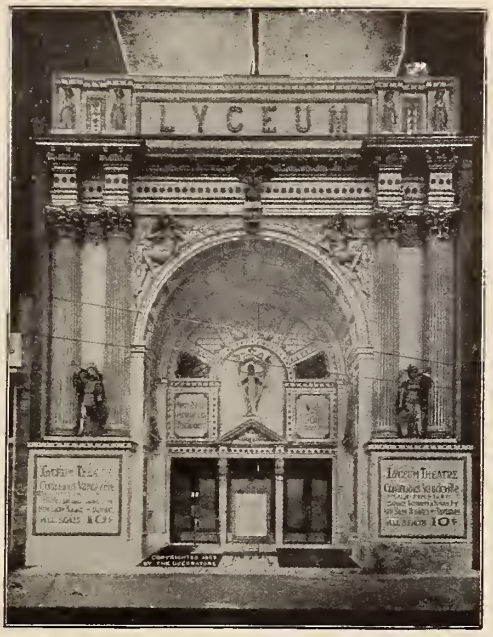
Then a message arrived from the outer world. It was from Professor Gregg. He explained that he had sold all his antiques before the substitute arrived, and he thanked the latter warmly for representing him at the roll call of the city prison.

The substitute thought of the professor who had told him he was now on the ocean, headed for a pleasure trip in Europe. The substitute was a strong, coarse man, but he wept. Then he removed his false white whiskers, part of the disguise the police had not penetrated, and cursed.

THE WRECKED TAXI (Aug. 16.)—The girl had two devoted suitors, and when she made her choice the rejected man remained her devoted friend. In her married life the girl was not as happy as she had expected to be and she and her husband frequently quarrelled.

It was not surprising, therefore, that her thoughts turned to the "other man" and in the course of time she believed she would be far happier with him. After a particularly bitter quarrel with her husband one night the wife, yielding to impulse, determined to run away and join the other man. She found him in his rooms, but he wouldn't let her remain. He talked to her of her baby, and finally induced her to return home.

The man called a taxicab and with the woman started for her residence. On the way the taxi was wrecked, the chauffeur killed,



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

but the occupants were picked up by another auto party and taken in the direction they desired to go. The couple reached the house unobserved and it appeared as though the woman's impulsive fault would never be revealed to the world.

Just before they left the man's rooms, however, a dissolute friend of his called, much under the influence of liquor, and had been left in the house by them. Wandering about the place in a half-dazed state, he found his host's revolver, thought of his own financial troubles and ended his life.

No one saw the man the moment he entered the house. No one saw the man return. The first that was known of his suicide was when the tenant called for help and policeman and others who knew him found the lifeless victim.

A doctor who examined the body said the man had been dead for several hours. The suspect could easily have proven his innocence by telling that at the time indicated he was in the taxi wreck some miles away. But to speak would bave ruined a woman's reputation, and he kept silent. At the time of the accident, when questioned by the police, he and the woman had given fictitious names, and there were no others to prove that the facts were true.

The woman also did not speak until the man was on trial for his life. Then remorse overcame her and she made a full confession, clearing the man, but so angering her husband that he drove her from him, refusing to listen to any explanation she or the man might make.

Five years later the husband, lonely and unhappy, was convinced that he had been unjust. He waited for a chance to make amends with his wife, and the chance came. He found that her heart was wrapped up in tbeir child and while she might nave been foolisb yet she had not sinned and heartily repented of her past conduct. Furthermore, he saw that he had been much to blame himself and vowed to make amends in the future.

And so they took up life together again.

COMET

A BACHELOR'S ROMANCE (Aug. 5.)—Suppose you were a dyed-in-the-wool bachelor and your only pleasure in life was at your club with other men who had no marital ties to worry them? Suppose, too, you found a basket containing a sweet baby girl witb a note pinned on it written by its distracted mother abjuring the finder to take good care of the child and bring it up as your own? Pray tell under the circumstances wbat would you do. You no doubt would have done the same tbing that Richard Vandergrift did—obey the note's instructions and carry it out faithfully and religiously. And we feel quite sure you would have benefitted as much as Richard did and be equally as bappy for having done so. When the poor mother left her child in that basket she was seized, as is only natural, with a fit of remorse. She had nothing to live for and sought the dark waters of the river to terminate her unhappy existence. But strong and willing arms hovered near to frustrate and save her—a policeman who had seen her make the plunge. The mother, Majorie, was taken to the hospital where she recovered after battling for her life for months. Mrs. Wayne Vandergrift, Richard's aunt, a very wealthy widow, heard of Majorie's plight and needing a companion hired the poor mother. Fortune seemed to smile on Majorie and we soon find her crossing the broad Atlantic with Mrs. Vandergrift. Six long years elapse. The baby has grown and Richard is very happy with fhe little ward, who is known to everyone and also loved as Elsie Vandergrift. The heretofore staid and crusty bachelor has arranged a party in honor of Elsie's birthday. His aunt, who has been in communication with him all the years she has been away, returns and sends him a message that she will be present at the party along with her companion. The pair arrive and Richard is attracted to Majorie through her beauty and subdued manner.

He introduces Elsie to his aunt and her companion. Slowly Majorie discovers that Richard's little ward is her own child—the baby she abandoned years ago. She clasps her to her arms and there is a happy reunion. The bachelor looks on with longing eyes. He has fallen in love with Majorie and she realizes that she loves him, too. Well, the final chapter arrives sooner than expected, for Richard concludes that single-blessedness is not always conducive to real bliss. So he proposes to Majorie and in the final picture we see them locked in each other's arms—as man and wife.

REPUBLIC

THE BORROWING SIMP (Aug. 12.)—Sim Perkins, the village fool, receives the nickname of "The Borrowing Simp" from his cronies at the corner grocery. He had never been known to have any money or do any work, but always possessed everything he desired by simply borrowing it.

Simp becomes annoyed when all his cronies marry and finally decided that he will marry, too. Without much thought on the seriousness of such a step he starts out on a "borrowing" expedition. He first borrows the horse and wagon belonging to the grocer, then a hat from the head of one of the by-standers and in spite of the laughter of the crowd he assures them that he will soon return with a full equipment of household furniture and also a wife.

In spite of the series of comical mishaps he finally gathers a wagon load of furniture, including a burning stove as well as a complete dinner; with this equipment he stops at Farmer Loon's house and borrows his simple minded daughter, an old maid, as a wife. With unrestrained joy, the farmer hustles the daughter away with Simp for fear that Simp may change his mind.

Simp has a splendid wedding. All his neighbors are there and enjoy Simp's hospitality as well as the dancing of the old-fashioned Virginia Reel.

Simp and his wife finally settle down to the humdrum of married life with no thought of the morrow, when like an avalanche the neighbors call and remove all the household goods that Simp had "borrowed" to start housekeeping with. The story is one mass of laughs from beginning to end.

MAJESTIC

THE MATRIMONIAL SUBSTITUTE (Aug. 11.)—Dr. Garland at the end of a hard day's work is called to the home of a rich family named Grey. He is disgusted upon arriving there to find he has been called to treat their dog, a pet of the daughter of the house. He sees a chance to get even the next day when he reads that a young friend of his, Dr. Carter, is to marry the same rich young woman who called him to attend her dog. Just before the hour of the wedding, the doctor sends a message to the young lady saying that Dr. Carter's physical condition forbids his marrying her and that he is to send a substitute. Meanwhile a jewelry salesman has been sent out to a neighbor's house and he gets in the Grey house by mistake. He is taken for the substitute bridegroom and receives a "hot" reception. Dr. Carter himself finally arrives and straightens out the troubles and takes his place in the bridal party. On the same reel:

THE STRIPED PARASOL—Mary comes down to the beach, opens her striped parasol and proceeds to read.

Percy chances along and fancies that it looks good. Then Dick finds Mary and persuades her to take a little walk with him and she in her hurry forgets her parasol. Percy brushes up a bit and decides to return and make a conquest.

But Rastus, a corpulent tramp, has come on the scene, backed up to the parasol and goes to sleep.

Back of the parasol Percy eloquently pleads his cause, so earnestly that he does not feel the waves that play on his feet. Rastus is awakened by the oration.

Out on the pier Mary decides to accept Dick's proposal.

Rastus folds up the parasol and when Dick sees what he has been addressing he leaves on the run after taking an unexpected roll in the surf.

A SUMMER IDOL (Aug. 13.)—Henry Denver, a broker, being surfeited with the pleasures of social life in the city, and wearied of the cares of business, resolves to seek a quiet place in the Catskills in which to spend the summer. He reads an advertisement that appeals to him, resolves to go there and calls upon his fiancée, Ruth Desmond, to apprise her of his departure, much to her displeasure.

At the same time an heiress, Marion Lane, comes to the same conclusion regarding the city and accidentally happens to choose the same resort that Denver does. She tells James Wall, her lover, of her decision and he is also displeased. Both the young people, traveling incognito as a poor clerk and stenographer, arrive at Catskill Corners the same day and seek board with Hiram Smith. Pretending to be poor they are given a reasonable rate and are allowed to help with the chores. Time and propinquity work the usual wonders in the usual way, and Henry and Marion fall in love with each other. Their financés, still in the city, detect a suspicious note in their correspondence and both resolve to visit the recreant ones. They arrive at the same time and Ruth recognizes Marion and tells Henry who she is.

Both Ruth and James are angry at what they see and learn, and the engagements are broken off, the two leaving in a huff for the hot city again, while Henry and Marion renew their troth in the cool countryside, waving the heated lovers a cold good-bye.

AMERICAN

THE MEDDLERS (Aug. 5.)—John Huxley, with his handsome young wife and Bob Lake, private secretary, came to the Western mine to inspect their holdings. Mrs. Huxley cared nothing for her aged husband and plainly showed it. She did become interested, however, in James Whitmore, when she accidentally saw James kissing his little sweetheart Mary Jacobs.

She sought out James after working hours and when the miner was going home. She made violent love to him when she found that he did not care for her. Also, she sought out little Mary Jacobs, told her fortune by cards, and predicted much unhappiness unless she married Bob Blake. Bob was also interested in Mary and made love to her. One day Mary saw her sweetheart James in the arms of Mrs. Huxley, but she did not see or know that Mrs. Huxley had arranged with Bob to bring Mary to a hedge close by where Mary could see her lover's treachery. James, afraid of his master's wife, submitted to the hug and kiss with much disgust in his heart.

One day the end came unexpectedly. Mrs. Huxley and Bob, standing together on the hillside, were plotting how they might further wreck the little romance. Suddenly a warning shout came from James, who had just lighted a fuse. In another instant there was a terrific crash, a swirl of smoke carrying giant rocks upward with it, and they after found the buried remains of the faithless wife and her private secretary.

THE GIRL AND THE GUN (Aug. 8.)—Pauline had always been a splendid shot, and her lover, the sheriff, approved of her remarkable marksmanship with the whole-hearted praise of a boy. One day two bad men, Scorpion Bill and Spider Jack, planned a raid on the girl's home. They assaulted her and her father and escaped with the swag. Great was the anger of the sheriff, who made plans for immediate pursuit.

A rousing revolver battle on horseback followed and for a time the sheriff lost track of his birds. We see them later dividing the swag and carousing until Bill tried to bunco his companion when a quarrel ensued. This the sheriff interrupted, giving a hot chase to Bill. The latter rode madly toward a great high trestle overhanging the valley. Nimbly he climbed its great height, closely followed by the sheriff. Suddenly he found all cartridges gone, and, thinking quickly, swung his rope over the trestle and started down. Arrived at the top the sheriff found himself in the same predicament without cartridges. He followed his prey down the rope. They met at a height of sixty feet from the ground and a blood-rousing, hand-to-hand battle took place in midair.

Meantime Spider Jack, watching the frightful battle, took heart once more and climbed rapidly up the trestle. He drew his gun, then changed his mind and hauled forth a wicked-looking knife with which he began to cut the rope.

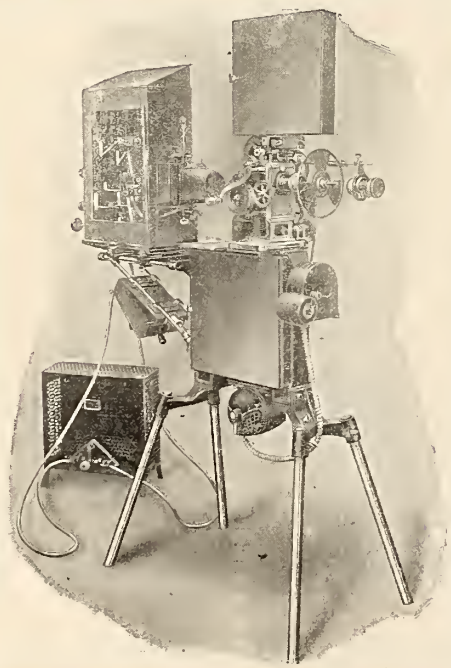
Down on the ground observing the desperate battle of her lover Pauline took careful aim at Bill. Then suddenly she saw Jack's figure on the trestle top and divined his plan. Again she aimed, this time at Jack. When her rifle sent its deadly missile upwards, the body of Jack hurtled to the ground. At the same moment, the sheriff, having obtained a throat hold on his antagonist, pushed him slowly backward until his body, too, joined that of his confederate. Without doubt one of the most dramatic pictures ever made. Most of the action takes place in midair and the spectacle of the desperate hand-to-hand encounter on the rope, with death awaiting the loser, is a sight not easily forgotten.

GAUMONT

THE REFUGEE'S CASKET (Sept. 10.)—The Marquis de Saint Hiliare, in danger of his life from the revolutionists, decided to leave his country and seek a refuge in a foreign clime, but before departing entrusts to his sister a casket containing the family treasures. A few hours after the Gendarmes arrive to search the house, but cannot find any trace of the Marquis or his treasures. Failure resulting in this direction, they next turn their steps to the sister's house. The officers instruct their men to search the upper rooms whilst they attend to the lower regions, and by a strange coincidence they notice an interstice in the hearth, which when examined reveals an underground chamber in which is concealed the casket. Intending to return at the first opportunity and divide the spoil, they say nothing to their men regarding the discovery. In their hurry, however, they omit to remove all traces of their discovery, and Marie Jeanne immediately upon entering the room knows that her secret is shared by the intruders, and determined to save her brother's property takes the casket to a more secure hiding place. Upon returning she is arrested by the officers, who bind her with cords, and threaten to shoot her if she does not reveal the secret. She remains firm, and eventually makes her escape after severing her bonds and killing one of the officers. The revolution having subsided the Marquis and his family return to their own country, but when visiting Marie Jeanne's house notice that the government seals are affixed, and her whereabouts shrouded in mystery. When sitting by the lake they are surprised to see Marie Jeanne return, and after affectionate greetings she restores to them the treasures for which she suffered.

CHAMPION

WHAT A WOMAN WILL DO (Aug. 5.)—Mr. Woods is taken ill. Physician is called;



POWER'S 6A

A Machine for the Operator Built by an Operator

That is why a POWER'S always wins. It is built on practical lines by a man who knows every phase of mechanics.

Mr. Nicholas Power has spent many years at the bench. His knowledge is most comprehensive, he is a mechanic from the ground up.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has had his unceasing thought and attention for fifteen years and our NO. 6A will be found to possess every known improvement which scientific manufacture and knowledge afford. Our new patented device for resetting the lower loop automatically without stopping the machine, has added greatly to its effectiveness.

A POWER'S NO. 6A gives absolutely perfect projection, is easy of operation and noiseless with mechanical parts all on the outside where they are easy of access.

Let us send you pamphlet D describing POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH THE PRACTICAL MACHINE.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 90 Gold St., New York

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

examines Woods; leads Mrs. Woods into the hallway, says a specialist is necessary. While talking, Nell, Mrs. Woods' sister, leaves, being called out of town suddenly. She kisses Mrs. Woods good-bye, and Woods, ignorant of her departure, hears the kiss from his bed, and becomes suspicious of his wife and the physician.

Woods, poverty stricken, writes note to Dr. Forrest, the specialist, to aid him. Dr. Forrest has a patient who has heen hurned, and who advertises for a piece of human skin off the forearm, offering the sum of $500 for it. Mrs. Woods takes her hushand's note to the doctor, who refuses aid unless she consents to sell the needed area of skin off her arm. She yields, ordering the doctor not to tell her husband of her sacrifice. The doctor performs the operation upon Mrs. Woods, and also treats Woods, whose suspicions of his wife have now become a belief. A week later when the doctor tells Woods his wife has paid everything the man is dumbfounded. When Mrs. Woods, recuperated, returns home and reluctantly shows her husband her scarred arm and her check he is overcome with his own meanness. Nell, returning at this moment with good news, reconciles the couple.

GEM

'NEATH THE HOMESPUN (Aug. 6).—When the little romance hetween the honest farmer and the sweet, refined litle schoolmiss sprang up, people shook their heads doubtfully and wonderingly. The village folks had seen many unhappy marriages grow out of a little moonlight and sentiment. They realized that the farmer and the teacher were mismated and they foresaw the ultimate heartache and unrest. But the farmer and the schoolmiss—they looked at their romance with rose-colored glasses, and saw sunbeams and song and the old "happy-ever-after" fairy tale sequel.

Well, they married. The farmer was sincere and devoted in a manner of speaking, but he was blunt and even coarse and uncultured. And after the romance had graduated down to the dreary monotony of uninteresting intimacy, she became slightly tired—tired of the house work, tired of the sameness, tired of her husband's unpolished demeanor.

One day a stranger passed the house—the old miserable story. He was a gentleman, well-mannered, clean-cut, well dressed. They chatted—the whisper of the serpent. And they saw each other again and again, and once they decided to run off.

The farmer read the little note: "I'm tired of being a farmer's wife and have gone away," looked into the shadows and the silence and prayed only that she be forgiven.

The train on which they were eloping met with an accident, and the schoolmiss was badly hurt. Once the gentleman looked at her, glanced covertly about, and, unperceived, quietly slipped out of the station and away. He could not afford to have his name linked with a woman in a train accident.

She got well again, and wended her way back to the little farm. She walked into the orchard again and saw ner husband sitting in a pensive dream. What his eyes, bent on the distant fields, saw, none can say, but suddenly they looked up and upon the form of her for whom he was longing. In a moment she was held in strong arms, and her repentant kiss eradicated all the memory of her weakness.

REX

..THE TROUBADOUR'S TRIUMPH (Aug. 8).—The Lady Lilitha didn't hate him—she merely disliked him. There was something wrong about him. Sir Guy Lancaster might have been considered a cavalier by the gay members of his set and a thorough gallant by all others, but—Lilitha knows somewhere in his heart was malice and dishonesty. So she frowned upon his suit, angry as it made her father.

There traveled through the country a troubadour. None knew whence he came nor whither he was bound, but the manly figure and the clear eyes made friends along the long way.

He was walking through the woods one day and detected outlaws evidently waiting for their intended victim to pass. He hid behind a mass of bushes. Along came the King and Lilitha, who were immediately attacked by the waiting outlaws. The troubadour came to their rescue and routed the assailants.

The King thanked him and invited him to the palace. When Sir Lancaster saw the troubadour and learned of his favor with the King his heart filled with envy and rage. Passing the scene of the conflict, he found the bag which the troubadour had carried and which he had thrown aside when he ran for shelter and concealment. In the bag was a letter signed hy his brother to the effect that he was bidding his son, the troubadour, to proceed to the King and prove that the charges made by Guy Lancaster (himself) were untrue and that the lands and possessions that had been confiscated should be returned, and enclosing the family jewels as a gift to the King and a token of regard. He at once knew that the trouhadour was his nephew, the son of the brother whom he had tried to depose from power, and, calling his faithful servant to him, explained the missive and gave him the possession of the letter and the jewels.

Sir Lancaster pressed his suit, and finally won the King's intervention. Lilitha was by this time in love with the trouhadour, as you must have divined. Unwillingly her consent was forced to the betrothal. Sir Lancaster offered the jewels of the brother as the bridal gift, hut the court jester, who had overheard the conversation hetween Sir Lancaster and his servant, was determined to righten things—and did. He got the servant drunk, his favorite pastime, stole the letter from his bodice, and placed it in the jewel hox instead of the jewels. Therefore it followed that when Sir Guy Lancaster presented his prospective hride with the box in which he thought the jewels reposed she found instead the proof of his deception and dishonesty and the high birth of her lover, whom she had believed but a humble troubadour. And to climax the happiness, the jester appeared with the jewels rightfully belonging to the troubadour, but which later were bestowed upon Lilitha—that is, when their marriage was celebrated.

NONE CAN DO MORE (Aug. 11).—When Arthur Malcolm left for the front to bear the Confederate colors through the long war impending, he told his mother that old Uncle Mose, the old negro servant of half a century, would protect her. And old Uncle Mose fully determined to bear the trust reposed in him. But blood is blood, and when the old negress, his chum through all the bright, dark days of their slavery, told him she was going North to help the Union boys win the fight for their freedom, his old heart was touched and his spirit responded to the call.

He thought the matter over long, and finally decided that his course lay North. So quietly and a little sadly he packed his few belongings and left the house, wending his way to the Northern camp.

In the meantime Malcolm was distinguishing himself for brave and loyal service on the field of hattle. And when it became necessary to send a spy into the Union lines, the first choice was Malcolm.

He started on his perilous mission with hope and courage, but soon after he had crossed the lines he was detected, tried and sentenced to die at dawn. A little after his sentence had heen imposed he met Uncle Mose in camp. After the surprised meeting, he whispered the reason for his being in the camp and the penalty that impended. Then it was that all Uncle Mose's loyalty and faithfulness came to the fore. He went to the commander and pleaded for the life of his young master, offering his own as forfeit. But his suggestion and offer were scoffed at, and he determined a more daring plan to carry the young Confederate to freedom and safety. He skulked about the tent in which the warden of the jails was stationed, and when an opportunity was presented sneaked inside, hurled himself upon the unsuspecting and unprepared warden, killed him, obtained the keys, gave Malcolm his freedom, and surrendered himself to the Union officers. Of course, his poor life was taken in lieu of the free spy's. The leaden message was rendered, and when his body fell cold, limp and lifeless they took almost tenderly a portrait of Lincoln from his pocket, and looked upon the form who was loyal to his saviour, but even more loyal to his master.

CINES—GEORGE KLEINE

THE LITLE ORPHAN (Aug. 6).—When Albert, an artist, and Ellen, farmer Jones' daughter, are married and comfortably settled, they wish very much to adopt Mary, a little orphan girl who really was the cause of bringing them together.

They prevail upon Mary's guardians to part with the child and soon all three are living happily together. Albert immediately sets out to complete his masterpiece, which he hopes will bring him fame and fortune. Ellen, however, soon becomes piqued at her husband's devotion of his entire time to his work, and even becomes jealous of his pretty model. Watching them together, she misconstrues their actions and finally accuses Albert of being unfaithful. A violent scene ends in an agreement to part, but a difficulty arises in who shall take little Mary. The child settles that matter herself; she will not leave either of them, and her innocent love and trust finally triumph. They decide to bury their differences, and begin over again.

ESSANAY

THE LOAFER'S MOTHER (Aug. 3).—Gregg Wilson, a young Westerner with no other occupation than hanging ahout the town saloon, finds it difficult to supply his old sick mother with necessary medicine. One morning he and his pal, a worthless ruffian, are waiting for the medicine to take back to Wilson's shack when old Phillips, a hero of the Civil War, totters in on his cane and presents a check for quite a sum of back pension. The storekeeper counts him out the money in plain sight of Wilson and his pal, who exchange significant glances and depart. Outside they plan to hold up the old soldier and rob him of his money, then Wilson hurries to take his mother the medicine after telling his pal to wait until he returns. Mrs. Wilson now finds several tasks with which to keep Gregg occupied, and his return is delayed many minutes. Out in the woods his pal strides about impatiently and thinking he is not coming back, goes on to do the deed alone. Gaining entrance to Phillips' house he attacks the old man, who desperately fights for his life, breaks away and stumbles out the door where he is overtaken by the ruffian. Coming in sight of the house, Wilson is horrified to see his pal about to murder the old man. His nature revolts and, whipping out his gun, he shoots his pal through the arm just as the old soldier falls from a terrible blow. In mounting Wilson drops his gun and it is found by the Sheriff's posse who arrive on the scene. Wilson is arrested and led away, despite his old mother's frantic appeals to spare him. His wounded pal is now captured, and old Phillips identifies him as his assailant. Wilson is set free, hurries back to his shack and finds his mother on her knees playing for his safety. With a prayer of gratitude in his heart he joins her and, for the first time in his life, his face is lifted to the Light.

"THE NEW CHURCH ORGAN" (Aug. 6).—Rev. Barlow, pastor in a small country village, has a pretty daughter, Beverly. Barlow's salary is quite insufficient to dress Beverly in the fashion of her more fortunate friends and he is forced to show her a letter from the church committee who find it impossible to grant him more money. The church festival is at hand and Beverly suffers for lack of a pretty summer dress to appear well among her chums. Next day, dressed in an old-fashioned gown of her mother's, Beverly meets Austin Strong, a young organ salesman, who is taking an order for a new instrument to be installed in the church. Austin falls deeply in love with Beverly and, seeing her snubhed hy her fickle friends, becomes interested. Two weeks later the festival is held and Beverly, ashamed to mingle among the gay crowd, serves the refreshments in the dingy kitchen of the church while Austin waits for her outside. The sudden explosion of the hot stove severely burns Beverly's eyes and she is carried to her bedroom by Austin while her girl friends repent of their snobbery in bitter tears. Forced to continue on his route, Austin leaves with a heavy heart, not knowing whether the injury will prove fatal. A few months pass and he returns. Finding Barlow alone in the little library he is about to question him when the sweet strains of the new organ come from the choir loft of the church. Hastening there he finds Beverly, entirely recovered. His confession of love is fully returned by the sweet girl and, as he gathers her in his arms, the wonderful evening light floods through the little window and enfolds them in its enchanting embrace.

EDISON

IN HIS FATHER'S STEPS (Aug. 6).—There is always a deep pathos underlying a hope, a dream, an ambition when one awakes and learns that it will never be realized and especially if these hopes, dreams and ambitions have grown year after year out of love and centered themselves round a single individual. That is the problem we have to face in the latest Edison production entitled "In His Father's Steps."

Old Dr. Morton has been practicing in a little village for over forty years. This, his little world, is bound on the North by the woolen mills, on the South by Widow Jones' chicken farm, on the West by the quiet sluggish river that cuts its way into the unknown, behind a cluster of woods, and on the East by Bill Cumming's pigsty. Within these boundaries lies the village of Centerville and the kind old doctor never dreamed that his boy, who had just graduated from a medical college in a great city, would aspire to anything higher, thinking he would be quite willing to come back home and take up his practice when night calls and weary watching by the sick would become too much for him. But youth and love climb higher than old age and gray hair and it is no small wonder that his son meets a woman he loves, in the great city; a woman with wealth and beauty and all the glory of maidenhood on her brow. How great the joy of these two young hearts when opportunity came dancing into his life in the shape of a fine position and splendid salary, as assistant to a world-famous physician.

But when the boy told his father of his hopes and bright prospects he could not help but see behind the sad, kind eye a look of disappointment, and when at night he found the entry in his diary telling him of all it meant to the dear old man, he realized what he owed to the man who had worked day and night for the sick and dying in order that he might become what he is. So at last he takes from his old worn hand the medical case and goes forth to help those whom his father had loved and known for forty years.

He gives up his high ambition and after a battle, the woman he loves, fully believing that she would not consent to become the wife of a simple country doctor. He had, however, failed to take into consideration the greatness of her love, and only realized it when, on returning home one evening he finds her in his father's garden with the words upon her lips: "Where you are there is my world also. It is the happiest and the best I shall ever want."

A simple, tender story of true love and fond hearts told in a humble village amidst the musty bottles of an old doctor's office.

THE CITY OF WASHINGTON, THE CAPITAL OF THE UNITED STATES (Aug. 10).—America, though young in years, is more or less looked upon with adoring eyes by other nations of the world. It is quite natural, then, to expect this film to be something more than the ordinary scenic picture, something that will not disillusion our foreign friends, and something that will make Americans sit back and say with pride "my country's capital."

The photography of this picture is artistic in every sense of the word, producing effects that fill the eye with natural charm. In the opening scene we find ourselves gazing down Pennsylvania Avenue, a broad and picturesque thoroughfare. Standing out majestically and prominently in the background against the sky, can be seen the great white dome of the Capitol like a lofty brow that harbors the brains of a nation. The executive mansion, familiarly known throughout the world as the "White House," bespeaks an air of simple elegance, with its domestic architecture and shady lawns, kept green by sparkling fountains.

There are many other views all of striking appearance taken both close and at a distance, that show all the buildings of national importance, such as the War Department Building, the Treasury, the Congressional Library and the National Post Office.

In conjunction with these attractions are scenes taken in and about the Union Station, a new station at which all trains stop coming in or going out from Washington. Ascending to the top of the Washington Monument, five hundred and eighty feet above ground, one can see in a bird's-eye view a landscape that fades into other cities far away. The very theatre in which President Lincoln met with his most tragic end can be viewed with eyes of solemn regret. The National Cemetery, with its thousands of tombstones that mark the final resting place of the unknown heroes who gave their lives could well be termed with its beauty, ever fresh and green, "The garden of the departed."

Scenically, photographically and materially this film is a portrayal of splendor.

A DANGEROUS LESSON (Aug. 13.)—An honest heart to heart kind of story of young married life to-day which will strike a responsive chord in more than one little family.

Fred Marshall and his pretty wife are happily married, though in moderate circumstances, but Fred has not learned that his little wife is his partner and he consequently denies her an allowance and anything but the smallest amount of spending money.

One of her young married friends advises her to take money when she needs it from her husband's trousers pockets and it so happens that a few nights after this he comes home with a collection made after office hours and carelessly leaves his coat with her for some repairs. Consequently she finds the big roll of money. Believing that it is his own and that he has refused to give her a share of it, she takes two bills, wrapping the remainder up and returning it to the pocket. Fred hands it in without looking at it, at the office, and of course when he can make no explanation of the disappearance of the money he is invited to sever his connection with the firm.

Returning to the house he find his wife just coming back from having purchased a new hat with the two bills. The mutual explanations which follow make her realize her mistake and send her post haste to the office to explain to Freu's employer what she has done. Her confession easily wins forgiveness from him and the reinstatement of Fred, but when she returns to the house she learns that Fred has also learned his lesson and that hereafter the contents of the pay envelope will be divided equally between them.

The story is so humanly and delicately played that it is sure of a hearty welcome.

THE NARROW ROAD (Aug. 1).— Jim Holcomb was a good fellow at heart, but having been thrown into evil associations he became perverted. He and a pal were arrested as counterfeiters and sent to the penitentiary. The story opens as their time of sentence is drawing to an end. Jim's faithful wife toils and patiently waits for his release, feeling that a brighter future is in store for them. The day of release arrives and when Jim meets his little wife he tells his erstwhile pal that it is the straight road for him in the future. The pal goes back to his old life, as he reasons it is easier to make counterfeit money than to earn real money. He is soon recognized and chased from his shack, where he is molding the "spurious." In his flight he runs into the apartment in which Jim and his wife live and persuades them to hide his kit of tools. This rash act nearly costs them dear, for the detectives enter almost immediately. The cause of their escape and the guilty man's apprehension is too unique to describe here.

LUBIN

THE NEW RANCH FOREMAN (Aug. 22).—Jack Walton, a renegade, while gambling, is detected cheating by a Mexican, and in the altercation kills his opponent and escapes. He later appears at a ranch owned by Mrs. Sawyer, a widow who has a daughter, Grace. At the time of Walton's arrival Tom Lewis is foreman. A mutual dislike exists from the beginning between Jack and Tom. Grace also instinctively distrusts him, but his smooth personality fascinates Mrs. Sawyer, and he gains an influence over her to the extent that Tom is deposed and Jack succeeds him. Mrs. Sawyer also opposes Tom's attention to Grace. One day Jack learns through a letter that a reward is offered for his capture and a getaway is imperative, but he must secure some of Mrs. Sawyer's money, which is deposited in a town a few miles away. He pretends he has an opportunity to a buy a valuable ranch for five thousand dollars. He proposes marriage to Mrs. Sawyer and prevails upon her to go to the bank and draw the money. Before leaving she writes a draft, and making an error in the cheque, tears it in half, throwing it away, and writes another. She then drives to town to get the money. After her departure Grace finds the torn cheque; she goes to Tom and asks his advice. His suspicious are aroused and he realizes something must be done at once. After a hasty consultation he mounts his horse and rides away. That afternoon when Mrs. Sawyer drives back from town with the money, she is held up by a masked man on the road and robbed. In the meantime Grace has learned the meaning of Walton's plan to steal the money, through a letter sent by Walton to his partner, and she at once sends for the sheriff. On the arrival of Mrs. Sawyer, Jack meets her and on discovering that she has lost the money is furious and abusive. Grace enters and orders Jack from the house. At this moment the sheriff and men approach; Jack is about to run when Tom confronts him. The two men clinch and a fight follows. Tom is the stronger and has Jack thoroughly subdued when the sheriff, followed by posse, enters. He places Jack under arrest, tells Mrs. Sawyer his past record, Mrs. Sawyer is overcome. Tom takes from his pocket the package of money, also the handkerchief he had used for the mask in the hold-up. Mrs. Sawyer realizing his worth, reinstates him, and Grace asks her mother to give consent to her marriage.

A WATER FIGHT (Aug. 23).—Pat Duffy is lcisurely sprinkling his sidewalk when he accidentally allows some of the water to fall in Flanigan's yard. Mr. Flanigan, unaccustomed to "taking water" from anybody, comes out to protest against the unruly stream in the hands of Duffy. The hose is directed into Flanigan's face. Flanigan naturally resents this overdose of water by bringing his hose into play for a few minutes. Then there is a battle royal until the wives who are having the most confidential chat see their husbands in the thick of the fight, decide to take a hand, and the fight is increased to a bucket brigade. Mickey Shannon and Johnny McCann see the trouble, and arouse the neighborhood, who in all curiosity make for the scene of the deluge. After enjoying the fun at the expense of the Flanigans and Duffys, two street cleaners decide that they can increase the fight by turning on the fire hose which nearly drowns all present. After the quelling of the riot the neighborhood is peaceful once more.

VITOGRAPH

TOO MUCH WOOING OF HANDSOME DAN (Aug. 5).—The girls all know Dan is handsome and he knows it himself. They mistrust him as a flirt and he cannot get any further with them than a pleasant "Howdy" or passing the time of day. He happens into the general store and sees an announcement that each package of "Pancake Flour" contains a beautiful diamond ring. This gives him an idea. He purchases a whole case, opens the boxes, and, well supplied with rings, he starts out to engage himself to all the pretty girls in town. They are only too willing to listen to his proposals and accept him, when he produces the engagement rings. He hugs and kisses each one in turn before starting out for the next victim. He enjoys himself immensely and feels so well pleased with himself he goes back to the store and tells the boys about his scheme and the great time he had.

While he is relating his experiences, one of the girls comes in unobserved and overhears his brag. She tells all the other girls how he has fooled them. They get together and proclaim revenge. One of them writes Dan to meet her. They all mount their horses, and on the way to the trysting place stop at Maggie Smither's. Maggie is an old maid, very anxious to marry, and when they tell her that Handsome Dan wishes to take her as his life partner, she jumps at the chance. With Maggie, they all go to meet Dan. He sees them coming, jumps on his horse and gives them a chase.

One of the girls lassoes him and he is threatened with lynching. They offer to let him off with his life if he will marry Maggie. He refuses. Grabbing him, they douse him in the horse trough until he agrees to accept their alternative. The girls depart, satisfied that the punishment fits the crime.

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR (Aug. 6).—During a social call at the handsome residence of the Dalys, the men drift into business matters and Mrs. Daly and Mrs. Richards occupy their time with small talk. Richards has some D. & S. stock for which Daly offers him $50,000. Richards refuses. The hutler enters with a necklace which Mrs. Daly had ordered sent her. Mrs. Richards admires it. A few days later Mr. and Mrs. Richards receive an invitation to attend a reception. Mrs. Richards wishes she had a necklace like Mrs. Daly's. Anxious to attract attention at the reception, she asks Mrs. Daly to loan the necklace to her. She willingly consents.

At the reception the magnificent necklace is very much admired hy all present. On her return home with her hushand she finds she has lost the necklace. She is overcome. They search the taxi cah in which they returned home. She makes inquiry at the house where the reception was held, but without result. The only thing to he done is to replace the necklace hy huying a new one, if possible.

Mr. Richards haunts the jewelry houses for a duplicate. At last he discovers one for which they ask $12,000. Richards offers his check for $5,000 and notes for the balance, which is satisfactory. Richards writes Daly, in the meantime, if he is willing to buy his stock at the price he mentioned, he will dispose of it. Mrs. Richards is ahout to go to Mrs. Daly's with the newly purchased necklace and makes up her mind she will take the stock at the same time. She does so, returns the necklace to Mrs. Daly without her knowing that it is a different one, and while Mrs. Daly is in another room Mrs. Richards enters into the stock negotiations with Mr. Daly. Under the strain and excitement she falls in a faint. Mr. Daly catches her. Mrs. Daly suddenly enters the room and accuses her hushand of familiarity with their friend. Mrs. Richards recovers and explains the whole situation. Mr. Daly asks her how much she paid for the duplicate necklace. Mrs. Richards answers, "$12,000." Mrs. Daly, in surprise, exclaims: "Mine was only paste." Handing the necklace back to Mrs. Richards and telling her it belongs to her. She comforts the distressed woman and apologizes to her hushand for having heen suspicious of him and Mrs. Richards.

THE CROSS-ROADS (Aug. 10.)—At the close of an industrious life, Ahel Hale, an old Quaker farmer, and his good wife, Phoehe, find themselves under ohligation to a crafty lawyer, who holds a matured note against them. He threatens to drive them from their home if they do not give him their daughter, Charity, in marriage. Kirke Dundee, a hard-working farmer hoy, who is in love with Charity, is considered an ohstacle to Salmon's desire for Charity. The lawyer is the executor of the estate, which helongs to Kirke's uncle, and when the uncle dies he wills the property to Kirke. Salmon duplicated the will, making Toby, a simple-minded plow boy, the heir. Tohy's mother is an irresponsible and cunning old hag, who enters into the scheme with the lawyer to rob Kirke of his inheritance. In an interview with her, Salmon takes the original will from his pocket, explains it to her and thoughtlessly leaves it on the tahle at which the simple-minded Toby is apparently sleeping. He is not as foolish as he looks. He stealthily takes the will while the lawyer is talking to his mother and puts it inside his shirt. Salmon leaves the house. Tohy runs to Kirke and gives him the will. Salmon secures judgment against the old Quaker and his wife, and again tells them if they do not give their daughter to him he will drive them from their home. They refuse and are dispossessed. Toby, who has an extreme hatred for Salmon, carries the news to Kirke and Charity. They jump into the farm wagon and Kirke, driving hastily for the Hale home, meets the old people plodding towards the almshouse. Kirke takes them hack to their home, where he meets Salmon, shows him the original will, throws the lawyer out of the house and tells the old people that they can stay in the home as long as they live, and he will be a son to them. Tohy's hatred of Salmon knows no bounds, and he follows him. In the center of the bridge crossing the river he catches up with Salmon and throws him bodily into the water. Not content, he jumps after him, and, together, they disappear from sight.

BISON

A WESTERN GIRL'S DREAM (Aug. 6.)—May Arnold, a heautiful child of the West, is living happily at home in the far Southwest. She is happy with her father, and happy with the thought that she is soon to wed Billy. Clarence Van Nest, a young business man, and a distant relative of Farmer Arnold from the East, is summoned on urgent husiness to the Southwest. His mother accompanies him. They are warmly greeted at the ranch house. Little May gazes wonder-eyed at Clarence; his easy grace and polished manner attract the girl to such an extent that after a little quarrel with Billy she allows het thoughts to wander to the East and a life of luxury.

While pondering over these thoughts, she drops to sleep and dreams it all came true, hut soon found her life was not one of sunshine and roses, and after many trials and trihulations she awakens with a start only to find she is at home and in the sphere in which Nature had placed her.

HER FIRST CHOICE (Aug. 10.)—
Don ..... Ed Genung
Charley ..... George
Ripper Bill..... Chas. Hoskins
Graham ..... Harry Collier
Mrs. Graham..... Dora Morton
Mahel ..... Violet Mersereau

Mahel, the sheriff's daughter, is loved hy Don, her father's foreman on the ranch, and Charley, the mail carrier. The boys propose, but Charley is the chosen one, though Don had been the girl's choice.

Ripper Bill, a dangerous outlaw, is heing sought by the sheriff, who posts a reward for his capture. Charley starts away with his mail hag, and Mahel surprises him hy meeting him at the cross roads. Ripper Bill holds them up. Charley shows a streak of yellow by hacking away and leaving the girl in the desperado's hands. Don, who is out on an errand, gets the drop on Ripper Bill. Mahel picks up the mail hag and quickly gallops off. Don is so dumhfounded at his friend's yellow streak that Ripper Bill manages to give him the slip. After delivering the mail hag, Mahel starts hack. Charley in the meantime notifies the sheriff, who immediately gives chase to the outlaw. Charley and Don join the posse. On seeing Mabel Don tells Charley to take her home. The latter eagerly acts upon the suggestion and with Mahel rides away. Ripper Bill, while endeavoring to gain an empty shack, comes upon the lovers and easily makes them captives. Charley hegs for his life and is let go. The desperado then takes Mabel into the shack. Don, realizing the girl's peril, rides fast and poking his gun through the window holds up the villain, and later hands him over to the sheriff.

Mabel's eyes are now open and she decides that Don, her first love, is the man of her choice.

ECLAIR

DADDY (Aug. 13.)—We call "Daddy" Joseph W. Gayhird hecause the name fits his proclivities like a glove. His son shall he called Josiah because the name seems to fit, for Josiah is a hook worm and recluse. In plain words he is a "ninny" and seemingly either afraid or a hater of women.

Old Gayhird, half disgusted and half regretful, determines to somehow lead or lure his son into what he thinks is the real and only life, for to Gayhird women are Nature's greatest gift.

Gayhird enlists Mrs. Sprightly, a merry widow, in his scheme to make a man out of Josiah. The widow is to decoy Josiah to her home upon the pretext of examining and reporting on the value of an old engraving. Then she is to make love to Josiah and initiate him into the hliss of the kiss.

Someone stops at her home and asks for a drink. The widow presumes it is Josiah and falls upon him. He is asked into a quiet room and the widow lavishes him with loving embraces, much to his surprise and his liking. Gayhird watches through the key-hole, pleased that Josiah at last discovered love.

In the meantime, Josiah has started to the widow's to inspect the engraving. He is asked to hold a hahy, does so only to discover he has heen tricked and that the mother doesn't intend to return, so he pursues his way to the widow's with the hahy.

Arriving at the widow's, the whole mistake is discovered. The man who has been accepting the widow's affections which were meant for Josiah is thrown out. Josiah tries to foist the baby on someone present hut fails.

Gayhird, discouraged of ever making a natural sort of man out of Josiah, orders him out and comforts the now nearly distraught widow. It ends with the pair in each other's arms.

AUNT HETTY'S GOLDFISH (Aug. 15.)—Some aunts love cats but Aunt Hetty loved her goldfish—hence the story.

Aunt Hetty comes to visit her nephew and niece and brings her goldfish. Her niece is most hearty and affectionate in welcoming "Aunty." Some say that it was hecause Aunty had money and the niece wanted to be sure of appearing in the will. But it doesn't seem possihle. Anyway Aunty arrived; she sent out for fresh hrook water and the errand runner met the constable, who was also fish and game warden. This incident injects a deal of comedy in the film hefore things straighten out.

The nephew phones home that he is detained hy an important meeting and will not he home to dinner, or supper, as you will, the truth is that he has a poker party hid. Besides playing poker he "Has a few" with the rest of the fellows, and then he has a few more. Somehow, someway, he manages to get home after all are in hed. Quite natural to his condition he wants a drink, meaning a drink of water of course. He discovers Aunt Hetty's goldfish bowl, is ahout to drink when he sees "Monsters" swimming around. The bowl goes to the floor with a crash. Aunt Hetty and niece seem to shoot into the room and discover him in the throes of reptile fear. Aunt Hetty scoops up and saves her fish and a doctor and nurse are sent for. Nephew falls in love with the nurse, more fun till nurse is sent away. Anyway it all ends well, for nephew promises to ahstain when the goldfish horror is explained. Keely Cured as it were. Aunt Hetty thereupon enters his name in her will and her visit promises a pleasant future for all.

PATHE

THE DEATH OF CHEVALIER ALBERTINI (Aug. 6.)—Chevalier Alhertini, scion of a powerful Florentine family, was opposed by Cardinal Acciaicoli, his uncle, in his desire to marry Elizaheth Marmorai. In an effort to outwit the Cardinal, Alhertini and Elizaheth attempt a secret marriage, hut a spy warns the Cardinal and he forhids the hanns. Elizaheth is carried off and Alhertini is imprisoned. On heing shown a death warrant for Albertini, which she does not know is false, the girl accepts the offer made to her that her lover's life will he spared if she enters a convent. She writes a note to Alhertini informing him of her decision. When the Chevalier receives the note, he kills his guard and escapes. He gains access to Elizaheth's retreat and helps her to escape. They are discovered fleeing and are pursued hy the police, who overtake the couple as they are fording a river. A shot fired hy the police enters Elizaheth's heart. The Chevalier, weak and exhausted, falls beside her and the lovers find a watery grave together.

THE ARROWMAKER'S DAUGHTER (Aug. 7.)—After a vain search for fortune in the depths of the earth, a prospector comes upon an Indian arrowmaker who is ahout to conceal a quantity of gold which he has mined. The temptation is too great for the unlucky prospector and he follows the arrowmaker to a cave, kills him, and starts across the Colorado desert with the ill-gotten gold. The arrowmaker's daughter finds her father's hody and a clue to the murderer. She takes up the trail and in turn is followed by her Indian lover, who assumes that she is in love with the white man. The prospector and the girl are soon in agony because of a lack of water but little hy little the girl overtakes him and, exhausted, they can go no further. The Indian, with a supply of water, arrives in time to resuscitate the girl. The murderer proffers them the gold for a sip of water, hut the offer is spurned, and together the Indians watch him die.

THE FAMOUS SCOUT TO THE RESCUE (Aug. 8.)—In the days of the early colonization of the West there were hands of rangers who went to the assistance of any of the white pioneers who were attacked hy the Indians. The chief of one of these bands was the famous scout, who is so well known that he does not require naming. In this film he is called to the rescue of an encampment which has heen stormed hy the savages. The redmen succeed in capturing a young woman from the settlement, hut her lover effects her rescue and together they flee, with the Indians in close pursuit. The Indians are rapidly overtaking the struggling couple when the famous ranger, fulfilling his nohle mission, appears on the scene and the Indians are routed. The stirring action of the story does not lag, even for a moment.

THE BURGLAR'S WEIRD RECEPTION (Aug. 9.)—Burglars meet with some queer experiences. This tells of Slippery Steve, who finds it very simple to gain access to a house, but impossible to get out. The family at whose home he calls have evidently been expecting him, for they have equipped the rooms with every conceivable device for the punishment of an intruder. The burglar attempts to open the safe, but it retaliates with jets of water. He retreats toward the door which revolves in time to allow a mechanical guardian to deliver a well-placed kick. He takes refuge in a wash basket which closes upon him and deposits him, automatically, in a mechanical police station, where he is given a sound thrashing by a force of mechanical policemen. This film is the result of trick photography and is a mirth provoker of exceptional merit. On the same reel:

HOW A LETTER TRAVELS FROM THE GREAT LAKES OF CENTRAL AFRICA—Showing some of the obstacles which had to be overcome by the postal authorities before letters could be transmitted between the four corners of the earth. Interesting and instructive.

HERE AND THERE IN OREGON (Aug. 10.)—The camera takes you along the line of a new railroad which has just been completed at a dangerous altitude, showing, as it moves, the rugged beauty of nature unadorned in this rapidly growing region. There are numerous gigantic commercial projects disclosed which have been completed only after many almost insurmountable difficulties have been overcome by engineering genius. On the same reel:

KITTENS—A delightfully amusing picture, showing the family life of these domestic pets and the troubles of mother cat in her efforts to keep her little ones from getting into mischief.

TO THE MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS OF GREATOR NEW YORK

Gentlemen:

At the last convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees it was decided on the evening of the fourth day's proceeding and the Executive Board reports: That Local 35 be employed to reorganize the auxiliary and if they deem it necessary to have the services of an executive officer, it shall be granted them. This was carried as there were no objections.

Local 35 feels that in the past the auxiliary has not transacted their business for the best interests of the majority. Local 35 in their wisdom deem it advisable to reorganize the auxiliary and place it in a position whereby they can better their condition. It is the intention of Local 35 to have its own officers to conduct the business of a moving picture branch and thereby eliminate any possible controversies that have arisen in the past. This move we think the best for all the operators concerned. There will be many advantages gained by the operators by following the plan of Local 35, whose intention it is to elevate the moving picture operator.

The office of Local 35 will be open for the enrollment of members at 259 W. 42nd street, near 8th avenue, on and after Monday, July 29, 1912, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. daily.

All moving picture machine operators are invited to enroll as early as possible.

Yours fraternally,

F. BRENNER,
H. WILLIAMS,
H. DIGNAM,
J. MAGNOLIA,
C. HAYDEN,
G. DODD,
G. DURKIN,
J. S. CLARK,
} Executive Board.

FRANK BRENNER, Pres.
Attest: JNO. S. CLARK, Secy., 150 E. 14th street.

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported Especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Willson & Co., Patent Attorneys, 715 Eighth Street N. W., Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of Any of These Patents Will Be Forwarded to Any Person by Messrs. Willson & Co., On Receipt of Ten Cents. Persons Ordering Copies Must Give Number of Patent.

1,033,404. Photographic Printing Apparatus. W. C. Huebner, Buffalo, N. Y. Assignor to Heubner-Bleistein Patents Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

1,033,523. Photographic Camera. Carl Bornmann, Binghamton, N. Y. Assignor to Ansco Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

1.33,524. Photographic Shutter. Carl Bornmann, Binghamton, N. Y. Assignor to Ansco Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

1,033,524. Photographic Shutter. Carl Bornmann, Binghamton, N. Y. Assignor to Ansco Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

1,033,608. Vitascope. P. J. Mukautz, Kansas City, Mo.

1,033,772. Device for Developing Photographic Films. W. R. Inghram, Tucson, Ariz.

Jinks:—"Why, hello! Thought you was playin' leads down at the Doorknob studio!"

Binks:—"I was, but I ain't any more. I just exploded when I found th' director had me cast for a keg of powder in a Jooly 4th fillum."

MANAGER RODNEY C. DAVIS, OF PADUCAH, KY., POSTERS LITERARY TALENT IN THE CHILDREN

Manager Davis, of the Kozy, recently offered a complimentary ticket to the boy or girl writing the best short essay on the motion picture.

The first prize was awarded to Miss Irene Mayer, or 1106 South Fourth street.

Miss Mayer's paper is herewith reproduced:

"I am glad of the opportunity to say something in praise of the moving pictures. I think that they are the most entertaining and educational form of pleasure in the world. There can be no harm done by this form of entertainment, for the pictures must pass the board of censorship before they can be shown before the public. I used to see the words, 'This film has been passed by the board of censorship,' and did not know what it meant, so I asked my sister and she said that it resembled the board of health department, and that it refused to let any picture that could have a bad influence over people's minds, as the health department refuses to let anything run on that is likely to injure people's health. And moving pictures are so educational that they are now being introduced in public schools to teach all branches of science, history and travel, and even in churches they are steadily increasing in popularity. Just a word as to the popularity of the moving pictures. I think another reason for their popularity is that they vary so much in form and location. There are historical plays for the students, comedy to amuse all, tragedy for the active minds, drama for the sympathetic and devotion plays for the pious, so that no one can censure them by saying, "Oh, you see one you see all, for they are all alike.' As for the kind I like best, I can hardly say, for I am a high school student and am interested in history, geography and science, which I study. Of course, I am always glad to see a picture connected with the subjects. They afford such object lessons in teaching the manners and life of the people of the place and time. But for amusement, I believe I like the pictures of child life the best. I like to watch children act and like plays where they help their family out of trouble. I am still a lover of fairy tales and I think even grown up people like for a story to end, 'And they lived happily ever after.'

"Three pictures that I most care for are as follows:

"'Cinderella.'

"'The Thief.'

"'The Bad Man.'"

Members of the Melies Moving Picture Company have started on an extended tour of Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia, South Sea Islands, Java, China and Japan. There are sixteen persons in the party. The members of the company arranged their sailing date and itinerary through the agency of D. F. Robertson, manager of the steamship department of the Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank. They left Los Angeles July 22.

Frederick, Md.—The Marvel Theatre has been improved and opened a few days ago.

New York, N. Y.—I. C. Dalton will erect a moving picture theatre at 337 Grand street at a cost of $12,000.

Rochester, N. Y.—Work has begun on a picture theatre opposite the Rochester Athletic Club, in Clinton avenue north.

Baltimore, Md.—Architects Callis & Callis have finished plans for a moving picture theatre at 308 South Broadway for H. J. Keating.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.)	1000
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	1000
July 22—Indian Jealousy
July 24—How He Made Good
July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.)
July 29—It Pays to Wait (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. "101 Bison"

July 6—The Restoration (Dr.)
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)
July 3—His Nemesis
July 16—Snowhall and His Pal
July 30—An Even Break
Aug. 3—His Partner's Share

CHAMPION

July 8—The Gypsy Bride
July 15—The Call of the West
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy
July 22—The Call of the West
July 29—The Poisoners
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Rr.)

COMET

July 20—Her Indian Guardian (W. Dr.)	1000
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.)	1000
July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Sheriff Outwitted (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 10—Holdup in Buckeye Canyon (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)	1000

ECLAIR

July 21—Rizzio
July 23—The Governor's Daughter
July 25—The Double Cross
July 28—The Lady Barrister
July 30—A Brother's Jealousy
Aug. 1—Running for Congress
Aug. 4—The Price of Blood
Aug. 4—Beautiful Vintage Time
Aug. 6—Because of Bohbie
Aug. 8—Boys Again
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister
Aug. 11—Carlsbad
Aug. 13—Daddy (Com.)
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Egyptian Ruins
Aug. 20—Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry (Com.)
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Will (Dr.)
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day

GREAT NORTHERN

July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	694
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.)	305
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Dr.)	666
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000

GAUMONT

	Feet
July 30—Prison on the Cliff
July 30—The Isle of Marken
Aug. 1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug. 6—Androclus and the Lion
Aug. 8—A Phantom of the Night
Aug. 13—Dream Driven
July 23—The Silent Castle
July 25—Love's Floral Trihute
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 22—Graziella, The Gipsy
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels)

GEM

June 25—The Reason
July 2—The Medal of Honor
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters
July 30—Back to Her Own
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun

IMP

July 18—Winning the Latonia Derby
July 20—The Foreign Invasion
July 20—Building a Church in a Day
July 22—The Traitor's Fate
July 25—The Heart of a Gipsy
July 27—A Case of Dynamite
July 27—Love's Diary
July 29—Reunited by the Sea
Aug. 1—Adrift
Aug. 3—The Cure that Failed
Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago

ITALA

Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

LUX
By Prieur.

July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)	567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)	393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)	970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)	983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (W. Dr.)	580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)	272

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 17—Fur and Feathers (Com.)
July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Hustler (Dr.)
July 22—The Ranchman's Remedy
July 24—The Little Moonshiner
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill
July 31—The Obligation
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold
Aug. 7—Fatty of E. Z. Ranch (W. Com.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

July 3—The Coming Generation
July 5—Mates and Mis-Mates
July 10—Tangled
July 17—Getting Even
July 24—Bahy Sherlock
July 26—His Madonna
July 31—In the Sowing
July 31—The Rose Festival
Aug. 2—Dora

RELIANCE

	Feet
July 27—The Soldier Baby
July 31—Where There Is Soap There Is Hope
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels)
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers
Aug. 14—Order in the Court
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men

REPUBLIC

July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
July 29—A House Top Romance
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp

REX

July 18—The Hidden Light
July 21—When Love Rules
July 25—The Hand of Mystery
July 28—Through Memory Blank
Aug. 1—The Lash of Fate
Aug. 4—The Hour of Peril
Aug. 11—The Trouhadour's Triumph
Aug. 11—None Can Do More

SOLAX

July 24—Broken Oaths
July 26—The Requital
July 31—Bottles
Aug. 2—Buddy and His Dog
Aug. 7—The Little Rangers
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain
Aug. 16—The Strike

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 28—Cousins
July 30—Treasure Trove
Aug. 2—A New Cure for Divorces
Aug. 4—Story of "One of the Honor Squad"
Aug. 5—Baby Hands
Aug. 9—Old Dr. Judd
Aug. 11—Big Sister
Aug. 13—Now Watch the Professor
Aug. 16—The Wrecked Taxi

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr. 22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May 8—Through Trials to Victory	2500
May 20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

July 28—The New Policeman
July 30—The Mighty Hunter
Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.)
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl
Aug. 18—Toodles
Aug. 20—The New Butler

MILANO

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (Dr.)
July 20—The Triumph of Love (Myth.)
Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms
Aug. 10—Playthings of Fate

SHAMROCK

May 25—A Cold Reception
May 28—White Fawn
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTOR

July 12—In Swift Waters (Dr.)
July 19—The Players (Dr.)
Aug. 2—Taking a Chance

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEWMANN

BERLIN SW 68 Fruchstr. Berlin O. 17.

Annual subscription abroad 12 sh. Write for specimen copy.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,

la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.

Best advertising medium in North Europe.

Subscription 6 shillings.

Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

Feet

July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.).....
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.).....
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.).....
July 23—The Sands of Dee (Dr.).....
July 25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)....
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)..
July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.).....
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.)..
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.).....

CINES
C. Kleine

July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.).....1000
July 16—Disowned (Dr.) 1020
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.) 995
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.) 900
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)....1000
July 30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.).....1090
Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.)..... 640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)...
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)..... 903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.).....1067
Aug. 13—Mona Lisa in Disguise (Com.).... 600
Aug. 13—Vicovaro, Italy (Sc.)..... 400
Aug. 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Dr.).....1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Dr.)..... 963
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Com.)... 235
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Sc.)..... 290
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Com.)..... 450

EDISON

July 6—How the Boys Fougbt the Indians (Com.) 700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)..... 300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.).....1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.) 300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)..... 700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.).....1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)..... 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.) 400
July 19—Tbe Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves 1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.) 1000
July 23—Tbe Sketch with tbe Tbumb Print (Dr.) 1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.) 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.).1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.) 1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)... 300
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)..1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 14—Holding the Fort (Com.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.).....1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.).....1000
July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.)..1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.).....1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.).....1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.).....1000

Feet

July 23—The Understudy .....
July 25—Mr. 'Tibbs' Cinderella.....
July 26—Twins .....
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart.....
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.).1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress.....
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff.....

LUBIN

Aug. 2—Man Wanted (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)..
Aug. 5—A Prize Package.....
Aug. 7—The Sand Storm.....
Aug. 8—Buster in Nodland.....
Aug. 8—A Double Courtship.....
Aug. 9—A Fly Time.....
Aug. 10—The Missing Finger.....
Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw.....
Aug. 14—The Stubbornness of Youth.....
Aug 15—Baseball Industry.....
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm.....
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril.....
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Com.).....
Aug. 19—Won at Higb Tide (Com.).....
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)..
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)..
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.).....
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.).....
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.).....
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.).....

G. MELIES

July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.) .....
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny.....
Aug. 8—Tbe Ranger's Girls.....
Aug. 15—Romance at Catalina.....

PATHE FRERES

July 26—Over Monaco in a Hydro-Aeroplane (Travel) .....
July 27—For the Sake of tbe Papoose (Dr.)
July 29—Patbe's Weekly No. 31.....
July 29—Don Juan and Charles V. (Dr.)..
July 30—The Martyrs (Dr.).....
July 31—Anona's Baptism (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—In God's Care (W. Dr.).....
Aug. 1—A Little Trip in the Colorado Mountains (Travel) .....
Aug. 2—The Ligbtning Paper Hanger.....
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Travel) .....
Aug. 3—Memories (Dr.) .....
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly No. 32.....
Aug. 6—Death of Chevalier Albertini (Dr.).
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.) .....
Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.) .....
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa..
Aug. 10—Here and There in Oregon (Travel)
Aug. 10—Kittens .....

KALEM CO.

Feet

July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.).....1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)....
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting).....
July 22—The Thief (Dr.).....1000
July 24—Fantasca, The Gipsy (Dr.).....1000
July 29—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.).....1000
July 31—The Soldier Brothers of Susanna (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy.....1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Sc.)..
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 7—Freed from Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.)....1000

SELIG

July 18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting)....1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.).....1000
July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.).1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.).....1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.)...1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.).....
July 26—In Maorland (Edu.).....
July 29—The Three Valises (Dr.).....1000
July 30—The Peculiar Nature of the Wbite Man's Burden (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega.....
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Edu.) .....
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com., Dr.) 1000
Aug. 6—The Man from Dragon Land (Dr.).1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com., Dr.).....1000

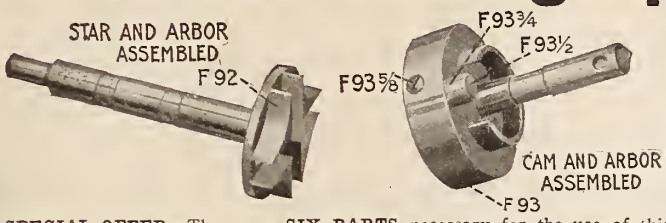
URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July 17—The Grandmotber (Dr.).....1050
July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.)..... 485
July 24—The French Army in Action (Mil.). 505
July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.) 1,000
Aug. 7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)..... 390
Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel) 220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.).. 390
Aug. 14—The Rivals (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities 300
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Ind.) 275
Aug. 21—A Day in the German Navy (Top.). 400

VITAGRAPH

July 22—Wanted a Sister.....1000
July 23—Tbe Adventure of the Thumb Print 1000
July 24—Martha's Rebellion 1000
July 26—The Barrier Tbat Was Burned....1000
July 27—The Light of St. Bernard.....1000
July 29—The Miracle 1000
July 30—A Juvenile Love Affair.....1000
July 31—The Adventure of a Retired Army Colonel 1000
Aug. 2—The Awakening of Jones (Com.)...1000
Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan 1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour.....1000
Aug. 7—The Cross-Roads 1000
Aug. 9—Wanted: A Grandmother.....1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan 1000
Aug. 12—Bunny and the Dogs..... 300
Aug. 12—Ingenuity 700
Aug. 13—The Heart of Esmeralda.....1000
Aug. 14—Vultures and Doves.....1000
Aug. 16—A Bogus Napoleon.....1000

Another Motiograph Improvement



HEAVIER BALANCE WHEELS

(ONLY for the 1912 Models)

Just the thing to hold down that Heavy Star and Cam on 1912 Models.

Easily fitted, either by yourself or by your operator. We send you all the parts necessary to make the change.

Your machine runs easier and will last longer with this improvement.

SPECIAL OFFER—There are SIX PARTS necessary for the use of this HEAVIER BALANCE WHEEL, having a value of Thirteen Dollars. Send us Your order accompanied by Draft, or Money Order, for only TEN DOLLARS, and we will send these six parts.

NOTE:—Your order will not be accepted unless accompanied by the number of the Motiograph mechanism for which these parts are wanted.

SEND TEN CENTS, in stamps, for THE LATEST MOTIOGRAPH HAND BOOK, which also includes complete instructions for operating and complete parts price list.

THE MOTIOGRAPH IS THE MACHINE OF QUALITY. It has the largest and heaviest ARC LAMP: the best and largest LAMP HOUSE: the most perfect Shutter, and contains more quality than any two machines of other makes. GET WISE.

Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

"THE FORTUNES OF WAR"
Nestor Military Drama August 5th

The New York Electric Railway Journal tells us the following: "Public Service Railway, Newark, N. J., has had a number of moving picture films made to show the right and the wrong way to board and alight from street cars and intends to use the pictures in the fall in the campaign of education in regard to safety which is being conducted with the co-operation of the public schools in the territory through which it operates."

A motion picture show becomes a theatre when a vaudeville performance is given in connection with the pictures is the ruling of Special Judge James A. Leathers, in Police Court at Indianapolis on July 9th. Judge Leathers assessed a fine of $5 and costs against Daniel P. Roberts, proprietor of a moving picture show. According to Judge Leathers the motion picture show proprietors who have vaudeville performances will be required to pay a regular theatre license of $100 a year.

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF

The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.

Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—ED. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

Abonnement 1 fr. pour le monde entier

CINEMA-REVUE

Journal indépendant d'Informations
Supplement mensuel à "Cinema"
Annuaire de la projection fixe et animée
Numéro spécimen sur demande
Bureau 118, rue d'Assas Paris

A gf A

Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

"IT HAS EXCEEDED MY FONDEST HOPES"

"It is a perfect piece of work and I am more than satisfied."—Thus writes Mr. Thomas A. Miller, purchaser of the Michigan state rights of

NAT C. GOODWIN

As FAGIN in the Great Five-Reel Production

OLIVER TWIST

If you are looking for a feature that will pay you, write or wire at once to

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SALE

Film $2.50 to $5 per reel. Celebrated Case, two reels, $40. Enoch Arden, two reels, $25. White Slave, three reels, $75. Four Dare Devils, three reels, $150. Life of Moses, $200. Passion Play, hand colored, $150. Lubin, Powers, Motiograph, Edison machines, new, $100. Used machines $35 up. Odd Slides 5c. Sets $1. Model B gas outfits $25.

FOR RENT

12000 feet films $12 weekly, one Shipment posters, and songs free.
Will buy films of any kinds.

H. DAVIS
WATERTOWN, WISCONSIN.

DO YOU WANT TO MAKE MOVING PICTURES?
We sell and rent moving picture cameras, printers and perforators, new or second-hand.
Educational films made, advertising films taken to order.
We rent cameras and camera men.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO., Inc.,
248 West 35th Street, N. Y. C.

LOCAL PICTURES MADE
10c Per Foot
Film Titles, Any Length, 3 Feet For 25c
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
199 Third Avenue, New York
Dept. A.

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES
WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY
From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. N Omaha, Neb.

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.
Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.
SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

HOORAY!

American Team Victorious. Tremendous enthusiam prevails.
Exhibitors: GET THIS FEATURE. It will double your receipts.
The only original, authentic and copyrighted views of the 1912

OLYMPIC GAMES AT STOCKHOLM

ALL THE EVENTS.
NOT NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS.

Set of 12 Colored Slides.....$6.00
Set of 16 Colored Slides..... 7.50
Set of 21 Colored Slides.....10.00

Colored Posters FREE. Advance Slide FREE.
Here's Some Real Money. Get It Quick.

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY,
20 East 14th St., New York.
1928 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago.
407 Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

Mackie-Flammer, Inc.

THEATRE BROKERS
Dealing in High Class Theatres
COMMERCIAL TRUST BUILDING,
1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication
Moving Picture News

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!
Every Exhibitor Can Do It.
Write Us To Show You How.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.
248 West 35th Street, New York.
We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN
Or THE YELLOW PERIL

A 3000-Foot Drama. Six styles lithographs, photos and heralds.

Exclusive Territory
NEW YORK FILM CO.
12 Union Sq. New York

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

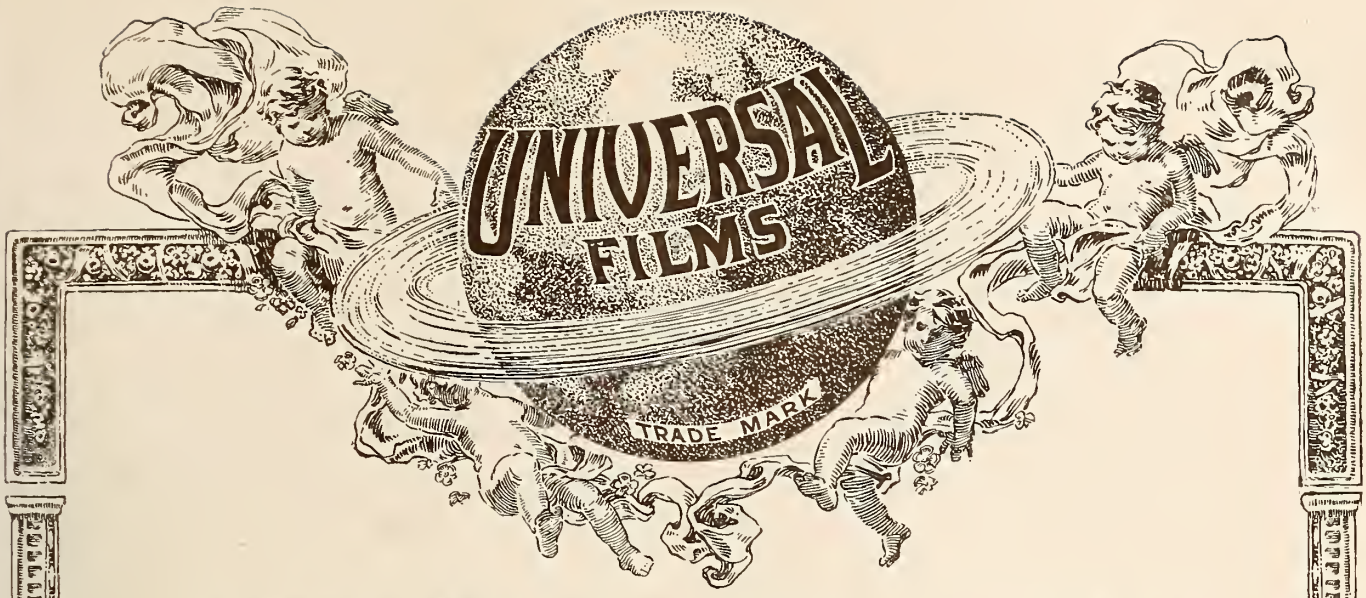
The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT.,
THE CLEVELAND LEADER,
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS
$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK



"DEMAND THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM"

MONDAY, AUGUST 5th

IMP
"The Hindoo's Prize"
A Thrilling Drama

NESTOR
"The Fortunes of War"
Enthralling Military Drama

CHAMPION
"What a Woman Will Do"
Meritorious and Pleasing

TUESDAY, AUGUST 6th

GEM
"'Neath the Homespun"
A Beautiful Drama

BISON
"A Western Girl's Dream"
Simply Delightful

ECLAIR
"Because of Bobby"
Brilliantly Humorous

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7th

POWERS
"As the Wind Blows"
A Positive Laugh Getter

NESTOR
"Fatty of E-Z Ranch"
Screamily Funny Western

THE ANIMATED WEEKLY
Intensely Interesting

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8th

REX
"The Troubadour's Triumph
Highly Artistic Drama

IMP
"Blood is Thicker Than Water"
Exceptionally Inspiring

ECLAIR
"Boys Again"
A Brilliant Comedy

FRIDAY, AUGUST 9th

VICTORS
"The Mill Buyers"
With Florence Lawrence

POWERS
"The Burglar and the Rose"
A Heart-Stirring Picture

NESTOR
"A Mexican Mix-Up"
A Real Western Thriller

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10th

BISON
"Her First Choice"
Vividly Pathetic

IMP
"Ferdie's Family Feud"
"How Jones Saw the Ball Game"
Two Rattling Good Comedies

MILANO
"The Playthings of Fate"
Two Reels—Powerful Plot—A Masterpiece

SUNDAY, AUGUST 11th

REX
"None Can Do More"
Thrilling and Exciting

ECLAIR
"The Foster Sister"
A Pretty Comedy-Drama

"Carlsbad"
Highly Interesting

Universal Film Manufacturing Co., 1 Union Square New York

Gaumont

Gaumont

1-3-8 SHEETS

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

The most spirited sensation of the season, barring none. See the desperate leap from the bridge onto the fast flying train beneath, the race on horseback, the dash for life across the river, the wreck, the fire of death.

Even Attacked By a Lion beaten to a frazzle and that's going some. Heralds—Pamphlets—Literature. Watch the trade papers for criticisms, etc. See the current issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

Tuesday, Aug. 13

GRAZIELLA THE GYPSY

Tuesday, Aug. 20

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

Thursday, Aug. 22

ANDROCLUS and THE LION

(Handcolored)

Scene from HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

Scene from A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER Sept. 5

Tuesday, Aug. 27

THE STORY OF CHOPIN

(Handcolored)

Thursday, Aug. 29

MARRIAGE ON THE RUN

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUNITY

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and 3 Sheets.—Lobby Displays—Photos—Cuts—Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3--Handcolored

The REFUGEE'S CASKET

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Distributors.

Gaumont

Gaumont

AUG 15 1912

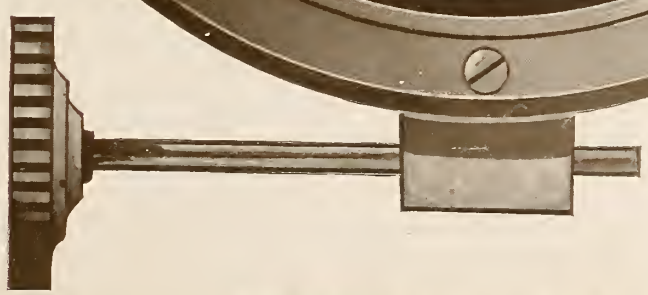
MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 6

AUGUST 10
1912

Exhibitors!

We offer you hearty good wishes for the success of the Chicago Convention



PRICE TEN CENTS

M. P. E. LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
Chicago, Ill.,
August 13-16, 1912.

AUG 13 1912

Results Count!!

EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE ENTHUSIASTICALLY
ENDORSING OUR EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

EXCHANGES CONSTANTLY INCREASING THEIR PURCHASES TO SUPPLY THE GROWING DEMAND

SO GREAT HAS BEEN OUR GROWTH THAT

OUR OUTPUT IS NOW MORE THAN DOUBLED

THERE IS AN OFFICE NEAR YOU

WE'LL TELL YOU WHO AND WHERE IF YOU WRITE US DIRECT

EVERY WEEK

MONDAY
AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR

TUESDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT

WEDNESDAY
AMERICAN, RELIANCE, SOLAX
GAUMONT WEEKLY

THURSDAY
AMERICAN, GAUMONT

FRIDAY
THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX

SATURDAY
GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET

SUNDAY
THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

Our Films Are Popular With the Public Because They Are Old Established Brands Therefore Well Known

WE HANDLE AND DISTRIBUTE EXCLUSIVELY

THE FAMOUS GAUMONT WEEKLY

PREVIOUSLY SOLD AND KNOWN AS THE "ANIMATED WEEKLY"

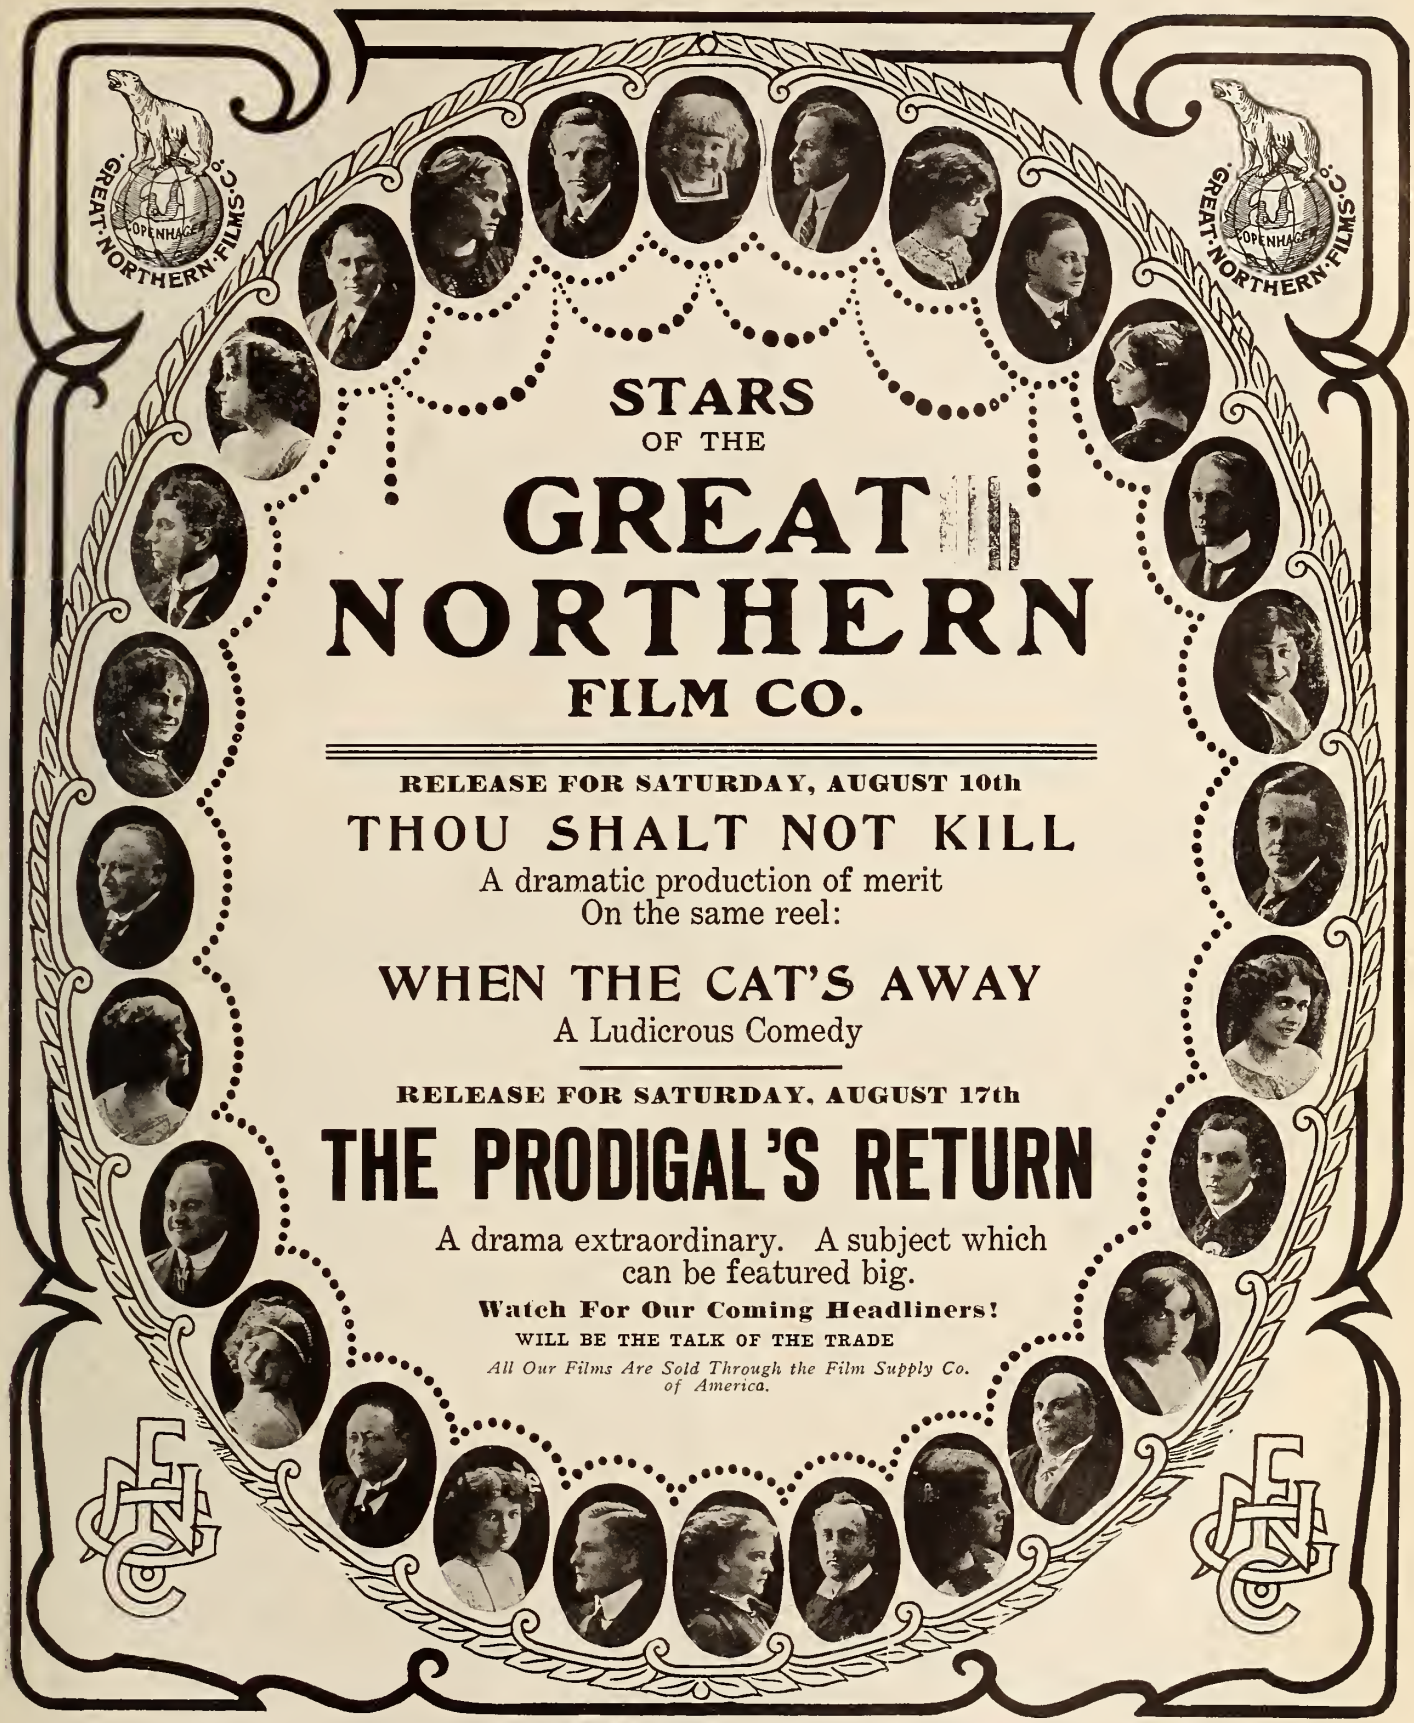
WE ARE SOLE AGENTS

FOR ALL THE ABOVE BRANDS

ADDRESS

FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA

133-135 West 44th Street NEW YORK



GREAT·NORTHERN·FILM'S·C°
COPENHAGEN
STARS
OF THE GREAT NORTHERN
FILM CO.
RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 10th
THOU SHALT NOT KILL
A dramatic production of merit
On the same reel:
WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY
A Ludicrous Comedy
RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 17th
THE PRODIGAL'S RETURN
A drama extraordinary. A subject which can be featured big.
Watch For Our Coming Headliners!
WILL BE THE TALK OF THE TRADE
All Our Films Are Sold Through the Film Supply Co. of America.

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20th

"WANTED; A WIFE IN A HURRY"

It rolls and rocks with laughter as the film comes reeling out.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22nd, 1912

"ROBIN HOOD"

In Three Parts

You can exhibit "ROBIN HOOD" without a fear of its failing to please. It will go over big. Take our word for it. You will won't you? Did we ever disappoint you on a feature release? And we never will!

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25th

"THE WILL"

Quite too many persons leaven the sorrow of death in anticipation of the deceased one's will. SEE THIS ONE.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 West 42d St., New York

EASTMAN motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ATTENTION

EXHIBITORS OF MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND, CONNECTICUT, MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE, AND VERMONT

The Famous Bison 101 Features are Now at Your Disposal Through

THE W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.

Don't Lose Any Time, But Write, Wire, or Call at Once for Open Dates

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Tel. Oxford { 3790 / 2187

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "Lucile" in two reels

"Lucile"

IN 2 REELS
TUESDAY, AUG. 27
A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

THANHOUSER "PERFECT PUBLICITY" FEATURE

PERFECT PUBLICITY

Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, O. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column) 40 cents cash apiece from STANDARD ENGRAVING CO., 560 7th AVE., NEW YORK CITY. Slides 30 cents apiece from NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 20 E. 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY.

RELEASED SUNDAY, AUG. 18

"As Others See Us"

And "Warner's Waxworks"

The first picture is a fairy story that is told only as the films, with their opportunities for trick work, can tell it. The cute little "Thanhouser Twins" are in it. "Warner's Waxworks" has a very odd plot. It is a novel production right through. You will want to repeat this very choice "split."

RELEASED TUESDAY, AUG. 20

"Her Darkest Hour"

The "Thanhouser twist" is getting to be as famous in film stories as the late O. Henry's "twist" was in magazine stories. This reel features the "twist." You think the wronged girl is going to do exactly as she DOESN'T and therein is the "twist." The girl emerges from "her darkest hour" in a way you'd never guess but will much applaud.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 23

"Conductor 786"

Here is a picturesque character and a TRUE one—the conductor who gets gray in the road's service and gets so accustomed to his job he just can't quit it. "786's" son tries to force him to quit, since said son has won money and social standing. Father can't be forced or persuaded, and his stubbornness holds your close attention.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name .....

Address .....

Exchange .....

Charles Reade's Great Story

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" In 2 Reels

"UNDINE," After the Famous Riverside Classic

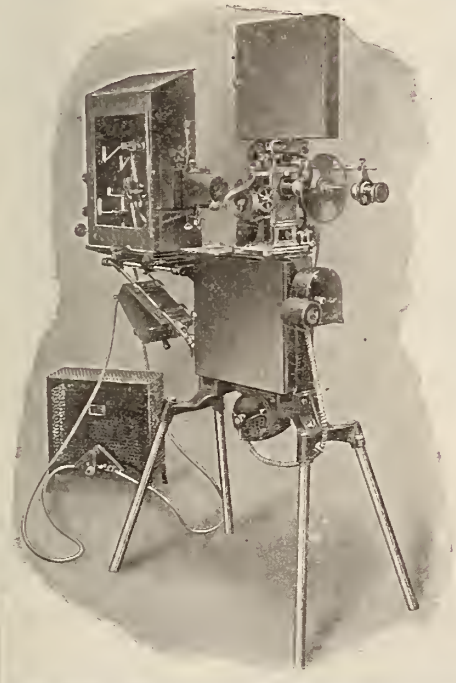
THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

POWER'S No. 6A



Will Be On Exhibition During the Convention in Room 1818 La Salle Hotel, Chicago

Be sure to see POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A with new Loop Setter, Motor Drive and other POWER'S improvements. THE MACHINE OF THE HOUR.

Interesting literature will be furnished, and you are cordially invited to call on us at any hour.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 Gold Street, New York City

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

Fort Lee, New Jersey

IS THE NEW HOME OF THE RISING SUN FILMS

$100,000.00 NEW FACTORY AND STUDIO

The Studio and Factory is the best equipped moving picture plant in The World. Planned by people with years of experience in the industry. The knowledge which experience has taught them has been used to advantage in the planning. Efficiency is the keynote of the new plant. Every film coming from the new plant will be a feature, for the facilities for good and big work are unlimited.

COMING

FEATURE RELEASE

The Equine Spy

TWO REELS

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 23rd, 1912

Featuring the most intelligent Horse in the World. The Horse with a

MILLION DOLLAR REPUTATION

DON THE HORSE THAT CAN DO EVERYTHING BUT TALK. THE HORSE WITH A $20,000 ANNUAL EARNING CAPACITY

ADVERTISING MATTER INCLUDES

One Sheets—Three Sheets—Special Photos—Lobby Displays and "Magnets."

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912

HIS DOUBLE

A Comedy dealing with the disturbance created by a young man who masquerades as a Count—his rival. His pranks put a household in a turmoil and incidentally win him a wife.

Solax Company FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI August 10, 1912 Number 6

M. A. NEFF

The President of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

M. A. Neff, we greet you. We offer to you our sincere congratulations on the manner in which you, as an individual man, have taken hold of a problem of national import and brought it to a successful issue, as seen to-day in National convention at Chicago.

We think a great tribute will be paid to you (a tribute that is heartfelt, sincere and honest) by your colleagues in their re-election of you to the National Presidency of the League. To you, sir, the industry owes a debt of gratitude, a debt that it would be impossible to pay in the coin of the realm, but in thanks, in respect, in honor, you stand supreme to-day in their hearts as the man who has accomplished great things. We have said in these columns that to all the sins of the Decalogue men may sometimes confess, but to the act of gratitude, this one great sin, he never confesses, and we feel sure that the exhibitors of the whole of the United States will never be accused of the sin of ingratitude towards their esteemed, well-beloved National M. P. League President, M. A. Neff.

When we look back to our writings upon the small beginnings of the Exhibitors' League we wished you joy. We told you that anything we could do, personally, or in our columns, to help you, in your efforts to elevate the motion picture industry, you could command us, and we do not go back on our word, but say you can still command our services by voice, or pen or printer's ink in our columns. We congratulate you most sincerely and heartily upon the magnificent results you have obtained among the exhibitors of the country. Look upon the list of State organizations, and with the officers of those leagues we congratulate you, and trust you will long be spared to act in a bold, fearless, uncompromising attitude in the uplift of the Art of Cinematography, and all voices at Chicago shall be raised in one glad hurrah for M. A. Neff.

THE COMING YEAR

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS expects great developments from the meeting next week, in Chicago, of the National League of Exhibitors. There is much to be accomplished at that convention; business of prime importance to be considered and transacted. The convention should not and will not be a mere pleasure junket and sight-seeing tour. It will be a conference of business men, with the good of the moving picture industry at heart, and a meeting to devise ways and means to promote that important industry and to thresh out some problems that are inimical to the moving picture theatre.

Exhibitors from every State in the Union are expected. In convention assembled they should and will reach a better understanding, and will take measures to safeguard their interests and at the same time acknowledge the rights of exchange man and manufacturer. Exhibitors should attend the convention with a determination to make every day count. They will assemble on important business connected with their livelihood and not purely to enjoy a round of festivities. The Moving Picture News is the exhibitors' friend. It is the News that has stood fearlessly for their rights, and we propose to continue that policy. We believe the Exhibitors' Leagues are becoming more and more influential and that the stand for the clean, uplifting picture is bearing results. A critical period has been reached in the organization affairs. Will the members of the various leagues continue to control their own destinies or will some coterie assume command? This question will be decided promptly by the re-election or defeat of President M. A. Neff, of Cincinnati. If Mr. Neff is re-elected president of the National League, the general welfare policy for both exhibitor and manufacturer will be fearlessly continued. If shrewd politicians are permitted to swing sentiment and Mr. Neff should be defeated for re-election as president and some nonentity assume the reins of government, then shall the power for good of the National League of Exhibitors begin to decline and fall.

But Mr. Neff will be unanimously re-elected president at Chicago. He has borne the brunt of the battle in the past; has guided the exhibitors' ship of state through stormy seas and is entitled to commendation for his arduous labors. That commendation will come only through Mr. Neff's selection again as president. If he is obliged to step down and out, no set of resolutions containing high-sounding but empty words could hide the fact from the country that the honest, fearless leadership of President Neff has been unappreciated in moving picture circles.

The only testimonial to give Mr. Neff is the testimonial of re-election as president. He is universally favored by the members of the State Leagues, and the pawns on the political checkerboard should be swept away and picture politics be relegated to the rear.

The sentiment that will be found in Chicago among League members will chagrin those who have plotted and planned to the League's detriment. There is no question as to Mr. Neff's re-election. It is unfortunate that the talent that has worked against him underhandedly for the past six months did not discover the fact a little sooner. Then these words could have been left unsaid.

The News is expecting to chronicle the details of important and business-like legislation at Chicago and believes that the convention will prove the hub for a wheel of future benefit and promise.

EUROPEAN CONFERENCE

Mr. Henry J. Brock, president and general manager of the Kinemacolor Company of America, sails for Europe next Saturday, August 10.

While abroad Mr. Brock will attend a meeting in London of all the Kinemacolor companies of the world. There will be present, besides Mr. Brock, representatives of the companies of Continental Europe, India, Australia and South America. This will be the most important conference of Kinemacolor interests ever held, and will mark a new era in the development of moving pictures in the colors of nature.

LEAGUE NOTES

The State of Louisiana was organized on July 28th, at a meeting held at Shreveport, La. Mr. E. V. Richards, Jr., was elected state president. Louisiana will send delegates to the Chicago convention. Mr. Richards is a firm believer in organization and is an active business man. He is manager of the Saenger and Palace theatres in Shreveport, La. Mr. Neff could not spare the time to go to Shreveport, but he has been in correspondence with Mr. Richards for some time and they arranged to bring Louisiana into the League. Mr. Richards deserves great credit for his activity and efficient work in organizing. Other exhibitors in Louisiana are arranging to come into the League and co-operate with Mr. Richards.

Mr. Warren Clay Scott, of Harriman, Tenn., manager Edisonia Theatre, is actively organizing Tennessee, and a meeting will be held in the near future, probably at Nashville, Tenn., where an organization will be perfected and a delegation sent to the Chicago convention. Mr. Neff has secured the co-operation of Mr. E. T. Peter, of Dallas, Tex. Mr. Neff is now in communication with the following gentlemen, all of Texas: J. C. Penn, McKinney, Tex.; J. H. Snively, Paris; R. A. Healy, Ft. Worth; Dalton Bros., Ft. Worth; J. J. Hegman, Temple, Besserer & Marshall, Austin; W. L. Terry, Waco; Mr. Lytle, San Antonio; J. C. Clemons, Beaumont; H. C. Stearns, Port Arthur; William Giebig, Houston; G. K. Jorgensen, Galveston, Tex.

Texas will be added to the list in the near future. Mr. Neff is also in correspondence with several other States which he expects to organize before the convention meets.

Every exhibitor in the United States and elsewhere, whether he be a member or not, is invited to attend the Chicago convention, which will be held at the La Salle Hotel, beginning August 13th. Every manufacturer and dealer in any article connected with our line of business is invited to be present at Chicago, and while only members of the League will be admitted to the executive sessions, however, there will be ample time and opportunity for all branches of the industry to get together.

ECLAIR FILM CO. OFFER TEN DOLLAR PRIZE

It has been announced by the Eclair Company that a prize of $10 will be offered by them every two weeks for the best letter or article on any phase of the motion picture industry. The article must not contain more than 750 words, and will be published in the Eclair Bulletin.

They also reserve the right to publish other letters which are not prize winners.

QUICK THREADING OF MACHINES

In an issue of The News of about a month ago we read that an operator had beaten all records by threading up, etc., in 19 seconds—from picture to picture. That was pretty smart, but now comes along another record, another doing the same operation in 14 seconds. Where are we going to stop? Does the manager want that speed? Is he looking for a quick change artist? Just think what he has to do in 14 seconds, or even 19. Something is very likely to go wrong after the 14 seconds—that is what the manager does not want. The old-time operator knows none of those tricks, but once he gets started, it's no fault of his if he has to stop.

With all due respect to Brother Eddie Bethel, of Jacksonville, who moves like greased lightning, is there nothing else in the profession you can use that wonderful brain to attain except speed? Of course, there is. Get busy, brother, and let us hear from you through The News. Perfecto not presto.

"MARRIAGE ON THE RUN"
One reel Gaumont release August 29th

THE RESURRECTION

(Masko Film Co.)

Undoubtedly one of the finest of modern motion picture productions is that one produced by the Masko Film Company, entitled "The Resurrection" in which Blanche Walsh, America's greatest emotional actress, has appeared.

"The Resurrection" is of peculiar moral significance. Its lesson for all women, and men, too, is a truth of priceless value. The story runs thus: Katusha, a Russian peasant girl, finds work in the employ of two elderly ladies of distinguished family. Prince Necladov, a relative of the family, comes to visit and takes a fancy to the serving girl. He steals every opportunity to be near her, pleading for her love. At last one night as he sits alone, he is overcome by a desire to be with her. Stealing to her bedroom door, he knocks. Katusha within is brushing her hair preparatory to retiring for the night. She opens the door, however, and the Prince, who has already won her heart, draws her forth and into his embrace, persuading her into a temptation to which at last she listens.

As is the case with an attraction between the lowly and the noble born, the Prince goes away and forgets her, and courts a young woman in his own station. Katusha's sin is found out by her employers, and when reproached by them she goes back to the home of her mother, where later her child is born, and where in a short time it dies.

Katusha, bereft of everything that she really cares for in all the world, leaves home to seek employment again. This time she falls into the hands of a woman who keeps a tavern of questionable repute. Katusha, with promises from the woman that her life will be one of luxury without work, throws off her peasant garb, takes only her last name, discarding her Christian name of Katusha, and is known in the new life only as Maslova, her name formerly being Katusha Maslova.

Here she lives a life of carousing and dissipation. One night when she is in a room alone drinking with the merchant, Smelkov, while she is sitting on his knee caressing him, with her back turned to the door, a woman of the house, who has no kind thoughts of either of them, puts an overdose of sleeping powder in a glass of wine and hands it to the merchant to drink, then hastily leaves the room. A few minutes more and the man is lying dead on the floor, with only Maslova in the room. The suspicion for his murder falls on her, and she is arrested and thrown in prison, where are a number of other miserable specimens of female humanity, who offer her drink to drown her troubles. With one of these women she fights a hand-to-hand fight, until drawn away by the keeper.

When Maslova is brought up for trial, it so happens that the Prince, her former lover, is doing duty on the jury. He recognizes her and is horrified and repentant. Seeking her in the prison, he wishes to save her but is spurned by her. However, beset with the idea that he must make atonement to the woman he wronged, he tells his fiancee that he is going to devote the remainder of his life to right a wrong, and forthwith follows Katusha to Siberia, traveling in company with the train of convicts being sent thither. A woman, one of those that were in prison with her, falls by the wayside leaving a little child, which Katusha takes in her arms and cherishes; for the awakening of her soul has begun back in the prison life. On arriving in Siberia she takes charge of the prison hospital, where she soothes the sick and dying. Meantime, the Prince returns to Russia to secure a pardon for Katusha; and it is when on his return to Siberia he shows her the pardon, and begs her to return to Russia with him, and she refuses him—when looking at the man she wavers, allows him to press her hand for a brief moment, and with a new light shining from her eyes, she turns her back on him and goes quietly but determinedly back into the sickroom—that the onlooker fully realizes the change that has taken place—the awakening of the soul of the woman—the resurrection.

It is a wonderful story in which Tolstoy struck a hidden key. "The Resurrection" is wonderfully produced—wonderfully acted.

Blanche Walsh was supported in the film production of "The Resurrection" by a number of Russian actors. The part of the Prince Necladov was played by Sidney Mason; the merchant, Smelkov, by a very clever actor named Dunaew, and the young woman assistant to the tavern keeper, by Carey Lee.

Herman Mason and Harry L. Kovar, the energetic partners in the Masko Film Co., are indeed to be congratulated upon the splendid artistic success of their initial production.

NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY LEAGUE MEMBERS GOING TO CHICAGO CONVENTION

A delegation of fifty New York exhibitors will leave on the Lackawanna Railroad with special car for the Chicago convention on Saturday at 10 a. m. This number will be augmented by twenty-two exhibitors from New Jersey.

Mr. Samuel Trigger, president of the Exhibitors' League of New York, states that stops will be made at Stanton, Binghamton and Buffalo to accommodate exhibitors from these cities who will accompany them, and there will be some mighty big efforts to bring the convention to New York next year.

SOLAX BANQUET POSTPONED

The banquet which the Solax Company purposed tendering to the press and other interested ones on the occasion of the opening of their new Fort Lee plant, and which was to be held on Friday evening, August 9th, will be postponed. The delay is owing to the contractors falling down on the electricity end of the job, and it will be some few days before the electricity can be turned on.

Notices of the new date will be sent out shortly.

POPULARITY OF CORCORAN DEVELOPING TANKS

The popularity of the Corcoran developing tanks has assumed such enormous dimensions that no up-to-date manufactory is any longer complete without this equipment.

Only recently the British American Film Manufacturing Co. of Montreal have had their plant equipped with Corcoran tanks. Kalem, Solax are the latest additions to the list of Corcoran patrons, and, in fact, most of the moving picture plants of importance in the country are "falling" for Corcoran tanks.

THE CLAPHAM SLIDES

The Rosenthal murder case, which has attracted world-wide attention by reason of the great scandal involving the New York Police, has been produced in a very interesting set of slides by A. J. Clapham, the pioneer maker of feature lecture slides. The set has been produced from original photographs supplied exclusively by the National Press Syndicate of New York. The lecture is proving a big seller. Mr. Clapham's ad will be found elsewhere on a page in this issue relative to the set.

Joliet, Ill.—The Joliet Theatre will be altered.

Nyack, N. Y.—The Lyceum Theatre has been leased to a Mr. Raabe.

Georgia, Miss.—Mr. F. A. Nennis has leased the Eaton Moving Picture Theatre.

Baltimore, Md.—A moving picture theatre will be erected on West Baltimore street by Pierce & Scheck.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Nippon and American Film Company has been incorporated at $50,000. Incorporators, T. H. Segawa, I. Noda, F. S. Marumata and H. Hasegawa.

Reading, Pa.—Fred Drexel, of 343 North Sixth street, and Allen W. McKently, of 911 North Fifth street, are erecting a moving picture house at the southwest corner of Tenth and Greenwich streets.

SOLAX POSTERS ATTRACTING ATTENTION

The following are copies of letters received from exhibitors relative to the new style of Solax posters. The letters are self-explanatory:

GRAND THEATRE
Everett, Wash., July 26, 1912.

Solax Company,
Flushing, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

I noticed in this weeks issue of the —— an article concerning criticisms on your new style of posters. Let me say my criticism—I think that your idea is far ahead of anything else in the line of lobby matter. I do not regard them in any way as being detrimental to the business simply because the scene is not taken from the film itself. If an exhibitor pays attention to every little Tom, Dick and Harry that can't see through a thing and grasp the real idea, he will soon be on the sliding scale downward.

You'd better not pay attention to adverse criticism but go ahead and give us more of the "swellest posters in the land."

Very truly,
(Signed) GRAND THEATRE,
Per J. V. Lynn.

* * * *

DITTMANN THEATRE
Brownsville, Tex., July 25, 1912.

The Moving Picture
New York City.

To the Editor:

I see on page 356 of the July 27th issue that the Solax Company is inviting criticism of its poster of "Fra Diavolo." I think, for the higher educated mind that the symbolic poster is an artistic drawing card, but for the average mind and for universal use it fails in its purpose as the majority of people who visit the moving pictures to-day want to see what they are going to see on the inside on the outside on the posters. The only way to do this is to show several scenes that show action of themselves on the posters. The scene on the opposite page convey the right idea of the "King's Power."

A one-scene litho often gives no idea of the film subject. It may often be taken from the main scene of the subject but it falls flat and is not understood until after the picture has been seen. Therefore a great many people will look at the posters more carefully and enjoy them on leaving the theatre after having seen the pictures. If a poster or litho is symbolic or does not show any scenes of the picture it attracts no attention afterwards, or is condemned as not being shown on the picture. Therefore give us posters with several important scenes with a line of explanation underneath and we will all be interested to see it on the screen.

(Signed) A. DITTMANN.

JACOB GENTER

The Newburgh Telegram, in commenting on Jacob Genter, the manufacturer of the mirroroid screen, says: "Manager Jake Genter, of the Imperial Theatre, has established a big business in this particular form of modern public entertainment, and as a side line manufactures the only curtain known in the moving picture profession that will project in daylight. Mr. Genter is turning out the curtains in large quantities and has orders booked from all parts of the country. He even ships into South America and various banana republics where civilization and moving pictures have followed the flag. The firm was originally Benjamin & Genter, but recently the present owner took over his partner's interests and is now sole proprietor. Jake has made money from the start and personally paid for such alterations as were necessary to make the premises he now occupies suitable for a moving picture house. He came to Newburgh with comparatively little money, and through personal enterprise has managed to build up a business that has produced pleasing results, notwithstanding brisk opposition and trade depression."

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Alice Lafflin and Edward J. Lyons will run the Majestic Theatre.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FILM MERITS

Thanhouser

The Thanhouser release for August 11th, "Big Sister," is interesting to the philanthropist, and it is educational. This film will be welcomed by audiences outside of New York, because it takes them through the East Side slums. An interesting little romance is woven into a tale of East Side children, which is the outcome of the taking of the children to the seashore by the Sea Breeze Society. This film follows the little ones from their homes to the seaside; shows them playing, bathing, eating, etc.

"The Wrecked Taxi" for August 16th is also an excellent production, but lacks the merits of the former. It has a few hurry spots, and one or two inconsistencies.

"Now Watch the Professor!" for August 13th, is an excellent comedy-drama which grips the interest of the audience from start to finish.

Gaumont

"Graziella, the Gipsy," August 13th, is a production of special artistic merit. The story is good, with a solid plot and full to the brim with human interest.

This week's issue of Gaumont Weekly holds many interesting events such as "Saint Cloud's Balloon Races," "Imperial Festival at Moscow," "Another Zeppelin Balloon Explodes," "Summer Resort Gowns, Paris," "Our Darlings Burn" (fire scene); "A Bad Tumble at Long Branch" (hurdle races); "A Week of Water Sports," "Larchmont Regatta," "Largest Freighter on Great Lakes," and, last but not least, a bird's eye view of a baseball field with the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs in the game.

American

"The Bad Man and the Ranger" for August 14th, and "The Girl and the Gun" for August 8th, are both meritorious Americans with as much variety as it is possible for the hackneyed "Western" to have.

Vitagraph

"The Adventure of a Retired Army Colonel," released July 31st, and with Maurice Costello in the lead, is a detective story with no offensive jar. A strong story, capable players and a careful production make this film worth while in any theatre.

Edison

"When She Was About Sixteen" is an excellent comedy-drama with many a good laugh and abundance of interesting incident.

Seelig

"The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden" is a film of passing interest. It is a Western story which deals with the subject of retailing liquor to the Indians.

Lux

"The Mysterious Flowers," for August 2d, is one of the best Lux films of recent release. The story is thoroughly possible—the locations chosen and the scenic effects brought into play are intensely pleasing to the eye.

The same cannot, however, be said of "The Postman's Escapade," which is much too foolish and meaningless for words.

"A Race for Liberty" for August 8th is a "Western" which has its good points, although some of the achievements are too easily accomplished to be thoroughly convincing. Nevertheless, this is a passing good film.

Reliance

"Philip Steele," Reliance two-reel release for August 22d, is a story of the Canadian Northwest. For a two-reel subject this film is not what we could wish. The story, though it might find favor with the masses, has too many bullets in its make-up, too much roughhouse and gruesomeness, and too little suggestion of the noblest instincts of life to merit favorable comment.

KLEINE'S UNUSUAL PROGRAM FOR WEEK ENDING AUGUST 24th

With a Cines drama with an unusual plot; a three-subject Eclipse, embracing topical, industrial and scientific features, and a split-reel of Cines comedies, George Kleine is equipped to offer an unusually interesting program for the week ending August 24th.

For Tuesday, August 20th, "A Matter of Pride" shows Mlle. Xavier de Leka, the popular Cines leading woman, in a splendid role. Mary Furlai and other Cines players are also seen to good advantage in this interesting drama.

The Eclipse three-subject reel for Wednesday, August 21st, consists of "A Day with the German Navy," showing a splendid series of intimate views of a fleet of the Kaiser's great fighting ships; an industrial film taking us through the "Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec" and depicting in a vivid manner the process of turning logs into fine stationery. The third subject on this reel is "Microscopical Curiosities," showing in magnified form how insects, bugs, and other forms of life appear when enlarged under a powerful lens.

The Cines for Saturday, August 24th, contains two snappy farce comedies, "A Picture C. O. D." and "Jenkins, the Watchman," and also a beautiful scenic subject showing panoramic views of "Modern Naples."

AMERICAN NOTES FROM THEIR CAMP AT STARVED ROCK, ILL.

Jack Nelson, one of the American's leading men encamped with the "Flying A" forces at Starved Rock, Ill., in company with Carl Von Schiller, another member of the company, bear the unique distinction of being the third and fourth men on record who have ever succeeded in swimming across the Illinois River at Starved Rock.

Miss Olive Pringle and Miss Lillian Herbert are two other "Flying A" favorites who covered themselves with glory at the rock last week. Miss Pringle, on a wager, climbed the front of the giant pile, thus breaking all local traditions, and affording some thrills to the thousands of resorters who watched the perilous climb. She made a second trip, accompanied by Miss Herbert.

B. C. Fischer, playing a treacherous Indian lover, has a difficult fall to make from a high ledge into the river. Screwing his courage to the sticking point, Fischer made a pretty fall.

His splash was followed by a loud bellow of rage from camera-man Jack Gill, who announced that his camera had bucked. His bellow was a mere whisper in comparison with what issued from behind the rock when the struggling figure in the water heard the news.

S. Richards, publisher of the Ottawa Journal, and state superintendent of the Starved Rock Reservation, telephoned to the camp that he would arrive early in the afternoon for an inspection of the camp with Joy Morton, multi-millionaire salt magnate, and Governor Charles S. Deneen, of Illinois. However, the Governor failed to show up. Camera-man Jack Gill turned the camera on Richards, thinking him the Governor, and ground out some 125 feet of film in a state of high excitement, until some knowing one exclaimed, "Wake up, Jack, for the love of Mike, that ain't the Governor."

The company of the American Film Manufacturing Co. encamped at Starved Rock, Ill., last week finished a big two-reel subject entitled "The Story of Starved Rock." This excellent record is the result of producer Emerson having his company about him, and the further fact that clouds are scarce in that neighborhood.

The big hotel which lies at the base of the great Rock on which the company is encamped, accommodated thousands of visitors daily, all of whom make their way, sooner or later, to Camp Hutchinson. Among the visitors last week was the Cook County Press Association, who poured their hundreds of members throughout the camp. Governor Deneen was scheduled for a visit but did not appear, although the party, including Joy Morton, the salt magnate, and parties from visiting lodges, business associations, etc., kept Producer Emerson busy during his spare moments.

Mr. Emerson has the camp under military rule, with a corps of sentries night and day on duty. About sixty members occupying some forty-two tents, arranged in two long rows, with all men clad in khaki uniforms and all women in khaki riding costumes, make a pretty picture. Two forty-foot flagpoles, one at either end of the camp, waving the American flag with "Flying A" ensigns beneath them, mark the two extremities. A large office tent, equipped with telephones, desks, etc., marks one boundary, while a big mess tent with cooks' galley, marks the other. Everything that might add comfort, from a medicine cabinet to a mammoth cooking range, with four cooks, has been installed.

The company will probably occupy their present quarters for a period of ten weeks.

IMAGINATION

By VIRGINIA WEST

(Adapted from Solax release)

THE weather was very hot. Mrs. Dobbs was very thin and nervous and the heat troubled her greatly. She went from room to room, removing one garment after the other in a frantic effort to get cool. "I'm so temperamental," she said to a neighbor, leaning from a back window, "that's what makes me so restless. I ought to have been an actress or a musician or some kind of an artist so that I could work off my temperament. But I got married and Mr. Dobbs doesn't seem to appreciate it at all. I tell him not every man has a temperamental wife and he says 'No.'"

"Perhaps it's nerves, Mrs. Dobbs," said the next door neighbor.

"Yes, oh yes, of course," was the reply. "Of course I'm nervous but you see that is because I'm so temperamental. You see, the nervousness comes because I have no outlet for my natural artistic sense."

"I see," said the neighbor.

"You know," continued Mrs. Dobbs, "the heat is simply killing me. Sometimes I think I'll not be able to live through the day. I do nothing but roam around the house."

"Did you every try working at something?" asked the lady next door.

"Oh, my goodness!" exclaimed Mrs. Dobbs, "why it would kill me. I wouldn't live an hour."

"Well, you know if you are thinking aout something else you couldn't be thinking about the weather."

Mrs. Dobbs looked pained but said nothing.

The neighbor smiled to herself. "You are coolly dressed, aren't you?" she asked.

"Heavens! I've taken off everything I can," said Mrs. Dobbs, "excepting my teeth. Sometimes I think I'm cooler if I remove them."

"Surely your teeth are not false!" exclaimed the neighbor.

"Only my four lower ones," said Mrs. Dobbs, reluctantly. "I supposed you knew."

"No, I didn't know."

"I wouldn't have told you if I had known that," said Mrs. Dobbs. "I'm going to see if I can't take a nap," she continued. "Perhaps I'll forget the heat."

As she left the window her neighbor called after her, "Mrs. Dobbs, don't swallow your teeth. I read in the paper this morning about a woman who did."

"Oh, my heavens!" cried Mrs. Dobbs, "do give me the paper to read. I am so nervous."

"Wait a minute, I'll get it and throw it over."

The lady left the window hastily and returned in a minute with the paper which she threw across to Mrs. Dobbs.

Mrs. Dobbs nervously ran down the hall and into her sitting room. She searched diligently for the tooth-swallowing article and having found it, threw herself upon the couch to read it.

"Woman Swallows False Teeth in Sleep," read Mrs. Dobbs. "How terrible!" she exclaimed. "I shall never go to sleep with mine in. Not even for a minute. Goodness, let me read something else to make me forget that."

So Mrs. Dobbs straightway turned to the society column and began freeing her mind.

Whether the society news was soothing, or whether the afternoon was sleep-producing, one does not know, but very soon Mrs. Dobbs' muscles relaxed and the paper fell to the floor. The rustle half-wakened her and she realized she was about to drop into slumber. She sleepily raised her hand to her mouth and in a moment laid upon the floor her four false teeth.

Long and placidly slept Mrs. Dobbs, and she knew nothing of what was going on around her.

At last, when the late afternoon came and Morpheus lessened his influence over the reclining lady, she stirred, and having stirred, she gradually awoke. When full consciousness returned, Mrs. Dobbs' tongue instinctively sought the vacant space in her lower jaw.

"Oh," she cried, "my teeth!" Then more calmly, "I guess I took them out."

She looked down on the floor beside the couch. She did not see the teeth. Nervously she ran her hand along the floor under the edge of the couch. She felt no teeth. In a moment Mrs. Dobbs was going excitedly to her knees and searching the shadows for the lost teeth. They were nowhere to be seen.

Frantically Mrs. Dobbs sprang to her feet and rushed around. Table, bookcase, mantel, every piece of furniture was searched, but alas, the teeth were not found. Poor Mrs. Dobbs sank limply upon a chair. "I'm afraid it's true,' she gasped, "I must have only dreamed that I took them out. What shall I do, what shall I do? I'll call for help. I cannot die alone. Oh!" Mrs. Dobbs' hands were quickly clasped at her waistline.

With a wild look she sprang up and rushed from the room and along the hall to a back window. "Help! help!" she screamed, falling across the window sill.

"What in the world is the matter, Mrs. Dobbs?" called the next door neighbor.

"Come over—quick—I've—I'm——"

The neighbor waited for no more. In a few minutes she was at Mrs. Dobbs' side. "What is the matter?" she demanded.

"I've—I've swallowed my teeth," wailed Mrs. Dobbs. "I'm dying, get the doctor—quick."

The neighbor ran to the telephone.

"Is this Doctor Carver?" she asked in a moment.

"Come up, Doctor, at once to Mrs. Lee Dobbs'. She's very ill—she says she has swallowed her false teeth. What?—Oh, how many? I don't know, wait a minute and I'll find out—How many teeth, Mrs. Dobbs?"

"What?"

"How many teeth did you swallow? The doctor wants to know."

"Four," groaned Mrs. Dobbs.

"Hello! That you, Doctor?—She says 'four'—What—Oh, I'll ask. Where are they, Mrs. Dobbs?"

"Where are they? wailed the woman almost hysterically.

"Yes, the Doctor wants to know where the teeth are?"

"I told him I swallowed them. You don't think I want the doctor to get them off the table for me, do you?" Mrs. Dobbs was pacing the floor and wringing her hands.

"But he wants to know what part of your anatomy they are in," insisted the neighbor.

"They're in my stomach and they'll never get out, for I'm going to die. Tell him I'm dying.

"Hello, Doctor," called the lady again, "she says they are in her stomach—yes, stomach."

"Oh, do hurry."

"She wants you to come at once and get them. All right. Good-bye."

"Now, my dear," said Mrs. Dobbs' nextdoor neighbor, "you must compose yourself until the doctor comes. If the teeth are in your stomach, moving about might make them irritate the walls."

"If they are in my stomach!" exclaimed Mrs. Dobbs, indignantly. If they are in my stomach! You know they are in my stomach. I told you I swallowed them and they didn't stick anywhere."

"Well, now, compose yourself. Perhaps everything will be all right," said the lady soothingly.

"Yes! Everything will be all right after I have had a hole cut in my stomach!" wept Mrs. Dobbs.

"Maybe he won't have to cut," suggested the neighbor.

"Not have to cut!" cried Mrs. Dobbs, "How could he get the teeth if he didn't cut, I'd like to know."

The neighbor lady was silent for a moment. She felt almost at the end of her rope.

"Do you know any way?" insisted Mrs. Dobbs between groans.

"Why—er—a— he might—a—sort of—fish for them, couldn't he?"

A groan trailed off into a grunt of disgust, and there is no telling what would have happened if at that moment Dr. Carver had not been coming up the stairs.

Mrs. Dobbs redoubled her groans.

"Are you really in such pain?" asked the doctor.

"Oh, Doctor, I shall surely die!"

"Why, lots of people get through operations alive, Mrs. Dobbs."

"But my temperament, Doctor; my temperament."

"Maybe I can help that, too." Turning to Mrs. Dobbs' neighbor he said: "Please tell my assistant and the nurse to come up."

In a very short time all preparations had been made for an operation.

Mrs. Dobbs, pale and frightened, lay upon a bed. The nurse was taking her pulse, and the doctor stood consulting at the far side of the room. At the bottom of the bed stood the neighbor, on her face an almost unfathomable expression.

She went to Dr. Carver and touched him on the arm. "Are you really going to operate, Doctor?" she asked.

"Yes; there is no other hope."

"Well, wait a few minutes, please, until Mrs. Dobbs sees her little girl."

"Mrs. Dobbs," said the neighbor, "wouldn't you like to see your little girl for a moment?"

"Yes, please," came faintly from the bed.

The child was found and brought to the bedside of her mother.

"Poor mamma is sick," said the neighbor; she swallowed her false teeth and the doctor is going to cut them out."

"Oh, no!" cried the child. "Mamma's teeth aren't in her. I'll get them." In a moment she was out of the room and back again. "Here they are. I hid them so I could mark Mary's pies. Now you won't have to cut open my mamma."

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported Especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Wilson & Co., Patent Attorneys, 715 Eighth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of Any of These Patents Will Be Forwarded to Any Person by Messrs. Willson & Co. on receipt of ten cents. Persons Ordering Copies Must Give Number of Patent.

1,033,834. Magazine Plate Holder for Cameras. J. P. Shukis, Wilkes Barre, Pa.

1,034,006. Motion Picture Machine. W. B. Featherstone, Washington, D. C. Assignor to H. S. Warren, Detroit, Mich.

1,034,045. Photographic Camera. G. W. Topliff and Carl Bornmann, Binghampton, N. Y. Assignors to Anso Company, Binghampton, N. Y.

1,034,114. Dustproof and Fireproof Receptacle for Moving Picture Films. Charles James, Cambridge, Ohio. Assignor to W. N. Bradford and G. D. Nicholson, Cambridge, Ohio.

1,034,192. Process of Producing Kinematograph Films. B. K. Brown and Theo. Brown, Brixton, London, Eng. Assignors to Charles Urban, London, Eng.

"WANTED—A WIFE IN A HURRY"

Eclair, August 20

Eclair's "Wanted—A Wife in a Hurry" comes as a sort of relief after so many, many of the plays of female impersonators wherein our credulity is taxed to its uttermost to believe that a man "could get away with it."

In this clever little comedy there is the female impersonation, but it doesn't even hint at belief. Fred Norton, a young clubman by the grace of his aunt's splendid money allowance, is told to get married or suffer the cutting off of his allowance. He neglects her warning and then receives a letter telling of her coming on a visit. Norton tries to steal a girl to marry, but fails. Then occurs the idea of his friend Baxter, a young married man, impersonating a woman for his wife.

Baxter, under much persuasion, finally agrees and gowns himself in his wife's best and manages to get to Norton's house. Then his (Baxter's part is played by George Larkin and well played, too) wife returns and, believing she has been robbed, telephones for the police. Then there is excitement until her husband is captured.

Then to stop it all Norton receives a wire from his aunt, saying she is not coming on her visit, after all.

ECLAIR NOTES

A detachment of the Eclair Stock Company, augmented by extras under the generalship of Mr. Arnaud, left Wednesday, the 7th, to lay siege to Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. They wouldn't disclose their exact purpose more than to say, "Wait till you see the resulting two reels." Miss Tennant, Mr. Johnstone and George Larkin are the stock members who accompany Mr. Arnaud.

Mr. Richard Sterling has been appointed manager of the Eclair studio proper. Hereafter he will be in full charge of engaging actors, costuming and the general details of negative productions. A good man, too.

Little Clara Horton has engaged with the Eclair Stock Company. Little Miss Horton is one of the best of child actresses, besides possessing a face of unusual childish beauty.

Omaha, Neb.—Brandeis & Sons will build a moving picture show on Douglas street, west of 18th street.

Coatesville, Pa.—W. L. W. Jones will erect an aerdrome here.

Santa Rosa, Calif.—The Elite Picture House, Ball & McDannel, proprietors, reopened.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—I. J. Rosenstein, of 3d avenue and Sixteenth Street, will build a moving picture theatre at the Southwest corner Fort Hamilton avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, at a cost of $12,000.

SCENE FROM ROBIN HOOD
Eclair Coming Release

MR. OSCAR APFEL PUTS ON SPECIAL FEATURE SUBJECTS AT RELIANCE

The Reliance Motion Picture Company have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Oscar Apfel on the producing end of their special feature subjects.

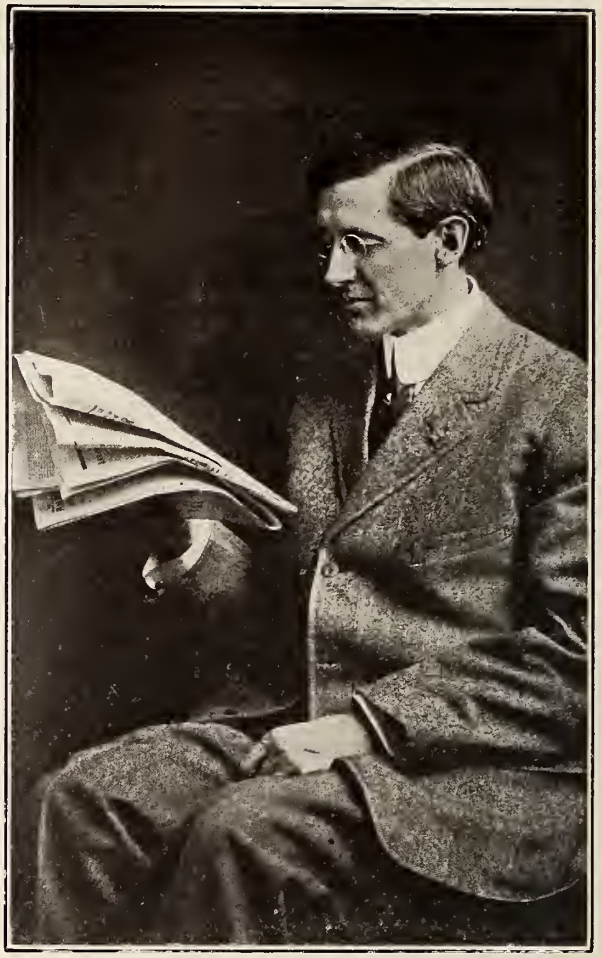
Mr. Apfel was for about two years director for the Edison Company. While with them he produced the following notable productions: "Martin Chuzzlewit," "Corsican Brothers," "The Passerby," "Aida," "The Black Arrow," and also their historical series.

He was stage director with the following companies: Chicago Opera House, Lyric Theatre, Minneapolis; Davis Stock, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Rochester, and others.

The following from the Electrical Review, Chicago, Ill., may be of sufficient importance to be worthy of consideration:

"The effect produced upon an audience at a moving picture show when a glare of light is suddenly thrust into the line of vision is anything else than pleasing, and therefore not conducive to a desire on the part of people thus afflicted to frequent a place where this occurs. Moreover, microbes may reasonably be expected to increase and multiply beneath the seats of moving picture houses where there is not the proper sort of illumination to insure that the floor will at all times be kept fairly clean.

"The installation of low-candle-power lamps beneath the seats in theatres of the kind in question would greatly promote comfort, convenience and cleanliness. The light would not interfere with the pictures, and people could see how to come and go without the necessity of other lights being turned on, and without stepping on the feet of others. It would also be a strong incentive to cleanliness. 'Out of sight' and 'out of mind' are synonymous terms in the ordinary code of sanitation. Let the floor be lighted in the manner suggested, and microbes will vanish, for both managers and scrubwomen have eyes. And then, too, it is not ethical to spit where the filthy effect produced is readily discernible. G. W. Barlow."



RALPH P. STODDARD.

A Newspaper Man Who Has Done Much to Promote the Success of Moving Pictures—Conducts an Interesting Featureplay Page.

Ralph P. Stoddard, editor of the pictureplay page of the Cleveland Sunday Leader, has done much to promote the welfare of the moving picture and has been no small factor in the successful attempt to counteract attacks on the industry which have appeared in newspaper circles from time to time. In the past, Mr. Stoddard has worked on newspapers in New York state and was also a theatrical manager for the O. S. Hathaway circuit. He was one of the very first in New York state to put five-cent picture shows in "regular" theatres on "dark" nights and made a big success of it in Oneonta, and elsewhere. Every "regular" theatre practically, in the country, does it now. Mr. Stoddard had the first moving picture camera in New York state outside of New York city, and took local pictures for exhibition in his theatres. His featureplay page in the Leader was one of the first of its kind in the country.

Mr. Stoddard is a successful pictureplay author, has written a text-book on the subject that has commanded a large sale, and other than editing the successful page in the Leader, Mr. Stoddard acts as assistant to W. E. Sage, the noted theatrical critic during the regular theatrical season.

Personally, Mr. Stoddard is an engaging gentleman and he believes there is a great future in store for cinematography. W. L. W.

Lancaster, N. H.—The moving picture theatre opened here.

Baltimore, Md.—The Majestic Theatre, 320 S. Broadway, was completely renovated.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The new theatre being erected on Jefferson avenue is rapidly nearing completion.

CONSTRUCTION OF A MOVING PICTURE BOOTH

By A. J. Schmittner

(By courtesy of the Sheet Metal Shop, who also provide the illustrations)

THE recent great popularity of moving picture exhibitions calls for the services of the sheet metal worker in the construction of suitable booths in which to operate the instruments for producing the pictures. The necessity for the use of metal in their construction lies in the fact that when the film is run slowly through the machine it is liable to, and sometimes does, take fire, thus endangering not only the property but the lives of the assembled audience.

To eliminate this danger the fire underwriters have enacted laws to the effect that a substantial sheet metal or asbestos housing be constructed around the instruments used for projecting the pictures, so that when the film does catch fire the operator can, in an instant, drop all shutters and doors, which will prevent the fire from spreading, and as soon as the films are consumed the fire will die for want of fuel. This occasionally happens without the audience knowing what has occurred until the cause of the delay is announced.

A design for a booth that has stood the test, and has caused the mechanics and fire underwriters of certain states considerable studying and experimenting, is shown in the accompanying illustrations. As will be seen, the framework of the structure is of angle iron. The galvanized iron that surrounds it is not to be lighter than No. 24 gauge. Angle irons 1⅛"×1⅛"×⅛" or 3/16" is usually heavy enough for ordinary size booths of 6′ to 8′ in length, 5′ to 7′ in width and about 6′ in height. A booth of this size will accommodate two machines—the machine for operating the films and the stereopticon proper—and still leave ample room for shelving, cabinets, etc. The contractor for such a booth must make it to a size that will permit its being easily placed in its required position.

Having determined the extreme dimensions of the booth, it is advisable to always construct it from a half to three-quarters of an inch smaller in all directions so there will be no trouble in sliding it to place. In beginning the framework, punch a bolt hole at the center of the stud as at D, Fig. 1, by which to fasten the brace, and divide the spaces on each side into three equal parts each, locating the position of holes for rivets as shown at e, f, g and h, i, j. In putting together, see that all braces are turned alike and also that all studs are turned the same way, as shown upon the plan in Fig. 2, as when so placed the inside of the booth has a simple and uniform appearance. The corner posts are punched the same as the studs except that both flanges are punched.

Our next attention should be given to the door, making it to the desired height and width. When the booth is more than 6′ high an extra stay, or brace, shown at L, must be figured on. The framing of the door is shown in Fig. 3, while the method for riveting the different parts together is better illustrated in Fig. 4, where one flange is sawed out about 2½" or 3" deep and the holes punched as shown in the dotted portion M, which is afterwards bent at right angles in the vise as shown at N. Holes for the hinges at Q and for the double acting spring at T in Fig. 1, and for the handle at R of Fig. 2 may also be punched. In case there is not sufficient space to fasten the spring, an angle iron may be riveted to the stud. The braces for the sides, ends and top are all identically the same in form as the one shown in Fig. 4. How these are fastened to the studs is better shown in Fig. 5, which shows a brace bolted to two studs.

The next step is to provide small sliding doors with their frames as shown at S, T and U in Fig. 1. The center door S, is for the lantern, while the door T is to permit the operator to see through while focusing the instrument. The door U is not required except where two machines are in use. The sliding frames for these doors may be constructed in two different ways; but the section shown in Fig. 6 affords the least resistance for the center door. This is constructed by using two different widths of angle iron, say 1⅛" and ¾". They can be cut to their required lengths, then fitted and punched so the door, which is usually made of No. 16 or 18 gauge iron, will work freely. The holes in the angle iron which is to be riveted to the sheet metal should also be countersunk.

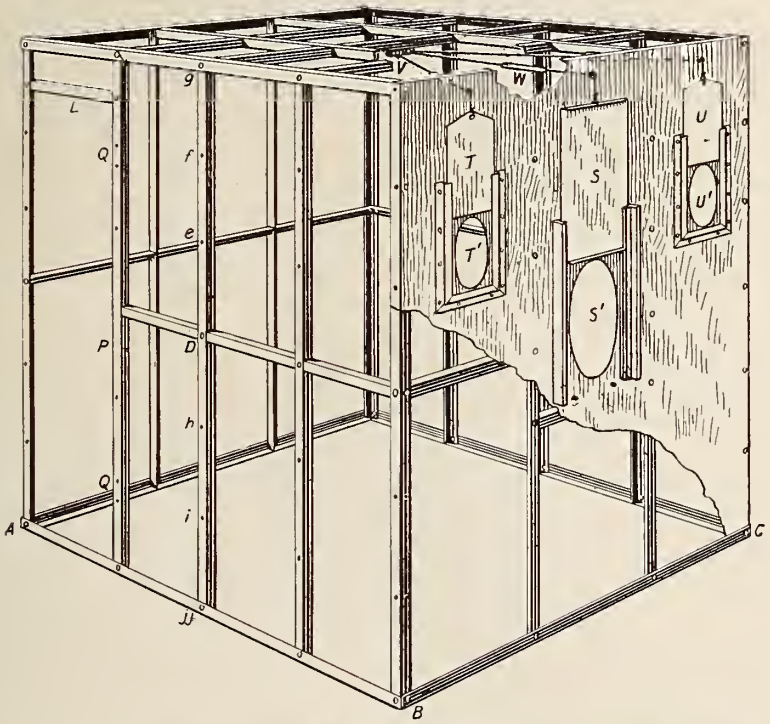


Fig. 1—Framework for Sheet Metal Moving Picture Booth, Showing Portion of the Front, with Sliding Doors and Cords for Operating Them.

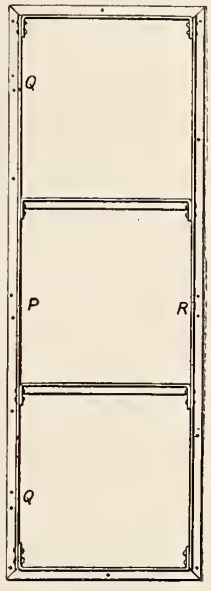

Fig. 3—Framework of Door, Inside View.

The frames for the doors T and U are constructed by bending an offset in strips of heavy metal as shown in Fig. 7. These doors are all small and are usually made of No. 20 gauge iron with edges turned out at the top and bottom for strength. In order to conveniently open and close these doors, and also that in case of fire they will drop automatically, a cord is fastened to each of the three doors, all of which are run through pulleys secured to the front upper angle iron, to a convenient point where the operator can easily reach them instantly. The simplest way of holding these cords is to fasten a tightly wound coil spring to the center brace in the top of the booth as shown at V in Fig. 1. Knots are usually tied at the ends of the cords to enable the operator to grip them readily. As an additional safeguard the fire underwriters require a fusible link to be placed in the cords as nearly over the machine as possible, as shown at W. Their reason for this is that when the film catches fire, the operator may become alarmed and leave the place without pulling the cords to lower the doors; the heat, when raised to a certain degree, will melt the fusible links and so allow the doors to drop, thus checking the draft.

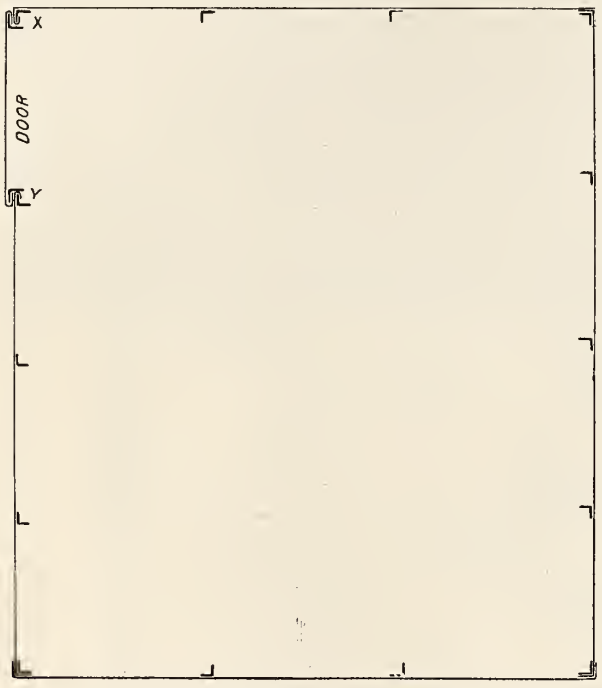

Fig. 2—Plan Showing Position and Arrangement of Angle Irons.

The section Fig. 2 is taken through the booth upon a horizontal plane anywhere below the sliding doors, and shows the bending at the corners of the sheets forming the sides of the booth. The sheets are first cut to a length to equal that of the studs, then a sufficient number are seamed together to make the required width of the side or end AB or BC, after which an inch and a half is allowed on each edge to be turned at right angles in the brake so as to go around the corner angle iron, thus making a double lap at the three corners, as shown. In the doorway the metal is turned around the studs while erecting the booth as shown at X and Y, near which points the construction of the door is also shown. Rivets are placed at intervals along the edges of the door frame as shown in Fig. 3. The openings S′, T′ and E′ should not be cut while in the shop because their exact location must be determined by the operator when directing the instruments toward the screen.

A few remarks on the erection of the booth may save the mechanic considerable time and study. The booth is sent to the theatre in knocked down form, and the mechanic takes his hand tools, including drills of the proper size, brace or breast drill, chisels, punches, square head, stake, etc., along to the job. In beginning the erection of this booth first lay the bottom with the inch and a half edge turned up all around, then place the side and end angle irons in their proper places, and with a prick punch locate the corner bolt holes, then with a solid punch enlarge these holes and bolt the corner studs on the inside of the base angle irons, thus holding the corners, the base and the metal in place. Next erect all the studs, then add the top angle irons so as to hold the framework together. All bolts that are used in holding the framework together should not be fastened permanently because most of them will have to be taken out when the casing is put in place; also all braces in the sides, ends and top are omitted until the casing has been bolted to the corners only.

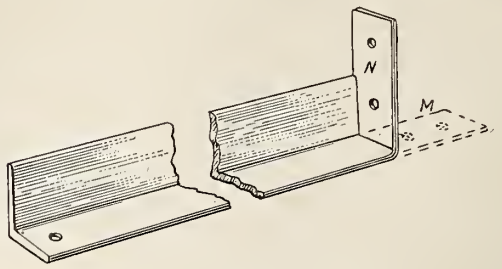

Fig. 4—Formation of Braces.

To set the casing begin at the doorway, taking the bolts out from the lower studs, then put the casing between the angle iron and the inch and a half edge of bottom. Continue in this manner until the entire body is in place, then bolt the long stringers in the top. Next set the cover with the inch and a half edge turned down, over the body, bolt down the corners and put in all braces in the entire booth. To locate all bolt and rivet holes, start them first with a prick punch from the inside, then punch them through from the outside, and bolt all angle irons together while the sheet metal is riveted to the angle iron. When this is done properly the booth may be taken apart at the corners, thus leaving the sides, ends and top complete, and can then be re-assembled with little or no difficulty.

The door is then hung and the double acting spring put in place. The mechanic should try the door to see if there is sufficient strength in the spring to keep the door closed. After the electrician has wired the booth and the operator has set his machine, and located the openings to be cut in the casing the mechanic may cut them square, round or elliptical at pleasure; however, the latter shape

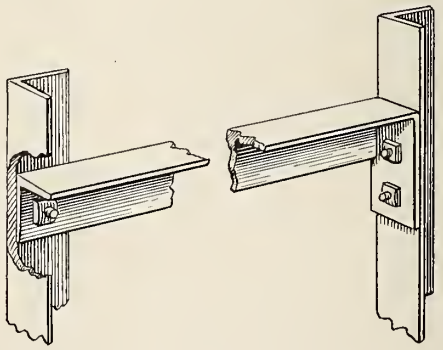

Fig. 5—Connection Between Brace and Studs.

presents the best appearance from the outside and enables the operator to raise or lower his machine to suit requirements without having the openings enlarged. Next rivet the door slides in place, fasten awning pulleys above each opening and run the cords. Also fasten the coil spring V in place, and see that the doors work satisfactorily. The booth as it stands completed is simple, rigid and durable.

As extras that may not be included in the contract but will bring in a good profit, the contractor should suggest making a rheostat box similar to the one shown in Fig. 8. In this box are placed one or more spools of copper wire through which the electricity passes before entering

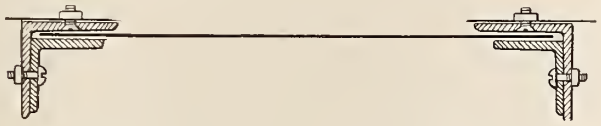

Fig. 6—Guides for Shutter for Middle Opening.

Fig. 7—Guides for Shutter for Side Opening the machine. These boxes must be made in length, width and height to suit requirements, and the top, bottom, ends and door or front should be perforated with half-inch holes so as to allow a good supply of air to circulate around the coils. This box is usually placed on the outside of the booth near the top and is supported upon brackets. Another extra that is a necessity is a shelf made of No. 16 gauge iron and placed in a convenient corner, which enables the operator to rewind the films while in the booth. There are also many other extras that can be suggested such as cabinets for the operator's tools, a box to keep the films in, etc.

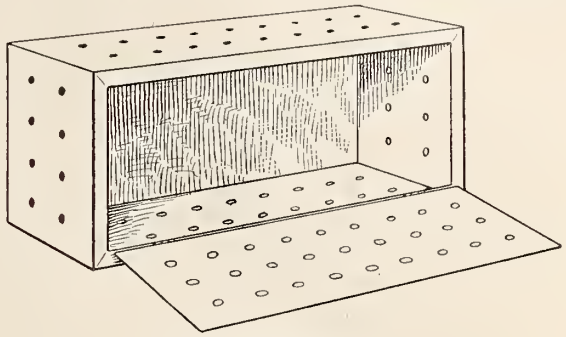

Fig. 8—Rheostat Box.

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan

MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS' ASSOCIATION

President—Robert Goldblatt.
Vice-President—James Girvan.
Corresponding Secretary—Sidney Dignon.
Financial Secretary—McRea.
Sergeant-at-Arms—William Cohen.
Business Representative—Robert Saunders.

Open meetings will be held every Monday night at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street, to enroll any operator who wishes to join an organization that will positively give them a square deal. All operators are invited to attend and ring their operator friends with them.

The Moving Picture Operators' Association (formerly Auxiliary to Local 35, I. A. T. S. E.) held an open meeting on Monday, August 5, 1912, at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street, to take in new members under a small initiation fee. Quite a large number enrolled who had never belonged to any organization before. After much discussion the former auxiliary members and the newcomers as well, decided that it would be much better to stay independent, as they would then control their own treasury and would not have to pay per capita tax and assessments to any other organization and gain nothing by it.

After the way Local 35 treated the members of the former auxiliary, this is not to be wondered at, and how any operator can join the new department with his eyes open, is more than I can understand. In this new branch or department Local 35 is to have full control, the operators will not be allowed to do anything without their consent. Local 35 will appoint all officers of the branch but one, the corresponding secretary. There are to be five trustees appointed for the Local and its branch, three from the mother Local, and two from the branch.

Seems odd that any operator would be foolish enough to join that new branch after the way they have seen the auxiliary treated for the past five years. The members of the former auxiliary, realizing that the stage hands and spotlight operators knew absolutely nothing about the working conditions of the picture machine operators, asked the American Federation of Labor and the I. A. T. S. E. for an independent charter, so that they would have the right to make laws to better themselves. Before each convention Local 35, as well as some of the former officers of the I. A. T. S. E., promised to give the moving picture operators an independent charter. They did give them an auxiliary charter to Local 35, which was not worth the paper it was written on, and now this year, when the auxiliary demanded an independent charter or amalgamation with Local 35 on an equitable financial basis, Local 35 in some way had the auxiliary (a body of 380 members in good standing) disbanded, or thrown out of the I. A. T. S. E. An honorable trick, wasn't it? Well, it seems to me that they have dug their own grave. Inasmuch as they have tried to beat us down, we will put a stronger organization into the field, and then let them look to their laurels. At the present time we have a body of over 150 members who can do anything in the theatrical line, and about 100 more who have qualified as operators in the city of New York, and it is only a matter of a very short time until all operators who can think for themselves will join our association, which will not only be a protection for them, but will also in time of need assist them over the rough places. It is very gratifying to note that other auxiliaries in sub-locals throughout the country have congratulated us on our determination to fight it out, and anyone who can read between the lines will readily see that it is only a matter of a year or so when the picture machine operators will be an entirely independent international organization. I believe that a great many will agree with me when I say it can't come any too soon. If we were given the right to govern ourselves we would not have a word to say, but to let a lot of men who know absolutely nothing about our work control us—well, it is then that patience ceases to be a virtue. We refuse to wear the yoke any longer.

* * * *

We would like to hear what the moving picture operators of other cities think about an independent international operators' union.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY'S EXHIBIT

We would like to call attention to the especial exhibit of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company's plant at 564-572 West Randolph street, corner of Jefferson street, Chicago, where by cordial invitation every exhibitor will be made welcome and all the ramifications, "How to make a Motiograph," will be explained in full detail. This factory is well worth a visit. We recall the many visits we have paid to this plant, and every time we go there there is something fresh, some additional machinery, some new devices for making perfect the parts, and it will indeed be a treat for every one who can make it their convenience to do so to pay it a visit.

In addition to this it is the intention of the company, at their exhibit in the hotel and the factory, to have competent demonstrators in charge of the equipment, and at each point the demonstrator will give every Motiograph user a Motiograph souvenir. We learn that it is to be something novel and more than useful to a visitor to Chicago. It tickled our curiosity and, like the girl in the fable, we want to delve into the secret, and our advice is to those who use the Motiograph to be sure they get their souvenir.

RELIANCE NOTES

The Reliance Stock Company, which has been operating in the Catskill Mountains, have returned to New York, after completing a number of unusual productions, all of which were directed by Tony O'Sullivan, and among which are "Philip Steele" in two reels, "One Against One," "North of 53," "The Old Swimming Hole" and "A Man Among Men." For these productions Mr. O'Sullivan procured every bit of unique atmosphere obtainable, taking advantage of the well-known ravines, rocks and waterfalls so abundant in the Catskills.

Mr. O'Sullivan is at present hard at work on some pictures to follow the above named productions, in which will appear some unusual backgrounds not ordinarily found in films produced in and around New York.

On August 28th "The Secret Service Man" will be released by Reliance as a single reel. This should prove one of the most sensational of recent productions, as it includes a strenuous chase between two men in almost every species of vehicle that could be found. Also Rodman Law, the famous daredevil jumper, is featured in it, and his parachute drop of 3,000 feet from an aeroplane breaks the record.

What promises to be a splendid production of "Thelma," Marie Corelli's famous novel, is being produced by Oscar Apfel for the Reliance Company. It will be released in three reels on August 31st.

AN INNOVATION

In passing it may be worth the time to state that moving pictures are on the rise. From the nickel theatre of a few years ago to a feature in a Broadway production is a long step, and a good step, and a step upward.

This was the step made by a Kinemacolor picture in Charles Frohman's production of "The Girl from Montmartre," with Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, at the Criterion Theatre, August 5th.

The true-to-nature colored picture came as a surprise, and it was quick to get an enthusiastic reception.

Miss Williams exclaims: "Any one who loves me can try to find me," and runs off the stage. The lights go out, and the moving pictures continue the story. She is pursued through the woods, Miss Williams and Mr. Carle enact a comedy scene, and finally she is overtaken by the tenor. As the tenor begins his song, the picture disappears, lights are on, and there they are in the woods just as Kinemacolor had left them.

In an interview just before the production of the play, Mr. Frohman said he had "discovered something new under the sun." This seems to be the case, and, what is more—the audience was quick to discover that which Frohman had discovered.

THE LATE W. H. HARBECK

Mrs. Catherine Harbeck, widow of the above, informs us that she, with her son, John S. Harbeck, are the executors of the estate of her late husband, William H., who, our readers will remember, was drowned on the "Titanic." Mrs. Harbeck and son have the full state rights of "The Round-Up" and the famous Alaskan series of pictures and animated maps which were taken by W. H. Harbeck prior to his ill-fated visit to England. We will have more to say on this subject in an early issue when we learn what Mrs. Harbeck has decided to do with these celebrated negatives. We understand, with the exception of two or three New England states, which have purchased the rights for "The Round-up" only, and a few others in Connecticut, Mrs. Harbeck has the full state rights, copyrights, etc., reserved.

SAVOY THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY, SHOWING NAT GOODWIN FILM

The Savoy Theatre on Thirty-fourth street, which has recently turned to Independent service, is showing a series of feature films, including the Nat C. Goodwin production of "Oliver Twist," which will be followed by "The Redemption."

The report that the Savoy had been taken over by Frohman is without foundation, we understand.

NASHVILLE TO HAVE MOVING PICTURES IN SCHOOLS

That Superintendent J. J. Keyes and the Board of Education of Nashville, Tenn., have quickly grasped the vast possibilities of the moving picture show as means of education, and the fact that arrangements are to be made in the new high school whereby the pictures will be used as a means of instructing the children, as reported in The Democrat recently, met with the hearty approval of educators all over that city.

Nashville is the first city in the South to take advantage of the motion pictures as an aid to the teacher in instructing history, geography, physiology and kindred subjects, and the fact that the new high school will be supplied with the pictures will delight the hearts of the students as well as the teachers.

H. A. SPANUTH RETURNS FROM CALIFORNIA

Mr. H. A. Spanuth, of the General Film Publicity and Sales Company, has returned from California after an absence of several weeks.

Mr. Spanuth has been making some final arrangements with Mr. Nat C. Goodwin with regard to future productions.

A splendid new production, of which more will be told in our next issue, is about to be put on the boards by the General Film Publicity and Sales Co.

SPLENDID BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR FALL AND WINTER

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that, judging from the number of inquiries received for new equipments for motion picture houses, as well as orders on hand for future delivery, the outlook is very bright for a largely increased volume of business. Prospective buyers are calling for the best made apparatus, and the Hallberg Economizers for their respective currents are invariably specified.

ONE LIVE EXHIBIT AT CHICAGO

An interesting exhibit at Chicago no doubt will be the one of the Precision Machine Company, Room 1821, La Salle Hotel, where Mr. J. E. Robin will be on hand with a Simplex equipped with 17-inch magazines to take 2,500 feet and motor drive, together with numerous parts showing the construction of the machine.

Mr. Robin has just returned from an extensive tour embracing all the larger cities of the East and Canada, and reports business excellent and experienced no difficulties in having the machine approved for use with motor in Maryland, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Portland and Canada.

The Simplex bears the distinction of being the first machine to be approved for use with motor in the state of Massachusetts.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Champion Theatre Company has been incorporated. Officers: George A. Robinson, of Mobile, president; P. Koch, vice-president and secretary; C. A. Gyber, general manager and treasurer.

Reading, Pa.—The Rex Theatre, under the management of Frank A. Gould, has opened.

Camden, N. J.—The Cooper Point Moving Picture Theatre, Second and Vine streets, has opened.

Bridgeport, Conn.—The Ripton Photoplay Moving Picture Gallery has opened.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Anthony Langan will erect a motion picture theatre at 503 South Geddes street.

San Francisco, Cal.—The E. H. Emmick Film Exchange has been incorporated, with a capital of $25,000.

Little Falls, N. Y.—A moving picture theatre will be erected by Reardon & Shults on Jefferson street, east of the Riley Hotel.

St. Louis, Mo.—Rex Amusement Company will erect a moving picture theatre on the northeast corner of Grand and Lucas avenues.

FOREIGN CONSULAR REPORTS

China

(From Consul General Samuel S. Knabenshue, Tientsin.)

The moving picture business is much more largely developed among the treaty ports in southern China—that is, from Shanghai southward—than it is in North China. In this consular district there is but one establishment using moving picture films. This is the Arcade, located in the French concession, Tientsin. The entertainment here consists usually of the exposure of eight films during the evening, interspersed at times with turns from one or two variety actors. The house is a small one, the patronage not large, and the proprietors often omit the variety turns on account of the expense of bringing performers from the south. There was an amusement house of the same character in Peking, also called the Arcade, but it has been closed since last November.

The market for films and moving picture machines is almost entirely in the hands of the Pathé-Phono-Cenima-Chine, whose head office is in Paris, with branches at Calcutta, Bombay, Hongkong, Tientsin and Shanghai. This firm has a practical monopoly of the moving picture business on the China coast and throughout the Far East generally. The Arcade here rents the films it uses regularly from this house. The films as a rule are sent from house to house along the China coast until they are worn out. Occasionally an American film is shown here, but it is always a second-hand one and is obtained from the above company.

Moving picture shows are increasing in popular favor in South China, and the natives are evincing a great interest in them. So far this does not appear to be true of North China. However, there is no reason why a popular liking should not be built up among the Chinese if some firm would enter the business and provide traveling cinematograph shows to be exhibited in Chinese theatres in the various native cities of North China.

Straits Settlements

(From Vice-Consul General D. Milton Figart, Singapore)

The principal towns of the Malay Peninsula are Singaport, with a population of 325,000; Penang, 277,841; Malacca, 124,029; Kuala Lumpur, 46,567; Ipoh, 23,354; Taipeng, 18,000.

There are three moving picture shows in operation in Singapore and about six throughout the remainder of the peninsula. The three in Singapore are Harima Hall, the Alhambra, and the Marlborough.

Pathé Frères supply both machines and films. The machines are from the English branch of this company, while the films are not only Pathé Frères, but various other makes. This company buys up from time to time films which it desires from other manufacturers and claims to have a monopoly of this market. It stocks about 3 280,000 feet of films and receives 3,000 to 5,000 feet of the new films each week. An operator has been in this district for some time, taking views of the principal industries and other interesting features, such as rubber cultivation, tin mining, crocodile hunting, manufacture of sago flour, etc. This operator also works in the surrounding country.

American Films—New Theatre Ordinance

As above stated, Pathé Frères claim to have a monopoly of the market, and will buy interesting films at their full value if necessary, depending on the hiring out to the various shows for their profit. Many American films are shown at this time, especially those manufactured by the American Biograph Co.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislative Council amending the theatre ordinance of 1908, which will provide for the examination by the chief police officer of every application for a license to carry on cinematograph exhibitions in the Straits Settlements. Such applications must be in writing and contain a description of every scene intended to be produced at such exhibition, and it is prohibited to advertise or produce any scene the description of which has not first been furnished to the chief police officer.

Turkey

(From Vice-Consul I. Montesanto, Trebizond)

Trebizond has one fine theatre for moving pictures, built for the purpose by the Trebizond Cinematograph Co. It occupies a corner lot adjoining the public garden and fronts on Liberty Square, the most central part of the city. The company has spent $7,500 for the erection of this theatre and $5,300 for the two oil engines and the necessary electric accessories. The 9-horsepower, 2-cylinder group electric motor is from Aster, of Paris, the 12-horsepower transmission motor from Auto Dautz, and the dynamo from Gramme Co., also of Paris. The lamps are metallic filament, and there is also an arc lamp of 2,000 candlepower.

This theatre has a seating capacity of 600, and it has plenty of doors, ventilators, fireproof projection apparatus chamber, and other modern improvements.

Prices—Films

Prices: Seats, 10, 15 and 20 cents; boxes, 80 cents and $1 each, accommodating 4 to 6 persons. There is a stamp duty (2.2 cents) for each 20-cent ticket for the benefit of the Hedjaz Railroad. Five thousand feet of films are used for each show, and the program is changed twice a week. Each new program is duly advertised in four languages, Turkish, Greek, Armenian, and French.

The films are mostly of French manufacture, Gaumont and Pathé Frères, and sometimes American, of the Eclipse American Vitagraph Co., etc. The company receives the films from Constantinople and occasionally from Saloniki at a cost of 6 or 8 centimes (1 16 to 1.54 cents) a meter for each program. For American films the company would be willing to pay more, because they enjoy a great popularity and are always received with much enthusiasm by the people, who are very fond of subjects like detective stories, cowboy and Indian life, etc., and they appreciate the clearness of the American films.

The show usually lasts 1½ to 2 hours, starting about 8 o'clock each evening. Two performances are given. There are no matinees except on fête days, so profits have to be made from night performances only.

Turkish Agency for American Films

It would not pay for an American firm to send films only for the Trebizond theatre, but there are many moving picture shows in Turkey and several in this part of the country, and as their number is daily increasing there is a good chance for an American concern to establish an agency at Smyrna, Saloniki, or Constantinople and have its films make the round of several moving picture theatres. There is no doubt that American films will be preferred and that the business will prosper.

The moving picture theatre of Trebizond has installed an American pianola, made in Indiana, which was bought from the Constantinople agency for $700, on monthly installments.

Mexico

(From Consul T. C. Hamm, Durango)

There are at present two moving picture theatres in Durango—Salon Golondrina and Salon Rojo. Both are members of regular film exchange circuits, one with headquarters in Mexico City and the other in San Luis Potosi. The films are changed daily and 7 to 10 pictures are shown at each performance. Most of the films in use are imported from France, although a few, chiefly cowboy and "Wild West" pictures, are obtained from the United States. Some Spanish films depicting bull fights are shown.

The proprietor of the Salon Golondrina informs me that he attempted to import all his films from the United States, but that the length of time required and the uncertainty of regular shipment made the venture a money-losing proposition. He further stated that the explanatory matter was all printed in the English language, an innovation which proved anything but popular. A Powers machine of American make is the one now in use and is giving entire satisfaction.

In order to enter this market successfully three things at least are essential: (1) Prompt and continuous service; (2) a large variety of subjects; (3) all explanatory matter must be in the Spanish language.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Gentle reader (this "gentle reader" business is just our naive way to get solid with our subscribers) gentle reader, this is the story of "The Plough Boy of the Western World."

Hum! Peering around one corner of our perfectly visible writing machine, we perceive that a slight mistake has been made. We should have written "Cowboy of the Western Plains." Momentarily, our fancy flitted to a certain spot in the shade, where you can sit with a long cane pole in your hand and catch 'em. Heigh, ho! Young men shall dream dreams and old men shall see visions, or words to that effect.

But this is inapropos, as the Ladies of the Art Embroidery Club would remark. We are wandering from the subject, to quote Dumont's leading drygoods merchant when he tried to get to the county fair grounds in a Hupmobile. Let us resume—continue:

When Giles R. Warren was a callow youth at the old home in that dear Decatur, Ill., he liked pictures. "Pinkie" Kerr, who conducts the Little Gem restaurant, recalls, as if it were yesterday, the days when Giles could polish off a piece of mulberry pie and stain his face both fore and aft. 'Tis a picture he loves to dwell upon. Giles loved pictures, we repeat. The neighbors say he would stand for hours gazing at the picture of a dog with a tin can tied to his caudal appendage, and that he loved to hang around when the elephants of the circus studio got busy near the town pump. It is related by Warren's dear old school teacher that Giles loved to read about the Western prairies, and used to hide such instructive literature behind the large board covers of his geography. "I know personally that it marked a turning point in his career," says the pedagogue.

GILES R. WARREN

And thus it came to pass that mental pictures of boundless prairies; of winds whirling into the coulees (to quote B. M. Bower); and of high-heeled boots and fringed pants, were too much for our hero. Giles R. Warren became a cowboy. He horned into the cattle business, and he worked all over the Far West, and Buffalo Bill had no show beside our enterprising hero.

When submitting pictureplays to Giles R. Warren don't label one "The Cowpuncher." Editor Warren has had some experience in that line and went up the trail from Southwestern Texas to Northern Wyoming with a bunch of cattle in 1884. It was some trail in them there days, believe me. Mr. Warren has not been inclined to look a chuch steak in the face since that momentous period. It is understood that G. R. concluded that romantic stories about the Far West were delusions and snares after that trail, and he resolved to break into the Far East. So he became a Thespian.

Mr. Warren's first appearance on any stage occurred in the Gem Theatre in Deadwood, Dak., in 1887. It is understood that it was a critical stage, too. When the heroic figure of Mr. Warren entered L. C. and he began his entertainment as a "rank"—er—"ranch comedian," other figures of speech, etc., etc., emanated from the delighted audience and Mr. Warren reluctantly cut short the evening's entertainment.

But to put the soft pedal on this airy persiflage and to taboo these "kidding" propensities, it is a fact that Giles R. Warren arose rapidly in his chosen profession and, within a few years, became prominent both as an actor and a stage director. He has been in the employ of Augustin Daly, Potter and Belew, Kirke La Shelle, and many others known to Stageland. He was assistant under John Stapleton for a long time; was stage manager of "Checkers" for the first two seasons and, before that, was stage manager for "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," 'Maine Avenged," "Doctor Bill," etc. To be exact, after kicking aside all Deadwood, Mr. Warren continued in the theatrical profession with success for sixteen years, all told, playing a range of parts from "fops" to "heavies." His last appearance a few years ago was in a prominent "heavy part" in "The Eternal City." He has also taken a hack at opera, playing second comedy roles in comic repertoire opera in the old "New York Ideals," Burton Stanley Opera Comique, etc. He was manager of the California Opera Company in "Said Pasha," and of Blaney's "A Baggage Check."

P. S.—Mr. Warren never returned to Deadwood.

"The pen is mightier than the sword." You have heard that? Well, Giles R. Warren got next to it, too, and he unbuckled his trusty steel and purchased a fountain pen. He became a "journalist."

Pardon me! Pardon me! (aside, hastily.)

Mr. Warren entered the newspaper business.

He pounded the keys of a battered Remington on the old Newark, N. J., Advertiser, and was real estate editor of the Newark Morning Star. It it understood that he became a newspaperman so that he could graduate into the ranks of playwrights. It's the usual thing—and Warren was no exception.

Afternoons after he had "laid out" his realty page, and dashed off the last item about the coming importance of "Homecrest Addition," Warren would retire into seclusion somewhere and write plays for James E. Blaney. Nearly all of the Blaney successes were turned out by G. R. Warren and he gained much honor and but little increment. He discovered that the coin was much more satisfactory than the honor so he "hooked up" with Carl Laemmle and became official "dopist" for the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.

It was a rare company that worked for Laemmle those days. Warren, Salter, Florence Lawrence, Baggot and the rest made fame and fortune for the "Little Corporal" of the Independent cause. Warren wrote the stuff and it was handled in mighty artistic style. The fame of the "Imp" pictures grew, and deservably so. Convincing drama and delightful comedy flowed from the Warren fountain pen, and he also instituted innovations in the editorial department that are now standard with many of the producers.

S. Lubin, the gentleman from Philadelphia, made a flattering offer to Mr. Warren and he transferred his affections to Lubinville. Miss Lawrence was the Lubin leading lady and she became doubly popular because the convincing drama and delightful comedy continued unceasingly. From dawn to dewy eve, G. R. W. worked until he thought a rest was due him. He took it and it lasted two weeks. P. A. Powers, one of the shrewdest producers of pictureplays in the business, tempted Mr. Warren. Then the convincing drama and delightful comedy bearing the "Power's Picture Plays" imprint was anticipated by pictureplay fans.

Miss Lawrence and her husband returned from Europe. They organized the Victor Film Manufacturing Company. Miss Lawrence desired convincing drama and delightful comedy above all things. As a natural sequence they turned to Giles R. Warren. You know the result.

Mr. Warren is editor and secretary of the Victor Company. He is about the most versatile writer of the day in the pictureplay field. He is a painstaking workman, precise, natural, and a man of seemingly inexhaustible ideas. He is known to thousands of script writers as an editor whose word is as good as his bond; as a man who has developed talent; and as one who can skilfully delve for the light under the bushel. His many little acts of courtesy and encouragement are appreciated by an army of pictureplaywrights, and he has just cause to feel proud of their friendly regard.

Mr. Warren recently returned from a month's vacation spent at Asbury Park, N. J., where he listened to what the wild waves were saying and acquired an impressive coat of tan. He is again at his desk at the Victor studio, where he will continue to furnish Miss Lawrence with such plays as "Not Like Other Girls," "In Deep Waters," et cetera. He will also continue to keep an eye peeled for unknown talent and pay good prices for such scripts as come up to his high standard. We predict that Warren will not be editor at the Victor studio for long because he is certain to be advanced in Filmland; logically it cannot be otherwise.

He lives at Dumont, N. J., with his charming wife, and is fourth assistant chief of the Dumont Fearless Fire Fighters. His friends say that he looks impressive in a red helmet and gum boots.

But this is just a little fad, you know. We all must have relaxation. If Giles R. Warren wants to jump out of bed at 3 a. m. and save the corner grocery from the flames, why, let him. And if you ever call upon him you will find him personally magnetic, and he'll treat you royally.

However, it would be better not to say anything to him anent that theatrical debut in Deadwood, Dak.

TO THE MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS OF GREATER NEW YORK, GREETINGS

The International Executive Board visited the meeting of the executive auxiliary to Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., last Monday night and explained to those present that they were no longer connected with the I. A. T. S. E. of the United States and Canada, or with any other Central Labor bodies in the city of Greater New York. They strongly advise those present to immediately enroll, pointing out all the benefits enjoyed by union men by affiliating with the moving picture department of Local 35. A number of those present followed the advice of the international officers and enrolled the following day, taking advantage of the fact that enrollment at the present time is without cost.

The hearty response as evidenced by the large number of applications that have been made to date is a source of much gratification to the international officers. The enrollment is going on daily at the headquarters of Local 35, at 259 West 42d street, New York City, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 2 P. M., the books being open to every licensed moving picture machine operator in Greater New York.

Yours,

GUS DURKIN,
Secretary-Treasurer.

FRANK J. BRENNAN,
President.

Logan, Iowa.—George Erven purchased the moving picture show.

EDWIN L. BARKER, OF KINEMACOLOR, GRANTS INTERESTING INTERVIEW

By Our "Roving Commissioner"

Edwin L. Barker, who takes care of the publicity department and various other items which his versatility and experience attract to him at the Kinemacolor offices in the Mecca Building, 48th street and Broadway, New York City, is an individual who proves most interesting for an interview.

It was in rather an unexpected manner that Mr. Barker fell to my lot on a recent visit to the offices of the Kinemacolor company. Not being able to get in touch with Mr. Brock, the company's manager, just at the time, Mr. Barker was passed out of the sacred sanctum into the hands of the interviewer—that was me—in place of Mr. Brock. Mr. Barker and I soon became very well acquainted, interchanging views on moving pictures and such uncanny things in a manner, I fancy, interesting to both of us.

Edwin L. Barker hied hitherward from Chicago, where for several years he acted in the capacity of manager at the Bush Temple Theatre.

It is interesting to know how Mr. Barker became connected with the moving picture industry.

"After giving up the management of the Bush Temple Theatre I became connected with the International Harvester Company," said he, "on the lecture and advertising end, in which eventually the moving picture method of advertising appealed to the management.

"It is surprising," he continued, "to see the interest displayed by people in the city in the development of methods by which their foodstuffs are obtained. The evolution of harvesting methods, from the days when the grain was cut with a hand sickle and gathered with a common wooden hand rake to the easy methods of to-day, is capable of drawing crowds such as you would never dream of.

"In Chicago I was on one occasion called upon to go with these pictures into one of the society districts of the city. The manager of the place told me that he did not expect more than forty people to be present. When I arrived there the building was packed to the doors and people standing on the pavement outside. At first I thought it was a fire, but ascertained, upon making inquiry, that they had been attracted thither by the news that the pictures were to be shown.

"The moving picture as an advertiser is being recognized by all the large manufacturing and retail concerns. At Marshal Field's, in Chicago, I have seen blankets advertised by moving pictures showing how they were manufactured."

Of Kinemacolor Mr. Barker spoke most enthusiastically. He also drew my attention to several items of difference in production between this method and black and white.

"In black and white, for instance," said he, "a man can wear a pair of tan shoes with a dress suit if he wants to, but not so in Kinemacolor. Even the stage settings must have care taken with regard to color; defects which in black and white would not be perceptible would appear as most glaring faults in Kinemacolor.

"We are aiming," said Mr. Barker, "at putting out nothing but the very best. At our plant at Whitestone, which is splendidly equipped for the making of Kinemacolor pictures, we expect to produce some of the best."

In Europe there is shortly to be held a meeting of representatives of Kinemacolor from all over the world, including Australia and South America, Mr. Barker explained to me. This meeting is being held to discuss affairs of mutual interest and to gain some knowledge of improvements which, it is claimed, have been made in the Kinemacolor process which we have not. The French claim the inauguration of an attachment for the camera which prevents flicker, and other developments have been heard of, of equal interest, which it is necessary for all Kinemacolor connections to become acquainted with.

Mr. Brock was to have sailed for Europe on Saturday, August 10, to attend this meeting, but has been deterred from doing so on account of the illness of his father.

Brazil, Ind.—The Arc Theatre has opened its doors.

PYRENE

A Word That Will Soon Be Familiar to Moving Picture Men All Over tbe United States—What It Means

By Edward A. Clapp of Pyrene Manufacturing Co.

The Pyrene Manufacturing Company is not paying for the insertion of this article. Mr. Saunders, editor of The Moving Picture News, called the writer on the 'phone last week and said, "I believe in your product. I have seen what it can do. Give me your views to present to the moving picture men at Chicago."

There can be no question about the magnitude of the fire risk in moving picture theatres. It is due to the use of inflammable films and to carelessness on the part of machine operators. The Committee on Special Hazards of the National Fire Protection Association recently reported that the use of non-inflammable films, which appeared so promising, has been large abandoned on account of the expense. The old style nitro-cellulose films now comprise about 90 per cent of all films in use. There is no indication that the new non-inflammable, cellulose acetate film will be substituted. In the meantime inspection bureaus and State authorities are enforcing the same requirements as before. Rating committees generally recognize the danger of fire in motion picture places by an increased rate. As is well known, the strictest regulations govern the installation of equipment—the machine must be placed in an enclosure made of suitable fireproof material. Extra films must be kept in individual metal boxes with tight-fitting covers. Reels in the process of rewinding must be properly protected, and arc lamps constructed in a certain way. In spite of these safeguards, films catch fire, theatres are burned up and lives are lost. With each succeeding fire an unfortunate feeling of distrust is created.

On May 28 last the Pyrene Manufacturing Company, at the request of The Moving Picture News, gave a demonstration of its fire-extinguishing apparatus, the Pyrene Fire Extinguisher, on the roof of the company's factory, 410 East 32d street, New York City. This demonstration was largely attended and the general opinion of those present was that the compound Pyrene, in the double-acting Pyrene Extinguisher, is a wonderfully effective preventative of fires in motion picture theatres. It was proved that day that Pyrene has the power of extinguishing a film fire if taken at its inception. It was agreed that the convenient size and ease of operation were also very important factors to recommend the extinguisher for this special purpose.

When a film catches fire the combustion approximates an explosion. There is no time to plan a course of action. The operator must act instantly, and catch the fire at the start. To do this he must have at hand apparatus that is not cumbersome. It must be small enough to be snatched from the wall and put in instant operation. It must also be an effective extinguisher of fires.

The double-acting Pyrene Fire Extinguisher, containing the compound Pyrene, meets these requirements. Brass and nickel plated Pyrene extinguishers are included in the lists of approved fire appliances issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. They are the only one-quart extinguishers so included. Pyrene is approved by the United States Steamboat Inspection Service. It is recognized by the New York Fire Insurance Exchange. It is widely known as the most effective extinguisher of incipient fires on the market.

The Pyrene Manufacturing Company does not claim that its device will extinguish films burning in large quantities. It is intended to make this point perfectly clear. There is no extinguishing agent known to science that can do this. The nitro-cellulose film, burning, generates its own oxygen, which feeds combustion. In the burning film a certain point is reached when oxygen is generated in so great a quantity that it cannot be excluded from the flames. It is impossible to state at exactly what point Pyrene is ineffective. This is dependent upon conditions, and how tightly the film is wound. However, at the demonstration referred to above, a burning reel that had burned through five thicknesses was instantly extinguished. At other tests conducted by the company fires in a more advanced stage have been successfully handled with Pyrene. Other extinguishing agents are ineffective on large quantities of burning films for the same reason. They are ineffective and undesirable on incipient fires for other reasons—among them their inconvenient size and damaging properties to materials not touched by the fire. It is not necessary to enlarge on the damage done when sand or water is thrown upon projecting machines, rheostats and electric wiring.

The compound Pyrene was discovered in 1907, after years of research and study. Pyrene is a liquid in the container, but a gas when it touches a fire or is raised to a certain temperature. More accurately, Pyrene is a combination of powerful gases in liquid form, and is maintained without pressure in a double-acting, powerful, easily operated cylindrical pump. When raised to a temperature of 200° F., Pyrene Liquid is converted into a dense white gas blanket which settles down on the fire, excluding the oxygen of the air, and smothering the flames instantly.

Pyrene contains neither salts, acids, alkalis or moisture. It is therefore non-damaging. Pyrene is a non-conductor of electricity. It is therefore safe to use on electrical equipment. Pyrene does not deteriorate with age. The cost of maintenance is therefore eliminated.

The Pyrene Manufacturing Co. presents these facts to the motion picture trade in the belief that its product is especially suited to their needs, and that the general use of Pyrene Fire Extinguishers in motion picture theatres will reduce the fire risk to a very great extent.

Emmitsburg, Md.—A new moving picture theatre will be erected here in the near future.

New York, N. Y.—A new moving picture show will be built at the northeast corner of Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue at a cost of $2,500. Owner, J. H. Blumenthal, 30 Union square.

OUR AUSTRALIAN CORRESPONDENT.

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, July 1, 1912.

Things in the moving picture line are moving on with rapid strides, and during the last week two of the finest ones in the Southern hemisphere have been put in motion, The Crystal Palace in this city, and The Britannia in Melbourne, both built and operated by the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd.

The Crystal Palace was opened on the 22nd ult. and The Britannia on the 28th ult., and will be run on the continuous plan from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. The prices for the Crystal Palace have been raised from 3d and 6d to 6d and 1/—and they purpose giving a higher class of pictures at this place. They have installed an Estey two manual and pedals organ, and a very sweet toned instrument it is, but is not as large as I had expected to see from the price named by Mr. Williams to me as having been paid for the instrument. I do not know what they are going to charge at the Britiannia Theatre. I neglected to ascertain in my last conversation with him.

I enclose you a circular just put out by this company showing you his latest move in the film renting line, but I understand that others renting films have been doing this for some time.

Dante's Inferno is billed for the Town Hall for four evenings and two matinees, and it is said that this is the whole film, and not a portion of it, as was shown here by the Williams management some months ago. The Universal Films Company, Mr. J. A. McCullagh, managing director, who holds the rights for this part of the world, is exploiting it under the management of Mr. J. L. Goodman, formerly manager of Spencer's Limited. As the last portion shown here was a great draw, this should have a very big attendance, and as the Town Hall is the swellest place in the city for such a show as this, there is no doubt but that they will draw large and fashionable audiences.

There are many new theatres in project, and will be built during the coming year, and so many are entering this get-rich-quick (as they think) business, I think that there will be a terrible reaction set in, and that the end will be the survival of the fittest. Be that as it may, I sincerely hope that all who put their money into the business may not fail to find it a good thing, and that there will be no cause for heart burnings afterwards.

There are some very good films being produced in this part of the world and the work will bear very good comparison with many of the older and larger companies.

Mr. Ernest Higgins, the head operator, has taken some fine scenes of the country from an aeroplane, and I want to compliment him not only on his work but his daring in making the flight as well, for it is not every operator that would have the nerve and vim to take his camera and self on a flight through space, as he has done, and while I am as game as most any man, I think I should think some, and then some more before I, myself, ventured on the trip.

There are some new ventures on in the M. P. business that will make, I think, a stir in the picture business, but the details are not quite ripe for me to give them to your readers, but I will do so in the next letter, and there will be something that will open the eyes of the American people to things moving on this side of the world.

The winter season is good for the picture business, but the summer for the suburban houses is much better as so many are open-air shows. Wests, Spencer's, J. & N. Taits, and Johnson & Gibson have amalgamated and have bought out Messrs. Pathe Freres' business in this part of the world; they are a very wealthy company and are known amongst the trade as the combine.

Mr. J. D. Williams has got a hard job in hand to fight them, and that is the job that he has taken in hand, and time will tell what the result will be, but I guess that as they have all lived and made a lot of money, that it will come to something like a war of rates in the film renting business. Tempus omnia revelat.

Wests' new Olympia has exceeded their most sanguine expectation in the business that they have done since they opened this place of business, and their business at the Princess is also good, steady business all the time.

Spencer's is also doing a good business at the Lyceum, and I am informed that their Melbourne business is even better.

Williams' theatres are all doing splendid business, and he has got no cause for any kicks on his part. Mr. Bud Atkinson, the managing director of the Crystal Palace, leaves on the 8th with his wife on a tour of the world and will be in the United States early in September, looking out for novelties and other attractions for the various shows run by the Williams Company.

The Williams Company have taken over the Crystal Palace, and it is now owned and controlled by this company. They now have four theatres in this city, and two in Melbourne, and I am informed that they are to build at Brisbane, also at Adelaide, and no doubt they will do so.

Mr. Williams returned from Melbourne on Saturday last, after seeing the new Britannia started on the way of getting back the dollars spent in the quick time building the theatre. It is said that he broke all records in putting this theatre up, and that it is the only one in which the pictures are projected from the ceiling.

As the mail leaves earlier than usual to-day, I must close and so what news I have to say to the reader I will continue in my next, but I shall have a lot to say in regard to the moving picture situation in this part of the world.

WILLIAM H. HUBBELL.

The circular referred to by our correspondent follows. It shows what must soon happen in America. The days of feature films with exorbitant prices and state rights has passed—Ed. M. P. N.

To the Moving Picture Exhibitors of Australasia.

Gentlemen:

We have pleasure in bringing under your notice our startling announcement to the moving picture world, that, on and after Monday last, the 24th inst., we will include special star feature pictures in ordinary film program, without extra charge.

Undoubtedly it is as we announced, the Australian film renting field has reached a riotous condition; disorder and confusion prevailing supreme; we realize that the present methods of film distribution are entirely inadequate and more or less out of date and inefficient in every way.

We feel convinced International Pictures holds the confidence of the moving picture trade, its ability to supply highly satisfactory service is well known, and the progressive methods constantly employed place us in a class by ourselves; but we consider the greatest point of all is the incomparable purchasing power of International Pictures, supported by the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Limited, with a capital of £200,000. Its facilities and strength have been developed to the highest possible state of perfection. After months of untiring efforts we are now prepared to announce an interesting and radical reform in the manner of moving picture film distribution.

With the week beginning Monday, June 24th, we shall treat all special star pictures as ordinary films. In other words, the class of picture plays ranging from 1,500 to 3,500 feet in length, of unusual quality, purchased on the London market from the world of film producers, and which have until recently been hired out at excessive rates by other film concerns, will be hired by us to exhibitors at the usual rates of regular film service. We feel sure the issuance of this amazing and astounding notice will sound the death knell of an evil which has reached enormous proportions in the Australian field.

We invite the picture play exhibitors of Australasia to participate in the benefits of this declaration, and we are enclosing for your consideration application form which will receive immediate attention. We feel sure if you entrust your entire program to our care we can give you complete satisfaction, and with our star picture service your program will place your show in an incomparable position. We are importing three to six stars weekly, so that there are enough for everybody.

Trusting to be favored with your esteemed order,

We beg to remain,

Yours faithfully,

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

The Best Market

A well-known pictureplay editor writes this department as follows:

"The best market to-day for the man who can produce, is the special feature, extra reel stuff. The producers are forced to pay good money but they must have good strong stuff. The market is not overcrowded with comedy material and producers cannot get enough short comedy for split-reel subjects. These should run about 600 feet and start with a bang and go swiftly to the finish. Child stories are coming in and they will bring good money. Old plots with new twists or unexpected development will be considered, and the ingenious situation will bring the check. Stories of business with a strong love interest are eagerly sought, and there is a disposition to picturize poems and the works of the old authors. The plots that were butchered a few years ago are being resurrected and presented in a new form, but the field is becoming more limited because of the danger of copyright infringement. I believe the time is coming when every picture concern will have a paid staff of writers. The expense is keeping several well-known concerns from the plan.

"Authors should again be cautioned not to crib plots from old magazine stories, as they are invariably spotted, and the editors are fearful to accept original stories from such writers, because they are not always sure that the plot has not been 'swiped' from some magazine of four or five years back. An author working in conjunction with a director and knowing his company has the advantage over the fellow who is writing at random. Ninety per cent of the stories filmed are written by ten per cent of the contributors, which include directors and members of stock companies and other intimately in touch with the picture game. About fifty per cent of the stories filmed are put on because it is convenient. They are built around certain actors, or a certain location or incident that is easy to obtain."

We believe that if certain directors would cease pictureplay writing and confine their attention strictly to producing, and that the same rule would also apply to many of the stock company members, that the present monotonous output of certain concerns might cease. Many a new writer presents stuff that contains a strikingly original idea that if rewritten would prove refreshing. "The editor has no time to rewrite scripts" is frequently repeated. This is true, in a sense. But if a script contains a novel incident, time might be taken to revamp it and a good pictureplay result.

"At Usual Rates"

We see many scripts which bear the words "At Usual Rates." Get out of the rut, you new script writers who habitually use this method. Why not put the words "Twenty-five dollars," or, better yet, "Thirty dollars," in the place of "At Usual Rates." If the script is worth that much, you will get it. If it is worth less to the concern, and they want the story, you will hear from the editor. The usual rates of a majority of the film concerns are unusual. It may mean ten or fifteen dollars for a story that otherwise might bring you $25. The editor is under orders not to pay more than he is obliged to for script dope. Cut out the "At Usual Rates."

Literary Coincidences

Even the old-time authors had their troubles with literary coincidences and they did not immediately jump to a conclusion and cry "plot stealing," etc. Here is a case concerning Thackeray and Dumas.

Thackeray says: "I came near writing a book on the same subject, 'Les Trois Mousquetaires,' and taking M. d'Artagnan for my hero. D'Artagnan was a real character of the age of Louis XIV and wrote his own memoirs. I remember picking up a dingy copy of them on an old bookstall in London and intended to make something of it. But Dumas got ahead of me. He snaps up everything."

A coincidence quite as remarkable occurred with Sir Conan Doyle for a central figure. He learned while spending a holiday in a mountain inn in Switzerland that during the winter months, for some reason, two men remained in occupation. For four or five months they were isolated from the rest of the world. Suppose one of them went mad, or committed suicide or—the possibilities were endless. He forthwith determined to embody the idea in a story. On his way home he happened to pick up a book of tales by Maupassant. There in it, under the title "L'Auberge," he found himself forestalled in every particular.

So you see, great minds run in the same channels be they stars in literature or plain, everyday script writers.

Recognition

The pictureplaywright and his work have secured congressional recognition. The Morrison bill prohibiting moving picture producers from appropriating to their own use copyrighted plays and stories has been passed by the House of Representatives. The copyright law has been extended more markedly to the films and the measure will not harm the moving picture business. The standard classics may still be produced, while the busy pictureplaywrights can also find enough for their ingenuity without trespassing in the field of copyrighted literature. The chief significance of the copyright bill is its recognition of the moving picture show as an established and important feature of American life. The moving picture show has ceased to be a fad, it is no longer a foolishness or an impropriety. It is a means of general amusement and will become a factor in national education, and the humble pictureplaywright will contribute in no small measure to make it so.

The Powers Prize Contest

It is authoritatively asserted that thousands of scripts have been received by the Powers Picture Play Company, in response to Editor Hoadley's advertisement of she prize script contest. It can be stated that Mr. Hoadley's name at the head of the contest drew much meritorious work. The number of surprisingly good plots received proves to the mind of Editor Hoadley that an offer for good scripts at good prices brings results. It is said that several hundred contributors made the mistake of submitting scripts that have been going the rounds for months and, of course, these were not considered when making awards.

Those who submitted good work won a better market than they were aware of, for all stories were considered for all the concerns in the Universal Company, and available stories, it is stated, will be purchased at good prices whether they win one of the prizes or not. When prize contests are conducted by film concerns of established reputation, it tends to create friendly rivalry and is certain to unearth some brilliant work. Pictureplaywrights, however, should steer clear of "prize" contests, so called, conducted by any "universities" or obscure manufacturers.

Reid with Universal

Hal Reid, writer and actor, has become an adjunct in the script department of the Universal Film Company. Reid was formerly with Reliance. He is now Universally known.

Addressing the Editor

Why send a long letter to the script editor when submitting a story? It detracts rather than attracts. Editors have no time to read long-winded epistles from authors in which they inform the long suffering reader "how his company is the most far-seeing in the film business" and that "I know that my work will receive prompt and careful consideration from you, for you are rated the best editor in the business to-day." You cannot flatter the editor. He has received such letters before—many of them. Submit your work on its merits. Do not try to become familiar, or to get a "pull" with the script man. You cannot do it. A few of those letters and you will be classed as a nuisance. Let your work speak for itself. The editor will quickly be able to discover what kind of a writer you are without you writing insincere letters to him. Another thing: When a script is rejected, do not write in to the editor telling him that Such-and-such a concern "has been glad to purchase the scenario you recently rejected." He gets those kinds of statements, too.

The Spice of Life

Variety is the spice of life. That is one reason for the picture show's popularity. Pictureplays should educate, entertain and attract the public. The beginner in the script writing field should seek variety—the novel and original story—the plot with the new twist and angle. Manufacturers are looking for variety and originality and the writer who can furnish it will win a market. Despite the fact that several manufacturers are not now advertising for scripts, being overstocked, the short, clean comedy and virile drama is in greater demand than ever. Can you furnish them?

Avoid Fine Writing

When preparing your scripts avoid fine writing. The editor does not buy flowery words when he purchases your story—he buys your plot. Be as brief and concise as you can be with logical clearness and make every word tell. Often one word will have as much meaning as a sentence. Word pictures are all right if you are writing fiction or special articles, but it is not the thing for the pictureplaywright. There is also a certain knack greatly to be desired in synopsis preparation. Many writers can tell the entire story of their script in 200 words and still dress that synopsis attractively. Others cannot "dope" an attractive synopsis in 500 words. It would be well for many a beginner to practice on briefness and attractiveness in synopsis. Take a story and try to rehearse the salient points in 250 words. The art of "boiling down," to borrow from newspaper parlance, is an art greatly to be desired.

The No-Sale Reason

A. W. Thomas, in his Pictureplay Department, says that seven out of twelve theatre owners he met in Pittsburgh recently had attempted to write pictureplays and had declared that "seeing so many plays had given them ideas here and there that they could not help but incorporate them, to some extent, into their own plays." This is the weakness of too many would-be writers. Such ideas "incorporated" are detected by the editor and the script comes back with the "old idea" rejection slip.

Enclose Stamps

Correspondents are again kindly requested to enclose stamped self-addressed envelopes with inquiries. The editor cheerfully answers hundreds of private inquiries monthly, but if you receive no reply to your questions it is because "postage is due." Come often but observe the amenities.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT.

SCENARIO WRITING

Editor Hoadley says in his article in the Moving Picture News of July 13, 1912, that "fully seventy-five per cent of the stories put on to-day are written by people connected with the actual production of pictures. They know the requirements and the dramatic ingredients that are necessary to an interesting film story."

Truer words were never spoken. As a general rule the scenario writer beyond the circle of the studio has no knowledge of studio conditions, the delicacies of taste of the editor or director, nor is he informed of the fancies, particular likes and dislikes of the respective film companies regarding their requirements in scripts of comedy, drama or Western.

For instance, I myself have prepared dramas of business life, etc., and submitted them to companies likely to purchase. In a few days I find one returned marked "a very commendable scenario, we predict an early market but not exactly the type we are seeking," or "rejection does not imply lack of merit but the story does not comply with requirements of producing department," etc., etc. Now, a few like these and the writer doesn't know whether he is coming or going.

How, then, can it be expected of writers to turn out attractive scripts, containing required construction and to be readily purchased? No two persons do things alike and no two persons think alike on the same idea—then why not have the scenario writer acquainted with all these dramatic situations pleasing to each respective editor and which, they say, make interesting film stories.

You may say WHY? Well, probably this is why. With something like five hundred scenario writers (more or less) the film companies become swamped with material, good, bad and indifferent, and as they produce from one to five pictures a week and with staff writers, contract writers, assignment writers, etc., etc., the poor scenario writer struggling for himself has about one show out of five in every five hundred, and I suppose the least known about studio conditions, etc., in such a predicament, the better.

Personally I don't write scripts for a living—if I did I would have been a pauper long ago. Being a professional man, my spare hours have been utilized in writing short stories and pictureplays. I have considerable knowledge of camera limitations, studied art for four years, and spent some time on the stage, and I don't mind the time, energy and expense required, but I do get impatient at times when so many pictureplays come back that I feel sure are capable of making good productions, and I qualify that statement by saying that I sold a script not long ago after it had visited almost every large film company in the country, and I am more than puzzled because the purchasing company is not listed as buying the particular kind of scenario sold.

I must confess that the more I read, the more I hear and see, the more I feel that without personal acquaintance and knowledge of conditions in the studio and the particular requirements of companies, directors and editors, the scenario writer is like a boat adrift without a rudder, traveling nowhere, through time and space, with no known accomplishment and nothing gained.

I have tried many times but have been unsuccessful in securing information about studio conditions, etc., but I live to see the day when by patience, perseverance and stickability I may acquire just a bit of such knowledge so that my scripts when received will send the editor bounding off his seat with such a shock of meritorious approval that a check will be rushed back to me as evidence of acceptance.

ELMER W. ROMINE,
Morristown, N. J.

THE POOR MOVIE AGAIN

An irresponsible and no doubt crazy man set fire to a school building in Cleveland the other day. After his arrest, he stated that he had committed the crime after seeing a moving picture production of Dante's Inferno, implying that the "movie" was the cause of the despicable act. We may now expect to hear other irresponsible persons fulminate against the moving picture show.

Alas, the poor movie! It seems to be its unhappy fate to be blamed for all the untoward events that happen. The falling off of business in any and every other line of theatrical endeavor is blamed on the movie; and crime of all kinds is supposed to be the direct result of gazing upon the realistic effects of moving picture photography. In fact, this modern invention seems to be regarded with as much superstitious fear as the compass inspired in the American Indians of the John Smith legend.

But, in the meantime, the movie continues to move and flourish, and, although we are very slow to admit it, to exert many very powerful influences for good. Interest in current news, in science, in literature, and in art is stimulated by some of the recent films. The particular film that is supposed to have caused the crime of a degenerate happens to be one of the finest achievements of moving picture producers. A visualization of the Dante poem, the films were prepared with great care and artistic skill. Naturally, from the necessities of the subject, many of the pictures have disagreeable features. So have the pictures of great artists who have illustrated this poem.

The whole incident shows the hopelessness of so censoring the moving pictures that some one will not receive evil impressions from them. Some censoring is necessary, of course; but, if it were allowable to censor and sort out the audience, how much more effective that would be! The problem is much the same with the movies as with other kinds of theatrical reresentation. It is often the audiences that need reform, more than the productions of the stage.—Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

Albu-Collodio (Wet Collodion) Lantern Slide Making

Copyrighted 1908 by Alfred H. Saunders. All Rights Reserved.

(Continued from issue of July 20th.

The object of albumenizing is to prevent the collodion film slipping off in the washing, which it would do if plain glass were used. Some makers float a weak strata of gelatine over the plate instead of albumen, but we are not in favor of this method, it being too messy and cumbersome. The old workers use an over-ripe collodion in the final polishing; this is good for holding the film, but there is the objection that it tends to slow the exposure.

N. B.—KEEP AWAY ALL DUST while performing this and following operations.

After the plates are dry they may be gathered up into blocks in the same order and placed on a shelf or on the collodionizing table and covered over with a piece of paper. Having secured a full quantity of albuminized plates, we will proceed to make some collodion, and as we are writing for lantern slides, we will only give the formulæ suitable for the same. Take

COLLODION

Gun cotton	1 oz.
Alcohol (absolute)	15 ozs.
Ether (concentrated sulphuric)	15 ozs.

Dissolve the cotton in the ether and half the alcohol, afterwards adding the bulk; this will produce thick medical collodion, and as it will keep indefinitely if properly corked, this is our stock solution.

IODIZERS

Ammonium, Bromide	40 grs.
Ammonium, Iodide	90 grs.
Cadmium, Iodide	90 grs.
Alcohol (absolute)	10 ozs.

Pulverize in mortar, dissolve without heat and filter; this iodizer in our hands has proved to be all that can be desired to obtain good results.

Alternate ones are:

(1) Potassium Iodide	70 grs.
Alcohol (absolute)	5 ozs.
(2) Cadmium Iodide	85 grs.
Alcohol (absolute)	5 ozs.

Pulverize, dissolve without heat. These can be used singly, or half and half to form double iodides, and give good results either way. To prepare and use, for summer work, take:

Collodion (stock)	4½ ozs.
Alcohol (absolute)	1½ ozs.
Ether (sulph. conc.)	¾ oz.
Iodizer	2¼ oz.

For winter use:

Collodion	4½ ozs.
Ether	2¼ ozs.
Iodizer	2¼ ozs.

This collodion should be prepared the day before use, and it will work better as it becomes older or riper, but loses its power if kept too long before use. It is best used within three or four weeks after being mixed. Care must be taken to decant from sediment, which will settle in from twelve to twenty-four hours, or the collodion may be kept in a filtering bottle and poured out as required into a collodion vial just previous to use, and any left over after completing the batch of slides should be returned to the supply, this method tending to keep it fresh and always ready for use. If it works too thick, it may be diluted with equal quantities of alcohol and ether, or mixed with some freshly made collodion; this new will act as a diluent to the old, and the old will ripen the new mixture, which may then be used at once.

COLLODION VIAL

Our next task is to prepare the

SILVER BATH

Distilled Water	60 ozs.
Silver Nitrate (re-crystallized)	5 ozs.
Potassium Iodide	2 grs.

The iodide should be added when the silver is dissolved. It will fall down as a yellow precipitate. Shake the solution well and filter into another bottle; label both bottles "silver bath" and keep them for this purpose only, not allowing, under any circumstances, a trace of alkaline substance to get anywhere near them or the baths will be spoilt.

We have now a bath that is perfectly neutral, and if our chemicals were absolutely pure, one that will give the finest results; but, as the least impurity spoils the bath and makes a difficult task to keep neutralizing it, it is well to avoid all this trouble by using an acid bath, which is accomplished by adding Nitric Acid (chemically pure) drop by drop, shaking well after each, until blue litmus paper takes a decidedly red tinge, when after pouring into two dipping baths, it is ready for use.

It is necessary that the baths should be kept in a light tight box, and the amateur carpenter comes in handy again. The box should be of sufficiently large dimensions to allow one bath to lay on the other with a piece of blotting paper between (another at bottom and one on top, to catch any dripping that may fall) and deep enough to allow the lid to fall clear from the top of dippers. The back should slope to allow the baths to recline, and a hinged lid to let out dust and dirt completes the job. Baths kept in this box will keep in good condition, allowing the ether to evaporate, and with occasional filtering require little more attention.

"THE STORY OF CHOPIN"
Gaumont hand-colored release of August 27th

Developers next demand our attention, and the following are all good:

Iron (Protosulphate)	4 ozs.
Acid (glacial Acetic)	4 ozs.
Alcohol, 95 per cent	8 ozs.
Water	64 ozs.

For use dilute with equal bulk of water. This developer is simple, easily prepared and answers every purpose. Some of us like to dabble in chemical experiments, and to gain rich results they may use:

(1)	Iron (Photosulph.)	2 ozs.
	Copper sulphate	2 drms.
	Water	20 ozs.
(2)	Baryta Nitrate	2 drms.
	Acid (Glacial Acetic)	1 oz.
	Alcohol (95 per cent)	2 ozs.
	Water	20 ozs.

Dissolve Nos. 1 and 2 in separate bottles, then mix, filter, and it is ready for use. A simpler developer is made from:

Iron Photo Sulph. Saturated solution.

Add water to Hydr. test 20 deg	96 ozs.
Acetic Acid No. 8	6 ozs.

Filter and use.

The tyro should test each of these developers and choose the one from which he gets the best results.

We will now presume everything is ready for a start, camera fixed up with negative ready for reduction properly focussed and to size, developing room all right, with an inverted preserve jar on which a quiet stream of water is playing from an anti-splash nozzle, or a short length of rubber tube, collodion ready in pouring vial, and silver bath in fine condition.

(To be continued.)

The "Castle Inn" Music Hall at Delaware Water Gap, Pa., which is one of the most up-to-date little houses in the country, speaks to us from that beautiful spot in the Pennsylvania hills. Mr. Joseph H. Graves is the efficient manager of this theatre, which is at the present time patronizing Independent service. A letter from an interested party tells us that it is one of the chief enjoyments of the famous resort.

* * * *

We suggest educational picture showing the proper method of eating corn on the cob.

* * * *

One can't get into a prayer meeting by following the crowd in hot weather.

* * * *

The only place where life is one glad sweet song is in the advertisement of some correspondent school for picture plays.

Kenton, Ohio.—The new picture and vaudeville theatre on North Detroit street has opened.

Thompsonville, Conn.—The Orpheum Theatre will be reopened as a moving picture and vaudeville house.

Youngstown, Ohio.—The Princess Theatre was opened for the public.

INTERESTING MOMENTS IN THE THANHOUSER 3-A-WEEK

A delightful fairy story starts the Thanhouser three-a-week for the week beginning Sunday, August 18. On that day is issued "As Others See Us," which tells how a pair of happy Pyxies invented an instrument known as a Truth Machine and tried it out on their neighbors in the village neighborhood. The idea of the machine was that you would go in one end of it as you seem to be, and then pop out the other the perfect person you think yourself, but as the very weak and actual mortal you are—that is, a trip through the machine reveals you to yourself and neighbors as you really are. The Pyxies did the village great good with their wonderful machine, since all the villagers tried hard to correct their faults and become perfect men and women in truth.

In "Her Darkest Hour," released Tuesday, August 20, a girl marries against the wishes of her wealthy father and is cut off by him. When the bridegroom discovers this he has no further use for her, inasmuch as he had loved her for her gold, and not for herself. In tears the deserted wife returns to her father. But the parent has replaced the daughter in his affections with a small niece, to whom he proposes to leave his fortune. He tells the daughter to leave his presence, and we find the girl striving in vain to change his attitude, and her little cousin clinging to him and entreating him to listen. But the old man is obdurate. It is a very pathetic moment—for the girl.

The old conductor on a street railway raises a son who becomes a champion ball player and marries an heiress who is a pronounced snob. That is the story of "Conductor 786," released Friday, August 23. The snobbish wife meets her father-in-law out of uniform and is exceedingly impressed with him, not knowing about his "undig-nified" occupation. And the groom tries hard to persuade his pa to quit being "Conductor 786" and become a gentleman of leisure, and offers to provide the funds himself. But the old conductor loves his job too well and just won't quit. His son, fearing that his wife will soon learn everything, sees the superintendent of the railway and gets him to discharge the old man. But the old man won't stay discharged. All the veteran employees of the road rally to his support and, going straight to the superintendent, demand that No. 786 be reinstated. So reinstated he is. Taking his car out for the day's first "run," he has as his passengers his son and his snob wife. The result of this startling meeting is graphically given in the picture.

Factory of the
"ELECTRA"
High Grade Nürnberg Carbons.

Nürnberg, Germany.

Hugo Reisinger, Sole Importer 11 Broadway N.Y.

The above picture represents the factory where the "Electra" Pink Label Carbons are made. This is the largest carbon factory in the world, employing over three thousand workmen.

The superior quality of "Electra" Pink Label Carbons is directly due to the fact that this factory makes all its own raw material, and for this reason "Electra" carbons are always uniform.

"Electra" Pink Label Carbons are the recognized standard and will be found to meet all requirements under all conditions.

They have now been on the market ever since the beginning of the moving picture industry, and even at that time when conditions were not so favorable as now and when machines and films had not yet reached their present perfection, they were giving excellent service.

Perfect projection is only possible with good light, and to produce good light it is essential to use carbons of the purest quality. For purity of quality "Electra" Pink Label Carbons are unequalled.

"Electra" Carbons can therefore always be depended upon to give a soft, steady, even light, and, moreover, require less adjustment than any other.

"Electra" Pink Label Carbons are imported exclusively by Hugo Reisinger, No. 11 Broadway, New York City, who will be glad to furnish samples to any manager or operator who wishes to give them a trial.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans have been filed in the Bureau of Building Inspection for a moving picture and vaudeville theatre to be erected at the corner of Germantown avenue and Durham street, for J. J. Keenan.

Bethel, Vt.—The Star Theatre has been sold to N. M. Johnson.

Richmond, Va.—Film Exchange, corporation. A. E. Watts, president; H. K. Wood, vice-president; W. N. Sellsberg, treasurer; J. S. Perry, secretary.

New York, N. Y.—Hoblitt Co., automatic machines; capital, $450,000. Incorporators: Frederick M. Boblitt, Richard H. Long, Charles R. Demarest, all of 84 William street, New York City.

Little Falls, N. Y.—Randolph Spraker, of Canajoharie, will open a moving picture and vaudeville theatre at 586 East Main street, and one at 503 East Main street.

Reading, Pa.—Moving picture theatre will be erected at the southeast corner of Tenth and Greenwich streets for Allen McKently and Fred Drexel.

Reading, Pa.—Rex moving picture theatre at Moss and Exeter streets for Charles Graul will be opened July 20.

Reading, Pa.—Rex moving picture at Seventeenth and Cotton streets will open shortly.

Joliet, Ill—The moving picture theatre on Chicago street will open shortly.

Pottstown, Pa.—J. William Schaeffer will build the first moving picture theatre in Boyertown.

Lynchburg, Va.—The moving picture theatre on South Bridge street has opened.

Baltimore, Md.—Anderson's Theatre, 320 South Broadway, has opened.

Waterbury, Conn.—Plans are being drawn for a moving picture theatre on East Main street for A. Sanditz.

Roswell, New Mexico.—The Lyceum Theatre Company have purchased the Majestic Theatre.

New York, N. Y.—Moving picture theatre will be erected at 180th street and Honeywell avenue for T. Giordano, of 864 East 180th street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George Brosius is conducting a moving picture business at 52d and Market streets.

Abonnement 1 fr. pour le monde entier

CINÉMA-REVUE

Journal indépendant d'Informations
Supplement mensuel à "Cinema"
Annuaire de la projection fixe et animée
Numéro spécimen sur demande
Bureau 118, rue d'Assas Paris

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 7.—New theatres seem to be the ruling passion with managers in this city at the present time, for no sooner did Messrs. Blaschke and Errickson, of the Photo Play, announce that they had taken a lease on the building adjoining their theatre, than Eddie Garvel, of the Lyceum, stepped forward with the statement that his colleagues had nothing on him; that ere long he would close down the Lyceum for repairs, change the lobby, making it smaller, install all new chairs, put the screen in the front of the theatre, and give the city another picture palace.

Moose Day at the Park

The greatest day that Hot Springs has ever seen at Whittington Park was pulled off there this week, when Moose Day, under the auspices of the local lodge of that name, held aquatic sports in the lake, athletic events in the ball park, played a game between the Moose and the Elks team, and at night gave a great minstrel show in the summer theatre. And I was some busy, believe me, assisting with the program, doing the press work, playing first on the Moose nine, and doing the interlocutor in the minstrel show. Never again, my brethren!

The proceeds went to a fund to send a big delegation to the national convention of the Loyal Order of Moose of the World, which will be held in Kansas City on the week of the nineteenth inst., and we managed to clean up over $500. The local Moose are after a national sanitarium, and unless all signs fail, we will return with this from Kansas City. The minstrel show was the best home talent affair that has ever been seen here. We had an even dozen songs in the first part, two professional acts to assist, while the olio brought out five good vaudeville acts and sketches and a big after-piece.

There were quite a number of good pictures here the past week. At the Princess "The Portrait of My Lady Ann" was well received and proved to have been staged in a most beautiful manner. It made a big hit, and the American reel, "The Passing of the Race," was also most impressive. It taught a lesson and contained enough sobs to please the "sobbing sisterhood." When Comet turned loose the reel that showed how Reggie broke the college rules, one wondered why Reggie did not also break his contract at the same time. Comet, let us see something worth while, please.

A Few Reviews

Two Biograph pictures were enjoyed. One of them, "The Speed Demon," was silly enough to cause round after round of laughter, and the other, "The Sands of Dee," gave Biograph an opportunity of flashing some ocean waves. I might add that the briny in these parts is quite popular, for that's all we ever get to see of it, as the old Ozarks and a touch of prairie constitute our scenery. Cines dont usually "slop and gush over," but in "The Daughter's Diplomacy" the floor was moistened. Save for the pretty daughter, who, had she wanted consolation, could have received barrels of it if she would have stepped from the picture into the audience, the reel wasn't worth looking at. It was too "mushy" for "we 'uns" who like action, and lots of it. Edison, pleased with his reel, "How the Boys Fought the Indians," while "Partners for Life" gave us the return of Mary Fuller. This little lady is a big hit with "The Lady in the Baths," but, Mary, you are getting round-shouldered and allow your clothes to hang any old way, not only in that picture, which may have been what was desired, but in other reels. "The Lady in the Baths" did not put me wise to this. I spotted it myself, but you are a very sweet and charming little lady, just the same. Now, I'm not so horrid, after all, am I?

We Sure Like Kalem

Kalem sent us two good reels the past week, "The Lair of the Wolf," which proved to be a real human interest story, and "The Tragedy of the Desert." If there is one company in the moving picture world that is popular in this city it is the Kalem Company, and their Egyptian pictures, which are a big feature at the New Central Theatre, are always sure to attract a capacity house. We like Kalem in Hot Springs, for we know that they are delivering the goods, and out here the question is not "What have you been?" but "What can you do?" Kalem has showed us, hence we back their game to the limit.

Here's Progressiveness!

Believing in the value of motion pictures as a medium through which great interest can be awakened in the church, as well as a powerful factor in illustrating Biblical subjects of motion photography, the Christian Church, Ouachita and Grand avenues, will install a moving picture machine and give an entertainment of motion pictures each Sunday evening as a prelude to the regular Sunday evening service.

The picture machine has already been procured and it is expected that the first entertainment of this kind will be given one week from to-morrow night.

Believe in Progressiveness

The young pastor of this congregation, Percy G. Cross, believes in being progressive, and in this respect he has the hearty support of the leading members of his church.

It is their intention to get Biblical subjects whenever that is possible; also motion pictures of scenic value, views of foreign countries, as well as educational films, with an occasional dramatic story, the kind that contains a moral and the general effect of whic his good, and show these pictures as a prelude to the regular Sunday evening service.

The pictures, it is hoped, will be illustrated by a lecturer, and the progressive members feel that it will awaken an interest in the church.

Pointed But True

"The trouble with the church generally," said a prominent member of the congregation to a Daily News reporter, "is that there are too many moss-backs who try to retard progress and church work; men who are not willing to take advantage of the progressive mediums through which additional interest in the church can be aroused, but who want to continue along the same old hackneyed lines and who are ready to criticise adversely anything that appears to be modern and progressive when used in connection with the church.

"I don't think that if Christ were on earth to-day that we would hear Him speak of camels and deserts or cite His parables in the manner in which He did then, but I believe that He would be progressive and discuss present day evils in present day terms, and that He would be in the front ranks, waging His war against sin with weapons of the present day and trying to promote interest in the church with present day methods.

"We realize the value of motion pictures and know that they are the most entertaining of all amusements. They can be made a power to increase interest in Bible study. Take the many stories that have been taken from the Bible and used by the film manufacturers and they are more powerful than the most graphic sermon that can be preached, for the reason that you see it enacted as the Bible says it happened. We are going to give a Sunday picture show of this nature. We realize that there will be some 'old fogies' who will yell their heads off at the start, but we will get good results, just the same, and by having the pictures explained with a lecture, we are reasonably certain that interest in this feature as a prelude to the regular Sunday evening sermon will be enhanced."

Result Elsewhere Great

This is the first church in Hot Springs to make the motion picture machine part of its service, and if the result here is the same as it has been in such cities as Chicago, Philadelphia, New York and Denver, where churches have given moving picture shows Sunday night as a prelude to the regular Sunday service, or taking the place of the Sunday evening sermon, the Christian church is destined to witness a material increase in membership and a greater interest in church work.

Of course there will be many who will state that this is just a little too progressive, but it has been tried with great success in other places. One of the recent Biblical stories that is being asked for by churches throughout the country was seen last evening in the New Central Theatre. "The Death of Saul," a beautiful hand-colored Pathe film, which told in graphic manner the life of this well-known character in Scripture. A number of the city's ministers saw this film and enjoyed it.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

THANHOUSER

AS OTHERS SEE US (Aug. 18).—If, like Peter Pan, you believe in fairies, you will have no difficulty in realizing that this story is true.

Pyxies are generally better than fairies, for they take a great interest in the doings of their human neighbors, and when they see things going wrong are very likely to interfere and set matters right.

Two energetic pyxies lived near a certain village, and were much grieved to find that the majority of the people overrated themselves. So they decided to straighten things out.

Did you ever see a Pyxies' Truth Machine? It is a wonderful invention, and any person who goes in one end of it comes out the other, not as he seems to be but as he really is. So these pyxies decided to test the contrivance, and place the villagers where they really belonged.

A notice posted on the village square caused great curiosity. There was no trouble in securing customers, for the privilege of trying the contrivance was free.

And a free show always does a big business.

The pyxies put the villagers through the machine, and revealed them in their true colors. Then, being kind-hearted pyxies, they restored them to their former station in life, for, of couse, it would never do to let others see us as we really are all the time. The chances are that none of us would be happy.

But these villagers learned their lesson, and each one who had been through the mill tried to correct his or her faults. And when any person does that there is no fear that the pyxies will bring around their truth machine, and make us realize how little our neighbors like us. On the same reel is:

WARNER'S WAXWORKS.—John Strong is a well-known explorer, and returning to his native town after a very successful voyage he is honored by the proprietor of the local waxworks place by having a life-sized wax figure of himself displayed in the museum. Strong resents the publicity forced upon him thus, and when he sees the wax figure itself, which is a grotesque likeness, he determines that he will not have it on exhibition. He tries to buy the figure, and in various ways tries to get possession of it. Warner, the proprietor of the waxworks, however, is vastly proud of his possession, and refuses to sell.

Assisted by two young men (friends of his daughter's) Strong has the figure spirited away, while he himself takes its place in the museum. The two young men carry off the dummy in a carriage, under the nose of the proprietor, who does not know that Strong has substituted himself for the wax figure. The carriage containing the wax figure, which, being unable to bend, two young men are forced to leave hanging out of the window, is spied by a policeman, who starts in pursuit. He suspects foul play. When the policeman and the crowd which follow him finally catch up with the carriage they are horror stricken at catching the two young men in the act of hurling their victim overboard. The supposed murderers are arrested despite their protestations of innocence and marched off to jail. The appearance of Strong himself at the right moment, happy and very much alive, turns the supposed tragedy into a farce, when he tells the true story of the affair.

HER DARKEST HOUR (Aug. 20).—The daughter of a wealthy man imagined she was deeply in love with her father's chauffeur, and demanded she be allowed to marry him. When her father very properly and angrily refused, the young woman was urged by her suitor to elope with him and very foolishly consented.

In a short time her romance was utterly dispelled. She found that her husband only married her for her money, and when word came from her father that he had disinherited his daughter and his cousin's child would be his heiress, the disappointed chauffeur threw off the mask. He bluntly told his wife that he had no intention of supporting her, and that if she was unable to secure the money he meant that she should shift for herself. Then he very promptly deserted her, and the last that was heard of him was that he was beating his way out West on a freight train.

The wife, unused to supporting herself, soon fell into financial straits. The few valuables she had were sold or pawned and finally her one hope was that her father might be induced to relent.

Wearily she trudged her way to his country estate. At the gateway, faint and exhausted, she was approached by a little girl, who kindly asked her what she wanted. Then the child, at her request, led the woman into the presence of her father.

The interview was an unsatisfactory one. The man showed no signs of relenting, but with his arms about the child told his daughter that the little one had sole possession of his affections and that he did not care where his daughter went, or what became of her. He ordered her away and she departed, her beart full of bitterness and hatred of tbe child who had supplanted her.

She was hardly out of sight before the little girl pleaded with the old man to forget and forgive, and finally won him over. Joyously she raced after the woman, and overtook her on a rustic bridge that spanned a little lake on the ground. The woman, however, was not grateful. She spurned the child and proceeded on her way, despite the tiny arms that were stretched out over the railing of the bridge.

Then the accident occurred. The child leaned too hard on the frail railing, it gave way and she fell into the water beneath. The woman heard her cries, but at first refused to extend any assistance. In fact, sbe wickedly rejoiced that "the interloper" was in danger, and she gloated as the helpless little one sank beneath the water. However, her better nature asserted itself. She leaped from the bridge, rescued the child, and brought ber safely to shore.

From a distance the woman's father had witnessed the accident, but age and feebleness prevented him from arriving in time to extend any aid. He realized the temptation to which his daughter had been subjected, and how bravely she had overcome it. There was no need for "the interloper" to plead for forgiveness. The father's arms were outstretcbed and he embraced his erring daughter whom he vowed to cherish for the rest of his life. And for the future, he had two daughters instead of one.

CONDUCTOR 786 (Aug. 23).—He was proud of the fact that he was the oldest conductor on the line, and the passengers along the route were his friends. He often said that it was a pleasure to work, and he meant it. For the old man had no one dependent upon him, his wants were few, and his one ambition was to die in harness—but at some date far in the future.

The old man's only child was a son, absent from home for several years, and who was winning fame and cash as a big league ball player. The son married a woman with a little money and very little sense, and he was afraid that his bride would be shocked to death to find a street car conductor was her father-in-law. So he pleaded with the old man to give up his job, and make his home with them at a fashionable hotel.

The conductor was not obstinate; he compromised. He removed to the hotel, meekly donned a dress suit, and tried to enjoy French cooking.

But in the morning he sneaked out in time to take out "the first day car," which was his by right of long and faithful service. Unfortunately for him, his son and daughter-in-law happened to strike the same car, and there was more trouble for the old man, who only wanted to be left alone with the work he loved.

The son, spurred on by remarks and tears of his better half, made another attempt to lead his father to a life of luxury. The superintendent was a personal friend, so the young man wrote and asked him to please "fire" father, so that he could lead a life of dress suit gayety. The superintendent consented, and the old man was broken-hearted when told that his services were no longer required. Leaving the office in tears, he was surrounded by his sympathetic comrades, and when he told them what had happened there was an impromptu indignation meeting. Finally a delegation of the oldest and most reliable men waited upon the superintendent and asked him to reconsider his decision. All the time the oldest conductor stood meekly by, with tears in his eyes. The superintendent was a kind-hearted man, and he made the veteran very happy by telling bim to take out his car as usual.

The oldest conductor started out with a cheery smile for everyone, but inwardly he felt hurt. The superintendent had shown him the son's letter, and the conductor blamed the son's wife. He longed for a chance to show his resentment, but did not know what to do.

Then the car stopped, and the oldest conductor leaned out from the platform, gallantly ready to help his passengers aboard.

Standing near the step was his son and his son's wife.

For the first time in his many years of service there was a scowl on the face of the oldest conductor. One hand shot out, barring the way. The other reached for the bell cord and gave two savage pulls. Then as the car started, the words of the man on the rear platform floated back.

All he said was: "Take the next car."

What he really meant was that he had cut his son off, just as the angry old noblemen do in story books.

AMERICAN

THE BATTLE-GROUND (Aug. 12.)—In "The Battle-Ground" the American Film Mfg. Co. releases on Monday, August 12th, a two-reel problem play that for novelty of plot and delicacy of execution will surely create a sensation in motion-picture circles. The story is quite without parallel or similarity so far as its producers could find. A brief resume of its unique situations will show you why.

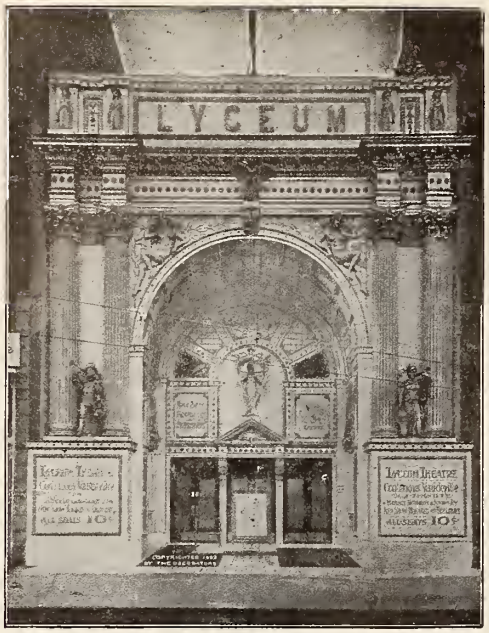
Bob Carroll, a handsome, careless boy badly in love with a village belle, Anna Whitcomb, after a betrothal is forced into the priesthood much against his wishes. This is brought about through the combined influence of his fatber, his devout Catholic mother and a well-meaning old priest, a friend of the family.

Anna, piqued by Bob's decision, hastily weds a village lad of intemperate habits. Six years later the little home is going the downward path. A child, born shortly after the marriage, becomes dirty, unkempt; the mother gradually acquires the drink curse, and one day after a stormy scene Anna derisively tells her husband that Bob and not be is the father of the child. After that Jim, the husband, becomes steadily more addicted to drink; Anna descends the moral scale to its lowest depths.

In the meantime Bob, now a quiet, devout priest, goes into the Tenderloin on a mission of mercy. He finds the child and without knowing his relation to it reports the incident to his mother at home. Continuing his trip on a later day, he discovers in a dive the Anna of his former love, now frightfully changed and too drunk to recognize him. Meanwhile the mother has had the child removed to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Anna, discovering the absence of her child, goes there in search of it. She is refused custody of it and Mrs. Carroll, little knowing the true cause of it all, sees in Anna only a stray soul in need of help. She causes the moral regeneration of Anna, secures work for her in a hospital and takes the child home to live with her, not knowing, of course, that the little girl was really her granddaughter.

One day Anna leaves the hospital for a stroll. Passing a Catholic church she enters to make confession. Before a cross praying is Father Bob. There is an awful instant of recognition during which Anna accuses Bob of the crime. This is Bob's first knowledge of his offense and marks the day of his death.

We find him grayer after that and more devout if possible. His failing health is noted by the mother, who invites him to ride with her. The family automobile runs down and kills Jim. Anna's husband, and the injured man is quickly hurried to the hospital. At the hospital gate the whole tragedy is unfolded;



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Anna understands then that Mrs. Carroll is Bob's mother; Mrs. Carroll that Bob is the father of her adopted child, while Mrs. Carroll realizes her terrible folly in forcing her son into the priesthood. On his death bed Jim forgives Bob. A few days of awful mental torture follow. Father Bob steadily declines and one day in his study expires easily with the crucifix tightly clenched in his hands.

Harry Lonsdale plays the role of Father Bob. His interpretation of the part, say those who have seen advance prints, is beautiful beyond comparison. The delicacy of the plot calls for the most superb acting and in that Mr. Lonsdale has taken any possible sting from the plot. His awful sorrow over his youthful error, the mental torture caused by his sudden realization of that error while praying in the church sanctuary, ennobles the part and clearly portrays the great heart tragedy of the story.

He was ably supported in the part of Anna by Miss Vereen, a Frohman actress of strong emotional powers. Miss Vereen has a number of immensely strong scenes in the dives and her decaying home.

GAUMONT

STORY OF CHOPIN (Aug. 21).—This is a hand-colored, one-reel production which faithfully depicts the sorrowful circumstances that were welded together in the life of Frederic Chopin, the eminent Polish composer. The first scene depicts Marienbad, 1832, when Chopin bids farewell to Maria Wodzinska, whom he silently adores, before departing for Paris. Later on we see the young musician at the large French capitol, where sorrow continually knocks at his door. To cap the climax, he receives a letter from his prized Maria informing him that her parents insist upon her marriage to a count. She assures him that she would prefer the aureole of a musician to the coronet of a nobleman, but she must obey. This blow stuns him forever, but some of his happiness is restored through his acquaintance with George Sand (Madame Dudevant). This friend of his who figured so largely in the direction and course of his after life takes him to the Island of Majorca, where he is surrounded by a coterie of the most famous musicians of his time; Liszt, Meyerbeer, Mickiewicz, Heinrich Heine and Delacroix. While in their company the eminent composer seeks an inspiration for a funeral march. In order to get the appropriate atmosphere, he visits the crypt on the Majorcan Isle which had long been deserted by the monks. The environment proved effectively inducive to his aim and the greatest funeral march ever penned by the hand of man resulted. After a span of eight years the relations of George Sand and Chopin come to a rupture which fact preys upon his enfeebled and sickly mind until it drives him back to Paris to rid himself of his despair. At this point some intricate and marvellous double exposure work reproduces the memories of his former loves which materially revive his genius and soothe his sorrows.

However no one stretch of happiness was long lived in the life of this victim of melancholy. We see him passing away on the 17th of October, 1849, whilst the Countess Potoca at his request sings him into eternal slumber with a melody from one of his most famous contemporaries.

MARRIAGE ON THE RUN (Aug. 29).—Pretty Suzanne has been seriously ill at her home in the city. The doctor has proven his skill in the medical profession by pulling her through when all who saw her predicted that there was very little chance of her ultimate recovery. However, now that she is again able to walk the physician feels that her quarters in the crowded metropolis are anything but inducive to complete convalescence, wherefore she must take a trip to the country and remain in some favorable location until her recovery is complete. It so happens that the pretty little twenty year old convalescent has an uncle, the Reverend Humphrey, in a suburban village in an adjoining county. It is with him that she decides to spend her time and consequently arrives on the morning of the day on which the picture opens, prepared to stay at least a month or two. However, the rural atmosphere proves just what she needed and after a month she is quite as well as ever she was.

Naturally enough Suzanne becomes a source of great interest to the various young clerical students who board at the home of her uncle and one of them, the most promising, as well as the most bashful, has become terribly smitten with the charms of the visitor. After a great deal of comedy produced by the hashful courting of the student Benedict elopement is decided upon. Poor Benedict, however, has but one suit and that the conventional ministerial rohe. Suzanne, however, overlooks so small a fault and the two without knowledge of anyone else hasten away to the home of a friendly minister in a town some distance from that in which they had their courting. The minister performs the ceremony to their entire satisfaction and the two hearts with hut a single thought arrive at the nearby hotel in order to change their costumes. Benedict calls the waiter, entrusts a large sum of money to him and has approved honeymoon costumes procured for both himself and Suzanne. In consequence we find a new Benedict emerging from the hotel taking honeymoon strolls with his sweet little prize.

At this point Suzanne becomes repentant and decides to advise her uncle of her elopement. She consequently addresses a telegram to him. The suddenness of the news quite upsets the placid life of Reverend Humphrey, who decides that he must pursue them, no matter how much discomfort he might encounter in locating them. He therefore starts off for the metropolis, encountering no end of difficulties. For instance, in the same quarter of the coach of the train in which he is pursuing his journey are several foreign families, each with an overabundance of young ones. These are attracted hy the costume of the minister and cause him no end of inconvenience and humiliation. Then, too, so slight is his experience in the crowded streets of a busy city that he almost loses his life between the rush of horses, automobiles, carriages and wagons. Finally, however, he tracks the elopers to their hotel, but Suzanne and Benedict are prepared for him. They prepare an elaborate reception together with a splendid spread, realizing that if uncle has one weakness it is his fondness for his stomach. Uncle makes his appearance just as the young couple sit down to the tahle and are drinking to each other's health. He sees there is no other alternative, that it is too late to undo what has been done and consequently makes the best of it by drawing an enormous portion of Vermuth for himself and wishing them success and happiness throughout life.

MAJESTIC

TOODLES (Aug. 18.)—Toodles is a very handsome little Boston Bull. Even Harry thinks so. But his sweetheart Anna raves over it and pets it so constantly that hetween the dog and the theatre, where Anna is playing, there is very little of her time left for Harry.

Anna's mother sides with Harry and they scheme to get her to give up both the stage and the dog and marry Harry. A note is sent to the theatre telling her that Toodles is sick. Anna, dressed in her Gaby Deslys gown, is about to step out upon the stage when she receives the note. She leaves the theatre immediately and rushing through the streets in her stage clothes reaches home to find Toodles all bundled up in bed with Harry feeling his pulse and giving him medicine.

Her mother and Harry make such a fuss about the dog and pay such slight attention to her that she understands for the first time how silly she has been. When Harry offers her an engagement ring if she will give up the dog and the stage she gladly accepts his offer, especially as she has lost her position because of her hasty exit from the theatre in the middle of a performance.

THE NEW BUTLER (Aug. 20.)—Mr. and Mrs. Carthan, a wealthy couple, decide to visit their niece, Mrs. Jones, hoping at the same time to make the acquaintance of her husband whom they have never met. They telegraph that they will come the following week. A short time after the message leaves Mr. Carthan finds he will be unable to go the following week owing to a business engagement so they decide to leave at once.

The Joneses are well worked up over the telegram and seeing their house in disorder they start to fix it. When the Carthans arrive they find Mr. Jones busy with an apron tied around him and they at once mistake him for the butler. They order him to take their things and before he can recover from the shock he has done as they told him. The wife, not wishing to tell her relatives that the butler is her husband and wishing to keep up the deception, insists that Jones play the part of butler while the Carthans remain. She tells her relations that her husband is away on a business trip. Jones quite forgets that he is the butler and sits down with the visitors to enjoy the conversation. He is soon told to leave the room. He decides to throw up the job and put on his good clothes. He is caught in the act of dressing by Mr. Carthan, who calls him to account for trying on his master's clothes. He proves to be a very awkward butler, as he spills the soup on Mr. Carthan's waistcoat. Mr. Carthan demands that he be discharged and Mrs. Jones, unable to do anything else, bids the butler leave the house. He goes to the home of a friend and finally decides he will get his own clothes. So he sends a note to his wife bidding her throw a suit case full of his clothes out of the window. She does this and he gets the suit case which he takes to his friend's home, where he dons some of the garments and shaves off bis mustache. He then returns home and Mrs. Jones introduces her husband to the Carthans, who, although very glad to meet him, cannot help commenting on his likeness to the discharged butler.

Although his wife is at first distressed over the shaving of her husband's mustache, when he reminds her of the predicament she put him in she laughs and embraces him.

COMET

THE HOLDUP IN BUCKEYE CANYON (Aug. 10).—A most unique and engrossing tale, punctuated with sufficient thrills and hair-raising situations to suit the most blase lover of motion photography, is disclosed in this enlivening film. The hero of the drama is Jim Mason. He is an express messenger and at the opening of the story he is getting along famously. Jim is enamored of Rose Mitchell and his devotion to her causes bim to neglect his duty. He is reprimanded by an official of the express company for failing to properly care for a box containing valuables left in his charge. Jim is eventually discharged, and vows to get even for what he regards as unjust treatment, so he elects to turn thief and rob the stage coach on the next trip. His plans are well laid and single handed with a gun, his only weapon, he holds up the stage, secures the coveted box and decamps with it to the woods. Rose has not seen Jim for several days and is worried over his absence. She goes in search of him and from a vantage point in the mountains above beholds the robbery and the escape of the daring bandit in the canyon below. Ignorant as to the identity of the robber she fires and wounds Jim in the leg. He returns the fire and the bullet penetrates the rim of her bat. She falls to the ground and manages to crawl to a thick underbrush without being recognized by Jim. Rose arises and horror stricken discovers that the bandit is nobody but Jim, her own sweetheart. She watches him and sees where he has hidden his loot. Then she returns to him and helps him to an old hut. On the pretense of securing him some food and medicine she goes to the place where Jim has buried the loot, takes it and is about to enter the hut when the sheriff and his posse arrive. She then hands over the box to the autborities and when the posse departs rejoins Jim.

Several weeks pass and as a reward she receives a check for $500 from the express company. When Jim is able to get about she tells him of the check. Explanations then ensue, and when Rose reveals ner part in the affair they decide to tear up the check, begin life anew, and forget Jim's deflection from the path that leads to the other way.

"THELMA"

Marie Corelli's great novel. Released Sat., Aug. 31st. 3 smashing big reels. A sensational feature that you can't afford to miss. Order quick!

RELIANCE

Coming releases: "A Man Among Men," Sat., Aug. 17th; "One Against One," Wed., Aug. 21st; "North of 53," Sat., Aug. 24th; "The Secret Service Man," Wed., Aug. 28th.

Sold only through the FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

TWO WOMEN AND ONE MAN (Aug. 12.)—A bunch of violets plays a prominent part in the stirring and engrossing drama of every day life. Here we have cleverly portrayed the perfidy of a woman about to become the wife of an honorable man and the treachery of his best friend. At the opening of the tale Blanche Belmont is the first woman. She came into the life of Herbert Lord, a young man at a time when he had not sown his wild oats. They grew up together, so to speak, and both learn to love each other dearly. He is the first to grow tired, but like woman of her ilk her love does not waver. She is even steadfast and true, with him as her idol, and God never to part until death decrees. Herbert meets another woman—the second one. She is to all intents and appearances different, and when he asks her to become his wife she readily consents. What to do with Blanche is the next question that confronts him. He cannot discard her like a broken toy. No—there is surely another way. He must make a settlement on her. Perhaps a large sum of money might act as surcease for her wounded heart. But Blanche is made of sterner metal and she justly rejects the offer. Piqued and remorseful as a parting gift Herbert sends Blanche a bunch of violets as has been his daily custom for many years. But Blanche does not want them and returns them accompanied with a curt note in which she suggests that his fiancée, Eleanor, might wear them on her betrothal night, which is set for the following day. It is a joyful occasion. Hundreds of guests are on hand to welcome and congratulate Herbert on the acquisition of such a charming girl, and Eleanor is made the recipient of many praises. The attendant excitement or perhaps a guilty conscience unnerves Eleanor, and she faints. The scene forthwith changes from one of gayety to immediate consternation. The guests are dismissed and sad and lonely Herbert turns to his "best friend" Baron Henri Strang, an adventurer, and implores him to look after the fainting girl while he seeks the services of a physician. The Baron is only too willing to lend succor for it gives him an opportunity to renew the clandestine love making which has been going on for some time between the arch pair. Taking Eleanor in his arms he embraces her passionately. She does not repulse him and to all appearances reciprocates the affection. At a crucial moment Herbert returns. Finding bis fiancée in the Baron's arms he denounces them both, tears off the violets which Eleanor wears on her corsage, and which have left a tell-tale stain on the Baron's shirt front, flings the flowers into the Baron's face and strikes him. This consequently provokes a duel and Strang is killed. Penitent Herbert goes back to Blanche and enters her apartments in time to frustrate her attempt at suicide. Then he confides to her all that has happened. She is rejoiced at his coming and when he pleads penitence she is only too willing to forgive him.

ESSANAY

THE TALE OF A CAT (Aug. 9.)—Cashman and Missimer both love the charming Miss Blanchard. Eleanor finds herself in a predicament, for she returns both loves and cannot decide whom to appoint guardian of her heart and hand. Also she has the cutest white kitten that is the delight of her life. Both swains call one evening and both refuse to marry her if the cat must be included in the bargain. So Missimer hits on a brilliant scheme and, next morning, steals the cat from her meal of milk on the back porch in order to get rid of the pest. Complications now set in. Miss Blanchard declares she cares not to live with her pet at large and swears she will marry the one who finds it. Missimer, of course, is elated and, next morning, phones that he has found the cat and will bring it right over. On the way he stops to rest, an exchange of baskets occurs with a poultry boy and Missimer delivers a big goose instead of the cat. Meanwhile, the boy arrives at Cashman's boarding house and delivers the cat. Cashman finds it and prepares to make his conquest, but the cat is stolen by a boy who puts it in a bag of groceries that is delivered to Miss Blanchard. The horrified grocery man throws the cat out before she sees it and a peddler takes it away, meets Missimer on the street and exchanges the cat for the goose. Again Missimer loses the cat in a florist shop when a child takes it from the basket. A boy steals the cat from the child and throws it in Cashman's auto. Missimer arrives at Miss Blanchard's house and tears his hair on finding the cat missing again. A moment later the delighted Cashman drives up with the lost feline in his arms and wins his lady fair, while Missimer storms off raging at the cussedness of the world in general.

THE LITTLE SHERIFF (Aug. 10.)—A sensational and nerve-tingling Western melodrama in which a clever little pantomimist plays the title role. Replete with the good old-fashioned thrills and spirit of the West.

Dan Felton, a ranchman, has a wife and little four year old boy, Bobbie, who is the pride of the community, especially Jim Watson, the sheriff. Watson calls one day and takes Bobbie back to his office on the bronco. A few moments later Felton is taken ill, is put to bed by Mrs. Felton and dies from the effects of a sun-stroke and weak heart. Bill Lewis, a cowboy on the ranch, is sent to summon the sheriff. Little Bobbie is playing "sheriff" when Watson takes him in his arms and tells him his daddy is dead. A few months pass and Lewis proves himself a scoundrel by trying to force Mrs. Felton into marrying him. She strikes him in the face and takes refuge in the ranchhouse. Lewis forces an entrance that night, but is met at gun's point by the brave woman who backs him into a storeroom and locks the door. Meanwhile, Bobbie runs off down the trail in search of some of the boys and is picked up by a bunch returning from a dance. He gasps out his mother's peril; the sheriff is informed and heads a posse back at once. Battering his way out of the storeroom, Lewis is searching for Mrs. Felton when the boys arrive and drag him off to receive his just deserts. On the moonlit porch Sheriff Watson rides little Bobbie on his knee while the widow looks on happily. "You've got to be my little sheriff always, Bobbie," declares Watson, then is thrown into consternation when the little fellow stoutly maintains that his mama is a good sheriff also. "Don't you want her, too?" he asks. For a moment Watson and the widow hesitate, then the sheriff takes the happy widow in his arms and kisses her tenderly while Bobbie claps his hands joyfully.

EDISON

HOLDING THE FORT (Aug. 14).—A newly married young couple are anxious not to be recognized as bride and groom so they decide to arrive separately at the hotel. Accordingly, the bridegroom wires the hotel to reserve a room and then leaves, his wife following on the next train.

The hotel proprietor becomes rattled by a sudden rush of business, and upon receiving the bridegroom's telegram, assigns him to room 23, marking the number on the telegram but neglecting to enter the reservation in the proper way. The result is that when another wire for a room reservation comes from Eliza Merrill, a somewhat mature lady and a delegate to the convention now in session, the cashier makes the mistake of assigning the same room to her. The bridegroom arrives, goes to his room with his luggage and then leaves for a little stroll.

Meanwhile Eliza arrived and is shown the same room. She takes immediate possession and commands the bell boy to remove the other person's baggage. When the bridegroom returns and finds Eliza in possession of his room he becomes furious. Neither will give up the room. Then ensue some most laughable scenes in which the young man endeavors to drive her out of the room, but nothing avails. Her grim determination is too much for him. Meanwhile the host and his cashier have a heated altercation over the situation in the office below.

The solution comes with the arrival of the young bride who is dumbfounded to find her husband in the room with a crusty old woman who refuses to budge an inch. The host appears and attempts to explain but only succeeds in making matters worse and causing the bride to weep. As the sympathizing young husband withdraws his handkerchief to dry her tears something falls to the floor which is picked up by the grim old Eliza. It proves to be a few grains of rice. She relents, picks up her belongings and retreats as gracefully as she can, realizing that they are a newly-married couple.

This is a very different comedy from the usual and is bound to be a success.

THE HARBINGER OF PEACE (Aug. 16).—A delightfully human and lifelike story of the country and its people. John Wilson and Bill Andrews, two old farmers, have adjoining farms and have been lifelong friends. Wilson's daughter, Dora, is engaged to marry Bill Andrew's son, Dick.

A cow belonging to Andrews gets into Wilson's pet vegetable patch, doing considerable damage. The old fellows cannot agree upon a settlement and a heated argument ensues, followed by a declaration of absolute hostility. The bars are put up between the two farms and each forbids his child to see or speak to the other again. Dick and Dora, however, meet later and agree to marry and both go to tell the decision to their parents. Old Andrews blusters a bit but finally consents, relishing the prospect of "having one" on his erstwhile old friend. Dora's father is obdurate and drives her from home. His bitterness causes him to blot her name from the family bible and otherwise try to obliterate her memory. The young people marry and live with Dick's parents.

Old Wilson refuses to hear his daughter's name mentioned, so, when her little son is born a year later, the old man is ignorant of the fact. On the occasion of one of his rare Sunday visits to the village post-office, the doctor tells old Wilson of the birth of his daughter's child and that he has been named after his grandfather. But a little later, upon his return home at Easter time he sits at the table and accidentally his hand falls to the bible page where his eye is attracted to the passage "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Stealing a look across into the Andrews' farm, he sees all but Dora and her child outside and proceeds to their house by stealth. There he is found by Dora with the baby in his arms.

A reconciliation takes place; the Andrews family is invited to his home and the breach is closed when he re-enters Dora's name in the bible and adds that of her child, "The Harbinger of Peace."

CINES—Geo. Kleine

THE DANGER LINE (Aug. 10).—Blanche, the charming wife of Mr. Berni, a lawyer, is fond of society, and when her husband devotes all of his time to business affairs she is much in the company of Robert Martin, a handsome, care-free fellow. The affair is causing considerable comment, when her brother, Paul, becomes alarmed.

After vainly trying to convince her husband of the impending danger, he decides to save his sister himself. He obtains an introduction to one of Robert's old flames, a well-known actress, who is easily persuaded to write a note to Robert, requesting him to give her a farewell dinner for old time's sake at a fashionable hotel. Paul then gains Blanche's consent to dine with him at the same place, the same evening, where they can see without being seen the party at the other table.

The farewell banquet proves a hilarious affair and ends in a loud quarrel. Thus Blanche discovers Robert's true character, and realizes that if she had yielded further to his attentions to what depths she might have fallen. Without a word she leaves the table and goes straight home. In great despair over her past folly, she seriously considers taking her own life, but is prevented just in time by the appearance of her little daughter.

ECLIPSE—Geo. Kleine

THE RIVALS (Aug. 14).—Walter, a handsome young artist with ambitions greater than his earthly possessions, falls in love with Diana, the fair daughter of Count Giuliano, but when he comes to declare his passion the proud father turns him away.

His wealthy rival, Silvio, has better success in his suit at first, but the young lady finally refuses to wed him. The rival lovers are in deep despair, when one day the master-sculptor announces that there is to be a great competition open to all artists of the city, the winner of which is to receive the sum of $5,000. They both enter with great zest and have an equal chance to win the coveted prize. One day Silvio notices that Walter's work is slightly superior to his own, and during the night enters the studio to mutilate the work of his rival. He is in the midst of his malevolent work when suddenly the master enters, and wrathfully drives the culprit away in disgrace.

He then restores the work to its former beauty, and as it turns out later Walter wins the first prize, and ultimately another prize far more dear to him than the gold.

REPUBLIC

THE CURSE OF DRINK (Aug. 19).—Madge Holton, a Kentucky Mountain girl, is loved by Joe Calway, who with his father is engaged in illicit whiskey traffic. Madge's mother resents his attentions because all the misery of her life has been caused by her intemperate husband, who consorts with moonshiners and neglects his family, finally drinking himself to death.

In bitter rage she informs the revenue men where the Calway still is located and along with others opposed the whiskey traffic leads in the raid. The deadly Winchester is used freely, and old man Calway is killed. Young Calway is captured by the drys and severely flogged before he is rescued by Madge, who takes the badly beaten boy to her own home to nurse. The mother refuses to allow the young moonshiner shelter, and Madge declares that if he can't come in she will never again enter her home. She gains her point and in a highly dramatic way shields the boy until he has recovered, and later on in defiance to all, including a jealous lover, marries Joe, who still continues to make and trade in mountain liquor.

The young wife becomes addicted to drink, which again rouses the mother and the decent temperate mountain folk, but Madge protects him by telling them not to blame her husband; "it's in the blood," she cries, "it killed my daddy and it will kill me."

During a gospel meeting, which Joe and Madge attend, Joe realizes as he listens to the preacher what havoc is caused by whiskey drinkers, and as the circuit rider calls on sinners to repent Joe comes forward and vows never to make or deal again in liquor as long as he lives.

Happiness is soon restored between Madge and Joe, who turns his hand to honest toil and a new life begins for Madge, Joe and the baby.

SOLAX

HIS DOUBLE (Aug. 21).—Joe Howell is persona non grata at the home of Mr. Burleston. Although young Miss Helen thought very much of him, Mr. Burleston is determined that his daughter should marry Count "Lacking Koyne." When Jack Howell discovers who his rival is he hits upon a plan which not only puts his rival out of running but outwits the "old man."

It is fortunate for Jack that in pbysical frame he had the same appearance of the Count, the only thing he needed to make him look like the Count's double was a dinky mustache which looks like a misplaced eyebrow and an apology for a chin-beard. This Jack's costumers easily supplied.

Then Jack gets busy. Everybody mistakes him for the Count; even the Count when he looks through a mirrorless frame imagines himself looking in a mirror. Jack imitates the Count going through some vanity stunts right before the Count's eyes, the Count believing all the while that he is posing before a mirror—the situation is a scream.

Jack's pranks give the "old man" considerable cause to question his (the "old man's") sanity. When the Count goes Jack comes—first the "old man" sees the Count going in one direction and almost simultaneously he sees his double coming from the opposite direction. The "old man" pinches himself to see if he is awake. He does not discover Jack's duplicity, however, until the very end. Mr. Burleston's own daughter helps along in the fun.

THE EQUINE SPY (Aug. 23).—Two reels. The struggle was in progress for the preservation of the Union. The admissibility of the doctrine that all men are created equal and possess the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, was being strongly contested. Both sides fought with an ardor and enthusiasm born of a belief in the righteousness of their cause.

In all Southern homes there was a grim determination to fight the people who were trying to revolutionize their economic life. Fathers and sons went to the front in defence of their beliefs. All this is history! Every child is acquainted with the events of that awful struggle.

Like other Southern mothers, Mrs. Carter lived in daily anticipation and dread. Her hopes kept rising and falling with each item of news from the battlefield. She prayed for the safety of her only son. And she was joined in these prayers by Nell, her son's sweetheart. Their joint sympathies brought them closely together—until Nell finally made her home with her lonesome mother-in-law-to-be, whose only attendant was faithful old Jefferson.

Herbert Carter, clean-cut, young and fearless, is hot with Southern enthusiasm. His valiant fighting won for him many promotions—until finally he is recognized for his daring and wonderful knowledge of the country by being made chief of scouts. Before entering upon his new and perilous duties, be comes home to see his mother and sweetheart—after having written them to expect him. Naturally, Mrs. Carter and Nell are overjoyed and when Herbert comes he is cordially received. He is warned, however, by trusty old Jefferson to be careful, for, says the negro servant:

"Massah. . . . Ahz seen dem Yankees hangin' 'round he-ah."

Herbert laughs at the warning, but the negro insists on being given a pistol—so that he may stand guard—for he assures Herbert "Ahz a brave culled gen'l'man ah am, and reckon ah kin look out."

Jefferson stands guard. And before long those Yankees whom he has seen scouting around in that vicinity come in on a foraging expedition and capture Herbert's horse. Jefferson spies them and temporarily loses his "brave spell." In his excitement he fires his pistol at his own feet and thus attracts the Federals. However, he recovers his senses in time to understand that his master is in danger—and so he scrambles to the house and gives the alarm. Having learned how to think quickly, Herbert sprints to the barn with Nell wildly after him. The Federal soldiers immediately after surround the barn and apparently Herbert is trapped. But inside the barn Nell has been active. With the fire of a pistol she keeps the soldiers from coming on, while Herbert borrows Nell's trained thoroughbred "Don" and suddenly throws open the barn doors, fires a broadside from a brace of revolvers and gallops through the line of surprised soldiers. They make an effort to follow him. He, however, evades them with spirited "Don," hurdling fences and enclosures. The untrained animals of the raw recruits balk at taking the fences and so Herbert gets away and arrives safely in camp.

A few days later Herbert receives orders to take out a party on scouting duty. It is arranged that in the event the party is in danger, or if they should see the enemy in force that they were to fire a beacon. Herbert gallops off at the head of his party on graceful Don and after having travelled a considerable distance and covered miles of territory he orders his men to prepare the beacon and then deploy as skirmishers. Left alone Herbert scours his section of the country and unexpectedly comes upon an outpost party of Union soldiers. He hides in the bushes while they study their line and road maps. Herbert thinks rapidly. He motions toward the papers and then sends Don off, while he fires and purposely draws the Union soldiers in his pursuit. Knowing the country better than they do, he succeeds in evading them—but receives a bullet wound in his shoulder during the pursuit. Don in the meanwhile is busy on his own accord. He steals the maps that the Union soldiers left on a stump and gallops off to find his wounded master. With difficulty, Carter mounts Don and rides to the beacon. He is exhausted from loss of blood and so gives Don a match and motions the horse to fire the signal. The beacon, however, instead of attracting help from his own comrades, makes known Carter's whereabouts to the Union outpost. They ride up and after a search find their maps on him.

Events then follow each other rapidly. Carter is arrested, tried and sentenced to be shot the following day. He is imprisoned in an improvised guardhouse awaiting death. His throat is parched. He is almost faint. Almost in delirium, he calls for Don. Don comes up and with little hope of success he sends Don for water. Don trots off and pilfers a canteen when the sentinel isn't looking and brings it to his master.

Refreshed after a draught from the canteen, Herbert decides to inform his mother and sweetheart of his fate—hoping against hope that someone would come to his rescue. He sends them a message written in blood. Don is the silent but courageous messenger. This intelligent animal dashes through the lines and reaches Herbert's home. Throughout his journey he seemed to know that he carried the hopes of his master. And when Nell, after she receives the message from her imprisoned hero, spurs Don on and rides him like fury to the Confederate encampment for a rescuing party, Don shows his real intelligence. Don seemed to know that on his swiftness depended the life of a man. When Nell sent Don to disarm a sleeping sentinel, during the journey, Don robs the sentinel without a scruple. Don lets nothing stand in his way between liberty and his erstwhile master.

Nell and Don succeed in breaking through the Union outposts and in reaching the Confederate encampment. The soldiers ride back with her, defeat the Union soldiers in a skirmish, and arrive in time to save Herbert Carter from death. All are thankful to Don, the Equine hero, the horse who acted with discretion and intelligence and above all faithfully.

VITAGRAPH

THE TOURISTS (Aug. 5).—A party of tourists on their way east across the continent take advantage of the short stop at Albuquerque, New Mexico, to purchase wares of the Indians congregated about the Indian Exhibit Building near the station. They become so engrossed in the Indians and their handiwork that they do not notice the time slipping by and their train slipping out. Left, they decide to make the best of it by sight-seeing until the next train arrives. Their experience in the interim was funny, unique and exciting. On the same reel:

WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED.—A comedy of "sunny" California. Jenks is a hypochondriac of the extreme type. Here he is at his villa, surrounded by flowers, gardens and orange groves. One would imagine that such a paradise would induce health and contentment in the most abject "gloom," but no, he believes that he has one foot in the grave, with the other one on slippery ground. The next hour he knows is to be his last. Hence, to humor him, his doctor orders him to the mountains. While there he is caught in a snowstorm, and his experiences make him glad to get back among the flowers.

A CHILD'S REMORSE ,Aug. 8).—Through her ill temper the mother makes home life very unpleasant. She is always contrary and stubborn when her husband suggests anything that doesn't exactly coincide with her views. As you may imagine, these little tiffs are not very healthful for their children, a girl and a boy, the little girl especially being influenced by the condition. During a little outing with other children, the girl shows her ill temper and a quarrel ensues between her and another little girl which results in the ostracism of the ill-tempered child from the festivities. A leaky motor boat has been drawn up to the dock by a couple of vacationists and, in the course of their play, a party of the children go out in it. The quarrelsome child knows of the danger, but in spite won't warn them. Far out to sea the children go, and would have perished had not the girl's conscience awakened, causing her to spread the news of their danger. The children are rescued after a terrifying experience.

RELIANCE

ONE AGAINST ONE (Aug. 21).—Dion was one of the mounted police of the northwest woods and is rejected by the girl he loves for another man. He never forgets Jess and always keeps her last letter in his pocket. He is commissioned to go after a man called Hughes who is wanted for murder. He sets out through the woods. The fugitive is in the woods hiding from the man he knows is searching for him. Dion is hot on the trail of the escaped prisoner. He is hungry and wants to kill some game—but remembers that the shot would betray him to the fugitive. The other man has but one shot left and knows that he must make this one tell. He sees Dion in the distance and fires, wounding the officer in the arm. The fugitive leans over a pool of water to take a drink. Dion sees him and, although he is half crazed at the sight of the water, he pulls himself together and manages to cover his man. But overcome with pain and hunger he faints. The fugitive manages to make him comfortable—bathes his head and gives him a drink of water. He kills a bird and shares it with the officer. He carries the unconscious man to his shack in the woods where he cares for him. He finds the letter from Jess—the girl who rejected Dion to marry him. When Dion regains consciousness he learns that the fugitive killed his man in a fair fight—also that Jess aided her husband to escape. The two men who love the same woman shake hands. Dion watches the fugitive get away, then he turns in the opposite direction.

NORTH OF 53 (Aug. 24).—Bob, while playing cards with some other young fellows, has a quarrel with Frawley, who accuses him of cheating. Bob strikes and the other man falls. He hits his head against the floor, rendering him unconscious. The boys advise Bob to get away at once. His father aids him to escape. He goes into the north woods. His father writes him that Frawley never recovered consciousness and bids his son go further into the woods. Bob hires a guide, Pierre, who takes him into the wilderness. Pierre steals a letter from Bob's pocket while he is sleeping. He learns that Bob is a fugitive from justice and that a reward of $1,000 is offered for him. He decides to turn him over to the police. But when Bob awakens he sees the man's intention. After a terrible fight Pierre succeeds in tying Bob hand and foot. In the canoe Bob manages to free himself and attacks Pierre. Julie, a trapper's daughter, sees the canoe capsize and she rescues both of the men and marches them out at the point of her gun. Pierre tells the trapper of the reward offered for Bob, but the trapper refuses to allow the guide to carry out his intention. Pierre leaves them vowing vengeance. Julie and Bob fall in love and become engaged. A passing priest visits the cabin and is asked to marry them. As he is beginning the ceremony Pierre returns with a sheriff. After the marriage Bob goes away with the sheriff, but does not tell Julie where. Julie finds his letter of explanation and rushes after him. She stops the canoe by firing at Pierre but Bob receives the bullet himself. The canoe goes over and the men walk ashore. They return to the trapper's cabin. The old man tells the sheriff he cannot take Bob for he is North of 53—or over the Canadian border. So the sheriff leaves and Pierre is warned never to return. Alone at last, Julie fixes Bob's arm and puts her arms about his neck and pillows her head on his shoulder.

LUX

A RACE FOR LIBERTY (Aug. 9).—Jim Ryder and his charming little wife, Ada, live contentedly until Jim's brother, Joe, is suspected of horse stealing. Jim becomes mixed up in the affair, and the two brothers slip away from the settlement as quietly as possible, making arrangements with Ada beforehand to join them at a distant town as soon as she can leave without creating suspicion.

The two brothers get lost while crossing an awful desert. Joe dies of thirst and, after much weary toil, Jim manages to retrace his steps to the settlement. His little wife is glad to see him again and is giving him a drink of water, which he badly needs, when footsteps are heard approaching the cottage. Hastily dropping the cup to the ground Jim seeks to hide himself. A moment later the sheriff enters. Suspecting that Ada knows where her husband has taken refuge, the sheriff frequently visits the cottage in the hope of making her divulge her secret. He notices the fallen cup, and his suspicions are aroused. Before he can take action, however, Ada promptly covers him with a revolver, and he soon finds himself bound securely to a chair while Ada and her husband are dashing across the plains once again.

Uncertain of the road, Jim dismounts from his horse about an hour after and proceeds on foot a little way. The sheriff, who has broken his bonds and tracked him up, surprises him and covers him with his revolver. Jim is forced to place the handcuffs upon his own wrists. At the vital moment Ada appears upon the scene. Picking up a stone she dashes the revolver out of the sheriff's hands, and thus turns the tables. Thus her husband is enabled to cross the State line, beyond which the sheriff has no further power. Mounting their horse he and his brave little wife dash off to freedom. On the same reel:

THE POSTMAN'S ESCAPADE.—Jimmy Jones, the postman, is not satisfied with the speed by which he covers his rounds. As he wants to get done in time to go to the cricket match, he borrows a pair of roller skates from a little boy, and then proceeds upon his rounds. Jimmy has a lively time, but does not feel very much like going to a cricket match when he is done.

TOMMY SAVES HIS LITTLE SISTER (Aug. 16).—Directly their parents have left the nursery Tommy and his little sister arise from their cots and proceed downstairs intent upon making themselves acquainted with the contents of a nice box of chocolates which they have observed reposing upon the sideboard. Entering the drawing-room to their horror and surprise they encounter a burglar. Their scream of terror attracts their father to the spot, who promptly covers the intruder with his revolver. The thief, however, uses Tommy's little sister as a shield by placing her between himself and the revolver, and holding her there he manages to escape and takes the child along with him.

A few days later he writes to Tommy's father, demanding a ransom for the child and telling him to meet him at a certain public house. Tommy's father goes to the place in question, having previously instructed several detectives to hide themselves in the bar. The thief is, therefore, surprised upon his entrance, but after a hard struggle he gets away and drives off in the very motor car which conveyed Tommy's father to the spot. He does not, however, observe that Tommy has taken a hand in the game. Upon being refused permission to accompany the expedition, Tommy hid himself at the back of the car and awaited events. In this manner Tommy is conveyed to the house of the thief and is enabled to find out where his sister is hidden. He bravely ascends to the roof the house, and by the aid of a stout rope he saves his little sister from the criminal's clutches.

ROSS LENSES

For Projection Machines and Cinematograph Cameras

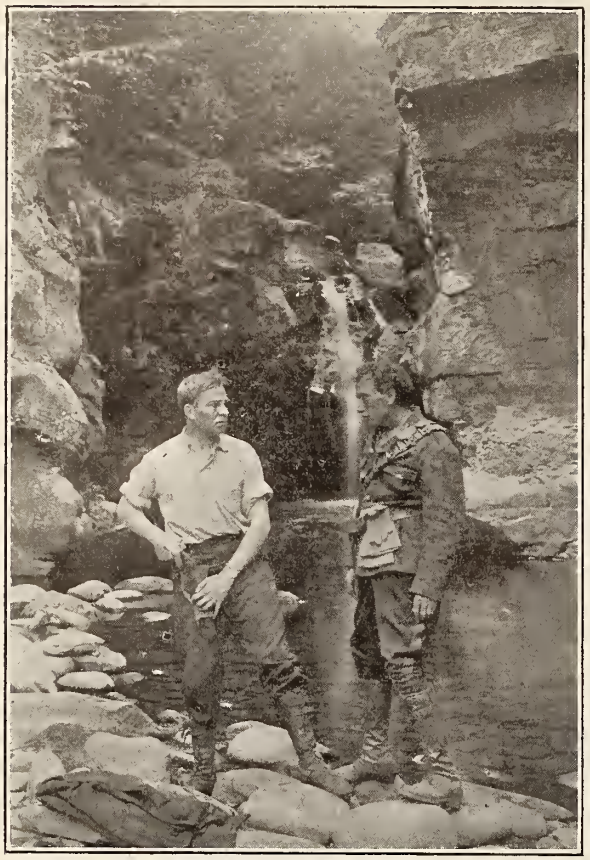
Ross Zeiss Tessar Lenses, F 3.5

No. 1—2-inch Focus in Focussing Mount

No. 1a—3-inch Focus in Focussing Mount

Send for our Catalogue of Cinematograph Lenses

GEORGE MURPHY, INC.,
57 East Ninth Street, New York



"ONE AGAINST ONE"
Reliance release, August 21st.

Port Richmond, Saten Island, N. Y.—A fireproof theatre is being erected for Henry Hyams, of Stapleton, S. I., on the south side of Richmond Terrace, between Richmond and Maple avenues.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Progress Moving Picture Company has been incorporated with a capital of $3,200. The directors are Louis Salkin and Max Sugarman, of Brooklyn, and Barnet Barwick, of New York City.

Milford, Conn.—The cement block building in course of construction for Walter Gill's moving picture theatre at the center is now nearly completed.

Newark, N. J.—American Theatre Company incorporated at $100,000. Incorporators: Theodore J. Gerth, Edmund Schuessel and George O. C. Velsor.

Trenton, N. J.—Montclair Amusement Company was incorporated with a capital of $50,000. Incorporators: Thomas R. Brown, Geoffrey Graham and Alger Jenkins.

Camden, N. J.—An open-air moving picture show is soon to be put in operation on the Bendinger lot, at 26th and Federal streets.

New Haven, Conn.—Certificate of incorporation was filed for the Germania Theatre Company to operate a moving picture theatre.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Kaplan & Hartman will build a moving picture theatre at the corner of Greene avenue and Covert street.

Peoria, Ill.—Incorporation papers for the Crystal Amusement Company were received.

Mt. Joy, Pa.—R. J. Buzby purchased and took charge of the Dreamland.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The Orpheum will re-open for the coming season on August 19.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The Colonial Theatre will open about Oct. 1.

Sapulpa, Okla.—The new Main Street Theatre has opened.

Worcester, Mass.—Oscar Mercier is transforming the Music Hall into a modern moving picture theatre.

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

BRING OUT THE DETAILS AND PRODUCE CLEAR, WELL DEFINED PICTURES. GIVE STEADY, BRILLIANT ARC, AND REQUIRE LEAST ADJUSTMENT FOR CONVENIENCE OF OPERATORS. ALL 12" "ELECTRA" CARBONS ARE DOUBLE-POINTED.

HUGO REISINGER

SOLE IMPORTER

11 BROADWAY,

NEW YORK.

ELECTRA

·TRADE MARK·

ELECTRA

·TRADE MARK·

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

NIAGARA SLIDES

Means to you the best on the market. Just now six announcements for $1.00. Now don't think because they're cheap that they're not first class. They are, and we're bound to please you or refund your money. We buy stock in large quantities, we pay no big city rent; we're in the business to show you what a good slide means. Send for catalog, and let us tell you of our advertising and novelty slides.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

DO YOU WANT TO MAKE MOVING PICTURES?
We sell and rent moving picture cameras, printers and perforators, new or second-hand.
Educational films made, advertising films taken to order.
We rent cameras and camera men.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO., Inc.,
248 West 35th Street, N. Y. C.

LOCAL PICTURES MADE
10c Per Foot
Film Titles, Any Length, 3 Feet For 25c
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
199 Third Avenue, New York
Dept. A.

WE LEAD THEM ALL IN MAKING MOTION PICTURES TO ORDER.
Any where or any time.
10C. PER FOOT
Write for particulars, all work guaranteed
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO.,
248 West 35th St., N. Y. C.
Tel. 2290 Greeley.

THEATRE FURNISHINGS.
Opera and folding chairs of all kinds, moving picture machines, flaming arc lamps, pianos, electric fans and other fixtures. Some slightly used goods on hand occasionally.
SAM LEARS,
509 Chestnut St. St. Louis, Mo.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

DESIGNING
ENGRAVING
ELECTROTYPING
HARDING PHOTO ENGRAVING CO.
8-10 WEST 13TH ST.
NEAR
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
TELEPHONE 617 CHELSEA 165

PIANISTS WANTED
to send name and address of theatre where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC
all New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made.
S. & B. PUB. CO.,
124 W. 45th St., New York City.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication

Moving Picture News

Films For Sale!

$2.50 per reel up
Biggest bargains in the country.
Send for catalogue.
ACME FILM CO.
130 West 37th Street, New York

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN

Or THE YELLOW PERIL

A 3000-Foot Drama. Six styles lithographs, photos and heralds.

Exclusive Territory

NEW YORK FILM CO.
12 Union Sq. New York

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS

$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

BE SURE YOU GET THE GENUINE
"101" Bison Headliners

Produced by the N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO., which can only be had through the MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, which has been given the exclusive agency for the United States and Canada for "101" BISON, BRONCHO and KEYSTONE FILMS.

COMING! "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" COMING!

Three reels of sensational realism, overwhelming in its bigness. The most wonderful moving picture ever produced.

"The Buffalo Hunt"

One Reel, Released Tuesday, Aug. 20

The Crow Indians enter the Sioux hunting grounds and kill a buffalo. They are attacked by the Sioux and thrilling battles take place. The buffalo is actually shown being hunted and killed in this picture. A big thriller.

"The Reckoning"

One Reel Released Friday, Aug. 23

A sensational story of the Civil War, with wonderful battle scenes, hand-to-hand conflicts, and a beautiful dramatic story running throughout. This is without question one of the greatest war pictures ever presented. It cannot be featured too strongly.

COMING! KEYSTONE FILMS COMING!

Dramatic and comedy subjects, acted by an all-star company, directed by Max Sennett, heretofore director of the Biograph Company.

COMING! BRONCHO FILMS COMING!

Pioneer, Western and military subjects of the same character as "101" Bisons, in one, two and three reels. Large casts presenting battle and historical subjects.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION SOLE U. S. A. AND CANADA AGENTS 60 WALL ST., NEW YORK CITY

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.)
July 29—It Pays to Wait (W. Dr.)
Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun
Aug. 12—The Battle Ground (2 reels)
Aug. 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger
Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. "101 Bison"

July 16—Snowball and His Pal
July 19—His Nemesis
July 23—The Double Life
July 26—The Last Resource
July 30—The Desert
Aug. 2—The Gamhler and the Girl
Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call
Aug. 16—The Other Girl

CHAMPION

July 15—The Call of the West
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy
July 22—The Call of the West
July 29—The Poisoners
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Rr.)

COMET

July 20—Her Indian Guardian (W. Dr.)	1000
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.)	1000
July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Sheriff Outwitted (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 10—Holdup in Buckeye Canyon (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)	1000

ECLAIR

July 28—The Lady Barrister
July 30—A Brother's Jealousy
Aug. 1—Running for Congress
Aug. 4—The Price of Blood
Aug. 4—Beautiful Vintage Time
Aug. 6—Because of Bobbie
Aug. 8—Boys Again
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister
Aug. 11—Carlshad
Aug. 13—Daddy (Com.)
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Egyptian Ruins
Aug. 20—Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry (Com.)
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Will (Dr.)
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day

GREAT NORTHERN

July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Dr.)	666
July 20—Uncle Reuhen Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Dr.)
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Com.)
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Dr.)

GAUMONT

	Feet
July 30—Prison on the Cliff
July 30—The Isle of Marken
Aug. 1—The Romance of the Palm Garden
Aug. 8—A Phantom of the Night
July 23—The Silent Castle
July 25—Love's Floral Trihute
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels)
Aug. 6—Dream Driven
Aug. 13—Graziella the Gypsy
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter and The Launching of the Imperator
Sept. 10—Love's Serenade

GEM

June 25—The Reason
July 2—The Medal of Honor
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels)
July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters
July 30—Back to Her Own
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun

IMP

July 25—The Heart of a Gipsy
July 27—A Case of Dynamite
July 27—Love's Diary
July 29—Reunited hy the Sea
Aug. 1—Adrift
Aug. 3—The Cure that Failed
Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago
Aug. 5—The Hindoo's Prize (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 8—Blood Is Thicker Than Water (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 10—How Jones Saw the Ball Game (Com.)
Aug. 10—Ferdie's Family Feud (Com.)

ITALA

Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

LUX By Prieur.

July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)	393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)	970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)	983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (W. Dr.)	580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)	272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Hustler (Dr.)
July 22—The Ranchman's Remedy
July 24—The Little Moonshiner
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill
July 31—The Obligation
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold
Aug. 7—Fatty of E. Z. Ranch (W. Com.)
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Dr.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

July 24—Bahy Sherlock
July 26—His Madonna
July 31—In the Sowing
July 31—The Rose Festival
Aug. 2—Dora
Aug. 7—As the Wind Blows (Com.)
Aug. 9—The Burglar and the Rose (Dr.)

RELIANCE

	Feet
July 31—Where There Is Soap There Is Hope
Aug. 3—The Wood Nymph
Aug. 7—Phillip Steele (2 reels)
Aug. 10—The Two Fathers
Aug. 14—Order in the Court
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men
Aug. 21—One Against One
Aug. 24—North of 53

REPUBLIC

July 29—A House Top Romance
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg
Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp

REX

July 18—The Hidden Light
July 21—When Love Rules
July 25—The Hand of Mystery
July 28—Through Memory Blank
Aug. 1—The Lash of Fate
Aug. 4—The Hour of Peril
Aug. 11—The Troubadour's Triumph
Aug. 11—None Can Do More

SOLAX

July 31—Bottles
Aug. 2—Buddy and His Dog
Aug. 7—The Little Rangers
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain
Aug. 16—The Strike
Aug. 21—His Double
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 4—Story of "One of the Honor Squad"
Aug. 5—Bahy Hands
Aug. 9—Old Dr. Judd
Aug. 11—Big Sister
Aug. 13—Now Watch the Professor
Aug. 16—The Wrecked Taxi
Aug. 18—As Others See Us
Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks
Aug. 20—The Darkest Hour
Aug. 23—Conductor 786

GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM

Apr. 22—The Dead Man's Child	3000
May 8—Through Trials to Victory	3500
May 20—Mysteries of Souls	3000

MAJESTIC

July 28—The New Policeman
July 30—The Mighty Hunter
Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.)
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl
Aug. 18—Toodles
Aug. 20—The New Butler

MILANO

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (Dr.)
July 20—The Triumph of Love (Myth.)
Aug. 3—The Battle of Two Palms
Aug. 10—Playthings of Fate

SHAMROCK

May 25—A Cold Reception
May 28—White Fawn
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (W. Com.)

VICTOR

July 19—The Players (Dr.)
Aug. 2—Taking a Chance
Aug. 9—The Mill Buyers (Dr.)

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEWMANN

BERLIN SW 68 Fruchstr. Berlin O. 17.

Annual subscription abroad 12 sh. Write for specimen copy.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,

la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.

Best advertising medium in North Europe.

Subscription 6 shillings.

Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.)
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.)
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.)
July 22—The Sands of Dee (Dr.)
July 25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)
July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.)
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.)
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.)
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.)
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (2 reels) (Dr.)
Aug. 12—The Inner Circle (Dr.)
Aug. 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)
Aug. 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)

CINES
C. Kleine

July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Dr.)	995
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com. Dr.)	900
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.)	1000
July 30—The Inventor's Secret (Dr.)	1090
Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.)	640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)	903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.)	1067
Aug. 13—Mona Lisa in Disguise (Com.)	600
Aug. 13—Vicovaro, Italy (Sc.)	400
Aug. 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Dr.)	1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Dr.)	963
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Com.)	235
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Sc.)	290
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Com.)	450
Aug. 27—The Bridge of Lammermoor (Dr.)	1000

EDISON

July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)	600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves	1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)	1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.)	1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)	1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912	700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)	300
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)	980
Aug. 14—Holding the Fort (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine	1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)	1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 27—Alone in New York	1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Sc.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.)	1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.)	1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Understudy
July 25—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella
July 26—Twins
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart

	Feet
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.)
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.)
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—An Adamless Eden (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile)	1000
Aug. 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Aug. 2—Man Wanted (Com.)
Aug. 3—The Detective's Conscience (Dr.)
Aug. 5—A Prize Package
Aug. 7—The Sand Storm
Aug. 8—Buster in Nodland
Aug. 8—A Double Courtship
Aug. 9—A Fly Time
Aug. 10—The Missing Finger
Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw
Aug. 14—The Stubbornness of Youth
Aug 15—Baseball Industry
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Com.)
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Com.)
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.)
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.)
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.)

G. MELIES

July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.)	1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.)	1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls
Aug. 15—Romance at Catalina
Aug. 22—The Moth and the Flame (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Aug. 2—The Lightning Paper Hanger
Aug. 2—Havana, Its Streets, Buildings and Fortresses (Travel)
Aug. 3—Memories (Dr.)
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly No. 32
Aug. 6—Death of Chevalier Albertini (Dr.)
Aug. 7—The Arrow Maker's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 8—The Famous Scout to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa
Aug. 10—Here and There in Oregon (Travel)
Aug. 10—Kittens
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 35
Aug. 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Com.)
Aug. 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.)
Aug. 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant Water
Aug. 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (W. Dr.)
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.)
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Edu.)
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (W. Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.)
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Hist. Dr.)
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Com.)

KALEM CO.

	Feet
July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.)	1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting)
July 22—The Thief (Dr.)	1000
July 24—Fantasca, The Gipsy (Dr.)	1000
July 29—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.)	1000
July 31—The Soldier Brothers of Susanna (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy	1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Sc.)
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 7—Freed from Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 14—Kentucky Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Prison Ship (Dr.)	1000

SELIG

July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.)	1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.)	1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.)	1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.)
July 26—In Maorland (Edu.)
July 29—The Three Valises (Dr.)	1000
July 30—The Peculiar Nature of the White Man's Burden (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Edu.)
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The Man from Dragon Land (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 13—The Wayfarer (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—Two Gay Dogs (Com.)	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.)	485
July 24—The French Army in Action (Mil.)	505
July 31—The Trials of a Playwright (Com. Dr.)	1,000
Aug. 7—The Joker's Mistake (Com.)	390
Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel)	220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)	390
Aug. 14—The Rivals (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities	300
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Ind.)	275
Aug. 21—A Day in the German Navy (Top.)	400
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.)	1020

VITAGRAPH

July 22—Wanted a Sister	1000
July 23—The Adventure of the Thumb Print	1000
July 24—Martha's Rebellion	1000
July 26—The Barrier That Was Burned	1000
July 27—The Light of St. Bernard	1000
July 29—The Miracle	1000
July 30—A Juvenile Love Affair	1000
July 31—The Adventure of a Retired Army Colonel	1000
Aug. 2—The Awakening of Jones (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan	1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour	1000
Aug. 7—The Cross-Roads	1000
Aug. 9—Wanted: A Grandmother	1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan	1000
Aug. 12—Bunny and the Dogs	300
Aug. 12—Ingenuity	700
Aug. 13—The Heart of Esmeralda	1000
Aug. 14—Vultures and Doves	1000
Aug. 16—A Bogus Napoleon	1000

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YORK POLICE SCANDAL

The Rosenthal Case

Produced from original authentic views.

Supplied exclusively to us by the National Press Syndicate.

20 Slides, Plain.....	$ 5.00	40 Slides, Plain.....	$10.00
20 Slides, Colored...	10.00	40 Slides, Colored...	20.00

Special lecture and 1 sheet lithos free with each set.

A. J. CLAPHAM, 130 West 37th Street, New York

The Originator of Sensational Feature Lectures

IF you want to keep your name and product before the Moving Picture Trade ADVERTISE in the MOVING PICTURE NEWS

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

The Exhibitor Says, "The Simplex is the last word in Motion Picture Projection."

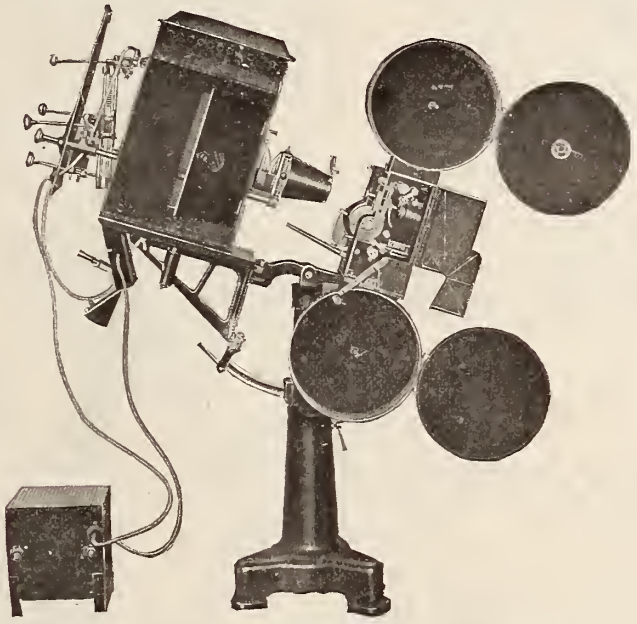
The City Official Inspectors Say, "Just the Machine this Department Has Been Looking For."

A New York Manager Says, "Would Not give one screw of the Simplex for any other Entire Machine."

The Peer of the Moving Picture Machines

Simplex

Easiest to Handle, Thread and Operate
Absolutely Fireproof and Noiseless



Used by the Biograph, Rex, Eclair, Bison, Crystal, National, Imp, Comet and other Film Manufacturers in their Studios

Manufactured by the Precision Machine Co., Inc.

317 to 323 East 34th Street, New York

The Operator Says, "The Simplex is Years Ahead of any other Machine on the Market."

Blanche Walsh

IN TOLSTOY'S

Resurrection

4 Parts

Will Remain a Feature When You Have Long Forgotten the Other Kind

Wire Us Now for Exclusive Territory

Our advertising matter will help you get the money

MASKO FILM CO.

145 West 45th Street NEW YORK

To Writers:

THE EDITOR

(The Journal of Information for Literary Workers) published in your interest for eighteen years, is the magazine of which Jack London said: "I may not tell a hundredth part of what I learned from THE EDITOR, but I may say that it taught me how to solve the stamp and landlord problems." It is a monthly stimulus to the production and sale of more and better manuscripts. Besides articles of concrete, practical worth by editors or by writers successful or about to be successful, each number contains in "The Literary Market" all the news of all the magazines, new and old, that pay for manuscripts.

THE EDITOR is especially helpful to the scenario writer. It publishes from time to time helpful articles by those who are successful producers of photoplays. A copy of the current number will be sent for 15 cents. The yearly subscription is one dollar.

The Editor

Box 830, Ridgewood, New Jersey.

PROFITS $900 ONE WEEK

AND NEVER LESS THAN $500

This is the record of the purchasers of the OHIO state rights of the five reel production

OLIVER TWIST

with

NAT C. GOODWIN

AS FAGIN

State right buyers, this is the production with which you can reap a harvest. Act quick to get the few remaining states.

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.

145 West 45th Street, New York City

A gf A

Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative

AND

NON-FLAM POSITIVE

(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK

Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

For reference as to Quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co., Kinemacolor Co. of America, N. Y. Motion Picture Co., Bison, Crystal Film Co., Universal Film Mfg. Co., Solax Co., Kalem Co.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses have installed the "Corcoran System."

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.

No. 9½ JOHN ST., NEW YORK CITY

THE 1913 MODEL
MOTIOGRAPH
THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

SPECIFICATIONS

MECHANISM

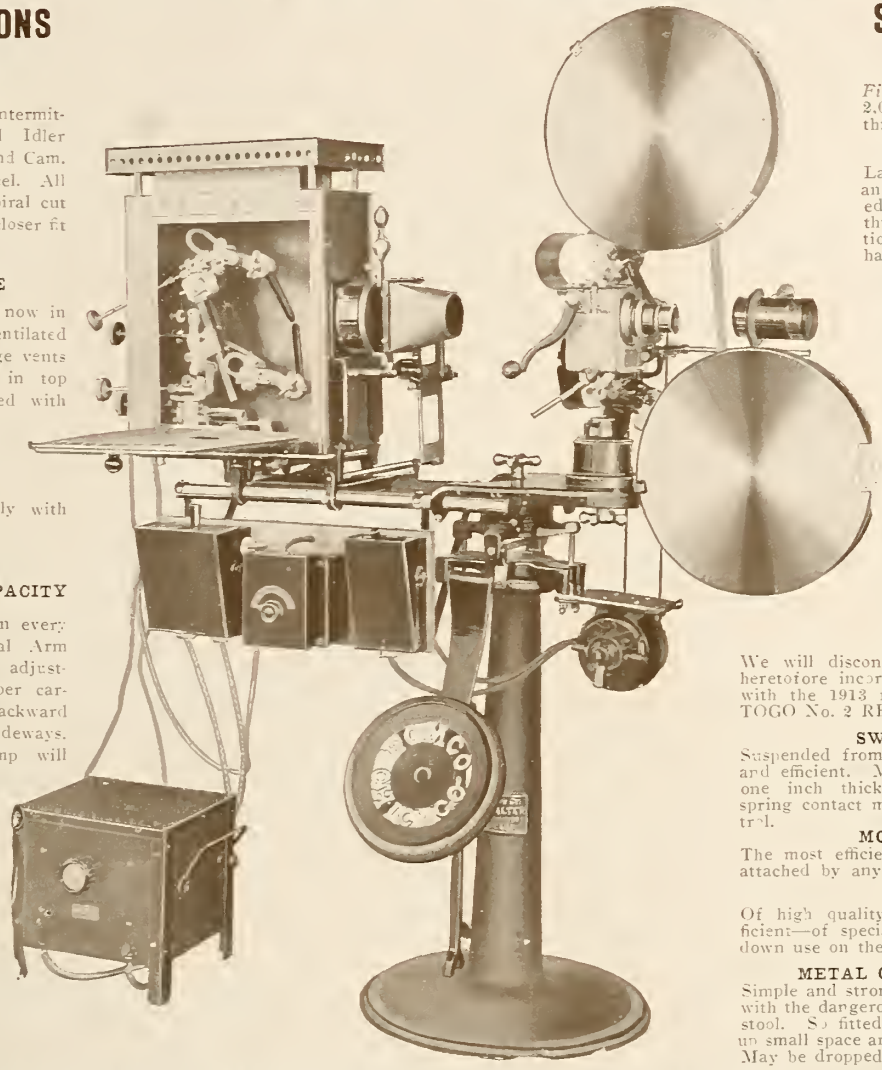
Contains hardened Intermittent Sprocket. Steel Idler Rolls. Heavier Star and Cam. Heavier Balance Wheel. All gears of steel and spiral cut teeth which means a closer fit and longer wear.

LAMP HOUSE

The largest and best now in use. Thoroughly ventilated on all sides with large vents for escape of heat in top hood. Carefully lined with best quality translite board in bottom, front and top. Passes Inspection Anywhere. Supplied only with spring hinged doors.

ARC LAMP
125 AMPERE CAPACITY

Heavier and better in every way. Has Universal Arm and Clamp with two adjustments added on upper carbon arm,—Either backward and forward or sideways. The Universal Clamp will hold any diameter of Carbon from ¾ down to ⅜. Racks provide for a TWENTY-INCH CARBON FEED—a 12" upper and 8" lower.



SPECIFICATIONS

MAGAZINES

Fifteen inch diameter to hold 2,000 feet of film at one threading.

DOWSER SHUTTER

Large diameter with ball balanced handle. Firmly mounted on condenser mount, thus also acting as protection for lantern slides. The handle may also be used for lifting out hot condenser chamber for changing of glasses.

FILM SHIELDS

Large and strong. Thoroughly protect film in its entire passage from one magazine to the other.

RHEOSTAT

Either heavy grid type or coil on 110 v. line. Our grid is adjustable from 20 to 55 amperes. The coil from 30 to 45 amperes.

STAND

The original Gibraltar base, perfect rigidity, 3 heights, with every desired adjustment.

REWIND

We will discontinue the patented rewind heretofore incorporated in mechanism, and with the 1913 model; we will supply the TOGO No. 2 REWIND at no extra cost.

SWITCHBOARD

Suspended from metal sliding base. Rigid and efficient. Made of best quality slate—one inch thick. Contains main switch, spring contact motor switch and speed control.

MOTOR DRIVE

The most efficient ever designed. Quickly attached by any one.

MOTOR

Of high quality—strong, compact and efficient—of special construction for up-side-down use on the Motiograph.

METAL OPERATOR'S SEAT

Simple and strong and designed to do away with the dangerous and cumbersome wooden stool. So fitted to the Motiograph to take up small space and in most convenient place. May be dropped completely out of way.

PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:

1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

OUR GUARANTEE FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR

Covering parts of the 1913 model Motiograph Mechanism that may become worn out in service, or which may show defects in material or workmanship, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUNITY

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and 3 Sheets.—Lobby Displays—Photos—Cuts—Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3--Handcolored

The REFUGEE'S CASKET

NEXT IN LINE! SEPT. 19—Two Reels

KINGS IN EXILE

A film that deals with the events of great empires. Here's a serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic, but rather treated from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title must marry title!

Tuesday, Aug. 20

HER SUPREME SACRIFICE

Thurs., Aug. 22

ANDROCLUS AND THE LION

Tues., Aug. 27

THE STORY OF CHOPIN
(Hand colored)

All our films are protected by copyright.

Scene from A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Thurs., Aug. 29

MARRIAGE ON THE RUN

Thurs., Sept. 5

A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Tues., Sept. 10

LOVE'S SERENADE

Thurs., Sept. 12

THE PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY
(Hand colored)

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors.

THEIR LIVES FOR GOLD

THURSDAY, AUG. 15—Two Reels—1-3-8 Sheets

The most spirited sensation of the season, barring none. See the desperate leap from the bridge onto the fast flying train beneath, the race on horseback, the dash for life across the river, the wreck, the fire of death. Even ATTACKED BY A LION beaten to a frazzle and that's going some. Heralds—Pamphlets—Literature. Watch the trade papers for criticisms, etc. See the current issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

AUG 22 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

AUG 22 1912
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS PERIODICAL

VOLUME VI
No. 7

AUGUST 17
1912

"LUCILE"

After the poem by Owen Meredith.
(Three Reels) Thanhouser release.
August 27th and 30th.

PRICE
TEN CENTS

TWO REELS

"The White Lie"

TWO REELS

"101" = BISON HEADLINER = "101"

PRODUCED BY THE N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 30

A unique military subject, showing terrific combats. The saloon-keeper's daughter loses her position as school-teacher on account of the character of her father's place. His anger is intensified when he is arrested for selling liquor to the Indians, and is ordered from the community. In revenge he supplies the redskins with whisky and incites them to attack the fort while he lures the soldiers away with a false tale of an attack on an emigrant train. His daughter sees the Indians and warns the settlement, and manages to get the school children to the fort. Her father is horrified when he learns the truth and in a sensational ride brings the soldiers back in time to avert a massacre, but loses his life. The truth is hidden from the girl and her grief is softened by the representation made to her that her father died a hero.

COMING! "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" COMING!

THREE REELS OF SENSATIONALISM OVERWHELMING IN ITS BIGNESS. THE MOST WONDERFUL MOVING PICTURE EVER PRODUCED.

"THE BANDIT'S GRATITUDE"

One Reel. Released Tuesday, August 27

Ned chastises a cowboy for impertinence. His brother is wayward and joins a gang of bandits. The brother is seriously wounded and Ned helps him escape. The cowboy creeps behind Ned with a knife and is shot by Ned's brother. Ned does not know who saved him and is arrested and tried. Meantime Ned's sweetheart is captured by some of the outlaws and is protected by the brother in a sensational scene in which he is mortally wounded. He makes his way to the courtroom and exonerates Ned.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION, 60 Wall St. N. Y. CITY — Sole Agents for the U. S. AND CANADA

BRONCHO FILMS

BIGGER—BETTER—MORE SENSATIONAL AND THRILLING

Frontier - Indian - Military and Pioneer Subjects

THAN ANYTHING HERETOFORE ATTEMPTED

TREMENDOUS CASTS PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY

COMING! WATCH FOR RELEASE DATES COMING!

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION, 60 Wall Street, New York City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

KEYSTONE FILMS

HIGH CLASS

Comedy and Dramatic Subjects

Acted by an ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

Including MAX SENNETT, MABEL NORMAND and Others Heretofore With the BIOGRAPH CO. Directed by MR. SENNETT

READY FOR RELEASE

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION, 60 Wall Street, New York City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

FEATURES

EIGHT OR TEN FEATURE PRODUCTIONS OF TWO AND THREE REELS AND NUMEROUS SINGLE REEL FEATURES ARE INCLUDED IN OUR PROGRAM EACH MONTH

MORE FEATURES

The exhibitor securing service from anyone of our agents is relieved of the harassing details of selection and elimination, as the arrangement each week of the class and character of subjects is such that the program meets the requirements of the most exacting.

INSURE FOR YOURSELF A SATISFIED PATRONAGE OF "REGULARS" BY USING THE CORRECTLY BALANCED PROGRAM OFFERED BY OUR AGENTS LISTED BELOW

CANADA.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine Street, Montreal.
Gaumont Company. Calgary.
Gaumont Company, Winnipeg, Manitoba.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Canadian Film Exchange, 32 Queen Street, East, Toronto.
Gaumont Co. of Canada, Ltd., 4 Queen Street, East, Toronto.
Gaumont Company, Vancouver, B. C.

CALIFORNIA.
Golden Gate Film Exchange, Los Angeles.
Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco.

COLORADO.
Mutual Film Corporation, Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.
Mutual Film Corporation, 428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.
Mutual Film Corporation, 81 Marietta Street, Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.
Anti Trust Film Company, 128 W. Lake Street, Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service, 98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.
Majestic Film Service Co., 216 No. 5th Avenue, Chicago.

INDIANA.
Mutual Film Corporation, 429 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis.

IOWA.
H. & H. Film Service, Des Moines.

LOUISIANA.
Mutual Film Corporation, 729 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Mutual Film Corporation, 32 Boylston Street, Boston.

MICHIGAN.
Mutual Film Corporation, 97 Woodward Avenue, Detroit.

MONTANA.
Mutual Film Corporation, Butte.

MISSOURI.
Western Film Exchange, 214 East 12th Street, Kansas City.
Swanson Crawford Film Co., 723 Century Building, St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
Progressive Film Exchange, 1417 Farnham Street, Omaha.

NEW YORK.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church Street. Buffalo.
Western Film Exchange, 145 West 45th Street, New York City.
Mutual Film Corporation, 150 East 14th Street, New York City.
Mutual Film Corporation, 21 East 14th Street, New York City.

OREGON.
Film Supply Company of Oregon, 385 Alder Street, Portland.

OHIO.
Buckeye Lake Shore Film Company, 422 North High St., Columbus.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 106 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland.
Superior Film Exchange, 410 Superior Street, Toledo.
Mutual Film Corporation, 235 East 4th Avenue, Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Continental Film Exchange, 902 Filbert Street, Philadelphia.
Pittsburgh Photoplay Company, 412 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh.

TENNESSEE.
Mutual Film Corporation, Memphis.

TEXAS.
Mutual Film Corporation, 1807 Main Street, Dallas.

UTAH
Mutual Film Corporation, Salt Lake City.

WISCONSIN.
Western Film Exchange. 307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee.

WASHINGTON.
Mutual Film Corporation, Seattle.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA
133-137 West 44th Street NEW YORK

WHY BUY OTHER STATE RIGHT FEATURES WHEN

OLIVER TWIST
with
NAT C. GOODWIN
AS FAGIN
(5 REELS) MAY STILL BE HAD

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

A gf A
Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

"Lucile"

IN 3 REELS
Nos. 1 and 2, Tuesday, Aug. 27
No. 3, Friday, Aug. 30

THANHOUSER "PERFECT PUBLICITY" FEATURE

A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

PERFECT PUBLICITY

Two Kinds of One-Sheets and a Three-Sheet at YOUR EXCHANGE. Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO., CINCINNATI, O. Cuts for Newspapers and Circulars (2-column) 40 cents and (3-column) 75 cents apiece from STANDARD ENGRAVING CO., 560 7th AVE., NEW YORK CITY. Slides 30 cents apiece from NOVELTY SLIDE CO., 20 E. 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.
Send me FREE August Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name .....
Address .....
Exchange .....

Charles Reade's Great Story

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" In 2 Reels

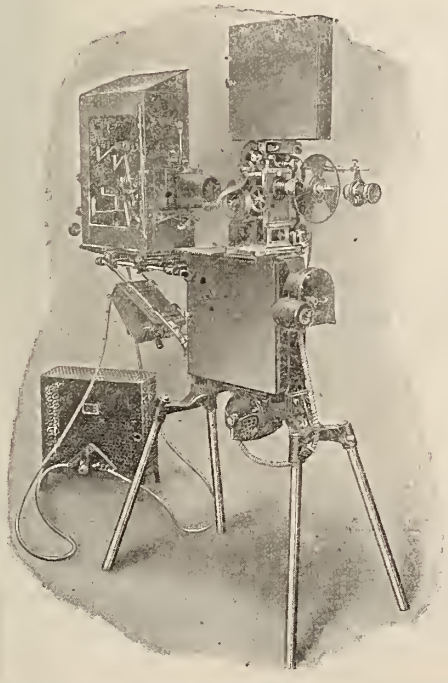
"UNDINE," After the Famous Riverside Classic

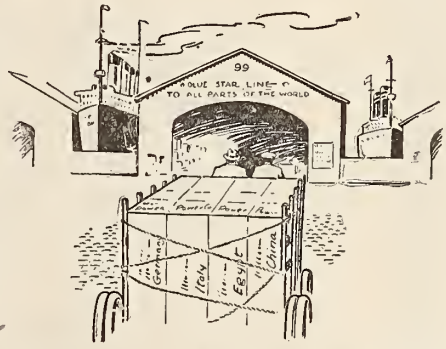
THANHOUSER COMPANY
NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK
Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

The World Our Home



North, South, East or West,—
By lowland stream or mountain crest,
In torrid or in frigid zone,
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH is known.



It might almost be said that we are without a country because every land claims us.

There is not a civilized country on earth where POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has not found a home; and wherever it goes, it makes new friends;—AND KEEPS THEM. We have sold over 6300 of our No. 6 machines.

In our newest equipment No. 6A, the mechanism of our No. 6 has been retained. This is the most advanced type of moving picture machine on the market, and into it have been incorporated many vital advantages which our fifteen years of experience and expert scientific knowledge afford.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH is used by a large majority of prominent houses in America, Europe and Australasia. Why not in yours?

Let us send you pamphlet D giving complete details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 Gold Street, New York City

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

ANOTHER SENSATION COMING

DUBLIN DAN

THE IRISH DETECTIVE. In Three Reels

AN ENTERTAINING, EXCITING, THRILLING AND POWERFUL MELODRAMA, FEATURING

BARNEY GILMORE

The popular American and Irish idol—the matinee girl's pet—the favorite of millions, an actor known in every State in the Union—a veteran on the stage—although young in years—with a personality that "comes across."

COPYRIGHT PROTECTED BY BEST LEGAL TALENT

STATE RIGHTS SELLING

Through FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

READY FOR SHIPMENT—SEPT. 25th, 1912

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28th, 1912

PHANTOM PARADISE

An old inventor and his daughter live happily in the belief that the inventor's new dry cell batteries are a big success—but in reality the wealthy merchant who had undertaken the promotion of the invention, withholds from his proteges the fact that the invention is worthless. The inventor dies happy in his ignorance but the daughter learns that she has been receiving charity.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 30th, 1912

PLAYING TRUMPS

Harry is in love with a girl. Tom and Dick love the same girl. Tom and Dick conspire to make Harry's life miserable, but Harry holds Trumps to the last and plays them. This is a "regular Solax Comedy" with the all-star comedy cast.

Solax Company FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI August 17, 1912 Number 7

NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

Neff Again Elected President

At the Convention Meeting Held on Wednesday Evening, Messrs. Neff and Sweeney Were Nominated for the Office of President—Mr. Sweeney Retired in Favor of M. A. Neff, Who Was Unanimously Elected National President of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America, for the Second Term, Amid the Most Enthusiastic Cheering of the Delagates Assembled There.

The Moving Picture News representatives came on to Chicago in good time. Editor Saunders reached the Grand Pacific Hotel, his usual headquarters, on Saturday morning, so that he could be bright and fresh for the duties that might fall upon him.

William Lord Wright came on time Sunday evening, and Monday they were bright and early looking the situation over, and in spite of this and seeing the foregathering of the clans it is impossible at this writing to give more than a meagre resume of the convention, leaving the main parts to our next issue.

This can be said, that never was a more intelligent body of men and women gathered in one city than our delegates assembled at Chicago. Everybody in the industry is represented here, and the full success of the convention is more than assured. The delegates are canvassing hard for their cities to hold the next convention in. At the time of writing New York seems to head the list of favorites.

One special point we must enforce and impress upon the minds of every reader is the fact that the program gotten up by the local Exhibitors' Association was not approved by the National Board, nor was the soliciting of contributions from manufacturers approved by them. It was simply, purely and solely a local program, which did not get into the hands of the delegates until Monday morning, and this was the first time the National Executive saw a copy.

After the preliminaries Monday and Tuesday, giving time for the Reception Committee to receive and introduce to one another the assembling guests, the real business commenced by a meeting of the National Executive on Monday afternoon and evening. The secretarial department was very busy receiving new members, delegates and alternates. The various exhibits on the floor were laid out in a very elaborate and magnificent scale. Every manufacturer in the industry had something good to show. We will take this matter more up in detail in our next issue.

PROCEEDINGS

The opening session of the second annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held in the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, August 13-16, 1912, was called to order by the president of the League, Mr. M. A. Neff, at about the hour of 2 o'clock, p.m., August 13, 1912.

President Neff: Ladies and Gentlemen: We will now call the second national convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America to order. I have the pleasure of introducing a representative of the great city of Chicago who will represent the Mayor of Chicago, Mr. Harrison. (Applause.)

Ladies and Gentlemen: I have the pleasure of introducing to you, Mr. Hoyne, of Chicago, who will now address you. (Applause.)

Mr. Maclay Hoyne: Mr. Chairman and Ladies and Gentlemen: I am not going to burden you with any address. I don't understand that that is the usual function of any one representing the Mayor on these occasions. I am here, however, to say that His Honor had hoped to be here in person but he has been exceedingly busy with the negotiations between the street railways and their employees, and of the special meeting of the City Council which occurs to-morrow; and in his absence it is my pleasant duty to say to the delegates who are here from other states and other cities that we welcome you to Chicago, and we hope that you may have a good time while you are with us and that your deliberations here may be both profitable and pleasant for all of you.

I might say further that I am unable to felicitate you either upon your success or upon the progress of your organization, or say very much about it, because I have not been favored with what might be termed any "dope" as to these processes. I met a gentleman at the door on my way in who told me if I visited the floor below I would be properly charged with fluid. I do not know whether he meant electric fluid or what he meant. However, I have obtained none of it, in any event.

During the time you are here I want to say if there is anything the city officials can do to make your stay pleasant, why we would be very glad to assist you, and you can find some one in the City Hall at any time who will aid you.

You will find the present Water Carnival, I believe, a rather pleasant form of entertainment. I will say to those of you from afar who have heard in the past that the City of Chicago is a wild and woolly West, and that the lake front is a dangerous place for strangers, that the practices of the past have been abolished and you are invited to visit the lake front to look at the explosions and wish to assure you that you can accept the invitation with safety. (Applause.) I was there last night myself, and the only explosions I saw were those in connection with the fireworks, and I came back without being any lighter in pocket, and I can recommend to all of you a trip to the lake front.

Now, as I have said, I am not here to deliver an address but to deliver to you the keys of the city and to wish you a very pleasant time and to thank you for the opportunity of being present. (Applause.)

Mr. Sidney Asher, New York: Mr. President and Ladies and Gentlemen: I want to apologize for my physical disability. I have been shouting "New York, 1913" so much that I am hardly able to hear myself, and speaking is rather difficult.

I didn't come here to praise the Empire State or to make a peroration on its great doings, but I came to tender a message of good will from the State of New York. I came to express the appreciation of New York for the efforts that Mr. Neff has tendered in our behalf. We want to express our appreciation in concrete form. We want to tender to Mr. Neff something more than a few words of good will. We want to tender to him something that will be a constant reminder of the deep appreciation that New York feels for the good work that he has done. Mr. Neff has worked tirelessly; he has bent every effort and energy to the uplift of this business throughout the Union and New York more than any other state feels the effects of his good work. New York is also observant. New York knows the needs of the world. New York knows the needs of every institution and of every man. New York knows the needs of this convention. New York observed that in previous conventions when the body was called to order by its president, he either had to rap for order with his elbow or his thumb or his pocket-knife; so New York being observant, takes this opportunity to present to its first national president a gavel with which he can call the conventions to order in the future. It is the wish of New York, it is the sincere hope of New York, that its presidents in the future may wield the gavel as well and as ably as Mr. Neff has done in the past. and as we expect him to do if it is our good fortune to have the honor of seeing him in the chair for another year. (Applause.)

The President: Ladies and Gentlemen: I wish to thank New York for the gift of this gavel, and assure you that I appreciate all that the representative from New York has said. I will not enter into a speech in regard to this token of sincerity and friendship, because when I say sincerity I mean that this convention is a serious matter to the exhibitors of this country. We are passing through an era of cinematography that demands that we, as motion picture exhibitors, consider everything seriously at this convention.

I am not going to dwell upon either the seriousness or any other subject at this time, but it is my pleasure, and I assure you it is a pleasure, to introduce to you not only a friend but a statesman, a man that is known throughout the width and breadth of the United States, a man who has ever stood for the people, not a few, but for all the people of this country—a man who is enlisted and is as earnestly engaged in thought and action for the motion picture exhibitors of this country as though he were a motion picture exhibitor himself; a man when I went to him and asked him "Will you serve as attorney for the motion picture exhibitors of Ohio?" said, "I will serve." He never asked the question of a retainer, but he can receive retainer fees of a thousand dollars from other corporations and other bodies, but he never spoke about a retainer fee to me when I asked him to represent the State of Ohio as our attorney.

Ladies and Gentlemen of this convention, I have the pleasure of introducing to you the Hon. John J. Lentz, of Columbus, O., who will now address you. (Applause.)

Hon. John J. Lentz: Mr. Chairman and Ladies and Gentlemen of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Friends: In every fiber of my being I appreciate as I could appreciate no other honor, the privilege of an invitation from your president and secretary to meet with you on this, the second anniversary of a work that I believe is destined to be the most potent in the next generation of any work that has been consummated in any generation in all the centuries of time. (Applause.)

Many of you men and women are probably aware that Edison has recently said that with all that he has been credited in the inventive world, he believes that Ford, the inventor of a moderate priced and serviceable automobile, has succeeded in outstripping him in work for humanity. If the Ford machine in setting a modest price and compelling others to bring their price down to within the reach of the many has surpassed and exceeded in inventive ingenuity and in service to humanity the great Edison, then, my friends, how much more are you succeeding in surpassing Edison and Ford when you bring the entire world before the vision of the boy and girl, the schoolmaster and the preacher, the doctor and the lawyer, the merchant and the mechanic in a few minutes' time for the paltry sum of a five-cent piece. (Applause.)

Kings and bishops, potentates and princes, were long supposed to be the masters of the human flock. It was for them to travel and to read and to govern the millions who were in ignorance. If there ever was any credit in being a king or a bishop or a potentate of any kind, how much more credit is due men and women enaged, as you are, in making kings and bishops and princes and potentates of every boy and girl that come in from the sidewalk. (Applause.)

In the coming winter you men and women will for a nickel a show educate the boyhood and the girlhood, the manhood and the womanhood of the United States, to a higher degree of intelligence and efficiency than any king or bishop ever obtained in the history of the world. (Applause.) You show them the civilizations of the entire earth. It was the dream of a great literary character to make a trip around the world in eighty days. I was going to say that you do it in eighty minutes. I believe it would be equally true if I would say that you can take us on a trip around the earth in about eighty seconds if you wanted to do it with a moving picture machine. (Applause.)

Yes, my friends, I am rather proud of Mr. Neff's introduction. We in Ohio sometimes have been accused of being somewhat conceited about that state. We are no longer standing back of Virginia and allowing her to be called the Mother of Presidents. We think that Ohio is the mother and that Virginia has become superannuated and is the Grandmother of Presidents (laughter); and in Ohio we are rather proud of the fact that we have an M. A Neff (applause), who has organized a creative and moulding influence in the United States.

The time is ripe when you men and women should be known to the law makers of the land as a potentiality that it will not be trifled with, and that you will not allow every Tom, Dick and Harry of some little municipality to hamper the progress of the picture play—the greatest luminary in the universe of intellectual life. (Applause.)

Organizers are born, not made. They twitted us in Ohio and said some people are born rich, some are born lucky and others are born in Ohio. (Laughter.) I know that Neff was not born rich in shekels, but he was born rich in ideas. (Applause.) A man who can organize the manhood and womanhood here to-day is a man of whom any state could be proud; and when Mr. Neff walked into my office and asked me whether I would serve as counsellor for the organization of the State of Ohio, I didn't stop, he says, to ask for a retainer. Well, I am not quite so greedy as that. I would rather give some of my time in connection with a work like this than to spend it at prayer meeting and teaching Sunday-schools; they are too slow. (Laughter.) If every church in this land would put in a moving picture every Sunday, I believe we would all go. Good men and women like you could not stay away. I would go myself if they would have the film there. It would be a drawing card of the churches, and you would not find so many articles in the magazine asking why do the men not go to church and why are the women beginning to leave the church pews empty. Why? Because they haven't got a moving picture. (Applause.) They are behind the times. They are not up to date. They are dealing with dead ones; you are dealing with live ones. (Applause.)

Neff says, "Will you be the attorney?" and I said "Yes." Why? Because I knew there was very little to do. He is the attorney of the moving picture men in the State of Ohio. He understands what the future will be. There are some men who project the necessities of the business and comprehend them and realize where the statutes are deficient and where the municipal and state codes are deficient with reference to the buildings within which these great educators are to be installed in the future; and so instead of the State League coming to me for a lawyer, I am smart enough to turn to Neff because he is the best equipped lawyer on that subject that I know of anywhere, with all due respect to your national counsellor, Senator Foraker of Ohio or the state counsellor, your humble servant.

The subject of the moving picture appeals to me possibly as no other subject. All my life, from my boyhood days, I have hoped in some way to be identified with the great uplift of the ninety-six millions or the thousand million or fifteen hundred million who make up the human family. They are all my brothers and my sisters, and I know of no influence in the world to-day that is lifting all humanity up to as high a degree with as little friction, with as little labor, with as little trouble, with as little care as the men and women who are giving the world the benefit of the moving picture education, a university, if you please (applause); and I would rather be here in Chicago with you and New York next year (applause from the New York delegation) if you go there than anywhere else for the same amount of time. I see I hit a lucky number over there near New York's flag, and I don't wonder. I am willing to say that so far as I am concerned you are big enough and strong enough and you ought to go not only to the cosmopolitan city of America but the best city of all the world. It may not be quite the largest, but it is ahead of all of them with all due respect to my friends from Chicago who have still got to play second fiddle to New York for another year or two. I like Chicago. I come here very often and there isn't any question but that Chicago, in growing to its present proportions, has done wonders, but this organization ought to go to New York City, because the New York City papers ramify this country as no other papers, not even excepting the great schoolhouse that is conducted by the newspapers in the city of Chicago. The United States is fortunate in having a city like Chicago with its hundreds and hundreds of railway trains carrying its splendid newspapers out over a thousand miles in every direction from this city. That is worth something to a nation, that is worth something to a republic, but New York City is equally fortunate in that it ramifies this republic with her great newspapers, and an organization of men and women such as you are, identified with the moving picture play, identified with the theatre, identified with the sermon, identified with the oration, identified with the art of the world, ought to hold its next meeting in the greatest city upon this continent that the whole world may sit up and take notice of your holy and moral purpose that is back of many of you who realize the future possibilities of this great institution.

I said at Dayton, in talking to our state league, that I believed that the time was not far distant when you would take your place in our public schools and give to the boys and girls within a single winter's course all the history, all the physical geography, all the knowledge of humanity, enterprise and industry, government, religion and science that they are now accustomed to get by the time they graduate from a university (applause). Why not save this time?

I believe in not one Sunday and six work days; I want the time to come when we shall have six Sundays and only one work day (laughter), and I believe with the machinery and the electricity and the inventive ingenuity of the people such a time is coming to pass in your day and my day. Carroll D. Wright said we could produce all the clothing, shelter, and food we now have if each one of us worked two hours and thirty minutes a day, using electricity and steam power and all the appliances that we now have. If that is so, work would be like playing golf two hours and thirty minutes—it would only be wholesome exercise (laughter).

I see no reason why we should make education a distasteful and disagreeable thing; no reason why developing mental muscles, if you please, should be repulsive to a boy or to a girl, and the moving picture could make the common school, the public school, the high school and the university come home to the children by the time they are fifteen years old instead of coming to them now by the time they are twenty-five years old. Why not do it?

I will go one step farther. The church—and I do not say it in a jocular way—could improve its methods and its service to humanity very materially if it incorporated in its work the moving picture; and if they will not do it in the churches the people who claim to be serving the Master or Prince of Peace, who say they love their neighbors as themselves, ought not to object to the moving picture show being open from morning till midnight every Sunday in the year (applause). It would do great good if knowledge of scriptural history is worth anything to the church to have it known early in life. It would be much better to be given to the young boys and girls and the older boys and girls in the way that you can give it in the picture play than the way that the average preacher can give it. I say it seriously.

In centuries of time a few men have carved immortal names. One of them we call Michael Angelo. We speak of another as Raphael. We speak of Rubens and Rembrandt and others, but what was the history of Raphael's greatness? What was the greatness of Michael Angelo? It was to take from the heart and brain and put upon canvas or upon a wall a picture that had a suggestion of form and above all motion; and they worked for centuries to produce a Michael Angelo. They worked for centuries to produce a Raphael who could by touch of something put into the color and the light of a great portrait that which would suggest motion, the divinest thing of the universe; motion, that which makes of spirit matter.

The scientists tell us from the one school that there are eighty-three or four or five elements in material out of which all matter such as wood and water and air and the like, are made. These scientists say that you will never get through discovering new elements. The latest by Madam Curie of radium and two or three others will not finish the list. Some other will discover another and another and another.

The other scientists say that all in the universe is but spirit. There is no matter and what we call matter is but spirit in motion in different vibrations, and that we have the different forms of matter as we see it with our five senses. I believe they are right. It is the only explanation of the doctrine of immortality. It is the only logical basis upon which you can build a faith in a future life and prove that the spirit of a human being is the essence of God himself, and that the form in which we find him, the form in which we find the trees and flowers, the mountains and the valleys, the earth, the sun and the stars, are but the clothing of God himself; and you with your miracle of the moving picture step to the front in my age and our generation and perform the latest miracle of all the miracles. If the preachers of the land want the lesson of Eve and the temptation preached, it can never be preachd or taught in as little time or so completely as by the men and women who are engaged in presenting to the public the temptation and the fall of man in Eden by the use of the moving picture.

Think of the pathetic story of Abraham and Sarah; think of Hagar and Ishmael driven out! See them upon the desert and you can't conceive of any preacher or orator ever portraying that picture of that woman and that child driven from the household of Abraham as it could be presented to the world in a few minutes by the moving picture (applause).

Think of Jesus of Nazareth laid in a manger; think of Jesus of Nazareth at the age of twelve propounding the questions to the doctors and philosophers of the Jewish religion! Think of Jesus in His humble garb in His miserable plight so far as this world's goods were concerned down with fishermen by the seaside. See Him in your moving picture with publicans and sinners. Are these lessons worth learning? Yes. How soon? At the earliest moment in a child's career. Give the child mental muscle. Think, if you please, of Solomon with the two women, each claiming the child. Think of the wisdom and the psychologic power of Solomon when he says, "Bring me a sword that I may divide the child." Think of the one womai saying: "O just judge, divide it," and the other saying, "No, give it to her." He learned in a moment which was the mother, a lesson that is at the foundation of the processes of a cross-examination and decision in the mind of every lawyer and every judge that is a student of human nature. Why not bring that to the boy and the girl at the age of ten? Why wait until they have wasted another fifteen years before they get this lesson and this philosophy?

Oh, my friends, the great minister, the great preacher, the great priest, the great philosopher in the pulpit would not object if he were sincere in having you present next Sunday in every theatre in the land the story of Buddha, not born exactly as Jesus but also born of an immaculate conception, born from a princess in Asia, conceived by the penetration of the ray from a star piercing her side, the child born from under the arm and, growing to manhood, spent his eighty-three years ministering to the cause of humanity, coming down from the palace and the castle to the poor, the very thing that a few rich men now pride themselves in doing in ministering to the cause of the down-trodden and the helpless. Would there be any objection to showing the development of the Mohammedan religion and showing its theory and its history? Would there be any objection to showing the philosophy or religion of the Chinese under the leadership of Confucius? Would there be any objection to showing and educating all humanity by your moving pictures the wealth of the religion of Zoroaster, older than any of the others that I have mentioned? Can any sound mind, can any liberated soul, object to every boy and every girl on the face of the earth knowing these things? Can anybody object to that further information that would come from teaching the American ninety-six millions of boys and girls, young and old, that it was Moses, the founder of the Jewish religion, who first promulgated in that famous proclamation and prayer which we incorporated and carved upon Old Liberty Bell, and there it is at Philadelphia to-day. Some even thought it was Franklin; some thought it was Jefferson; some thought it was Thomas Paine; some credited it to this one and that one, because they hadn't understood their Bible, and in their laborious ways of getting their biblical information they never got it all nor got it right. It was Moses who said: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof," and that is what the moving picture men and women are doing to-day. You are promoting intelligence, liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof every day and every night you are at work in the splendid career upon which you have entered. (Applause.)

My friends, "A small fire kindleth a great mass," is a scriptural proverb. You are but in the infancy of this great work, and you are now progressing so much more rapidly because you are a national organization. This work of yours in Chicago now and in New York, as I hope it will be next year with all due respect to my friends from Chicago—of course, they have the habit here in Chicago of expecting everything all the time, but we have got to teach them to divide up a little and let New York have her share. So I think you ought to go to New York next year.

The thing for you to do is to make the national congress and the state legislatures and the municipal councils of the whole country sit up and take notice that you are organized. The mere fact that you bring the greatest education in the world for the least price is no evidence that you are to be sneered at or that your work is to be treated with contempt. To bring the best to the humblest has been the mission of the world. The division of property or the doctrine of live and let live, was one of the teachings of Jesus. It is the one doctrine of all the great religious philosophers of all the denominations of the world. It was the grandest message of a great human heart that has been given in the last hundred years; it was the message of Joseph Mazzini, that great heroic soul of Italy that had to be banished and crucified, so to speak, because he loved humanity. He said, "Democracy is the progress of all through all under the leadership of the wisest and best." He had in mind the intellectual qualification of the humblest boy and the humblest girl in the land. It was Thomas Jefferson's idea when he proclaimed the doctrine of universal education at state expense; that the mission of mankind is not to be busy building jails and penitentiaries and equipping a standing army with guns and policemen with clubs. Jefferson believed and taught that our highest purpose was to make intellectual kings, queens and princes of all mankind. It is not simply the business of Illinois to raise fine cattle and fine horses, but the business of Illinois and of New York and the other states is to breed and rear the highest type of manhood and womanhood, and you, the moving picture people, are developing the mental muscle every time you get a boy or girl into your show. (Applause.)

I heard of a little girl who was so fond of the picture show that whenever they missed her they guessed that in some way she had gotten hold of a nickel and gone to the picture show. Her uncle thought that he would have to deliver a lecture upon the wickedness of the picture show and said, "Why, my darling, don't you know that the streets of hell are lined with picture shows?" "Well," she says, "Uncle, me for hell, then." (Laughter.)

I agree with her. She had more sense than her uncle had, a good deal more. Now, how are we making progress? We are going to have a chance in this United States of America before we have four hundred and fifty millions of people as they have in China to have the man and the woman to whom you sit next in a street car just as elegant in manners, in culture, in clothing as those who ride in carriages and automobiles, when our manhood and womanhood will be brought up and our common level will be a higher intellectual quality. That is the beauty of the picture of America in my vision. That must be the conception of the best manhood and womanhood of the United States, many of whom are represented here this afternoon. (Applause.)

The progress of all through all under the leadership of the wisest and the best. You are teachers, you are ministers, you are serving the people. Some of you are doing it for mercenary purposes, I know, just as there are men in every community who are in it only for the money there is in it, but among you there are many men and women who realize the moral obligation and opportunity of your business. In every walk of life there are men who are manufacturers, there are men who are doctors, there are men who are lawyers, there are men who are preachers, there are men who are in the moving picture business who realize that the common uplift of the entire human family is the God-given duty and responsibility imposed upon each and every one of us. (Applause.) It is true that we carry some along with us with coarser grained fiber and less qualification to appreciate and understand. Every brain is a receiving instrument, every brain. Take the crude brain like a crude soil of a prairie or the swamp, if you please; it will depend upon how you treat it as to what it will grow. It will depend upon what kind of a germ you put into it. Much of this talk about our heredity is nonsense. Most of the development of mankind and womankind is through environment. Take an ordinary brain in any ordinary waif in any ordinary city and begin to plant in it the germs of high purpose, the beautiful pictures of manhood and womanhood, and it will grow up into a royal personage even though it may not have money for the fine raiment, and you are contributing to that growth and future of our citizenship as no teacher and no preacher, no lawyer and no doctor is to-day. (Applause.)

(Continued on page 14)

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Reliance

"Order in the Court," the first subject of a Reliance split-reel is a farce too childishly foolish to make fun for intelligent people, and consists of a series of court incidents not strong enough in comedy to be amusing.

The second subject, however, balances things up to a certain degree. "The Old Swimming Hole" is reminiscent of school days to those who have long left childhood behind them, and it is pleasing to children because it appeals to their sense of fun and sport. They are glad when they see the children in the picture wallowing in the clear, cool water of the swimming hole, into which empties the mountain streams, in defiance of the old farmer, proprietor of the place.

"A Man Among Men" is a disappointment. Its title stirs up an expectation of something better, and were the picture ever so good, the close approach to a hanging scene throws a bloodthirsty dash over the whole which leaves an unpleasant recollection.

American

"The Land of Death," for August 19th, has too much bloodshed. Pictures of this sort cease to be entertaining. There are also a number of inconsistencies in this film. Would a man who was alive to the fact that the prickly cactus is true to its name be liable either to hang his canteen among its branches or to lie down to sleep beside it?

Urbanora

"The Joker's Mistake" has its hit in the interesting feats performed by the illusionist, such as the conjuring into a wineglass of a dancing ballet girl.

Lubin

"Buster in Nodland" is a sweet baby bit—just a dream of Baby Buster, in which he dreams all sorts of things, until at last a rival accomplishes the arrest of him and a dear baby girl. He escapes from prison and is attacked by cowboys of his own diminutive size, is roped and tied and laid across a toy railroad track, and is rescued by his little sweetheart just as a toy train of cars almost runs over him. He awakes in terror and is confronted by his parents, who, hearing his cries of distress, come quickly to his aid.

"A Double Courtship" is not by any means Lubin's best, but is at the same time amusing.

Selig

"The Girl at the Cupola," although not strong in plot, is an attractive production. No more perfect specimen of young womanhood could be found, with robustness and daintiness so happily combined, than is manifested in the personality of the leading lady of this picture play.

Kalem

"The Little Keeper of the Light" is a most attractive film, in which the tiny tot who plays the lead keeps the attention of the audience every moment that her magnetic little form appears upon the screen. This is one of the cleverest children playing in pictures at the present time.

Essanay

"The Tale of a Cat" is a farce-comedy that, in spite of its absolute foolishness and impossibility of occurrence in real life, keeps the audience in roars of laughter.

Eclipse

"A Quiet Boarding House," another farce-comedy, is quite as impossible as any farce could be; yet it calls forth a laugh.

Nothing more beautiful or more quaint could be imagined in a scenic bit than "From Scion to Champrey." The following is a list of the sub-titles: "Street Scenes in Scion," "Ruins of the Fortress of Valere," "Leaving Monthey," "The Marmette's Stone," rock bought by Swiss Government as being a vestige of Mont Blanc Granite; "Arrival at Champrey" and "Streets of Champrey."

Vitagraph

"Ingenuity" and "Bunny and the Dogs," on one reel, are pleasing, especially the former, the leading roles of which are played by two remarkably clever children. The latter subject does not show John Bunny at his best, and it may be somewhat to his credit that he stands aside in order to allow the beautiful dogs in the film to have their full share of appreciation.

Pathé's Weekly

Among the interesting news items in this week's issue are: "Reinforcements for the Army in Morocco to Aid Europeans Leaving Toulon," "The Steamer Jose, Sunk in the East River, Is Successfully Raised," "The Annual Circuit Auto Races at Dieppe, France," "President Taft Receiving Delegation Who Inform Him of His Renomination," "Hon. Carmi Thompson, Newly Appointed Secretary to President Taft," "The Czar and Czarina at Moscow, Russia," "At Kansas City Seven Balloons Start in the Race Which Will Determine Which Three Will Represent America at the International Races in Germany Next Fall," "Adelaide, Australia, Prize Winners of Annual Dog Show Pose for Pictures," "The Giants Wallop the Cubs at the New York Polo Grounds."

NEFF URGES STATE BOARDS OF CENSORSHIP

M. A. Neff, president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America, at the annual convention in Chicago said: "The elimination of condemnable pictures from the national circuits, action seeking legislation for the establishment of a national board of censorship and the attainment of higher standards of films. He strongly urges the establishment of State boards of censorship, the members to be appointed by governors, and to consist of men engaged in professional capacities and capable of making intelligent criticism.

"Poor protection is afforded manufacturers and exhibitors of motion pictures when the fact that investments approximating $500,000,000 have been made in those departments is taken into consideration.

"The Government board of censorship has proven far from satisfactory. The Government has no authority to interfere in the prerogatives of the States. The national or Government board of censorship exists in name only, and has no jurisdiction over displays of pictures in States. One great difficulty manufacturers and exhibitors have encountered, and one that has done much to hinder the progress of the motion picture world, is police censorship in cities and towns. It is slowly but surely laying the foundation of ruin for exhibitors.

"Censorship of motion pictures should be done only by men capable of a true appreciation of the artistic and educational value of the works. Artists, physicians, dramatists, lawyers, newspaper men and authors are of the professions which could be ranked as being capable of proper censorship.

"People do not understand moving picture business. They think they do, and in this belief they are seriously jeopardizing the future of the motion picture world. Boys and girls of immature age entertain convictions that they know far more about the operation of moving picture theatres than the owners. It is our purpose to institute plans that will bring about a revolution of these ideas. It is to our immediate advantage to do so.

"There are now actively engaged in the moving picture industry 500,000 persons, representing an investment of $500,000,000. This great army of workers has inadequate protection from political sources.

"The primal purpose of this convention will be to bring about conditions that will not only elevate the standard of cinematography, but will be beneficial to all departments of the motion picture world. Not only exhibitors, but manufacturers and exchanges are in need of a greater spirit of progression in their work.

"The exhibitor who refrains from joining the national organization is certain to be eliminated from active competition and will become a detriment to his competitors. The non-member eventually will come to fully appreciate the commercial value of a membership in the organization."

HALLBERG EQUIPS NEW 116th ST. THEATRE

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," is furnishing a Powers No. 6 moving picture machine, together with spot light, stage lighting apparatus and all supplies, flame arc lamps and ticket chopper for the new theatre on 116th street, to be opened shortly by the Laurel Amusement Co. Mr. Hallberg also reports the sale of a Powers No. 6A to J. C. Davis, Orpheum Theatre, Saugerties, N. Y.

A BACHELOR'S ROMANCE

By VIRGINIA WEST

(Adopted from Comet Release)

Richard Vandergrift settled lower in his big arm chair before the wood fire in the club library. Outside the wind blew cold and inside the logs blazed and crackled in the most friendly manner.

It was the last of October and most of the members of the club had gone out to attend the various social affairs with which the season was opening.

Vandergrift drew contentedly on his pipe and pulled his chair a little closer to the fire. He was well pleased with himself that he had stayed at the club He was known as the bachelor member, although many of them were unmarried. He was the only one who seemed likely to remain so.

The men called him a stick and a bear and all sorts of names, but he only smiled good-naturedly and told them to run off and play if they wished to, but to leave him to his pipe and books.

Richard Vandergrift's parents had died a few years after his twenty-first birthday, leaving him a good-sized fortune and the city house in which they lived.

To the great surprise of his friends, the young fellow had continued to live in the big house, with only his servants. To their much questioning as to why he lived alone, he simply answered that he wanted to.

Of course, everybody looked for him to marry very soon, but as the years went on—first, ten and then fifteen, and no signs of a wedding appeared, the fellows at the club became convinced that he was a confirmed bachelor.

On this particular night in October Vandergrift raised his head and listened many times to the wind before he finally arose. It was nearly midnight.

He walked the few blocks to his home at a brisk pace, and whistled softly to himself as he thought how free from care he was. The other fellows were always coming to the club with some tale of woe. Things went wrong at home or they had to go to some entertainment when they didn't want to just because their wives wanted to go. And he had nobody to please but himself, and plenty of devoted servants to please him. For a moment he felt almost ashamed of his peace of mind.

As Vandergrift stooped to put his key in the vestibule door his foot struck something strange. "What the deuce have they left on the porch?" he muttered under his breath. He felt around in the semi-darkness until his hand touched the object he had kicked. "What the devil is a basket doing on the front porch?" he growled, when he had discovered what it was. "Surely, the servants haven't been using the front door."

When he had opened the inner door and stepped into the lighted hall, he set the basket down none too gently.

A faint sound issued from the basket. Richard Vandergrift turned sharply from the fire, where he stood lighting a cigarette. Again came the sound. "Great Scott," cried the man, "is somebody trying to play a joke on me?"

The sound came a third time, now long and insistent. Vandergrift jerked off the cloth that covered the basket. "What have those idiots done?" he muttered angrily.

Revealed to his eyes lay a baby, less than six months old. Vandergrift's first thought was that a joke was being played on him. Then he realized that even the clubmen, who would usually go to any lengths to play a good joke, would not do such a thing at that hour of the night.

The baby began to cry loudly and to hold up its hands. With a wry face Vandergrift stooped and lifted the little form. I don't know what's going to happen to you, but I presume you've got to get out of that basket," he said.

As he carefully transfered the baby from the basket to a sofa, he felt a paper fastened to its dress. "Oh, the usual paper," he said grimly. "Mother thought this was the home of a wealthy, childless couple, I suppose. Well, the wealthy and childless is all right—especially the childless—but couple, no. Let us see, now, what mother does say. 'Please care for my baby girl. I have tried but the struggle is too hard.' That's all."

Richard Vandergrift stood looking down at the baby, now contentedly gazing at the bright lights above her. "Well, what's to be done about it, sis? I'm afraid it's an orphan asylum for yours."

The baby began to fret. "You don't want to be an orphan, do you?" He reached over and took one little hand as it struggled in the air. "By Jove, you're cold," he said, and picked the child up gingerly to carry her to the fire.

The comfortable warmth soon made the baby sleepy, and in ten minutes her head had dropped upon Vandergrift's shoulder and she was asleep.

"Well, I like your nerve," he said, but instinctively he held the little form closer. "But I'm glad you're gone, for now I'll just pack you off to the orphan asylum before you know anything about it. I wonder where that pesky man of mine is."

Quietly he leaned forward and touched an electric button beside the mantle piece. In a few moments a very sleepy-eyed man appeared, but stopped short in the doorway with open-mouthed surprise.

"No, Joseph, you are not dreaming, although you look as though you had been."

Vandergrift paused, but the man did not speak.

"Yes, this is a baby and I'm not crazy. I found that basket on the porch and this was inside it. Did you ever have a baby, Joseph?"

"Why, no, sir. I—I think not, sir."

"Well, do you know anybody who ever has had a baby, Joseph?"

"Why, I think cook has, sir. Shall I call her, Mister Richard?"

"No, but take this child to her and you go with her to the Foundling Asylum."

Richard Vandergrift arose and held the sleeping baby toward Joseph. No sooner had he done so than a sleepy cry was heard and the baby turned back and put her arms around his neck.

"Well, well, this will never do," he said, and tried to loosen the little hands. But the child held tighter and cried louder.

Vandergrift felt something happen to his eyes. He turned away from Joseph and said in a voice not quite his own: "Tell cook to come here. It's pretty late; I suppose we had better wait till morning."

Joseph was gone in a moment.

Richard sat down to await the cook—a woman, and one who knew about babies.

"Ah, Mister Richard, and it's that way I've been wantin' to see you these many days."

"That's all right, but do you know about babies?" he snapped.

"Sure; I've had eight of me own."

"Well, take this one and do something with it until tomorrow. Then we'll—we'll see."

The baby was by this time fast asleep, and the cook took her without any trouble.

The remaining hours of the night Richard Vandergrift slept poorly. Asleep or awake, he could not forget the feeling of those clinging little arms. And over and over he thought of the mother who had left her baby—hoping and praying that it would be cared for. How terrible a thing an orphan asylum is, anyway, he thought. And he had more money than he knew what to do with.

When Joseph came to him in the morning he found him pale, but with his mouth shut like a steel trap.

"Joseph," he said, with the air of a man who has screwed his courage to the sticking point; "Joseph," I don't know whether I am a damn fool or not, but I'm going to keep that baby. Don't say a word or I'll knock you through the door. Go out and tell all the servants if they mention it to me I'll kill the whole bunch of them."

"If I only had somebody to care for her for a few years." thought Vandergrift, "I could take care of her then." Just then a thought came to him—his aunt, Mrs. Wayne Vandergrift. She would be back in town in a few days and he would surely speak to her on the subject.

"My dear Richard," she said when he approached her, "I should love to do anything to please you, but I have planned a trip to Europe for the last of November, and I simply must go. Besides, dear, if you were so foolish as to get yourself into this mess, I really think you ought to get yourself out."

So the poor man's only hope was gone. She was right, he was in a mess and he would have to get himself out. The easiest way out was to stay in, he decided, so he hired two nurses and things were settled.

The men at the club at once called him "Papa." He took it like a man and finally grew rather to like it.

As the months passed he began to find himself more and more occupied. There was always something new to be gotten for the baby. Then he found himself more and more at home. The club saw him only in the evenings. A change gradually took place in his nature. He found himself becoming more gentle and thoughtful.

One day, when the child, now called Elsie Vandergrift, was two years old, Richard went to the nursery straight from his after-luncheon pipe. He picked up the little girl and started to kiss her, but she turned away her head and wrinkled up her little nose.

"What's the matter with her?" asked Vandergrift of the nurse.

The nurse looked embarrassed and said nothing.

"What's the matter with her?" he demanded.

"I think," she answered, hesitating, "I think she doesn't like the tobacco smell on your breath."

Without a word Vandergrift put the child down and left the room. But he never smoked again.

The men at the club said he was making a fool of himself, but he knew his heart and paid no attention to them.

From time to time a card came from Richard's aunt. She had lengthened her trip to Europe to a trip around the world. And having nothing to govern her actions but her own desires, she stayed as long as she chose in each place she stopped.

When Elsie was nearly five years old Richard received a letter from Mrs. Vandergrift. In one place she said: "I have spoken of the excellence of my companion, but nothing more regarding her. I am not going to say much now, but, Richard, my boy if you are thinking of looking for a wife, don't do it until you have seen Majorie Dean. She is charming. I have told her nothing of you excepting that I have a nephew, Richard. We shall be gone only another year, so you won't have to wait long."

Richard smiled. His aunt had been trying to find him a wife for fifteen years, so he thought nothing more of this suggestion than the previous ones.

The year soon passed. On the date chosen as Elsie's birthday she was to have a party. As near as could be calculated she was six years old.

Just at the time for the children to arrive Richard was called to the telephone. Who should be there but his aunt. She had just returned that day and wanted him to come around at once. He explained that he couldn't—that Elsie was having a party.

"Oh, we'll come around and help you—we'll be there right away—goodby," was the reply.

Vandergrift said something that sounded very much like "damn" as he hung up the receiver.

"It's a pity she can't leave a fellow alone for a little while," he growled.

But before the afternoon was over he was glad they came. Not only because of the wonderful way in which Marjorie handled the children, but because of Marjorie herself.

Richard noticed that the girl's eyes followed him wherever he went with Elsie. After the children had gone, she came upon him in the library, alone.

"Mr. Vandergrift," she said "pardon me for speaking on so personal a subject, but I feel I must tell you how beautiful it is to see you with your little girl. The love between you seems to be so perfect. You must have loved her mother very much."

"You are certainly pardoned, Miss Dean. I do love Elsie more than all the world. But I did not know her mother. She is not my child."

"She is not—you mean you have adopted her."

"Some good angel guided her mother to my door one night and she left me this dear little girl when she was a baby."

Marjorie did not speak at once. Then she asked in a low voice, "How old was she then?"

"As near as we could guess she was about five months old."

Marjorie went softly to a table and sat down by it. "The poor mother," she said, "how it must have hurt her to leave her baby."

"I know it must have," answered Richard. "There was very little in the note and no clue whatever, but somehow I have always kept it."

"Oh, you have it? Could I—could I see it?" begged Marjorie breathlessly.

"Why, Miss Dean, I am afraid you are too sympathetic," said Richard gently.

Marjorie tried to smile. "Oh, no," she said, "I was carried away by my imagination for the moment."

Richard opened a desk and in a moment had handed the girl the open note.

She turned deathly pale. "Oh, Mr. Vandergrift," she cried in a voice of mingled distress and joy.

"What is it? Can it be that——? Tell me, Miss Dean."

"Yes, this is the note I pinned to my baby's dress over five years ago. She is mine, but you love her and I can't bear to take her from you."

Richard took the note, folded it and put it in the desk before he spoke.

"I am going to say something to you that I did not intend to say for a long time," he said very softly. "I was attracted to you the moment you came in and the feeling has been growing all the afternoon. I have never believed in love at first sight, but Miss Marjorie, I am beginning to believe in it now. Can you be frank and tell me whether you have felt any of this attraction?"

The girl raised her eyes to those above her. "Yes," she said, "I have felt it."

"If we continue to feel as we do now, there is an easy way out of our difficulty about Elsie, isn't there?"

"Yes."

"But we must be sure," he continued. "If we find we are mistaken, you must take your baby. In fact, you must take her now so that you will feel entirely free in the matter. Suppose you take her for six months and then we'll compare notes as to our feelings in a perfectly practical way. What do you say?"

"But you don't know my story."

"That is of no consequence. You can tell it when you please, but it can make no difference whatever it is." He took her hand and raised it to his lips. "I feel very happy," he said.

"And I, too," she answered.

And Mrs. Vandergrift, passing in the hall said to herself, "My goodness, I didn't expect it as quick as that."

A NEW BOSTON FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

A company has been recently organized under the name of The Great Eastern Film Manufacturing Company with offices at 218 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., for the purpose of manufacturing educational, commercial and feature films. It has been reported that abundant Boston capital is available to promote this latest film enterprise of New England.

STOLEN! FROM CORAK'S AMUSEMENT CO.

On August 2d, between midnight and 5 o'clock in the morning, a No. 6 Power machine. The number of the machine is 5445.

Any information concerning the above will be gladly received at the offices of Corak's Amusement Co., 87 Ridge street, New York City.

HARRY WALDEN, GREAT GERMAN ACTOR, IN PICTURES

One of the greatest actors of Germany, Harry Walden, has devoted himself to the Kinematograph.

A Harry Walden Company has been formed, and we understand that the first of the series of films will be released probably in the early part of October. This film will contain the most beautiful views of Heidelberg, famed for its picturesqueness and wonderful architecture, and will show the customs of the German students on their fencing grounds. We will also see the hero of this film in a large iron foundry of North Germany, where he is forging the red hot iron, pouring melted iron into the molds, and directing a crane which has a carrying capacity of many thousand tons.

CONVENTION NEWS

(Continued from page 10)

I think I can say, and I believe I can reduce it to the concrete, in Ohio where there are over a thousand moving picture shows. All the schools and all the churches combined haven't done as much to build mental muscle in the last two years as those moving picture shows have built. (Applause.)

I agree with your organization as voiced in a daily paper to-day in an interview by your president, Mr. Neff, or comment, that you should favor a censor, and that that censorship should be appointed by the government of the nation or the states, and that it should be men and women qualified to appreciate the mental growth of the manhood and womanhood of the community, not some cheap little politician that is given a job, but men and women of character and intellectual horizon, so that they may eliminate that which is debasing and degrading and prevent its being put upon the stage by those who would run the low dives. There are people who would run a picture show that way, and would appeal to the baser and lower elements. You don't want it. No man and no woman wants that. That you ought to have eliminated.

Sunday should be a day of education. It ought to be your harvest day, because the tens of thousands and millions of boys and girls and men and women who are in the shops and factories through the work days, expending practically all the energy they have got for food, clothing and shelter, ought to have Sunday for intellectual growth, if you please, because that is what it would be. A change is a rest. You ought to organize in state and national bodies to insist upon your own claim that you are doing your duty as God gives it you to see the highest development and progress of the human family.

If you can take a boy and a girl at six or seven and in one winter's course show them the Jap and his institutions and the Chinaman and the Hindu and the Persian and the Turk and the Armenian and the Arab, if you please, and the Russian, and the Austrian, and the Italian and the Spaniard and the Portuguese, and come on across into this country, and show them the different types of manhood and of womanhood and couple up their educational institutions, or their lack of them, and couple up with them the religious institutions, if you please, and the quality of manhood and womanhood they produce under it, because you have got as good a right to judge a church by the manhood and womanhood that it produces or fails to produce as to judge a tree by the fruit it bears (applause); and I will not allow any preacher or teacher to talk to me about a mob in this country. If he has got a mob under his pulpit he is to blame for it. Why doesn't he educate them up to a level of normal manhood and womanhood? He has no business to keep a mob for three or four or five or six hundred years. The big men and women of the world have grown far above that, and if you take boys and girls and put them under the divine inspiring influence of your moving picture and show them this world, with all its many kinds of manhood and womanhood, do you think they would continue to hate each other? Do you think they would pray the miserable prayer of the narrow, pinched-up soul, so small that one might well rattle ten thousand in a peanut shell? Do you think they would produce that kind of manhood in Illinois with this moving picture show going day after day and night after night for ten years, showing them the world and its different specimens of mankind? Do you believe that it would do harm to put all the religions before the boys and girls? Anybody that doesn't favor that is very much of a coward regardless of who he may be. He questions the intelligence of his own people. He confesses too much. He admits that they are of the school but little above the idiot if they haven't mental strength enough to take in all the facts and then to decide. After you have given ten years of that kind of training there will be no man to stand up and say after the fashion of one of the jocular prayers I used to hear in eastern Ohio when I was a boy when a man stood up and prayed:

"Oh, Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more. Amen!"

Do you think anybody will pray that prayer after you have given one winter's course in the religions of the world? No, my friends, there is no danger of that.

Do you suppose that Pat would come out from the sermon and go around to the Father and say: "Father, did I understand you to say that on Judgment Day all the nations of the world are going to come before the Lord?" "Yes, Pat, that is exactly what I said.

Pat said, "Do you mean to say that on the Judgment Day the Chinese will be there?"

"Yes, they will be there."

"And the niggers will be there?"

"Yes, they will be there."

"And the damn Dutch, will they be there?"

"Yes, Pat, they will be there."

"And the Protestant Irish, will they be there?"

"Yes."

"And the Catholic Irish, will they be there?"

"Yes, they will be there."

"Well, Father, I want to tell you one thing—there won't be any judging done the first day." (Laughter.)

Now, you never could have any of that left. That rubbish in the attic of any human being would be unknown after ten years of the moving picture showing the different nationalities and the history throughout the centuries and what has brought them up to it or down to it. Why, you are teaching the doctrine of Love your neighbor as you love yourself. You are teaching the doctrine or the fact that there is somebody else of some importance except yourself.

You have probably heard of Coleridge making a visit to Baden-Baden and in writing of his experience he said he found an old German who thought so much of himself that every time he mentioned his own name he took his hat off and put it under his arm. So we get the different churches and the different nationalities and the different states taking our hats off to ourselves every time we mention our own names.

Why, Hanley, the president of the Modern Brotherhood, in his very happy way out at Omaha two or three years ago in telling the man who took it very seriously because the convention didn't agree with him, and he stood up and undertook to lecture the convention, and Hanley, with his happy Irish wit, said: I want to say to the gentleman from Philadelphia that in our business we have twelve cards and frequently it saves a great deal of time in writing letters to just take out Rule One, Rule Three or Rule Six, and if I were at home I would write the gentleman from Philadelphia a letter saying, Under this cover you will find Rule Five, and Rule Five is in words and figures as follows, to wit: "Don't take yourself too damn seriously." That ought to be sent to every church in the world and it ought to be sent to every government in the world. There is no reason why Russia should take herself so seriously, or Germany or France or the United States or Chicago or New York. Remember that there are some others just about as good as you are, and remember, my friends, that the moving picture is the greatest educator, the greatest liberator in the world to-day without any exception.

One of the wisest and best things said for the human family was said by Thomas Jefferson, if it wasn't said by Mazzini, in my former quotation from him, and I believe that it is wiser than that of Mazzini. Jefferson wrote down several things in a book which he kept and one of them was this: "Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God." He said that tyrannies do not all consist in the autocratic power of kings. There are tyrants of the human mind; and then he wrote these immortal words which I think are the best to illuminate a human mind of anything I ever found in literature: "I have sworn on the altar of God eternal hostility to every form of the tyranny over the mind of man."

Matthew Arnold said that the world has always been governed by passion and prejudice. How many women and men we murdered for being witches and wizards! Five hundred thousand and in Europe, and down here at Salem, Massachusetts, only two hundred and fifty years ago, we yielded to that tyranny over the mind. I went and examined the record at Salem and I saw where a preacher cross-examined a little girl. I saw on file pins that they had sworn to as Exhibits A, B and C, which had been thrust into the flesh of their bodies by a certain woman who was called a witch, and this preacher cross-examined instead of the prosecuting attorney, as we now have, and when he got through and summed up his argument the judge on the bench found that this woman was a witch and I read with my own eyes the legal order of the judge to the sheriff to "take this woman to yonder height and there put her to death"; and I read with my own eyes the record brought back by the sheriff saying he had executed the commission and the order of the court. Do you think prejudice has played its part? No, it is still in the marrow of some men. Some men and women have prejudice that only goes through the skin; with others it goes through the skin and muscle, with others it goes clear through the bone and with some it goes to the very center of the marrow.

Now, think of it. You hate somebody that is a Jew because you are a Christian. You hate somebody that is a Catholic because you are a Protestant. You hate somebody because you are neither Jew nor Catholic nor Protestant. Now, you are a pretty small potato to allow that kind of stuff to tyrannize over your mind. Many lower animals kill for food, many kill to protect their young, but it remains for men to assassinate physically, intellectually, morally, socially, professionally their rivals in the world.

Whom can you name to-day who bring before them the Catholic and the Jew, the Protestant and the Agnostic and educate them and liberate them from these miserable tyrannies over the mind of man so much and so effectively, so fortunately and so completely as the moving picture men and women of the world (applause).

I solemnly believe that the battleships are to be abandoned. I believe that in this generation we shall see the beginning of the beating of swords and spears into ploughshares and pruning hooks, but it will not be done by the men in one pulpit lying about the denominations that support another pulpit; it will not be done by the one man of one religion filling a people with prejudice against another; it will be done by the men and women who bring all nations before the eye and the brain and the heart of the little boy and the little girl of the future and then the peace congress at The Hague will be a success and no state, no ambassador of any country, of any republic, of any kingdom, of any empire will contribute as much to the peace of the world in 1932 as the manhood and the womanhood that I have been honored and permitted to address to-day.

I want to congratulate you, I want to commend you and in any way that I can be of service command me. Your work is the work of the God of love, of the God that makes for the brotherhood of all mankind. Organize and continue to organize into national and state leagues and put your force and power upon the statute books, because after all legislation is the greatest education (applause lasting about five minutes).

I only want to say this in closing, as a parting word in recognition of the very generous and cordial applause you have given me, that nothing ever appeals to me quite so much as to find a manhood and a womanhood for whom I have made their own speech. You have demonstrated to me that you are in accord with my views on this subject, and you are upon the great highway to finish the work in which you have embarked (applause).

(Balance of Convention proceedings in next issue.)

ROSKAM AFTER NEW LAURELS

Ed. Roskam, who was with the Imp Company from October, 1909, to date, has resigned as superintendent of that concern. Eddie, as he is popularly known, states that he is going to fish in the moving picture pond with his own hooks. He has good ideas, and with his knowledge of the industry and eight years of experience is in for a very successful fishing trip.

The only information Eddie would impart is that the name of his concern will be the Commercial Motion Picture Company, with offices at 145 West 45th street, New York, and 591 St. Catherine street, Montreal, Canada. Eddie says, "I'm small now, but watch me grow."

ECLAIR COMPANY AND SCENARIO WRITERS

The Eclair Company desires us to announce that all scenarios should be sent to them direct, and not through the Universal Company, as was announced in our columns a few weeks ago. This address is 225 West 42d street, New York City.

"THELMA"
Reliance two-reel release of August 28th.

THE BULLY AND THE SHRIMP
Reliance release Sept. 4th.

SCENE FROM "LUCILE," THANHOUSER THREE-REEL RELEASE

"LUCILE"

THANHOUSER PRODUCTION IN THREE PARTS

M. I. MacDONALD

Of the recent pretentious productions attempted by the Thanhouser Company, the one of Owen Meredith's "Lucile," of which Parts I and II will be released August 27 and Part III on August 30, is, to the writer's mind, the best and most flawless in general contour.

The "Story of Lucile" lends itself beautifully to the moving picture production. It has all that appeals to the human heart—tense dramatic situations, sweetness and simplicity, and an old-fashioned atmosphere about it that suggests quaint old engravings that have been stowed away in the attic for generations.

Although the "Story of Lucile" is thoroughly familiar to the bookworm, there may be some among our readers who cannot answer to that name, and for their benefit it might be well to give a brief outline of the story. It is also interesting to know that Owen Meredith, the writer of "Lucile," was the son of the famous Bulwer-Lytton, and that, being unwilling to earn his laurels through the reflection of the literary genius of his ancestor, was known only as Owen Meredith until such time as he won fame through the success of "Lucile."

Lucile, the Comtesse de Nevers, engaged to a nobleman, Lord Alfred Vargrave, and not having learned that valuable lesson that even love, that wonderful undying quantity of which we read in books, meted out in meagre portions lasts the longer, wearied this mere man with her continual devotion. Finally they quarreled and mutually agreed to a separation for a year, after which time Lucile stipulated if he still loved her he should return to her.

It was not long, however, before Lord Alfred became engaged to the beautiful Miss Darcy. Upon hearing the news, Lucile, filled with sorrow and a desire to see again and speak with her former sweetheart, sent to him, asking that he bring personally to her letters which she had written him. When Lord Alfred comes to Lucile, the monotony of seeing her often having worn off, he is astonished to find how really beautiful she is. He therefore is overwhelmed with love for her and pleads her forgiveness, telling her that he does not love Miss Darcy, but is merely marrying her for position; but Lucile does not listen to him. He manages to meet her afterward, however, presumably by accident, while she is out riding, gaining her consent to accompany her. On the road they are overtaken by a thunder storm, and Lucile, almost hysterical from fright, does not repulse Alfred as he clasps her in his arms. Consenting to forgive the recreant lover, the two return to her home together. Here it is that the Duc de Luvois, who has long vainly courted Lucile, is overtaken by them near the entrance to Lucile's home, and where, maddened by jealousy, he follows Alfred out of the house, revolver in hand, determined to take his life, when Lucile, seeing the situation, throws herself upon the Duke, dissuading him from his proposed wicked deed, and thereby saving the life of Alfred.

But, as so often happens in the course of human events, Lord Alfred, looking back, by chance, and being ignorant of the circumstances, sees Lucile in the Duke's arms and misunderstands. Within the week he is married to Miss Darcy.

The Duke, repulsed by the woman he loved, returned to his lonely castle, while Lucile, weary of the world, sought refuge in a convent, determined to devote the remainder of her life to spiritual things.

Twenty-five years later there comes into the life of the Duke a ray of sunshine in Constance, his niece, a sweet young girl. At a social event Richard, the son of Lord Alfred and Miss Darcy, meets Constance and falls in love with her. He proposes to her and is accepted, but upon the uncle of Constance and the father of Richard meeting and recognizing one another, the two young people are promptly separated and forbidden to see one another, through the bitterness of the Duke.

Meantime, the Duke, who is a general in the French Army, and Richard, who is a lieutenant in the English Army, are summoned to war, when the allied forces of France and England join against Russia. It so happens that Lucile is one of the Sisters of Charity accompanying the army; and it also happens that when Richard is wounded he is brought into her ward to be cared for. Separated from Constance, and having no hope that he will ever be allowed to claim her in marriage, he has no desire to live. Little by little Lucile gathers the facts of the case, finding out incidentally that the injured soldier is the son of her former sweetheart, and glad to be able to bring some joy into the life of her former sweetheart by saving his son, she brings the Duke to the bedside of Richard and succeeds in bringing about a reconciliation, and Constance and Richard are reunited.

The cast taking part in the production is as follows:

Lucile	Marguerite Snow
Matilda	Flo La Badie
Lord Alfred	James Cruze
Duc de Luvois	William Russell
Constance	Mignon Anderson
Richard	William Garwood

Much credit is reflected in this production on the work of all of the participants, but perhaps more particularly upon Miss Snow, whose work is exceptionally fine. Miss Anderson is refreshingly sweet, and Miss La Badie is always charming.

"BILL" HADDOCK OF ECLAIR DROPS OUT OF ——

A man who can sit on a bucking cayuse certainly ought to be able to retain his contact with an automobile seat. But it transpires differently in the case of "Bill" Haddock, who rode bucking bronchos during his incumbency as director for Melies in Texas and California. There is an established type of land-lubber, sea-dog, and now "Bill" Haddock puts the term "saddle-sitter" in the colloquial dictionary.

"Bill" Haddock is now with Eclair. Last Saturday the Eclair New York office heard there was a big fire down on the Hudson River banks. At once they telephoned the Fort Lee studio, getting Haddock on the wire. Orders were given to go at once with a camera man and "get it." So off shot "Bill" (we dare call him that), with camera man and chauffeur in the front seat of the auto and Mr. Eclair Comedy Director seated in the back. Now, Jersey is more respectful of auto speeders than most States, so a 50-mile clip was the order.

A rock stuck up in the road. The front wheels missed it, but, as told by the victim, the rear wheels didn't. The chauffeur noticed an old colored mammy run to the middle of the road and wave him to stop and, rather than run her down (kind-hearted), he stopped. She pointed back, and there in the distance they saw Mr. Haddock just picking himself up.

They recovered him (for comedy directors are to be pampered, petted and guarded against abduction) and hurried on to the fire.

But it was out when they arrived.

KLEINE RELEASES

The week ending August 31st offers particularly interesting Kleine releases. Three highly dramatic subjects have been selected: tragedy, semi-historical romance, and sleuth-melodrama forming the variety.

"The Bride of Lammermoor," based on the classic old Scotch tale of the same name, for August, Tuesday 27th, played by the most popular members of the Cines Stock Company. "The Golden Curl," an Eclipse for Wednesday, August 23d, which is a thrilling detective story with a well laid plot and excellently acted, and "Richard, the Lion-Hearted," a Cines semi-historical drama, based on Sir Walter Scott's famous classic, "The Talisman," for Saturday, August 31st.

ARTHUR V. JOHNSON
Leading Man, Lubin Stock Co.

THE PICTURES AND THEIR MUSIC

To a musical soul every representation thrown upon the screen suggests a tone picture as well. But alas, for the soul whose sense of harmony is so fine as to be cognizant of every discord between the picture and the choice of selection forced upon it by the indifferent pianist! Or it may be that he is incapable.

Just recently a few words with Mr. Theodore Morse, the well-known song publisher, disclosed the fact that the ordinary methods of procuring music for the moving picture theatre are altogether at sea. Music is ordered by the manager of the theatre, or by the pianist in attendance at the theatre, in the most promiscuous manner.

"We get letters," said Mr. Morse, "asking us to please send music suitable for a moving picture theatre."

"And what do you do about it?" I asked.

"Well, we just pick out a bunch that we think suitable and send it on."

Mr. Morse is a man who has had wide experience in the music publishing business. He started out in life as an errand boy at Charles Ditson's; he was afterward with Paul Dresser, and has been altogether twenty years in the business.

"Do you attend the moving picture shows a great deal?" I questioned Mr. Morse.

"Yes, indeed; I go every chance I get."

"And where do you find the music best adapted to the pictures?"

"I don't find it adapted at all," came the prompt and decisive reply.

There was so much of truth in the latter remark that it evoked an acquiescent laugh from the writer—a laugh which said much more effectively than my tongue could have spoken it, "Them's my sentiments."

Oh, will the theatre manager, the pianist, the orchestra conductor or the manufacturer ever awaken to the fact that the music is the sentiment of the picture, appealing to you through the medium of sound—or, at least, so it should be? When will they realize that it is not alone the title of the picture that denotes what shall be the character of the music, but that scene by scene should be carefully equipped with music that fits, so that the color of the music blends with the color of the picture?

AMERICAN FILM NOTES

Producer Emerson of the American Film Mfg. Co. announced last Saturday the final finishing touch had been added to the big spectacular two-reel, giving the history of Starved Rock, Illinois. The fact that this subject was made on the historic rock itself, by special permission of the State Superintendent in charge, is expected to give it an extra value among two-reel subjects. It is an elaborate costume affair and accurately portrays the story of the rock in relation to Father Marquette, the explorer Joliet, La Salle and Tonty.

"The day on which producer Emerson staged the final scene in the 'Story of Starved Rock' was tremenduously exciting. His carpenters had ingeniously constructed a cardboard fort which, at the right moment was set on fire. Two thousand resorters watched the proceeding with great delight and cheered the performers when it was all over. Producer Emerson says he saw not less than fifty cameras focussed on the burning fort and firmly believes that more individual pictures have been taken by resorters than he himself made."

"No attraction at Starved Rock in recent years has stirred up the people of this county as the appearance of the moving picture folks. Producer Emerson has not only the regular summer boarders to contend with, but also great crowds from Ottawa and bordering towns."

The six thousand daily visitors at the Rock find their way at some period of the day toward the rope steps which lead to the camp. The Cook County Press Association were visitors yesterday and were given the freedom of the camp by Producer Emerson. The various lodges and trade associations holding conventions at the Rock are all received courteously at Camp Hutchinson and frequently follow in great bodies to the various locations where the pictures are made."

Using its wonderful location at Starved Rock, Illinois, and its big camp of sixty people, the American Film Mfg. Co. expects to produce a two-reel subject centering about Andrew Jackson and the famous battle of New Orleans. Orders for elaborate costumes have been given and some three hundred men will portray that famous charge made by the English when the red-coated forces tried to tear down the mud walls which Jackson erected about the city of New Orleans. The pirate LaFitte and his beautiful creole daughter have been made a part of this subject, as they properly should where any attempt at historical accuracy is intended.

MR. CH. JOURJON RETURNS FROM PARIS

We have it officially that Mr. Jourjon, president of the Eclair Company, is returning on the ocean liner La France, which is due to dock Saturday, the 17th. Now we shall learn in definite fashion just where Eclair is at. Eclair has rather divided honors with the Bison Company as a topic for rumor and film gossip. The New York office has so far put the answer aside by a reply that Mr. Jourjon alone knew the answer, adding that they were releasing through the Sales Company. Next week we expect definite final news as to Eclair's future program.

THE PASSING PARADE
Eclair release August 29th.

WHEN A COUNT COUNTED
Thanhouser release August 25th.

OPERATOR'S CHAT

By James Girvan

MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS' ASSOCIATION

President—Robert Goldblatt
Vice-President—James Girvan.
Corresponding Secretary—George Epstein
Financial Secretary—McRea.
Sergeant-at-Arms—William Cohen
Business Representative—Robert Saunders

The Moving Picture Operators' Association held its second open meeting at Teutonia Hall on Monday, August 12, 1912, to a very good attendance. President Goldblatt called the meeting to order at one o'clock, midnight.

One matter which was taken up was that of dropping all traitors to our Association from our books; the first example being that of our former recording secretary, Sidney Dignon. After a lively discussion, the body unanimously voted to expel him. We are glad to find out in time all men of such standard, and wish the new branch luck with such as he.

Much to our gratification, many new members enrolled, and with the business and discussions that ensued the meeting proved to be a very enthusiastic and successful one.

The meeting adjourned at 3.30.

* * * *

A statement in last week's issue of the Moving Picture News, headed "To the Moving Picture Operators of Greater New York, Greetings," Local 35 takes great pleasure in announcing that they have with the assistance of the Executive Board of the I. A. T. S. E., severed all connections with the former Auxiliary, and that they are no longer connected with any of the central labor bodies in the city of Greater New York. They also strongly advise all those present to immediately enroll, pointing out all the benefits (?) enjoyed by union men by affiliating with their department.

Now, Brother Operators, let me tell you that this has not been decided as yet by the American Federation of Labor. Up to the present time we have received the best of encouragement from their officers. As to the benefits Local 35 seems to be so fond of mentioning, we, the members of the former Auxiliary, had those same benefits promised us, but have failed to see any within the past five years—that we were kept under their thumb. We benefitted so greatly by their promises of autonomy over all picture machines in Greater New York and vicinity, that we still grind in the "dumps" while their members were allowed to work in the big theatres such as the Broadway and the Lyceum, without holding Auxiliary cards, which is directly against the I. A. T. S. E. laws. They also state that there has been a hearty response and a large number of applications have been made to date. For the benefit of those who are in doubt, I wish to say that when a great many who had enrolled learned the condition of things, they immediately came to the conclusion that it was best to join our Association, and I speak correctly when I say that we have the "cream" of the picture machine operators in our Association. Our books are open for a short time only, therefore "a word to the wise is sufficient."

* * * *

In answer to Mr. Walter Kneipfer, Adams, Mass., regarding the threading of machines, or as he terms it, "rapid fire reel changing," I would like to say that I think it is the greatest mistake in the world to attempt to thread a machine under one minute, as in these days of fire shields and the like, the operator cannot do full justice to himself or anyone else when he is forced to work at such high speed. Don't forget that "haste makes waste" and when you force your operator to thread up in thirty-two seconds you are running the risk of tearing the film, and then it is either a case of stop and patch or show no title. To my way of thinking, it is best to allow the operator at least two minutes, as this will avoid all trouble.

* * * *

Brother William B. Gunshar informs us that he is no longer connected with the Sparta Hotel, or Brooklyn Hall, Coney Island, and asks that all communications addressed to him be sent to his residence at Bath and Twenty-third avenues, Bensonhurst, N. Y.

Until further notice, open meetings will be held at Teutonia Hall every Monday night.

'TIS MOVING DAY IN SOLAXVILLE

The old Solax studio in Flushing, after it was dismantled, looked as if it had been visited by a raiding expedition; however, amidst all the confusion there was order. Trucks containing the finery of our actorines, cases of properties and scenic frames were man-handled indiscriminately by the truckmen. Giving color to it all was a big bonfire of old posters and advertising matter—stuff for which junk exchange men would have risked their lives. Lined up were some dozen trucks. Slowly they were loaded up. It was slow work, because it necessarily had to be careful work—that is, as careful as truckmen can be. The two days before moving day were utilized by the men in packing.

When the Solax caravan was about to move toward the new home in Fort Lee the players' hearts played some ragtime and their eyes did the accompaniment. They all stood around like a bunch of kids and took a last look at the place of so many fond memories, and then they ran like h——. They scrambled into the waiting "ambulance" and found solace in each other's embraces and some strong—well, never mind what they drank.

The trucks slowly moved down to Main street, the good Flushing folks bade them good-bye and looked as glum as kids when the circus moves away—and they surely were the big circus of Flushing; they were the pride of the town; they furnished amusement and excitement. There isn't a man, woman or child in the whole place who did not know about their activities; they became a part of them, an institution; indeed, they were not only an institution, but they added to the wealth of the place. The saloons, eating places, grocers, butchers, boarding houses, drug stores and the car companies all profited by their lavish and generous spending. Their property man was the king of Main street; every merchant on that busy little thoroughfare would salaam to the very sidewalk on his approach. Furniture, crockery, dry goods and other odds and ends would he rent or purchase from them. For his patronage he could have had anything, from a touring car to a life pension; he had the freedom of the town. It is a surprise they did not elect him to office.

And the actors! Favorites everywhere. The sweethearts of every girl in Flushing, the idols of the kids, the E. Z. Marks of the merchants— except Darwin Karr— and the friends of the bartenders and the companions of the socially elect. Several hundred Flushing feminine hearts will pine and despair.

Frugal housewives will have to postpone getting new clothes until their husbands get a raise in salaries. They were the friends, the hopes of the housewives. They would write and ask, "When are you coming to use our porch? I would like to buy a new Sunday hat—the same as Mrs. Johnson's."

The Flushing telephone office can just as well close up. The wires will no longer be kept hot by messages to the wives and sweethearts, informing them "hic-hic—that we are busy working late on a 'light effect' scene." Alas for the brass rails at the foot of the bars!

In short, Flushing has gone off the map. The easy graft of hundreds—not political—has stopped, and a town without graft is like a person without vitality.

ST. LOUIS TO HAVE $150,000 VAUDEVILLE AND MOVING PICTURE THEATRE

Plans have been completed by Helfensteller, Hirsch & Watson, architects, for the new theatre to be erected on the northeast corner of Grand and Lucas avenues, St. Louis, Mo., by the Rex Amusement Co., of which City Collector Edmond Koeln is president and William Sievers vice-president. The entrance is to be at the center of the lot on Grand avenue. An ornamental glass marquise will extend across the sidewalk. Above the entrance at the roof line will be a gable with overhanging eaves, roofed with red tile and flanked by large lanterns in the form of ornamental obelisks.

The structure will have a re-enforced concrete frame and the surface will be rough cast plaster, embellished in patterns carried out in brick and polychrome terra cotta. The entire surface will be dazzlingly white.

The exterior lighting is of special design, large globes being used as well as the bare incandescent lamps.

The lot fronts 107 feet on Grand avenue and 150 on Lucas. The Grand avenue frontage will supply three stores, each 28 by 25 feet. The front of the second story will supply fifteen modern offices. The seating capacity of the theatre will be more than 2,000.

Elaborate provision has been made for the comfort, convenience and safety of the public. While the structure is fireproof, fire escapes have been planned for both the Lucas avenue and alley frontages. The ventilation and heating are of modern design. The structure will cost about $150,000. The contract has been awarded to the E. A. Steininger Construction Company.

The attractions at the theatre will be vaudeville and moving pictures.

ST. LOUIS CHURCH OPENS PICTURE SHOW

The Fountain Park Congregational Church, St. Louis, Mo., opened a motion picture show place Friday night, August 9th, in the grove adjoining the church, at Fountain and Aubert avenue, says the St. Louis Times. Music is supplied by the church organist on the church organ. Providing the show proves a success, it will be held each Friday night this fall in the grove and in winter in the church.

The object of introducing the show is to stimulate the attendance of the Sunday-school. The young people attending the Sunday service who arrive before the services begin will be each given a ticket to the show that will admit them free. Persons not attending the services can purchase admittance tickets.

Rev. M. E. Alling, pastor, said that he was very fearful the object of it would be misconstrued. He said that it was not a matter of a church entering into a business, as the funds derived from the purchase of tickets would be expended in bettering the entertainment.

"The object of showing the motion pictures is to stimulate the attendance at the Sunday-school and to give to the children a high-class entertainment that is also educational," he said. "All the obnoxious features generally marking the showing of pictures will be absent.

"There will be no Wild West pictures or those depicting the James Boys, Nick Carter and others dealing with crime. We intend to show one dramatic or comic picture, one reel reviewing the important events of the world, a scenic picture and an educational one.

"The very best classical music will be played by the church organist on the church organ, the arrangements being to leave the exits of the church leading to the grove open, so that the music can be heard plainly."

INTERESTING EXPEDITION STARTS FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Phonographs and moving picture machines will be a part of the equipment of the University of Pennsylvania's South American expedition which will leave here next month to conduct researches among the Indian tribes along the Amazon River and its tributaries in South America, according to the Philadelphia Times.

The language and songs of the natives will be recorded by the phonographs, and their dances will be reproduced by the moving picture films. The Mermaid, a yacht 120 feet long, with a 23-foot beam, has been chartered by the expedition. The explorers will go as far as the yacht can be navigated, when it will be turned into a base of supplies.

A FEW OF THE PASSENGERS IN THE FILM SUPPLY CO.'S SPECIAL CAR TO CHICAGO

The following are the names of a few of the fortunate individuals who packed the special car of the Film Supply Company en route to the Chicago Convention on Sunday last Messrs. Magie, Raver, Hite, Adler (senior and junior), Morrison, of the Standard Machine Company; Coles, of the Powers Machine Company; McKinney of Great Northern; Barry, of Raw Film Supply Company; Greenland, of Gaumont; Warner, of Warner's Feature Film Company; Tippetts, of Eclair; Cobb, of Reliance; "Jim Hoff, of the Moving Picture World; Beecroft, of the Dramatic Mirror, and McArdle and Farnham of Telegraph.

THE UNIVERSITY SCENARIO

Just across the street from the Slate University at Austin, Texas, is a most unique and prosperous enterprize, an open-air moving picture show.

Two ambitious University girls who lacked sufficient money to defray their expenses during their four years course, decided to engage in the moving picture business.

In the midst of a grove of beautiful elm trees, beneath which there is a thick carpet of grass, they erected an air drome building, equipped it with electric lights, comfortable seats, and best of all a high grade of moving pictures is shown each night to a large and enthusiastic audience, whose enjoyment of the fresh air, the music and the pictures is shown by the increasing gate receipts.

A season ticket was offered to the one who should suggest the most appropriate name.

From the hundreds of names submitted, the one chosen was that suggested by one of the leading literary women of Austin: The University Scenario.

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY & SALES CO. IN CONFERENCES THAT MAY END MIGHTILY

Frequent visits to the offices of the General Film Publicity and Sales Company find the president of this enterprising and successful firm, H. A. Spanuth, behind closed doors, communing with we know not whom; only it has been whispered audibly to ears that hear, and has been flashed in vision-like auras to eyes that see, that something of moment not yet to be loudly spoken of is brewing in the inner sanctum of the official quarters of the concern.

Since the return of that clever young soldier, traveler, writer, etc., Captain Fritz DuQuesne, from the South, from whence he was called by the Roosevelt forces to enter into the services of the gallant "Teddy," Mr. Spanuth has sidetracked a portion of his motor power into song publishing. Captain DuQuesne has written a song inspired by the "Bull Moose" party, and Mr. Spanuth, in his energetic, "quick-to-catch-on" sort of way, has clutched the opportunity. Who knows how soon he may appear in the comic opera field? Absolutely there is no telling what next he may do—and not a kink in his film business, either!

SIGMUND LUBIN INVESTS $100,000

The 250-acre country seat of the late John F. Betz, on the east bank of the Schuylkill, beyond Norristown, has been purchased by Sigmund Lubin. This will be used for a manufacturing centrc of pictures.

One million dollars or more, it is said, will be expended on buildings and their equipments. A portion of the property will be devoted to homes for some of the 600 employees of the factory.

EXHIBITORS' NOTES

Syracuse, N. Y., is to have a new moving picture house 40 by 120, with a seating capacity of 600, in which the curtain will be placed in the front of the house, with the seats on the inclined floor facing the entrance, and the operating machinc in a separate brick building in the rear.

* * * *

Leo Wise, who has been for seven years manager of the Academy of Music in Richmond, Va., has taken over the management of the Lubin Theatre in that city.

* * * *

Says the Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal: "A North Side mother has solved the problem of how to keep her two youngsters out of mischief at night, and at the same time give her freedom to do as she pleases.

"Near the home are several motion picture theatres, so after supper every night she gives the two a nickle apiece and sends them to one of the shows, the next night to another, and so on. The 'kids' stay until the last picture has been shown.

"In the meantime the mother can go visiting, safe in the assurance that the children are all right.

"'It is a great little scheme,' she says."

* * * *

From the Buffalo (N. Y.) Morning Express: "Parke, Hall & Co. have closed a 21-year lease on 20 feet of Main street frontage, south of Eagle, running back to a frontage of 65 feet on Washington street. The Main street front is the Golden Theatre, formerly the Gold Dollar saloon, and the Washington street property is the old Washington Hotel.

"The Cortland Theatre Company, M. Mark, president, has leased the property and will build a picture theatre to be called the Strand. The present theatre will be used as the lobby, and on the Washington street property will be built the auditorium.

"The property, which is valued at $500,000, is owned by the Income Realty Company of this city, and the lease was negotiated by Charles H. Rice and Richard L. Wood, of the Parke-Hall company. This company recently leased the Allen Building, at 636-642 Main street, to the King Furniture Company, which was a very big deal. It also sold the Keith property on Main street a short time ago to the Shea Amusement Company at a price of more than $500,000.

"Moe Mark says he will spend nearly $100,000 on the new moving picture theatre. The orchestra and balcony will seat 1,200 people. The auditorium will be lighted by the indirect system, whereby the light is thrown up to the ceiling and reflected in a gentle glow. Mr. Mark has ordered an organ to cost $10,000, and take the place of an 18-piece orchestra."

* * * *

The following is the Music Trade Review's account of a pipe organ recently installed in an Indianapolis theatre:

"The largest pipe organ ever placed in a motion picture theatre is that in the Alhambra, Dickson & Talbott's new house, which opened in Indianapolis two weeks ago. The organ was constructed by M. P. Moller, of Hagerstown, Md. With all of its accessories it requires more than one thousand square feet of operating space.

"The instrument is of the two-manual type, has 37 registers and in all has 78 accessories. In the loft of the Washington street front of the theatre, 120 feet distant, is an echo organ, equipped with cathedral chimes. It required six weeks for T. A. McBride, chief constructor, and four assistants to place the monster instrument and adjust it for concert use. The pipe organ in the moving picture theatre has found favor with the people of Indianapolis. A smaller pipe organ is installed in another of Dickson & Talbott's picture theatres there."

* * * *

A resident of an Asiatic country informs an American consulate that he desires to obtain the sole agency, covering a certain territory, for American moving picture films. His idea is to introduce the films by establishing a film exchange, and with that end in view he would be pleased to receive catalogues and enter into correspondence with American manufacturers of films as to terms and conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Lyman Howe has opened his travel course of motion pictures at the Columbia Theatre. The first of these included scenes of Paris, thrilling races at Monte Carlo of hydroplane and an 800-horsepower motor boat, burial of the Maine heroes, whaling industry, and many other scenic and industrial features. The Washington public have come to look forward to these motion picture lectures, so that one of our leading theatrical houses is readily filled on these occasions with prices up to 35 cents. The professional, student, scientific, teaching and official elements of the national capital are always in attendance.

* * * *

Tom Moore recently performed another of his "spur-of-the-moment" acts when he reopened the Imperial Theatre. At 6 o'clock on Saturday evening he had no intention of showing pictures at this house until Monday, but the weather and the public looked encouraging for a performance, so within an hour a show was in progress with a full house. Strange to say, that night every house in the city was doing about the best business it had done for some time. The Imperial has been running picture shows in conjunction with the exhibition of the Nokes electrascore, the latest baseball invention. And this electrascore is the most unique device of the kind, chiefly owing to the fact that the players and the ball are in continuous action at all times. This is accomplished by the field, 8 feet square, being of wire, beneath which are installed more than a thousand lights. This week the Imperial will install excellent vaudeville features with the pictures, while the electrascore will also play all games when the Nationals are out of the city.

TOM MOORE

* * * *

It is to be regretted that the exhibitors of Washington have not come together very strongly as regards numbers. The organization as formed by President Neff has not been able to add others to its membership, and owing to the scattered forces during the present season or to the close adherence to business in some cases, Secretary Brylawski has decided not to press the matter further until fall. Then he expects to gather more interest into this organization so necessary to all exhibitors and especially those of the National Capital, which is often harrassed with the arbitrary rulings of Congress. In all probability Fulton Brylawski, secretary of the local exhibitor's organization, will attend the Chicago convention.

* * * *

After a run of several weeks at the Belasco Theatre, the Kinemacolors have left the city. During the stay of these exhibitions the roof garden of this playhouse, of the Shubert's circuit, became the retreat of Washington's elite circles. These performances possessed all the comforts of the summer airdrome in a more classic order with attending much higher price. The motion picture is making itself felt as an entertainment of high standard.

* * * *

The recent appearance of "Fra Diavolo" at the Plaza gave to the public one of the finest productions that has appeared here for some time. Its scenery, whether natural or staged, far excelled the operative productions of Fra Diavolo; the acting was artistic; and the photography was perfect. The use of full-length of the actors and actresses in the film was the cause of much favorable comment. This is a Solax classic which can not afford to be missed.

* * * *

Tom Moore has almost cornered the market in first runs, using eight of these daily. To this must also be added a number of films of older issue to supply the seven houses under his control. He has reopened the Majestic, after having made extensive improvements adding to its comfort and artistic appearance. This is at present a picture house, though it is probable that a singer will frequently be added to the program.

* * * *

Manager Brylawski has been doing some philanthropic work in the form of placing banks in the lobby of his theatres for donations for "Camp Good Will," the country place for the local poor. Beside this money box is the inscription, "Let us fill this box to-day." By this means Manager Brylawski has been able to help swell the fund of this local charitable institution.

* * * *

The Colonial, which makes a specialty of multi-reel productions, has been showing a number of excellent historical and educational pictureplays recently. This is a 10-cent house with a program of five or six reels, which are not in want for patronage.

* * * *

With its long standing reputation of first runs, coolness, and excellent music, the Empress always commands a full house. Often an attendant at a picture show pays no attention to the music or sometimes wishes he could forget the "mechanical humdrum accompaniment" but just the opposite is experienced at the Empress, where operatic and classic melodies blend harmoniously with the scenes on the screen.

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported Especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Willson & Co., Patent Attorneys, 715 Eighth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of any of These Patents Will Be Forwarded to Any Person by Messrs. Willson & Co., on Receipt of Ten Cents. Persons ordering Copies Must Give Number of Patent.

1,034,467. Karl Keiser, Dusseldorf, Germany, assignor to Farbenfabriken, Vorm Friedr. Bayer & Co., Elberfield, Germany. Supporting Frame or Rack for Film or Filmlike Material.

1,034,771. H. M. Essington, Wells, Mich. Photographic Printing Device.

1,034,772. C. J. Everett & J. V. McAdam, New York, N. Y., assignors to Revolute Machine Co., New York, N. Y. Photographic Printing Machine.

1,034,833. A. G. Previn, New York, N. Y., assignor to Baseballeon Inc. Projecting Apparatus.

1,034 865. Carl Bornmann, Binghamton, N. Y. Film Pack Photographic Apparatus.

1,034,870. E. A. Caldwell, Stratford, Tex. Film Feeding Mechanism for Cameras.

1,034,967. Ernst Brinkmann, Steglitz, Berlin, Germany. Film Carrier.

1,034,968. Edward Broom, Glasgow, Scotland. Photographic Enlarging Apparatus.

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 14.—Realizing the value of motion photography as a medium of advertising, the management of the State Fair, which will be held here October 11 to 16, has arranged with a prominent motion picture company to take pictures of this great State exposition. I understand that it is to be a part of either the Pathé or Gaumont Weekly, but which one has signed the contract has not as yet been made public. Some time ago moving pictures were taken of this city by the Imp Company, but they did not prove entirely satisfactory, and as the State Fair is to be the greatest ever, with Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Governor-elect Joseph Robinson as the stellar attractions, the pictures, we opine, will be some real and valuable—at least we are hoping that such will be the case, but whenever I hear of moving pictures in connection with this city I am inclined to let a yell out for an entire reel of 1,000 feet, for there is so much of interest in and about Hot Springs, especially where the State Fair is concerned, that a reel would be none too much.

The one thing that has stirred things up in this city the past week has been the Moose lodge, and their minstrel show at the park was so good that they intend repeating it during the coming week. Incidentally, I might remark that one cause for the "farewell tour" is the fact that the rain came down in torrents and crimped the receipts at the ball game, when the Moose trimmed the Elks, 19 to 3, and that more cash was an absolute necessity in order to send a big delegation of Moose to Kansas City, where the national convention will be held.

Grace Baird, starring in the company bearing her name, playing a two weeks' engagement at the Airdrome, has taken an interest in the local lodge, and Monday night gave a "Moose night," at which "Sweet Clover" was the bill. On Thursday night there will be another benefit for the Moose, at which time, by request of the "Sobbing Sisterhood," the old-time favorite, "East Lynne," will be produced. Miss Baird has extended to me an invitation to play Archibald Carlisle opposite her Lady Isabelle that night, and my brother Moose have requested me to accept, so it's me for "Arch-i-bald" that evening. Glory be! It has been seven seasons since I went round and round with that character when I was in "rep.," but I'll tackle it, just the same, this coming Thursday evening.

Work on the new theatres for vaudeville and moving pictures continues to be rushed. The management of the New Lyric announced this week that their house would be open and ready for business by September 15. Their contracts for vaudeville with the Hopkins circuit starts September 1, and you see it isn't the most comforting thing in the world to realize that you have three to five big acts coming in to pay a professional visit, and no theatre to place them in, with the "ghost" to make its appearance Saturday night. The New Lyric, I am pleased to state, will be a picture of beauty. Messrs. Hale and Jacobs, the proprietors, are sparing no expense to make the house the finest in the city, and pictures will be featured as much as the vaudeville.

Further down, at the New Royal—formerly the Photo Play—the work is going merrily along. The big store that adjoined this theatre is now a thing of the past, and the premises are fast resembling a very nifty picture house. The managers of the New Royal announced this week that they would continue to pin their faith to independent material; that no trust pictures would be used, but that first-class, first-run independent reels, with the 101 Ranch-Bison reels always getting the big display. This house, too, will be a pleasant surprise.

The Gem, on Malvern avenue, the white and colored picture house, under the direction of George Walker, opened this week and is doing a big business. We hardly knew the old Majestic, for the reason that Mr. Walker has done wonders there, adding a very pretty front and so transforming the interior that it is practically new, and I can safely state that when the New Lyric and the New Royal open their doors that this city will have the finest picture houses of any city of its size in the South. Tell me that Arkansas Hot Springs doesn't like its "movies"? Hush, lad, hush; we are "bugs" over them!

"In the Nick of Time" and "How He Made Good" were two American reels much enjoyed here the past week. "Rip Van Winkle" came to the Princess from the Thanhouser studio and pleased. Biograph sent us "The Black Sheep," which, aside from scenery and good riding, wasn't up to the Biograph standard. 'Twas just a wee bit too wild and wooly. "In Bad" was a Cinese reel that provided many laughs. "Revenge Is Sweet" and "The Maple Sugar Industry of Thompson, Pa.," came to the New Central from the Edison studio. This house during the ensuing week features the famous Del Ray Quartet. "Down Jayville Way" was a good comedy from the Essanay Company, and Maurice Costello, in the "Thumb Print" reel, shined like a genuine Nick Carter.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

WHEN C. FRANCIS JENKINS INVENTED THE MOVING PICTURE SHOW

The following interesting bit is from an article in the Washington, D. C., Star, on "Small Patents That Have Made Big Fortunes."

"Would you like to bend a piece of wire and collect a million for that simple act? It has been done. Would you like to turn a screw and find that you had added one of the greatest conveniences of modern civilization, and, incidentally, earned $100,000,000? This also has been done. The moving picture show, that diversion of all the civilized world, was made possible through the simple device of making a slit bigger than it had been before. It is because a farmer lay on his back in the middle of the night and thought that the world has the convenience of the platform scale. Every year is seeing the addition of more conveniences and the amassing of fortunes from them.

"A hundred years ago the Government decided that it would be advisable to protect the inventor in such a way that he might be allowed the exclusive right to profit from his invention for a term of seventeen years after making it. It was held that making invention profitable would add to the advancement of the race. All the important nations have taken the same view of the matter. All have protected the ideas of their inventors. The advancement of the world during this practical age of mechanics has proven the wisdom of this plan. This Government has issued a million patents to date. It is issuing a hundred of them every day. Of some ninety-odd of these nothing is ever heard, but there are a few that are regularly making good. The story of them makes pale those yarns of gold strikes and millionaires made in a day.

"C. Francis Jenkins is the inventor of the moving picture show. He was a government clerk before he became an inventor. The idea of a machine that would project pictures in such a way as to show a scene of action had been sticking in the back of his head for a long time. There were other people working upon it, among them being Thomas Edison. They had developed a crude machine that approached but did not accomplish the desired result. The machine depended upon the operation of a shutter or revolving disk. In this disk was a hole, and every time the hole came around a new picture was projected. Then the light was shut off and a new picture shifted into place by the time the hole came around again. This left the curtain dark for so long a period that the desired idea of a continuous scene was not produced.

All that Jenkins did was to enlarge the hole. He extended it until it became a slit that took up nine-tenths of the distance around the disk. Thus was the picture exposed nine times as long as the curtain was kept dark. Operated rapidly this gave the impression of a continuous exposure and the instant of darkness during which the shift of pictures was made was not apparent. The moving picture machine was thus perfected and the way was made clear for its development into the most universal entertainment feature that the world has ever known.

"So simple was the claim which Jenkins applied for his patents that they were at first refused. He was told he had no idea that had not been applied in previous machines. Jenkins insisted that his machine worked while the others did not. In the end the commissioner of patents passed favorably upon his claim simply because Jenkins demonstrated to him that the given machine actually produced the result while the others failed. Jenkins did not make a fortune on this invention, but sold it outright for $5,000, and other people have reaped the chief profits, while the inventor has since grown affluent as a result of other children of his brain."

Muskogee, Okla.—The Gaiety Theatre at Fourth and Court streets, has been taken over by W. M. Irwin.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

RELIANCE

THELMA (Aug. 28).—Philip Harrington, a rich Englishman, is loved by Clara Winsleigh. He repulses her. To get away from the woman who runs after him he takes three of his friends in his yacht and sets sail for Norway. Here on the shore he meets Thelma, a beautiful Norse maiden. He visits her home and soon learns to love her. With her father's consent he asks her to be his wife. She consents. Sigurd, a half-wild bow who is her constant companion, is so jealous that he tries to kill Philip. Dyceworthy, the English minister, also loves Thelma, but she does not care for him. He gets her to his home by a forged letter and there tries to make love to her, but she is saved by Philip's friend, Dudre, and Thelma's maid, Britta. An old woman, Louisa, hates Thelma because her grandchild, Britta, has left her to live with Thelma. She curses Thelma. Another old Norse woman, Ulrica, joins with Louisa until she sees Sigurd, whom she recognizes as her misshapen dwarf son whom she cast adrift upon the river in a basket a few days after he was born. The thought of the kindness of Thelma and her father to her poor deserted child softens her heart. Thelma and Philip are married and return to London.

All London is talking about the Norse girl that Harrington has married. None have seen her. She appears at a ball given by Clara, who hates her, and makes a great success. A friend of Harrington's, Nevill, tells Philip that he has married Violet Vere, a stage dancer. She has left him. He wants Philip to go and see her and ask her to make up with bim. Philip leaves the box where he and his wife are being entertained by Clara and others. Clara tells Thelma he has gone back to see the actresses and tries to arouse Thelma's suspicions. Clara gets hold of a letter written from the actress to Neville and gives it to Thelma, making it appear that it was written to Phil. Thelma believes that her husband is tired of her. All alone she runs away from London and back to her father. Britta, the little maid, finds out why she went and denounces Clara to Phil. Meantime Thelma bas returned home. Her father, very ill, sees the Valkyria. He knows he is about to die. He has his man, Valdemar, carry him to his boat and set fire to the boat so that he may die on a burning ship like his Norse ancestors. Thelma loses her mind. Phil rushes to Norway with Britta and the sight of him and being convinced that Clara lied brings back ber wandering mind and all ends well.

THE SECRET SERVICE MAN (Aug. 31).—Officials of a foreign country learn that certain U. S. war plans they desire are in tbe possession of a prominent senator, at his country home. An adventuress, high up in society circles, delegated to learn their location, secures the combination of the safe they are in and her confederate scales the walls of the bouse, enters and is robbing the safe when the senator's daughter surprises him. She is overpowered and he escapes with the plans. The secret man in attendance follows and one of the most exciting chases ever seen in pictures follows. The pursuit begins with the fugitive getting away on a trolley car. The pursuer commissions a horse and follows, but finds himself distanced. When the foreigner leaves the trolley and gets away in an aeroplane, the secret service man takes after him in an automobile. When he has gained sufficiently on his pursuer, the foreigner drops 3500 feet in a parachute and manages to jump a train that is just leaving the station. The other man leaves his auto when it breaks down and continues the chase of the train on a motor cycle. From the train the fugitive takes to his heels, closely followed by the other, and then jumps a high bridge into the river. The secret service man follows closely, and at the river bank overpowers him and serves his country by getting the plans back into his own possession.

THANHOUSER

WHEN A COUNT COUNTED (Aug. 25).—The pretty young stenographer in a New York lawyer's office had two weeks' vacation coming to her, and decided for once in her life she would cut a dash in society. She expended what for her was an enormous amount of money on clothes, and went to a fashionable seashore resort. At first she was quite a success, but trouble came with the arrival of one of the woman clients of her employer. This woman, who was naturally disagreeable, took great pleasure in telling everyone the newcomer was "just a working girl," and she wondered at her impudence in coming there.

Naturally this spoiled the girl's vacation. One of the young men clerks in her office had told her he was coming down to spend the week-end at her hotel, but she wrote him that she was going to leave, as everybody was so mean to ber.

The young man, being a budding lawyer, settled to his own satisfaction the nature of the trouble. He loved the girl, and determined that while she had been snubbed, those to blame should be compelled to bitterly rue their conduct.

To carry out his plans he went to the seashore disguised as a French nobleman. Accompanying him were his "valet and secretary," two of his pals, who were willing to help the joke along. At the seashore hotel, where any men were at a premium, the count was a star of the first magnitude. He greatly shocked society, however, by devoting himself exclusively to the girl the others shunned, and when they both disappeared and the announcement was made that they had been secretly married, the grief of the narrow-minded women was pitiful to see.

The stenographer and the clerk returned to the city, happy in each other's love, and although the girl was a good American, she admitted that there was one occasion when a count counted.

LUCILE (Part 1 and 2, Aug. 27; Part 3, Aug. 30).—Lucile, the Comtesse de Nevers, was engaged to a nobleman, Lord Alfred Vargrave. Being deeply in love, Lucile did not conceal her affection, and her attentions finally wearied Lord Alfred, and he neglected his fiancée. They quarreled finally, and separated, but not until Alfred had vainly attempted a reconciliation. Lucile told him that sbe was afraid to trust him, but proposed a year's separation, with the understanding that if he still loved her at the end of that time, she would be willing he should return.

The doubts the Comtesse had of her lover's constancy were justified, for before the year was over she received word of the engagement of Lord Alfred to the beautiful Miss Darcy, whereupon she wrote him asking the return of her letters, which in accordance with his pledge he was to bring to her personally. Alfred, although he was ashamed that he has so soon forgotten his old sweetheart, obeyed, and started for Lucile's bome with the missives she had written bim.

Upon bis arrival he was amazed to see bow beautiful Lucile was, and how much other men admired her. His old affection returned and he pleaded with her to forgive him, declaring that his heart was not and never had belonged to the other woman; that he was simply going to marry her for position. Lucile refused to listen to him, but this simply inflamed his eagerness. He managed, by watching her, to meet ber, presumably by accident, while she was out riding, and gained her consent to accompany her. On the road they encountered a furious Summer storm and took refuge in a cave. Lucile, whose one dread was of lightning, was hysterical from terror, and did not repulse Alfred when he clasped her in his arms.

She consented to forgive her recreant lover, and the two returned to her home together.

LUCILE (Part 2).—The Duc de Luveis had long vainly courted Lucile. His jealous eye soon noted that the man who stood in his way was Lord Alfred, and as the latter left the house, the Duc drew a revolver, determined to kill him. The brave Lucile noted the action, threw her arms about bim and pinned him fast. Alfred looked around at this moment, just in time to see, as he imagined, his Lucile embracing another man. Deciding she was false, he waited not for explanations, but hurried to the home of Miss Darcy, and they were promptly wedded. The Duke, repulsed by the woman he loved, returned sadly to his lonely castle, while Lucile, weary of the world, sought refuge in a nunnery, determining to devote her life to God.

Twenty-five years later, Lord Alfred, happy in the affection of his devoted wife and child, now grown to manhood, had forgotten the sadness of his youth. The Duc had remained unmarried, but into his lonely life one ray of sunshine had penetrated. This was the daughter of his dead sister, a merry girl of sixteen, who came to brighten his dismal [illegible] he felt that he had lost all interest in life. With her he visited England, meeting his old friends for the first time in many years, as he felt his life of seclusion would not be a happy one for the young girl.

In England Lord Alfred's son and the Duc's niece met, unknown to their parents, and promptly lost their hearts, one to another.

When Lord Alfred learned of his son's affections, he placed no obstacle in the path of his only child's happiness. He felt no animosity toward the Duc, simply feeling that although they had been rival suitors at one time for the hand of Lucile, the past should now be buried and forgotten. But the Duc, who for years had been nursing his anger and jealousy against Alfred, feeling that it was he who lost him Lucile's love, never forgave. When he learned that his niece wished to marry the son of his ancient enemy he refused absolutely to sanction the union.

The Duc, who was a French general, and Alfred's son, a lieutenant in the English army, were shortly called to the front, where the allied armies of England and France were to meet the forces of Russia.

LUCILE (Part 3).—Lord Alfred's son was wounded on the field of battle and, being carried to the hospital tent, was nursed tenderly by Lucile. But the young soldier had no desire to live, knowing that he could never wed the girl of his choice. Lucile gradually learned from him the cause of his secret sorrow, and going to the Duc entreated him for the memory of the love he once bore her, not to make desolate the life of his young niece as her love had been made desolate. The Duc, moved by the prayer of tbe saintly Sister of Charity, was finally won over, and the young lovers reunited; while Lucile, her mission accomplished, returned to her convent, happy in having brought friendship and joy into the life of the man she had once loved.

LUBIN

WORK IN A U. S. ARSENAL (Aug. 23).—A very interesting picture showing the manner in which Uncle Sam makes the flags, chevrons, clothing, tents, etc., for the equipment of his army. Among the many interesting operations shown is a machine that cuts the cloth for fifty uniforms at once. The punching out instead of cutting the cloth for chevrons for the non-commission officers of the army and the artistic and skilful embroidery work that beautify the ensignia of office, is seen in full activity and the picturesque atmosphere of a government factory, where thousands of industrious and well-paid women enjoy the advantages of ample space and every comfort that contributes to health and contentment. Official flags of the President, the ambassadors, governors and consuls are being made to include the extra stars needed to recognize the new states of the Union. Uncle Sam's workshops are among the best in the world, and this picture will give an excellent insight of the system.

THE GOVERNMENT TEST (Aug. 24).—Two Southern railroads, the Tri-State Northern and the Ozark Eastern, bid against each other for the sole rights to use an automatic train-stop, a patented device for stopping runaway trains. A test of the machine is to be made by the Government. The Amalgamated Planters promise support and business to the road using the device providing the government test proves its efficiency. The Tri-State road outbids tbe Ozark, whose president, David Beckwith, sees ruin before him. Beckwith's daughter, Ruth, is the president of the Glenmore Sunshine Society. She is loved by John Pendleton, the young president of the Tri-State road. She asks Pendleton's help in saving her father. Adam Strong, a discharged employee of the Tri-State road finds the key by which the train-stop may be opened or closed. He goes to Beckwith and offers to prevent the successful operation of the machine on the day of the Government test, saying that it can be done without loss of life or property. Beckwith sees salvation in this and accepts Strong's offer. Pendleton later calls on Beckwith and offers a compromise on the use of the device. Beckwith refuses. The two roads use in common a few miles of roadbed and tressel work over the Rapid River, lying between Glenmore and Rapid City. The Glenmore Sunshine Society is to give a picnic at Rapid City on the day of the Government test. Beckwith gives his daughter an order for the use of his private car. Strong has departed with the intention of wrecking the train-stop. Beckwith and his directors are waiting in his private office for a report of the fiasco. A despatch comes in stating that the bridge over Rapid River has gone out. He snatches up the 'phone and is told that the Government test train has left for Rapid City. He realizes now that unless the train is stopped it will be plunged into the river. A messenger enters with a note from Ruth telling him that the train intended to take their car has been annulled, but that Mr. Pendleton will send them on the Government train. Seeing the trap he has unwittingly set for his own, with his directors springs into an automobile and start in pursuit of Strong. But a detective is on Strong's track and a terrific fight occurs at the spot where the train-stop is located. Strong is overcome in time to throw the target of the train-stop around, and the Government test is a success, the car conveying the Sunshine Society, with Ruth and Strong's wife and children among them, is stopped on the brink of the broken bridge.

THELMA
Marie Corelli's great novel.
In 3 great reels. Eminent cast.
Released Sat., Aug. 31st. The biggest kind of feature for any house, any day.

RELIANCE

Coming: One Against One," Wed., Aug. 21st; "North of 53," Sat., Aug. 24th; "The Secret Service Man," Wed., Aug. 28th; "The Bully and the Shrimp," Wed., Sept. 4th; "For Love of Her," Sat., Sept. 7th.

Sold only through the FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GAUMONT

THE REFUGEES' CASKET (Sept. 3).—The Marquis de Saint Hilare is the owner of a large estate in the danger zone during the French Revolution. In order to protect himself and family, consisting of mother and daughter, he decides to leave his country and seek refuge across the border. His departure took place none too late, as hardly had his coach and four, together with his equipage, passed through the iron gate into the town, when a marauding band of citizens,, headed by two officers, arrived to search his house. Not finding any trace of the Marquis, they decided to plunder the treasures they could lay their hands upon. Full well they knew that his escape had been entirely too hasty to allow him to carry off many of his valuables. Not being able to locate them, they cross-question Marie Jeanne, the laundry woman, a brave little bit of femininity who remained behind to do her best to guard the estate of her master. She, however, refuses to reveal the whereabouts of the treasures, having packed them in the meantime into a small trunk or casket and lowered them into a subterranean cell under the bed of the reception room fireplace. However, while the men are off through the different parts of the house satiating their appetite with plunder and rifling, the two officers by a strange coincidence notice a slight opening in the hearth, which when examined reveals an underground chamber in which lies the concealed casket. They believe this an opportune moment for themselves and decide to return at the first opportunity and divide the spoils without communicating their discovery to their subordinates. In the hurry, however, to which they are subjected in order to carry out their designs, they omit to remove all traces of their discovery and Marie Jeanne immediately upon entering the room realizes that the secret has been discovered and is shared by the intruders. During the absence of the officers, the plucky little laundry woman decides to remove the casket to a more secure hiding place. She takes it out into a secluded quarter of the woods enclosed in the vast holdings of her lord and buries it far underground, beneath a tall overspreading linden tree. She takes great care to cover up all traces of her digging and she knows that the continued falling of the leaves from this kind of a tree will do its best to efface all traces of the treasure's hiding place. Upon her return she finds the officers, who have discovered that the casket with all its booty is missing. They cross-question her, threaten her with cruelty and brutality, but she remains steadfast in her refusal to disclose the present location of the valuables. They then bind her with cords, arm and foot, and tie her straight back to a chair, so that there was no possible chance of her rolling her way out of their presence, while they steeped themselves in the liquor which they found in such plenteous quantity in the wine cellar of the estate. However, while they are sleeping off the stupor of intoxication, Marie Jeanne determines that she must do her best to make her escape. She topples over on her knees and is finally able to work her fettered hands into the flame of the fireplace. Only after blistering her hands and undergoing great suffering is she able to burn off the cords that bind her, but when once removed, she is then able to work her feet and back loose from their bonds. After she succeeds in undoing herself, she picks a revolver from one of the officers' pockets and attempts to make her escape. As she is about to close the door, the men are awakened and arise to pursue her. She, however, is equal to the emergency and kills one of her pursuers. The other one realizes that he is confronting a dangerous situation and makes the best of his escape.

The Revolution having subsided, the Marquis and his family decide to return to their estate. After first paying a visit to the cottage of the faithful Marie Jeanne, where they find government seals affixed and her whereabouts shrouded in mystery. In despair at the sight of their tenantless holdings and the demolished condition of much of their property, they weep bitterly over the transformation.

At this point, however, they are surprised by the return of Marie Jeanne, who had made it a practice of returning at least once a day to see whether her lord and lady had not returned.

After affectionate greetings, the treasures were restored and the sufferings of the plucky little woman recounted in full. Marie Jeanne was rewarded to the fullest degree for her fidelity.

A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER (Sept 5).—Here is a film of complication, which grows more and more complicated until the crisis, when it clears up as does the sky after a bolt of lightning.

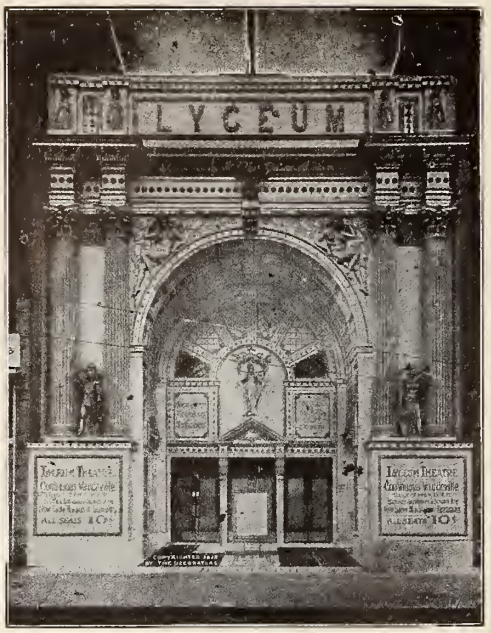
Mr. and Mrs. Darwin lead the life of many a man and woman where the former is continually on the road. It is Mr. Darwin's misfortune to have one of these traveling salesman's positions and he has for some time noticed that his wife Suzanne is chafed at his continually enforced business trips, therefore on this particular trip he decided to make it more pleasant for Suzanne by leaving her in care of friends, the Nearys. Darwin is gone for a number of weeks, but counts on getting home for one of the holidays. A telegram from his firm, however, orders him further out on the road, and he wires his wife advising her that he cannot come home for quite some time. Suzanne has by this time suffered thorough disappointment through the prolonged absence of her husband, and we will therefore have to forgive her, if she engages in some harmless flirting with Mr. Neary. The latter, however, is not only persistent but also malicious in his intentions and encourages the ogling weakness in Suzanne to the extent of danger. Mrs. Darwin, however, holds herself in check before any embarrassing situations arise and informs Mrs. Neary of the character of her husband. Under ordinary circumstances this would have meant a family feud or hair-pulling contest on the spot, but in this case Mrs. Neary decides to co-operate with Suzanne in teaching her husband a decided lesson. Consequently with the assistance of Mrs. Neary, Suzanne directs a letter to her admirer, advising him to come to her house at midnight, and not to enter until the signal be given, that the lowering of the lamp.

On this night we see Suzanne in her home, preparing to give the signal. The lamp lowers. We see the furtive figure of the adventurer winding his way through the garden to the open window and thence up to the appointed room. In the meantime Suzanne has arranged with Mrs. Neary that she don her clothes so as to resemble Suzanne exactly. In the darkness Mr. Neary could not tell the difference and it was well that it was so arranged, for just at this point, Mr. Darwin returns unexpectedly from the road and sees the figures of the two silhouetted against the moonlit window. Mrs. Neary in her consternation runs from the room, while her husband remains there, supposedly to face the consequences. Just at this climatic moment, the situation is solved by the appearance of Suzanne at another angle of the house, who shrewdly explains that she has invited the Nearys to spend a few days with her because of her enforced lonesomeness. The dazed and perplexed Neary is only too willing to fall in line with this suggestion and does not realize what a ridiculous caper he had cut until some time later, when his wife reveals the true story to him.

On this reel is attached a tall piece of more than ordinary interest. It is the record of five camears on the launching of the Imperator, the latest German transatlantic leviathan in the service of the Hamburg-American line.

ESSANAY

BRONCHO BILLY'S LAST HOLD-UP (Aug. 13).—Drifting into Coyote County Broncho Billy, an outlaw, sizes up the town saloon and gambling tables, finds nothing of interest and is only put on the alert when the incoming stage pulls up before the little general store and a strong-box of express money is carried in. Broncho watches keenly and returns to the saloon with a grim smile playing over his ruddy face. Next morning the storekeeper makes the startling discovery that the express guard is bound hand and foot and the money is gone. Meanwhile, at the edge of town, Broncho sorts over the saloon loot and rides on. A few hours later he comes upon a covered "prairie-schooner" driven by Vedah Barclay, a pretty girl, and finds she is taking her sick mother back home to a little town across the desert. Broncho is able to aid



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Vedah in preparing a fire, and is making some coffee when he suddenly discovers the approach of the Sheriff's posse. Vedah proves a spirited girl, hides Broncho in the wagon and sends the posse off on the wrong trail. Filled with gratitude, Broncho sees Vedah and her mother safely on their way. The next night, Broncho dismounts before a small shack and, receiving no answer to his knock, enters and finds Vedah and her mother unconscious on the floor from thirst and exhaustion. With but one thought of getting them to the town for medical treatment, Broncho dashes down to the trail, holds up the stage-coach, forces the passengers to climb out, mounts the seat, drives back to the shack, places the two unconscious women inside and starts furiously for town. Meanwhile, the posse come upon the stage driver, learn of the affair and start in pursuit. They overtake Broncho as he pulls up before the doctor's cottage and the Sheriff mortally wounds him before he can explain. Finding the unconscious women in the coach, the heroism of the outlaw is realized, but he dies in spite of the heroic efforts to save him while Vedah sobs out her grief over his body.

AN ADAMLESS EDEN (Aug. 15).—The Marston Inn, at Riverdale, is a feminine Eden—but without a man. Consequently pretty Eva Dixon and a bevy of charming girl friends, become wildly excited on seeing a newspaper announcement that Prince Augustus Busch, of Tromania, is tramping the country for recreation and is in the vicinity. Even while they read a bedraggled young man is coming up the road, and of course the girls believe him to be the Prince. He is welcomed with open arms, is forced to register at the Inn and becomes the idol of the pretty charmers who flirt outrageously. That night this mysterious man slips into the hotel baggage-room and appropriates some dudish clothes from a large trunk. Dressed in these he makes an instant hit with the girls and next day he is surfeited with canoe rides, tramps through the cool forest and tete-a-tetes on the lawn. It finally develops into a love-match between the Prince and Eva, and they are motoring along the road one day when they are seen by an elderly lady who instantly recognizes the Prince as Adam Boob, an inmate of a nearby asylum. She immediately informs Adam's father, who starts in search of the boy. Meanwhile Eva's jealous friends have faked up a letter coming supposedly from the Prince's wife, saying she is in need of money and that the twins have the measles. This they show to Eva, and the poor girl is having an awful time when old Mr. Boob hustles in with two asylum attendants, explains that Adam is demented and leads him away while the horrified girls immediately pack their things and start to leave—just in time to meet the real Prince and his party entering. But their mortification is complete and, with upturned noses, they snub the royal guests and hasten away while a roar of laughter tortures their ears.

BIOGRAPH

THE INNER CIRCLE (Aug. 12).—A lonely widower living in the Italian quarter of the city, whose only solace since the death of his wife is his little child, is reluctantly a member of a secret society existent among his countrymen. The active members of this society have observed with envy the success of another Italian and feel that they should share the proceeds of his industry without working for it, so to this end send the wealthy man a demand for $5,000, ostensibly to defray the expenses of their society. The rich man is defiant and consequently the society decides upon his annihilation, electing the widower to do the deed. He at first rebels against the move, but has little choice, for it is a case of the marked man or himself. Hence, off he goes on the terrible errand. In the meantime, the widower's child wanders off and is thrown down by an automobile and, though not injured, is carried into the doomed house just as the father places and lights a bomb beneath it. You may imagine the man's position when, as he is leaving the place, he sees his own child through the window of the room just above the terrible instrument of destruction.

AN INTERRUPTED ELOPEMENT (Aug. 15)—The father of Bob's sweetheart doesn't think much of him, which fact is made undeniably clear when papa, upon entering the house, surprises the loving couple together and kicks Bob into the street. Bob's friends suggest an elopement, to which plan he is heartily acquiescent. It was largely due to a trick of fate and Bob's quick wit that the plan succeeded. But, oh, what an experience!

On the same reel:

THE TRAGEDY OF THE DRESS SUIT.—Down and out, Dick sits in the park despairing until a friend approaches, who bids him cheer up and come with him to meet some swell folks at the tennis court. Dick makes quite an impression upon a young heiress and is invited to attend a house party to be given by her the following evening. He, of course, must wear a dress suit, and to effect this proper raiment he surreptitiously borrows his landlord's—but why spoil a good thing by saying more?

CINES—George Kleine

THE BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR (Aug. 27).—With several well-aimed pistol shots, followed by a few powerful thrusts with his sword, Sir Edgar puts to rout a party of outlaws and rescues the beautiful Lucy Ashton. On the way to her home the young couple fall in love with each other, and exchange tokens of betrothal.

Nothing occurs to mar the happiness of the lovers until Lady Ashton returns from a distant voyage, and sternly opposes the engagement of her daughter. She urges upon Lucy the suit of Lord Bucklaw, of a neighboring estate, and finally arranges a marriage.

The unhappy daughter is forced to consent and the contract is signed with great pomp and ceremony. Lucy has just unwillingly affixed her signature, when in rushes Sir Edgar, and accusing her of breaking her word, tears the contract to shreds, and hastily leaves the room. Lucy is terribly upset at this, and when the parents rush to question her, they find that she has lost her mind.

Lucy's condition does not improve, and soon afterward the unhappy bride, not realizing what she is doing, stabs her husband and then sinks to the floor, lifeless, dying of a broken heart.

ECLIPSE—George Kleine

A DAY IN THE GERMAN NAVY (Aug. 21).—An intensely interesting subject, taking the spectator upon a visit to one of the Kaiser's great white fleet of fighting ships. The film shows the daily routine of the crews on board, signal practice, close views of the big guns, an inspection by several naval dignitaries, and numerous inspiring sights of the entire fleet gaily bedecked with flags and pennants flying in gala array.

PULP MILLS IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.—The manufacture of paper is one of the great industries of Canada. Huge forests are being ground into pulp to meet the constantly increasing demand for paper. The film gives a thorough inspection of one of the principal mills in the district, showing in a wonderfully vivid manner, how the logs are driven down the river and transported to the mills, the huge pipe line and dam, and the various steps in the transformation of pulp into finished paper.

MICROSCOPICAL CURIOSITIES. — Showing in a greatly magnified form, many small creatures, such as cheese mites, the flea, the ground beetle, the dragon fly, and others, which have been photographed under a powerful microscope.

EDISON

SPRING LOG DRIVING, MAINE (Aug. 17).—Just stand but a moment exactly where you are, then carefully observe your surroundings. What material predominates above all other? There is but one answer. Wood! Its usefulness is unlimited, in fact it is as essential as the very ground upon which you stand. Fully convinced then of its necessity, it is quite natural that in the next thougbt you will be mentally questioning yourself as to where does it come from; how do tbey get it; is the life of a lumberman an occupation to be envied; or all in all is tbere any limit to the magnitude of the lumbering industry, considering the millions of feet of timber that yearly fall by the lusty stroke of the woodman?

In answer to this we will say that tbis picture is undoubtedly the greatest of its kind. It is extremely explicit and depicts in splendid photography the entire industry from the time the lumbermen go to work, to their well-earned repose when the day is at a close. Nature has well provided for the scenic portion of this picture in lending its charms of sylvan grandeur. The logs can be seen in enormous piles on the side of a billy slope and by the application of dynamite are sent thundering and crashing down the valley-side into the Kennebec River, like an avalanche or mountain slide that sweeps everytbing before it.

The logs are carried by the rusbing waters of the Kennebec, and at times congest in such a way tbat it takes weeks and weeks to break the jam, even witb the use of mechanical devices provided for such emergencies. If one can imagine Moosehead Lake a prairie and the logs millions of heads of cattle, then it is easy to conceive what the scene sbowing a boom is like. The logs are literally corralled by the lumbermen who travel over the revolving surface like squirrels running a tread-mill —a scene tbat will excite the keenest of interest. When this work is done the boom appears like a fair-sized island, this one in particular consisting of four million logs, each baving a mark designating the mill to which it belongs.

This is a perfect picture in all respects with an educational and entertaining value second to none.

THE STREET BEAUTIFUL (Aug. 20).—Here is an educational film of the first order and one that is, like its predecessors, a real story of real people to-day.

There is a Civic Betterment Committee of artists who are bent upon improving the general aspect of the city; laying out parks, gardens in the public squares and doing away with the billboards and unlovely tenement districts. Passing through one of the worst of these districts, their conversation is overheard by a hoy of Italian parentage and his love of the beautiful responds to their criticism of the street in which he lives. Other children of the block are going to a May party and in strict confidence he shows the little May Queen how he would build a city. In the backyard he has sketched a remarkable building upon the fence and laid out the grass in front of it to look like a miniature public square.

The boy is taken ill and when his recovery depends upon fresh air refuses to even sit at the window because he must look out upon the ugly street. This touches the little May Queen and getting her subjects together in the street below, she proposes to them that they shall do what they can to rid the street of its ugliness. The owner of the opposite tenement passing at this time, she appeals to him and begs him to paint the building. He agrees to do this if the small folk of the block will clear up the street. Tbey set to work witb a will; the result is a transformation of the street which awakens joy in the breast of the little Italian boy. And when the artists pass through the street and want to know who is responsible for the great change they are referred to the May Queen. But she disclaims the credit and leading them into the little backyard, introduces them to the real author of the idea. It is pretty well indicated that his future will be cared for by the artists and the rich men associated with them.

It is a child's story of the very best class, exquisitely played, convincingly mounted and staged and photographically beautiful. Besides this it should be a real help in Civic Betterment work.

MR. PICKWICK'S PREDICAMENT (Aug. 21).—We have taken one incident from this great work, probably the best known, and have built around it such a film story as does not depend upon any previous knowledge of the book or the characters.

We first see Mr. Pickwick engaging Sam Weller as an attendant; Sam having previously been employed as a boot boy at the "White Hart Inn." Mr. Pickwick then writes a note to his landlady with whom he has been living for a great many years, Mrs. Bardell, telling her that he hopes she will be pleased at the news of his having decided to take a companion. Mrs. Bardell misconstrues this into an offer of marriage and when Pickwick returns he is received in a manner that completely surprises him. His attempt to explain the matter is a failure and Mrs. Bardell promptly faints in his arms. To make the situation worse at this moment his companions, Nathaniel Winkle, Tracy Tupman and Augustus Snodgrass as well as Sam Weller, enter the room and discover the compromising situation.

Mrs. Bardell failing to obtain any satisfaction from Pickwick decides to bring suit for breach of promise and engages a pair of lawyers, Dodson and Fogg. In the course of time we come to the great trial which is made so much of in Dickens' book and which has been very faithfully reproduced on the screen. Jurors in those days being susceptible, somewhat as they are now, a verdict is promptly brought in against Mr. Pickwick with damages of seven hundred and fifty pounds.

Rather than pay this Mr. Pickwick goes to the debtor's prison. In the meantime Dodson and Fogg visit their client, Mrs. Bardell, in the attempt to get some money and failing in this, she is herself imprisoned in the same place that holds Pickwick. Naturally this is quite a shock to all concerned and at the end Mr. Pickwick's heart is so softened by her distress that he decides to pay the damages, unjust as they are, and release both himself and Mrs. Bardell.

The film closes with a reunion of the Pickwick Club at which all is jollity and Mr. Pickwick the lion of the occasion.

It will be seen from the above that the story is coherent and full of interest and humor. The types were very carefully studied both in personality and costume and will satisfy the most exacting critics and admirers of Dickens' works. It can confidently be predicted that the release will make a great success.

THE CUB REPORTER (Aug. 23).—Jack Denning, a railroad telegrapher, and Molly Masters, daughter of Jim Masters, the operator of another station, who is also a telegrapher, are in love. Denning determines to branch out into a larger field so wires Molly of his intention to go to the city and become a reporter on one of the big dailies.

Three months later finds him a "cub" on one of the biggest sheets in town. The star reporter is on a spree and when word is received that the Limited is wrecked on the road on which Denning had formerly worked, the city editor assigns the story to him.

The wreck happened only a short distance from Pierce Junction, the station where Molly and her father work and, with her reporter sweetheart's interest at heart, Molly had photographed the wreck a few moments after it occurred and had written the complete story from the details she obtained from the conductor.

The star reporter sees the city editor give Denning his instructions and when the cub lays down the written card relating to the newspaper special upon which the newspaper men are to go to the wreck, the jealousy of the man prompts him to surreptitiously change the instructions in order to make Denning miss the train. However, the ex-telegrapher's familiarity with the road's workings prompts him to try for a "beat" by catching a freight which he knows will shortly be at a certain siding.

A wild automobile ride enables him to board the freight just as it leaves but he had not reckoned on the special having right of way and is soon sidetracked for the newspaper train. He hastens into the station where he is "stalled" and finds an old friend of the wire who gives him carte blanche with the telegraph instruments. The delighted Molly gets his call and within a few moments is sending him the complete story which he and his friend relays to the newspaper, thereby scoring a scoop over the other papers.

Molly leaves on the first train to give Denning the films of the wreck. Sure of promotion for his "beat," Denning lifts Molly to the train and carries her off to the city. They are congratulated by the city editor and Denning receives the promotion which enables him to marry Molly.

VITAGRAPH

WANTED, A GRANDMOTHER (Aug. 9).—The ghost has not walked for some time. Kitty Mallery, the young actress, consequently finds herself in straitened circumstances. Looking for the immediate dollar, she sees an "ad." in the newspaper for an elderly lady as companion to a little invalid boy. She answers it and receives a favorable reply. She makes herself up to fit the requirements and is selected for the position from a number of applicants. Assuming her duties, she finds them and her surroundings very pleasant. The little boy's father, a widower, a very attractive, kindly person, wins her heart, and she finds herself becoming very much interested in her employer, as well as his child.

The strain of keeping up the deception of her age and personality becomes very irksome, and she decides to leave. One night, after she has put her little charge to bed and she is about to retire herself, the little fellow is taken suddenly sick. Forgetting that she has removed her gray wig, she solicitously calls the boy's father to hasten for a doctor. Mr. Hale anxiously enters the room to see his child and is surprised to discover that Kitty is not an old lady, but a very charming young person. Tearfully, she explains to Mr. Hale why she has misrepresented herself and tells him she is going to leave. The little fellow asks her to remain, and tells his father how good she has been to him and how much he loves her. Kitty agrees to stay. The father himself is charmed with Kitty's tenderness, and often thought what a good mother and wife she would make. There is a mutual evidence of love in Kitty's and Mr. Hale's eyes as they meet each other's glances. He tells her she can stay under one condition: that she will be Philip's mother and his wife. Kitty willingly consents and Philip joyfully proclaims his satisfaction.

SUING SUSAN (Aug. 10).—"Look, Miss Susan, there is a man in the back yard next door." Annette, the maid, was all excitement when she acquainted her spinster mistress with this startling news. John Gordon, an old bachelor, and his valet, had just moved into the adjoining house. Inspecting his premises, he is discovered by the two women. John calls his valet and tells him to throw the rubbish which had accumulated on his property into Susan's yard. Susan directs Annette to go down and throw them back into John's yard. This starts a war between the old maid and the old bachelor, and leads to an acquaintance between Annette and James, which soon blossoms into love. Miss Susan threatens to sue John. To keep herself and maid separated from John and his valet, she spitefully builds a high board fence between their homes. This does not in any way interfere with James and Annette getting together with the assistance of a ladder. To still further facilitate their love-making, James cuts a hole in the fence, through which they have a quiet little tete-a-tete now and then. When Susan sees the hole in the fence, she again threatens to sue John, and between all of them things are getting interesting.

James gives Annette an engagement ring, and Susan, instead of finding fault with her, heartily congratulates her, and is ready to listen to her maid's recital of her love-making. John becomes curious and Susan is possessed with the same desire. They both appear at the hole in the fence at the same time, which brings them very close together. The humor of the situation strikes them both very forcibly. This is the beginning of the end. It is not long before the fence is taken down and the two are engaged to be married. In the final scene, James is seen with his arms around Annette's waist. John follows his example and entwines the slender waist of Susan and lovingly kisses her blushing cheek.

INGENUITY (Aug. 12).—Business is slow. Grandpa is sick and his two little grandchildren, Lola and Fred, are very much worried. The little cigar store, which is their only means of livelihood, has an opposition across the way, to which business is attracted by a wooden Indian which stands in front of the door, beckoning invitingly and extending a handful of cheroots to the passersby. The two little children do not want their poor old grandfather to know the exact condition of things. They try to attract attention to their store by draping it with bunting and keeping it neat and tidy, but they find it very hard to keep things going. Lola thinks up an idea of her own.

She dresses herself as an Indian, very much like the wooden one of their competitor. She still further enhances her appearance with the American flag. She takes her place outside their little shop. She is noticed by the leader of a large political meeting being held in the neighborhood. He, to make himself popular with his constituents, patronizes Lola by buying the cigars which she holds in her hand, inviting everybody to step inside and have one on him. The children do a booming business and there is no scarcity of customers from that time on. The children announce their success in advertising to their old grandfather, and all three kneel in grateful acknowledgment of their good fortune.

On the same reel:

BUNNY AND THE DOGS.—Bunny knows something about chickens, but what he doesn't know about dogs would fill a book. On his little farm in the country, John has everything but dogs. His wife insists upon having a good watchdog and tells him he might as well get one of high degree, something useful as well as ornamental. He starts out in quest of the right kind and the right breed. Visiting one of the largest kennels in the State he is surprised to see the largest collection of barkers he ever beheld, outside of Coney Island. He tells the keeper that he never knew there were so many dogs in existence. He is invited to enter the enclosure in which they are kept, and having no acquaintance with the habits of the brutes, he needs considerable coaxing. Inside the fence, he is surrounded by the whole dog-gone pack, who insist upon licking his face and giving him their paws. Not wishing to display his ignorance, he insists upon watching the dogs in their exercise, as they follow their keeper over the fields and hills. He helps the keeper feed them at meal time and finally decides upon one dog, which he takes in his arms upside down. The keeper instructs him in the proper method of carrying a dog, and Bunny smilingly hastens home to acquaint his wife with their newly acquired companion and protector.

AMERICAN

THE BAD MAN AND THE RANGER (Aug. 14).—Jim Hickey, bad man, insulted pretty Rosalyn Perkins by helping himself to several illicit kisses. Rosalyn told her father, a rigid Southern gentleman who still believed in the duello, and who promptly arranged a duel between Bob Blackburn, her lover, and Jim Hickey. This novel proposition amused Jim. On the battle-ground, Perkins slipped a blank into Jim's gun and a bullet into Bob's. Of course Bob didn't fire but Jim did. A week later, Bob, appointed deputy sheriff, went in search of Jim and his pals. But Jim caught Bob—then, recognizing Bob as the charitable lover who did not kill him when he had the chance, turned him free. A powerful Western with a dainty touch of comedy that will both amuse and interest.

THE OUTLAW COLONY (Aug. 15).—In the outlaw colony, Rattlesnake Ike loved Bessie Vanever, daughter of the old leader. So did handsome John Briscoe, and Bessie reciprocated. One day Jim Wiggins, sheriff, in disguise entered the camp. Ike accepted him but grew to hate him shortly. And then Jim fell in love with Grace, sister of Bessie, and found himself in a horrible plight. But the end came one day when Ike struck Briscoe. There was a shot and a scuffle and Ike died. Then, taking sides with the sheriff, the old outlaw and his two daughters along with Briscoe stood off the camp. A fine battle took place, ending in the death of the father. Later it was all explained. Wiggins appointed Briscoe a deputy and Briscoe found a new delight in his love for Bessie.

LUX

UNCLE'S FAVORITE PUDDING (Aug. 23).—Uncle Greedy is particularly pleased with the pudding which is served whilst he is dining with his nephew. The nephew has great expectations, and is therefore most anxious to please the old boy, but to his consternation his uncle declares that he will marry the cook who made so delicious a dish. The nephew and his wife and family are stricken with fear when uncle declares his intention of getting married and implore Mary, the cook, not to marry him. Mary has a lover and is not desirous of becoming the wife of old Uncle Greedy. Nevertheless, she is very cute and informs them that she must have time to consider their uncle's proposal. The week that follows is anything but pleasant for the members of the household, who are slaves to the wishes of the erstwhile cook. Mary realizes the strength of her position and insists upon her master and mistress doing all the housework. Mary becomes a regular tyrant, but Lily, the nephew's daughter, finds a way out. She discovers the recipe for the pudding and soon masters the art; however, she keeps her secret to herself. One day Uncle Greedy turns up to dinner, and the cook blankly refuses to make the coveted pudding. As she is exhibiting her "airs and graces" Lily steals quietly out and re-enters later with a fine pudding all steaming hot. Uncle's ill-humor quickly vanishes, and he swears that his charming little niece shall be heir to all his fortune. Mary retires crestfallen to seek consolation upon the manly bosom of P. C. 123, her particular gentleman friend.

On the same reel:

VIEWS OF LIVRAN.—Some very interesting scenery, which by its beauty will please young and old and will surely be appreciated and enjoyed by all.

COMET

THE HOUSE OF NO CHILDREN (Aug. 19).—Henry Johnson in this unique film may be likened in many ways to Old Scrooge in Charles Dickens' immortal story of "A Christmas Carol." Johnson evidently looks on life through smoked glasses, for his nature is cross-grained, irascible and grouchy. He has no apparent use for the sweet voices of little children, finds no responsive sympathy with their innocent childish pranks and regards their entire species with disdain and disgust. He is superintendent of a large apartment house, and in order to rid himself of their noxious presence he has a sign painted announcing that children are not wanted. Many families come to rent apartments, but are turned brusquely away. The children in the entire neighborhood seem to look upon him as an ogre and he is the unhappiest individual in existence. Left alone to his unpleasant thoughts he soon falls asleep and dreams. His troubled conscience takes various forms and he sees himself as others sees him. Children of all description commence to harass him. The water cooler closet, the large safe and even the steam pipes in his office become animated and each receptacle is populated with boys and girls who mimic and ape him, prance all over him, and mock him and annoy him in every conceivable manner. He is given a taste of his own medicine. Wherever he goes they are at his heels. His lot is unbearable and in sheer distraction he eventually cries out for mercy. They do not give him any restful respite and when it seems that he is on the verge of collapse, he abruptly awakes. He cannot realize that he has been dreaming owing to the vividness of it all.

The dream has taught him a lesson though, and he at once seeks to remedy his nature. Forthwith he sends in his resignation. Then he decides that children must have their sway, and immediately becomes their friend and champion. The change in his demeanor is striking. He calls to all the little ones, boys and girls alike, gathers them around him and assures and even proves that he loves them all by allowing them to dangle at his knees and use his former office for their playing ground.

A DIVIDED HOUSE (Aug. 26).—Josiah Griggs is a determined old man. He has a growing family which consists of a son, Jimmy, a daughter, Marjorie, and a devoted wife. Their marriage bliss seems unruffled until Mr. Griggs sees excellent prospects in farm life. He reads in the newspaper an advertisement where a man is ready to dispose of hundreds of acres of land to the person willing to share in the profits accruing from the land. The owner agrees to relinquish all rights to the property as soon as the possessor pays ten thousand dollars from the profits. Mrs. Griggs tries to dissuade him from such a foolish arrangement, but he makes up his mind to enter into the deal. Papers are signed and the bargain is clinched much against the will of Mrs. Griggs, who is sided by her daughter, who declares that she will stick by her mother and remain in town. Jimmy, on the other hand, is loyal to his father, and decides to go with him. We see the pair depart together and eventually get a picturesque glimpse of them reconciled to their new environment. To all appearances they are happy and contented. Things do not fare so well with Mrs. Griggs and Marjorie in the city. Their funds soon run low and they are in danger of eviction from their home. They appeal to Josiah, who refuses to help them. He says that if they come to the farm he will look after them, but will not aid them otherwise.

The first season's crops are successful and Josiah receives a check calling for twelve hundred dollars from a firm of commission merchants in the city. As a last resort, when compelled by poverty, mother and daughter go to the farm. Rural life appears to have a sudden charm for them. They are delighted with the place and show it. By easy stages they become inured to their new abode and surroundings. Husband and wife become reconciled, and everybody, including Marjorie, agree that life in the country is the only real place to live after all.

PATHE FRERES

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 34 (Aug. 19), HIS WINDMILL (Aug. 20).—The story in this film is not deep, but is the more impressive because of its simplicity. A tramp, who has been refused assistance by a miller, revenges himself by destroying the toy windmill of the miller's little boy. For this act the tramp is soundly thrashed by the father. At night when all is quiet and quite dark the vagrant sets fire to the miller's property and escapes. From a small flame the fire increases by leaps and bounds until the entire vicinity of the real windmill is laid a desolate waste. The spread of the flames is shown by the gradually increasing color in the film and is fascinating to an exceeding degree. On the same reel:

THE SEDGE WARBLER AND THE CUCKOO.—The peculiar trait of the Cuckoo, which tricks another bird into hatching her egg for her, is shown in color photography.

JEALOUSY ON THE RANCH (Aug. 21).—Although Nell Barclay is very young, she has succeeded in falling in love with Ralph Tracy, a big, manly ranch owner and friend of her father. Louis Potosi, a neighbor, is also in love with Nell. The two suitors attend the round-up held on the Barclay ranch and pay court to the pretty girl while watching the roping and branding of the cattle. Sunset finds the mates engrossed in each other and perfectly oblivious of the presence of Louis. The following day Louis lies in wait for Ralph on his morning ride and, as he passes, fires at him, wounding him slightly. The girl is a witness to the cowardly atack and notifies the cowboys, who pursue the fleeing Louis. After a wild and thrilling ride the culprit is brought to bay and the boys attend to him. They return to the ranch in time to find Ralph and Nell in fond embrace.

THE HAND OF DESTINY (Aug .22).—Senora Martinez, while out for a canter, is thrown from her horse. The accident mars her beauty for life. Her misfortune soon chills the fire of her husband's love and he becomes infatuated with a beautiful senorita. He is soon her devoted slave and his unfortunate wife is threatened with desertion. But one day, while out walking with his new love, his carelessness causes an explosion of dynamite by which he is made blind. The Hand of Fate thus leads him back to his faithful wife who forgives his infidelity and they forget their plight by comforting each other.

THE QUEEN'S PITY (Aug. 23.—When King Edward III. of England had succeeded in reducing the town of Calais to a state of starvation, he advised the authorities that if they sent him six of the city's noblest citizens, each with a noose about his neck, the warfare would be discontinued. The proposal is submitted to the citizens of Calais and, notwithstanding the lamentations of wives and children, six noblemen volunteer and go forth to save their fellows. The King's Chancellor, touched by the brave act, requests the King to be lenient, but he is obdurate and orders the sentence of death executed. The Queen, however, cannot bear to see such brave men sacrificed and she implores the King to relent. Her pleading finally melts the King's heart and the heroes return to cheer their sorrowing families. It is a really big drama, and the superb manner in which it is colored makes it additionally realistic.

THE $2,500 BRIDE (Aug. 24).—Jack Thompson asks "Boss" Barnet for his daughter's hand, and the wise old man asks him how much money he has in the bank. Jack is embarrassed, and the "Boss" tells him that when he has $2,500 he will consent to the wedding. The young people are disappointed by the turn of affairs, and to hasten the wedding the girl hits upon a clever ruse. They cut out some of her father's steers and sell them to a cattle buyer for $2,500. The couple engage a minister and return to the ranch, where Jack shows the money to Barnet. The father gives his consent to the ceremony being performed, and it is not until they are united that the Newlyweds return the money and inform him that the joke is on him.

REPUBLIC

THE PICKANINNIES AND THE WATERMELONS (Aug. 26).—Mammy has been blessed with a large brood of youngsters, who, characteristic of the Southern negroes, are carefree and shiftless, having no thought but that of pleasure and amusement. Their fondness for watermelon instead of leading to their downfall merely adds to their pleasure when through a series of comical adventures they are enabled to relieve a farmer of his entire wagon load of melons.

A cakewalk, jubilee dance and a custard pie eating contest by the younger as well as the older members lends added comedy of a hilarious type to the story, and the mental battle of Parson Jones between piety and love for a watermelon wherein the watermelon comes off victorious is an extremely clever piece of comedy acting.

The story is unique as well as original, employing at it does an entire company of negro performers.

ECLAIR

DOLLS (Aug. 27).—Nellie Simpson's father dies and leaving her with but a few dollars and no way of earning more Dr. Day and his wife take Nellie into their home until something can be done for her. She seems so melancholy that Dr. Day says she must be roused. To this end he takes her with him on his rounds of visits. At length they come to the home of a very poor woman whose only child, a girl, is a cripple not even able to sit up. While talking with little Betty, Nellie idly draws a rag which is lying on the bed and from it fashions a crude doll. When Betty sees it she is so enraptured and lavishes such a world of love on it that Dr. Day tells her he will buy a real one if Nellie will dress it. She promises and they go and buy a large doll, which she dresses. As they are taking the doll to Betty a rich man sends for them to come and see his motherless daughter, a child of five. The child cries for the doll, and her father hires Nellie to dress all of Lily's numerous dolls. He at length falls in love with her in a peculiar manner, and she promises to be his wife.

THE PASSING PARADE (Aug. 29).—An episode or rather a series of episodes during the passing of the Memorial Parade May, 1912, in Brooklyn, N. Y. We find a group of young girls busy preparing for a coming G. A. R. Bazaar, dressing a large doll in prominence. Suddenly they hear the strains of the Star Spangled Banner. All attention, one of the number runs to the window. "Here comes the soldiers." All rush to the window; when one of the number suggests the piazza, all rush off—we see them on the decorated piazza hailing, hurrahing, and even singing the anthem—as the military go by. Here we are introduced to the young lovers, reading poetry, a duet as it were—and just as the young man is about to snatch a surreptitious but willingly tendered kiss he is interrupted by a burst of music from the passing band, our national anthem. The thread is broken, and while the lady enthusiastically waves her hand to the soldiers our young hero half-heartedly waves his hand, showing his disappointment. In the schoolroom a reunion to discuss the lessons taught by our great men—a vision of the famous episode of George Washington scorning to tell a lie, acknowledges he cut down the cherry tree; the lesson is interrupted by the strains of the "Star Bangled Banner" being played by a passing band. The children, carried away, join in with lusty lungs and sing the national anthem. Next we are introduced into a happy family circle. Grandma is hearing Clara her lesson, who now and then is prompted by Uncle George, whilst Ma and Pa are looking admiringly on. Grandma thinks she detects a prompt—and admonishes them all—chorus from all: "Oh, no, no; we'd never prompt—oh, dear no!" Clara asks Uncle to play a dance; she stops suddenly—hush, listen! she hears the band playing; runs off, returns immediately. "Oh, the parade; come, all"—and off the entire family go to see the parade. Clara is seen at the window saluting and cheering. Now, then, we were awaiting this all the time—the Blue and the Gray—two old veterans, one a Confederate, and the other a G. A. R. man, sipping their mint juleps. The old army veteran says, "Do you remember the 4th of July, '63?" "Yes," replies the man in gray, "that's when I got this wound." They both lapse into silent reminiscence and a vision of that skirmish comes before them. The defense of the flag. Bygones fade away. The G. A. R. man speaks first—and in a choked voice says: "Now shake hands; we are brothers." What's this? Old Glory burnt away from the staff? Oh, no—see how the old flag emerges from the flame and smoke, and waves as proudly as ever.

"Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light.
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's first gleaming.
. . . . . .
"And the Star Spangled banner in triumph shall wave, O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

PARIS-ECLAIR

TWO BRAVE LITTLE HEARTS (Sept. 1).—After weeks of hardship and poverty, Peter Martin finally secures a place of employment at a jewelry store. One day while the proprietor of the store is out, leaving Peter in charge of his office, wherein is kept the more valuable jewels, Peter falls asleep.

Now enters a very sharp, shrewd thief named Dixon, and noticing Peter asleep, he enters the office and robs the safe of its valuable contents and leaves.

The thief passes out and meets two little boys carrying a basket of lunch. He happens to drop a racing programme which the boys pick up and keep, out of childish curiosity. The two youngsters are the sons of Peter, bringing his lunch, and so they arrive at the jeweler's and discover their father still asleep. They awake him and the jeweler returns to discover the theft and dismiss Peter.

Instinctively the youngsters, Ben and Artie, believe that the racing programme is a clue to the thief, so they go to the race track selling flowers. They meet the man who passed them on the steps the day of the robbery, and they follow him to his home.

Ben arms himself with a tile to prevent the thief escaping. Artie hurries away and soon returns with the police. Dixon is captured, the jewels found and returned and happiness returns to the Martin family again.

SOLAX

PHANTOM PARADISE (Aug. 28).—Davis Moore is an electrical engineer. He lives with his daughter in a modest home in a small town. Moore conceives a new idea for a dry battery and drops all of his interest in the material things of life—such as earning a living. While absorbed in his invention, gradually his home is reduced to a hovel and his daughter has a difficult time trying to make two ends meet. Finally she is forced to leave her father—who is by this time half-crazed—and seek employment. Because of her limited experience she finds this difficult—but in a very romantic way she becomes acquainted with a young manufacturer. Although her work is not useful—he gives her work to take home and in other ways takes an interest in the gentle but frail-looking creature.

The young manufacturer's interest in her takes him to her home where he learns about her father and his invention. He now interests himself in the invention also, and promises to take it to capitalists and engineers and have a test made as to the invention's commercial value. Not long after, the manufacturer learns that the invention is worthless. Knowing that this intelligence will break the hearts of both the inventor and his daughter, the manufacturer tells them that the invention is a success. He advances money to the pair and keeps them in ignorance of the true state of their affairs. They live happily and later the old man dies without learning that he has been living in a phantom paradise. His daughter, however, accidentally discovers that she has been receiving charity and tries to rebuke the manufacturer but he tells her he did it all because he had learned to love her. She comes out of her phantom paradise and forever after lives in a real paradise.

PLAYING TRUMPS (Aug. 30).—Tom, Dick and Harry all love Nan. Tom and Dick, becoming jealous of Harry, decide to unite forces, oust him and then settle the affair between themselves. So they proceed to make his life miserable whenever he is with her. At the critical moment, they always manage to appear as heroes and bear her off in victory, leaving Harry in various predicaments. Finally, when he takes her automobiling, they extract most of the gasoline, stalling his car in the suburbs. Then they whisk her away in their machine. Forced to walk home, Harry takes a cross-country route and finally discovers the others on the road below, stalled by a puncture. Hoping for a chance to turn the tables, he makes his way to the road, and in so doing stumbles upon a motion picture company just ending a play in which the hero rescues the heroine from desperadoes. This gives him an idea. He obtains the assistance of the actors and there follows a thrilling attack upon the automobile party in which Tom and Dick are securely bound. Just as Nan is about to be kidnapped Harry appears in the rôle of hero, and the obliging actors strew themselves upon the roadside. Harry executes a spectacular rescue and wins Nan from under the noses of his rivals.

RELIANCE

THE BULLY AND THE SHRIMP (Sept. 4).—A young Westerner, known as the Shrimp, is in love with a pretty Western girl. They are engaged to be married. A burly Eastern bully arrives in town and becomes enamored of the girl. He deliberately acts the bully and shows up the Shrimp as a coward because of his weakness and sets about to win the girl. She, believing his courage to be of the right sort, throws over the Shrimp and marries the bully. After they have been married some time, the bully is injured and unable to get around. While the bully is laid up, the doctor finds that the worry and care the wife has gone through has incapacitated her to such an extent that she is unable to give her baby proper nourishment. The only way to save the baby's life is to furnish it with a proper amount of baby food. The doctor discovers that there is none in town. He goes to the saloon where the men are congregated and tells them that someone will have to cross the desert to a certain town where the food needed can be obtained. The men, knowing that few have ever returned after crossing the desert, back down. The man who shows supreme courage turns out to be the Shrimp. He volunteers and we see him on the desert enduring every hardship. He enters the Western town on the opposite side and secures a number of packages of the food. On the way he loses his way, his horse dies, but he staggers on through the desert still holding on to the precious food. One by one the packages slip away from his fingers until when he arrives in his home town he staggers up the main street and surrenders just two packages to the men in the saloon. The Shrimp dies from exhaustion, the child lives and the bully is regenerated.

FOR LOVE OF HER (Sept. 7).—Jonas Heather suffers from moments of amnesia, which is unknown to his daughter, Nellie, or his friends. His daughter is in love with Bob Wisner, a ne'er-do-well of the town, whose saving grace is his love for Nellie. They become engaged, but her father won't permit the marriage and Bob leaves. Later he follows the old man during one of his bad moments and saves him from robbing a house. He is accused and goes to prison to save the father's name because of Nellie. Nellie goes blind from overstudy and only the specialists in New York at the free clinic are available for her cure. To get to New York the father offers to take charge of a canal boat. On the trip Bob, who has escaped from prison, takes refuge in the canal boat. Excuses are made to the blind girl and the pursuers placed on another scent. They are married before the boat reaches New York. In New York the operation is successful and it is then she learns of her husband's prison term. The father explains all and the girl takes Bob to her heart.

GREAT NORTHERN

FOR HER SISTER'S SAKE (Aug. 24).—Mrs. Wilberg, a widow, is giving a dance, to which Dr. Brown, his fiancée, Irma, and her sister, Anna, have been invited. In the opening scene, Dr. Brown is impatiently awaiting the arrival of Irma and Anna. At last they arrive and the three set out for Mrs. Wilberg's. Here Irma meets an old friend in Arthur, who arouses jealousy within Dr. Brown, who takes Irma away. Dancing proceeds, and Irma at last secures Arthur for her partner while Dr. Brown dances with Mrs. Wilberg. Irma and Arthur retire to a sitting-out room to talk over old times and are soon followed by Mrs. Wilberg and Dr. Brown. The latter soon leave, and Mrs. Wilberg unconsciously drops her diamond star. Anna enters the room and, sitting in the chair just vacated by Mrs. Wilberg, discovers the lost jewel and secretes it. Her action is seen by Irma and Arthur, who are horrified. Mrs. Wilberg makes known her loss, but Anna denies having seen the star, and Irma and Arthur are too shocked to say she has it. At home Irma taxes Anna with the theft, and the latter, though at first denying it, finally confesses and gives the jewel to Irma. The next day Irma decides to consult Arthur as to how she can return it to Mrs. Wilberg. When she is ready to set out, Dr. Brown enters, and failing to get Irma to tell him where she is going, he follows her to Arthur's home. Arthur tells Irma to say she found the brooch stuck in the bottom of her dress, and kneels to show her just how she might say it was fastened. At this very moment, Dr. Brown enters and, thinking his fiancée unfaithful, throws off his engagement ring and leaves the room in a great rage. He then makes his way to Mrs. Wilberg's and tells the latter that Irma has her brooch. Irma, entering, is surprised to find Dr. Brown there. She goes up to Mrs. Wilberg and restores the brooch, but her story is discredited, and Mrs. Wilberg plainly shows that she believes Irma to be the thief. Irma leaves in tears. In the meantime, Anna has missed Irma, and repairs to Arthur's home to see whether he knows where her sister is. Anna and Arthur arrive just in time to meet Irma coming out. Seeing how things stand, Arthur takes both Irma and Anna to Mrs. Wilberg's and presenting Anna to Mrs. Wilberg, says: "There is the guilty one." Thoroughly repentant Anna sobs out her story on Mrs. Wilberg's shoulder, and is freely forgiven. Mrs. Wilberg begs Irma's forgiveness for believing her to be the thief. Irma turns to Arthur, and Dr. Brown, who has stood by all the time, quietly leaves, as he can see that Arthur has taken hold of Irma's affections far more than he could ever hope to do.

MAJESTIC

A CORNER IN KISSES (Aug. 25).—Tom, after a quarrel with his sweetheart, Mabel, writes a note to her friend, Anna, asking her to meet him as he wants her help in getting Mabel to make up. Anna's fiance, Jim, sees her with Tom and gets very angry. Under his jealous suspicions Anna refuses to explain and they part. Later she goes to the village with Tom, where he buys her a box of candy kisses. Jealous Jim, while walking through the woods hears Anna and Tom talking. He catches just one sentence, "Those kisses are delicious." This is enough to set him off again. He tells his sister Mabel what he heard and she starts off to have a reckoning with Anna. Anna is able to explain to her friend and the girls get together to teach Jim a lesson. Mabel returns home and tells her brother that Anna is going to sell kisses at the county fair. She means candy kisses, of course, but Jim does not know this. He thinks of a plan to outwit Anna. Going to the lady in charge of the fair he offers to buy out the "kiss booth" and offers her a hundred dollars. She tells the girls, who laugh and prepare to give Jim a great reception and also a great many kisses—of the candy variety!

On the day of the fair Jim arrives and seeks Anna's booth. He approaches triumphantly—only to be loaded down with boxes of candy. Not quite understanding, he picks up one of the boxes and reads the inscription—KISSES. He then realizes how he has been fooled and how ridiculously jealous he has appeared. He at once swears "never again."

The picture ends with a telescope view of Anna and Jim in a canoe drifting over quiet waters, and shows that after all, Jim did corner the kiss market.

THE DISPUTED CLAIM (Aug. 27).—Robert Saunders is alone in the world save for his 18-year-old daughter Grace. He takes her into the mountains of Nevada and establishes her in a comfortable little cabin while he explores the surrounding country for gold.

Neil McLeane, a hardy son of the West, is prospecting in the same locality and becomes deeply interested in Grace. He has an altercation with an Indian who forced his attentions on Grace, and makes him a deadly enemy. Neil discovers gold in the same claim that Saunders makes a strike and both men are about to register their ownership of the claim, by fastening a slip of paper on the same tree at the same time. A dispute arises and Neil is disarmed by Saunders and bound to the tree. But as Saunders backs away from his prisoner he steps into a bear trap and is himself held prisoner not ten yards from Neil. Saunders finally consents to throw Neil his knife if Neil will rescue him from the bear trap after he has cut his own bonds. The knife is tied to a string and thrown to Neil but falls short of its mark and as Saunders draws it back to him for another trial, the string breaks and both men are now helpless.

The Indian appears on the scene and, seeing a chance for revenge on Neil, lights a fire around him and is about to leave him to a miserable death when Neil manages to free one of his hands and slays the Indian with his own sheath knife. He then cuts himself loose and frees Saunders.

The terrible mental and physical torture both men have experienced has taught them a lesson and the disputed claim is divided equally between them as partners, while Grace further cements the partnership by giving Neil her hand in marriage.

LOCAL No. 35, I. A. T. S. E.

The first meeting of the new moving picture department of Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., was held at their meeting rooms 409 West Forty-seventh street, on Friday, August 9th, at 9.30 a.m.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Frank Brennan with about 175 enrolled members present.

The Executive Board of Local 35 outlined the plans of reorganization followed by many of the enrolled members who spoke along the lines of good and welfare.

The enrolled members present elected a committee of nine to confer with the executive board of Local 35 to thoroughly discuss the plans of reorganization and submit their findings at their meeting which takes place on Sunday, August 18th, at 10 a.m., at their regular meeting rooms, 409 West Forty-seventh street. The committee has had several conferences with the executive board of Local 35 and will have a thorough report ready at this meeting.

The above committee, in conjunction with the executive board of Local 35, decided to continue the enrollment until the opening of the next meeting for the benefit of those moving picture operators who did not or could not attend the last meeting.

Signed—
Executive Board, Local 35,
I. A. T. S. E. of U. S. & C.

A CORNER IN KISSES
Majestic release August 25th.

Harlan, Ia.—Mrs. A. A. Allan and Mrs. Fred Walker bought a motion picture theatre here.

Holstein, Ia.—C. L. Noelkars sold his interest in the Scenic Theatre to Conrad Claussen.

Monticello, Ia.—O. B. Crane will conduct a motion picture theatre here.

Northwood, Iowa—Brager & Rue have been succeeded by John M. Slossom in the airdrome.

Oelwein, Iowa—Claude Schneider has sold his interest in the Dreamland Theatre to T. A. Bryan, who is now sole proprietor.

New Haven, Conn.—The Congress Square Theatre has been sold to Alderman & Esher.

New York, N. Y.—Motion picture theatre will be erected on Broadway, north of 94th street.

Waterbury Conn.—Architect C. Jerome Bailey is drawing plans for a moving picture theatre on East Main St.

Beverly, Mass.—Work has commenced on the new motion picture house in Depot Square.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss
Aug. 5—The Meddlers
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun
Aug. 12—The Battle Ground (2 reels)
Aug. 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger
Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Outlaw Colony (Dr.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. "101 Bison"

July 30—The Desert
Aug. 2—The Gambler and the Girl
Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call
Aug. 16—The Other Girl
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt
Aug. 23—The Reckoning
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude
Aug. 30—The White Lie

CHAMPION

July 29—The Poisoners
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Rr.)
Aug. 12—For His Child (Dr.)
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Aug. 26—The Foundling

COMET

July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Sheriff Outwitted (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 10—Holdup in Buckeye Canyon (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)	1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (W. Dr.)
Aug. 26—A Divided House

ECLAIR

Aug. 4—The Price of Blood
Aug. 4—Beautiful Vintage Time
Aug. 6—Because of Bobbie
Aug. 8—Boys Again
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister
Aug. 11—Carlsbad
Aug. 13—Daddy (Com.)
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Egyptian Ruins
Aug. 20—Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry (Com.)
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Will (Dr.)
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day
Aug. 27—Dolls
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts

GREAT NORTHERN

July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Dr.)
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Com.)
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Dr.)
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Dr.)	944

GAUMONT

	Feet
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels)
Aug. 6—Dream Driven
Aug. 13—Graziella the Gypsy
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter and The Launching of the Imperator
Sept. 10—Love's Serenade
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels)
Sept. 12—The Plague-Stricken City
Sept. 17—Queen Elizabeth's Token

GEM

July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters
July 30—Back to Her Own
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun
Aug. 13—Babette (Dr.)
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Aug. 27—Baby Fingers

IMP

Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago
Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (Dr.) (2 reels)	2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Com.)
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Scenic)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Chappie, the Chaperon
Aug. 24—The Great Geysers of Yellowstone Park
Aug. 26—Making Good
Aug. 29—A Happy Family
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox
Aug. 31—Her Burglar

ITALA

Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

LUX
By Prieur.

July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)	983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (W. Dr.)	580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)	272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.)	744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Sc.)	239

MAJESTIC

Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.)
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl
Aug. 18—Toodles
Aug. 20—The New Butler
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses
Aug. 27—The Disputed Claim

MILANO

Aug. 10—Playthings of Fate
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear
Aug. 31—A Circus Romance

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

	Feet
July 24—The Little Moonshiner
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill
July 31—The Obligation
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold
Aug. 7—Fatty of E. Z. Ranch (W. Com.)
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Dr.)
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Dr.)
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Dr.)
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Dr.)
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill
Aug. 30—The Girls and the Chaperon

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Aug. 9—The Burglar and the Rose (Dr.)
Aug. 14—Horse Show at Long Branch (Top.)
Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Com.)
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Life's Lesson (Dr.)
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing

RELIANCE

Aug. 14—Order in the Court
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men
Aug. 21—One Against One
Aug. 24—North of 53
Aug. 28—Secret Service Man
Aug. 31—Thelma (2 reels)
Sept. 4—The Bully and the Shrimp
Sept. 7—For Love of Her

REPUBLIC

Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons

REX

Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Dr.)
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.)
Aug. 29—A Japanese Idyl
Sept. 1—In Honor Bound
Aug. 11—The Troubadour's Triumph
Aug. 11—None Can Do More

SOLAX

Aug. 7—The Little Rangers
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain
Aug. 16—The Strike
Aug. 21—His Double
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels)
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 13—Now Watch the Professor
Aug. 16—The Wrecked Taxi
Aug. 18—As Others See Us
Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks
Aug. 20—The Darkest Hour
Aug. 23—Conductor 786
Aug. 25—When a Count Counted
Aug. 27—Lucile (Part 1 and 2)
Aug. 30—Lucile (Part 3)

VICTOR

Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch

THE SENSATIONAL NEW YORK POLICE SCANDAL

The Rosenthal Case

Produced from original authentic views.

Supplied exclusively to us by the National Press Syndicate.

20 Slides, Plain.....	$ 5.00	40 Slides, Plain.....	$10.00
20 Slides, Colored...	10.00	40 Slides, Colored...	20.00

Special lecture and 1 sheet lithos free with each set.

A. J. CLAPHAM, 130 West 37th Street, New York

The Originator of Sensational Feature Lectures

IF you want to keep your name and product before the Moving Picture Trade ADVERTISE in the MOVING PICTURE NEWS

In writing to advertisers please mention "MOVING PICTURE NEWS"

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
July 25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)
July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.)
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.)
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.)
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.)
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (2 reels) (Dr.)
Aug. 12—The Inner Circle (Dr.)
Aug. 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)
Aug. 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Dr.)	1000

CINES
C. Kleine

Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.)	640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)	903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.)	1067
Aug. 13—Mona Lisa in Disguise (Com.)	600
Aug. 13—Vicovaro, Italy (Sc.)	400
Aug. 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Dr.)	1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Dr.)	963
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Com.)	235
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Sc.)	290
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Com.)	450
Aug. 27—The Bridge of Lammermoor (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 3—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—The Sacking of Rome (Dr.)	770
Sept. 7—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Sc.)	230

EDISON

July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)	600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves	1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)	1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.)	1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)	1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912	700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)	300
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)	980
Aug. 14—Holding the Fort (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine	1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)	1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 27—Alone in New York	1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Sc.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July 26—Twins
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.)
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.)
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—An Adamless Eden (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile)	1000
Aug. 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Dr.)
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Com.)
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Dr.)

LUBIN

Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw
Aug. 14—The Stubbornness of Youth
Aug 15—Basehall Industry
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril
Aug. 19—The Hoho Cluh (Com.)
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Com.)
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.)
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.)
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.)
Sept. 2—A Substitution (Com.)
Sept. 4—The Bank Cashier (Dr.)
Sept. 5—The Smuggler (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Jockeys (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Singing Girl (Com.)

G. MELIES

July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls
Aug. 15—Romance at Catalina
Aug. 22—The Moth and the Flame (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa
Aug. 10—Here and There in Oregon (Travel)
Aug. 10—Kittens
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 35
Aug. 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Com.)
Aug. 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.)
Aug. 15—Some Inhahitants of Stagnant Water
Aug. 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (W. Dr.)
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.)
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warhler and the Cuckoo (Edu.)
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (W. Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.)
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Hist. Dr.)
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Com.)
Aug. 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 35
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Dr.)
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bih.)
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Detective's Desperate Chance (W. Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist. Dr.)
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.)

KALEM CO.

Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy	1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Sc.)
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 7—Freed from Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 14—Kentucky Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Prison Ship (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Com.)	1000
Aug. 24—Ruhe Marquard Wins (Dr.)	1323

SELIG

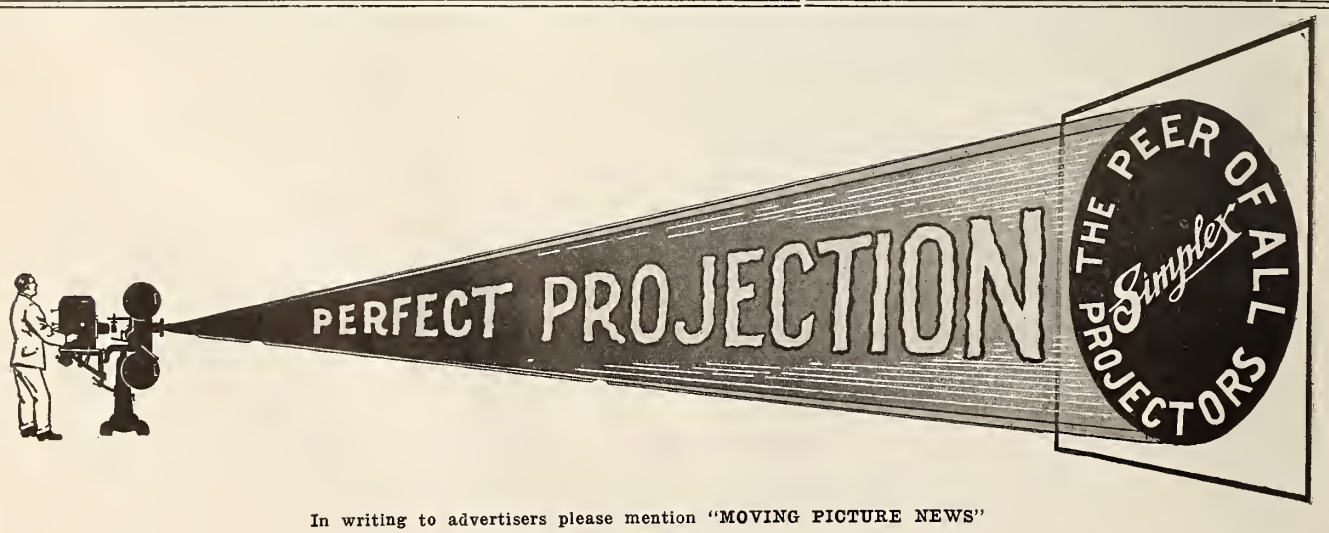
Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Edu.)
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The Man from Dragon Land (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 13—The Wayfarer (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—Two Gay Dogs (Com.)	1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 20—The Cowhoy's Mother (Dr.)
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)	1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Edu.)

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel)	220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)	390
Aug. 14—The Rivals (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities	300
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quehec (Ind.)	275
Aug. 21—A Day in the German Navy (Top.)	400
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.)	1020
Sept. 4—An Eccentric Sportsman (Com.)	455
Sept. 4—Small Game at the Zoo (Sc.)	165
Sept. 4—From Lauterhrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Sc.)	380

VITAGRAPH

Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan	1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour	1000
Aug. 7—The Cross-Roads	1000
Aug. 9—Wanted: A Grandmother	1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan	1000
Aug. 12—Bunny and the Dogs	300
Aug. 12—Ingenuity	700
Aug. 13—The Heart of Esmeralda	1000
Aug. 14—Vultures and Doves	1000
Aug. 16—A Bogus Napoleon	1000
Aug. 17—Two Battles	1000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild	1050
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddleton	1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow	1000
Aug. 23—Saving an Audience	1000
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm II	388
Aug. 24—The Party Dress	614
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine	1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders	555
Aug. 28—Bumps	477
Aug. 30—Written in the Sand	1000
Aug. 31—The Bond of Music	1000



ECLAIR

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27th

"DOLLS"

A drama which runs the gamut of tenderness. After all a child's love for her dolls is but mother-love inherent.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29th

"THE PASSING PARADE"

Quite the most novel effort in many a month of pictures. A picture poem, yet as interesting as a novel.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 1st

"TWO BRAVE LITTLE HEARTS"

Children are but men in the making. Here then is a powerful object picture of what "little men" can accomplish.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42nd St., New York City, N.Y.

EASTMAN
motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

FIGHT FIRES
IN MOVING PICTURE BOOTHS WITH THE Pyrene TRADE MARK
FIRE EXTINGUISHER

¶ The Pyrene Extinguisher is small and easily operated. It can be snatched from the wall and put in instant operation.

¶ Pyrene, the liquid contained in the extinguisher, is non-damaging and a non-conductor of electricity.

¶ Pyrene does not deteriorate or evaporate in the extinguisher.

¶ Pyrene is the most effective extinguisher of incipient fires on the market.

Length, 14 in. Diameter, 3 in. Weight, 5 lbs. filled ready for use.

Included in the lists of Approved Fire Appliances Issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Write for full information.

PYRENE MFG. CO., 1358 Broadway, N. Y. City

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication

Moving Picture News

FOR SALE—Moving picture theatre costing $1400 for $700. $32.50 month rent. Bargain.
FOR SALE—Film $2.50 to $5 reel. 2 and 3 reel features $25 and up.
Edison, Lubin, Powers, Motiograph new $100. For rent 12,000 feet film $12 weekly. Songs and Posters free.
Will buy any make of film and machine.
H. DAVIS, WATERTOWN, WIS.

ROSS LENSES

For Projection Machines and Cinematograph Cameras
Ross Zeiss Tessar Lenses, F 3.5
No. 1—2-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
No. 1a—3-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
Send for our Catalogue of Cinematograph Lenses

GEORGE MURPHY, INC.,
57 East Ninth Street, New York

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN

Or THE YELLOW PERIL

A 3000-Foot Drama. Six styles lithographs, photos and heralds.

Exclusive Territory

NEW YORK FILM CO.
12 Union Sq. New York

DO YOU WANT TO MAKE MOVING PICTURES?
We sell and rent moving picture cameras, printers and perforators, new or second-hand.
Educational films made, advertising films taken to order.
We rent cameras and camera men.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO., Inc.,
248 West 35th Street, N. Y. C.

DESIGNING
ENGRAVING
ELECTROTYPING
HARDING PHOTO ENGRAVING CO.
8-10 WEST 13TH ST.
NEAR
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
TELEPHONE 817 CHELSEA

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES

WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY

From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. N Omaha, Neb.

Films For Sale!

$2.50 per reel up
Biggest bargains in the country.
Send for catalogue.

ACME FILM CO.
130 West 37th Street, New York

PIANISTS WANTED
to send name and address of theatre where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC
all New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made.

S. & B. PUB. CO.,
124 W. 45th St., New York City.

HARD MAPLE

FOLDING CHAIRS

$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

The Art of Scenario Writing

By WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT

And 1 Year's Subscription to Moving Picture News for $2.00

THE 1913 MODEL
MOTIOGRAPH
THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

SPECIFICATIONS

MECHANISM

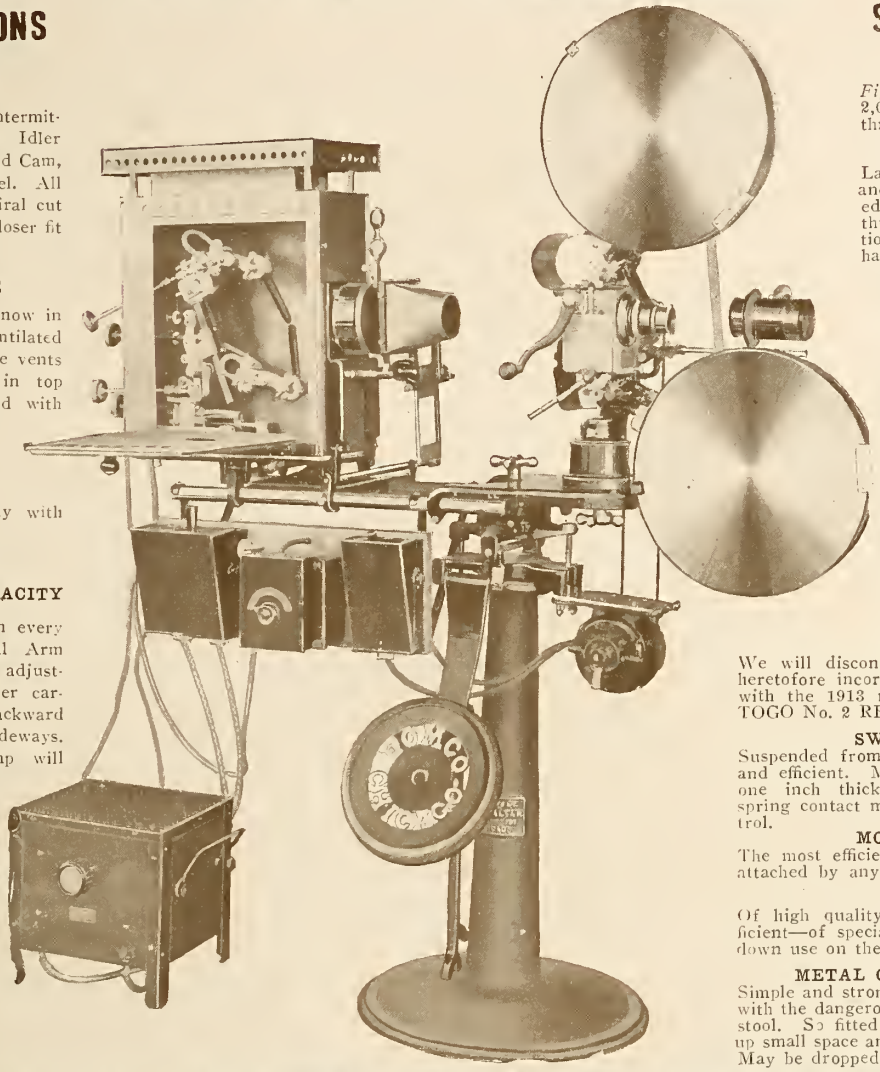
Contains hardened Intermittent Sprocket, Steel Idler Rolls, Heavier Star and Cam, Heavier Balance Wheel. All gears of steel and spiral cut teeth which means a closer fit and longer wear.

LAMP HOUSE

The largest and best now in use. Thoroughly ventilated on all sides with large vents for escape of heat in top hood. Carefully lined with best quality translite board in bottom, front and top. Passes Inspection Anywhere. Supplied only with spring hinged doors.

ARC LAMP
125 AMPERE CAPACITY

Heavier and better in every way. Has Universal Arm and Clamp with two adjustments added on upper carbon arm,—Either backward and forward or sideways. The Universal Clamp will hold any diameter of Carbon from ¾ down to ⅜. Racks provide for a TWENTY-INCH CARBON FEED—a 12" upper and 8" lower.



SPECIFICATIONS

MAGAZINES

Fifteen inch diameter to hold 2,000 feet of film at one threading.

DOWSER SHUTTER

Large diameter with ball balanced handle. Firmly mounted on condenser mount, thus also acting as protection for lantern slides. The handle may also be used for lifting out hot condenser chamber for changing of glasses.

FILM SHIELDS

Large and strong. Thoroughly protect film in its entire passage from one magazine to the other.

RHEOSTAT

Either heavy grid type or coil on 110 v. line. Our grid is adjustable from 20 to 55 amperes. The coil from 30 to 45 amperes.

STAND

The original Gibraltar base, perfect rigidity, 3 heights, with every desired adjustment.

REWIND

We will discontinue the patented rewind heretofore incorporated in mechanism, and with the 1913 model; we will supply the TOGO No. 2 REWIND at no extra cost.

SWITCHBOARD

Suspended from metal sliding base. Rigid and efficient. Made of best quality slate—one inch thick. Contains main switch, spring contact motor switch and speed control.

MOTOR DRIVE

The most efficient ever designed. Quickly attached by any one.

MOTOR

Of high quality—strong, compact and efficient—of special construction for up-side-down use on the Motiograph.

METAL OPERATOR'S SEAT

Simple and strong and designed to do away with the dangerous and cumbersome wooden stool. So fitted to the Motiograph to take up small space and in most convenient place. May be dropped completely out of way.

PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:

1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete,

OUR GUARANTEE FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR

Covering parts of the 1913 model Motiograph Mechanism that may become worn out in service, or which may show defects in material or workmanship, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

Gaumont

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUNITY

Gaumont

OUR FILMS ARE PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT.

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and 3 Sheets—Lobby Displays Photos —Cuts—Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3--Handcolored

The Refugee's Casket

NEXT IN LINE! SEPT. 19—Two Reels

Kings in Exile

A film that deals with the events of great empires. Here's a serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title!

Tuesday, Aug. 27th
THE STORY OF CHOPIN

Thursday, Aug. 29th
MARRIAGE ON THE RUN

Thursday, Sept. 5th
A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Tuesday, Sept. 10th
LOVE'S SERENADE

Scene from A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Thursday, Sept. 12th
THE PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY

Tuesday, Sept. 17th
QUEEN ELIZABETH'S TOKEN

Tuesday, Sept. 24th
THE HEART OF THE RED MAN

Thursday, Sept. .26th
THE STOLEN CUB

Gaumont

Gaumont

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors.

HERE WE GO!!! HAND-COLORED ONE REEL

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17th

Queen Elizabeth's Token

WHY PAY A BONUS for a State right picture when you can get the same thing as an ordinary release? The same story as advertised elsewhere?

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

SEP 10 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 8

AUGUST 24
1912

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SEP 14 1912

PRICE
TEN CENTS

"THELMA"
(2 Reel) Reliance release of August 31st.

No other Trade Mark means so much to music lovers as these Columbia music notes ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫

Columbia Records

They are more than a commercial trademark—they are a symbol.

They mean music in the biggest sense of the word—every kind of music; every class of music.

They mean music for every taste. They mean music for everybody. And always they mean the best in every class.

Columbia product brings to you the music of great singers, great players, great choruses, great orchestras, just as that music is produced. Nothing is lost—the very temperament and personality of the artist are recorded. With Columbia instruments there is no limit to your home music. All the great artists who have made records, without exception, can be heard at their best on the Columbia Graphophone or Grafonola.

See our nearest dealer for new catalogues of Columbia Graphophones, Grafonolas and Columbia Double-Disc Records, or write to us direct.

COLUMBIA Phonograph Co., General

Manufacturers of the Dictaphone.

Box 221, Tribune Building, New York

Toronto: McKinnon Building. London: Earlsfield, S. W.

Wherever we are not actively represented, we are prepared to consider the granting of exclusive selling rights.

THE ONLY REAL AND GENUINE

"101" - BISON HEADLINERS - "101"

ARE PRODUCED BY THE NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

"For the Honor of the Tribe"

ONE REEL Released Tuesday, Sept. 3 ONE REEL

A shepherd guarding thousands of sheep is killed by an Indian, who gives a great feast with the sheep he steals. Through a clever ruse the identity of the guilty man is discovered by the soldiers, and when confronted by the troops he admits his guilt. The tribe is disposed to prevent his arrest, but for the honor and peace of the tribe he consents to the execution, claiming the privilege of choosing his own death. This occurs in a highly sensational scene.

ONE REEL

"An Old Tune"

RELEASED FRI., SEPT. 6

A boy with a passion for music is often entertained by the parish priest who plays an old tune on his violin. Grown to manhood he loses his memory through hardship and privation on the desert, and falls in with bad companions. While eluding a posse he seeks refuge in the old priest's house, as the latter is playing the old tune. The familiar strains bring back his memory and he defends the priest from an attack, losing his own life.

COMING "CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT" SOON!
IN THREE REELS

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION, 60 Wall St. N. Y. CITY Sole Agents for the U. S. AND CANADA

BRONCHO FILMS

FRONTIER - INDIAN - MILITARY AND PIONEER SUBJECTS

PRODUCED UPON THE LARGEST SCALE EVER ATTEMPTED IN THE HISTORY OF MOTION PICTURES

STIRRING THEMES—TREMENDOUS CASTS—PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY

ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE THE FOLLOWING FEATURES:

"Sundered Ties"

THE BIGGEST ONE REEL FEATURE EVER MADE

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18

The North against the South—Father against Son—in wonderful and thrilling battles, booming cannon, hand to hand conflicts, sensational cavalry charges. Through it all runs a heart-gripping story, splendidly acted.

"His Better Self"

1 Reel—RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 25—1 Reel

In the hot desert, beneath the blistering rays of the sun, the rivals battle for the canteen of water—and life. As one falls wounded the hand of his conqueror is stayed in a death thrust by the picture of the woman they love, and he carries his erstwhile opponent to shelter.

A BRONCHO EVERY WEDNESDAY

THE BEST FILM IN THE WORLD

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE CO.

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., U. S. A. and Canada Agents, New York City

FIRST RELEASE OF

KEYSTONE FILMS

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

"Cohen Collects a Debt"

AND

"The Water Nymph"

A split reel comedy, featuring MACK SENNETT and MABEL NORMAND, the beautiful Diving Venus

On MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, two more rollicking comedies on one reel are presented in

"Riley and Schultze"

AND

"The New Neighbor"

A SPLIT REEL RELEASED EVERY MONDAY
LOSE NO TIME IN BOOKING

KEYSTONE FILMS are new in name only. They are produced by the company heretofore with the Biograph Co., and directed by the same man—Mr. Mack Sennett. The quality of these films is well known to exhibitors.

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., New York City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

A BIG BOX-OFFICE ATTRACTION

BARNEY GILMORE

The Matinee Idol, for years appearing in popular productions, known in every State of the Union. A favorite everywhere and appears in a revival of his sensational melodrama

DUBLIN DAN

THREE REELS

Barney Gilmore plays the title role, that of an Irish Detective. The story is exciting, thrilling and has a number of powerful situations. Mr. Gilmore is supported by an all-star cast.

COPYRIGHT PROTECTED BY BEST LEGAL TALENT

STATE RIGHTS SOLD ONLY

THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

READY FOR SHIPMENT—SEPTEMBER 25th, 1912

UNUSUAL ABUNDANCE OF ADVERTISING MATTER

OTHER REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4TH, 1912

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK

A story revolving about the adventures of a government purchasing agent in Mexico. Showing splendid light effects, sensational incidents, riding and driving by experts and tense dramatic situations.

RELEASED, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6TH, 1912

OPEN TO PROPOSALS

A Westerner reads in an Eastern paper that all rich women in the East prefer the men of the West for husbands. This Westerner takes the next train East and soon discovers to his sorrow that not "all" women prefer Western husbands. A fine Solax Comedy with the all-star comedy cast.

Solax Company FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street. New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI August 24, 1912 Number 8

ADVANCEMENT OF THE ART OF CINEMATOGRAPHY

We in our editorial capacity have got so accustomed to the "we" that we have lost, to some extent, our individuality, so that we have come to the conclusion that it is now time to make this individuality the assets that properly belong to the editorial chair. In the usual conservative, stereotyped method of work the editorials are usually "we"; we want to get out of this groove and adopt a style belonging to the personality of the editor. So that in the future editorials that may be written, the personal pronoun "I" will take the place of the "we" and all editorials will be signed with the signature Alfred H. Saunders.

The art of cinematography is advancing by very rapid strides to a higher degree of usefulness and power than ever before.

The convention at Chicago proves our statement by the fact that at all of the conventions held that I have attended there was to be observed in the La Salle Hotel in the seven hundred delegates who registered (and the 1,300 additional who were present, making a total of two thousand people at the convention) were of the highest type of intellectual attendance that any convention of the moving picture industry had ever called together in so large a number. It was indeed a treat to meet them and get their views on the upliftment of the industry to a higher degree of perfection than ever before. The intelligence shown at the deliberations of the League and committee meetings was very much above the ordinary, and the expressions of opinion on the value of the motion picture as an educationalist were sincere and unanimous. I was more than pleased to learn that the majority of those present were sorely sick at heart with the mediocre subjects being turned out and the universal desire for a higher type of dramas, comedies and Western material.

On reaching Chicago I was immediately asked by the committee if I would consent to deliver an address at the banquet on Friday evening. I accepted the invitation, and being present, just before I addressed the assembly, Mr. Sweeney, the toastmaster, said, "Do not take more than five minutes, please." I replied I could not say what I had to say in five minutes. Then he said, "Cut it as short as possible, because there are so many to speak," and as I had a message to give I will use my larger audience in the readers of the Moving Picture News to give the address in the form of an editorial I intended giving at Chicago.

I want to congratulate the assembly present on the re-election of Mr. M. A. Neff as National President of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League. I have always held Mr. Neff in the highest esteem. I have known of his great sacrifices made on behalf of the League during the past twelve months since the Cleveland convention. Mr. Neff is a man in a thousand, clean, upright and square—a man who cannot be bought and whose whole aim and interest is the successful work of the League.

Ladies and gentlemen, you are not here to represent any party or faction of parties; you have no interest in any manufacturer, exchange man or others allied to the industry. You represent yourselves, a great and growing factor in the moving picture industry, which in your hands should rise from the common show and become the education factor of the second decade of the twentieth century. You should be taken in the counsels of every one connected with the beautiful Art of Cinematography, expressing your opinion faithfully and strongly regarding the subjects you desire to be produced for you to place before your patrons, who number in this country millions of people, and abroad a larger number of millions—people of every creed, color and country, who can learn by the moving picture what it is impossible to learn from books. Your mission is a mission higher than that of any minister of the Gospel, because you reach audiences which it is impossible for the ordinary preacher to touch, and if your sermons are true to life you will do more to uplift and elevate the moral tone of the community than any individual or body of men ever will do.

You know as well, and perhaps better than I can tell you, of the great paucity of good subjects and how difficult it is for you to make up a program under the present conditions. The Motion Picture Patents Company are to be commended for the beautiful photography they are giving us to-day. They have the money and various artists in their employ who are capable of producing such grand work that they are doing, but, ladies and gentlemen, you know their historical subjects are very, very poor, so untrue to nature that any public schoolboy or girl of ten or twelve years of age could point out the fallacies in their subjects. It needs a Censor Board of Educationalists to reject four-fifths of the present so-called historical subjects and to appoint a committee of directors to work with the manufacturer in the production of true historical features. When this is done, then the educational work will advance by leaps and bounds, recalling true instances, instead of ideas seen and staged through the whiskey bottle and the tobacco smoke of our present-day motion picture directors. You exhibitors know that the true art of pantomime is no longer known, except in very rare instances, and if the manufacturers would insist on having actors of note who know how to portray what the scenario calls for it would be to the benefit of every one of you, both in the receipts of your houses and the satisfaction to your patrons.

Ladies and gentlemen of the National Exhibitors' League of America assembled here, you have in your hands a vast power for good. If you will only use it kindly and not ruthlessly, you can obtain any picture you want, whether it be the so-called Trust or the so-called Independents. It should be your choice, and you can do it, if you will select your program from the very best quality there is on the market to-day. The Independent party, taking into consideration the difficulties they have to contend with and the short, rapid manner they sprang up, have progressed in a wonderful degree and command the respect and admiration of every one in the trade. The trammels of the patent litigation have fallen from their shoulders and they can now prove their mettle by giving good results, and you exhibitors can compel them to give these results to you. You are also a power in your city, your state organizations, and among the legislators of each city from whence you came. You can do away with a great deal of adverse legislation which now threatens you, and is very hard to bear, if you will only be strong and united. I do not wish to be egotistical, but will show you what one man with determination can do, so that it may spur you to a greater power if you will only use what you have at hand. I want to start with New York City and say that when certain pictures, travestying the good sense of the people, were imported from France I called on the then Mayor of the city and got them suppressed. In my editorials I strongly condemned the indecent or semi-indecent picture and created a sentiment which made authorities act. When I found I could not do much with the powers that be in the shape of manufacturers, I attended the Exhibitors' Association of New York, and my old friend Donegan told me they had $900 in hand to start a censorship board or to get their rights acknowledged. Going to my home on Staten Island, I met the late Mr. Charles Sprague Smith on the boat and outlined the plan of the censorship by the People's Institute to him, and arranged for a meeting of the Exhibitors' League to take place. The $900 was turned over to the People's Institute, and thus began the National Censorship Board, which has done real good work in the industry.

A crime was committed in Madison Square Garden which was filmed and it was threatened would flood New York City theatres with nauseating details. I immediately took the matter to the Mayor and the Police Commissioner and the whole film was suppressed. Again the exhibitors were threatened with heavy fire restrictions, and I demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Board of Fire Underwriters that only an infinitestimal percentage of fires could be placed to the account of the cinematography industry, and the legislation was not effected.

In addition to this I arranged for a demonstration with the Pyrene people, of New York City, who showed to the exhibitors and insurance men and others allied to the industry the quick effectiveness of their product as a means to overcome the incip'ent fires in the booth, and I believe that if every booth and theatre was equipped with Pyrene extinguishers it would be of great benefit to the exhibitors. The question of the booth sheet iron vs. asbestos came up, and while it is rather hard upon the exhibitor in New York, yet I believe the sheet iron will eventually stand. Again the question of the alien operator came up on the statute books of New York State. There was a law forbidding any alien operator handling a machine. The operators, to a number of about 170 or 180, appealed to me to help them. I immediately took the matter up on their behalf with the British, German and French Consuls. This was slow work, and in the meantime the poor operators were without a position. I took it next to the Mayor, who promised he would do what he could, and this proved very little, owing to the fact that the bill had been passed by Governor Dix. I took the matter to Governor Dix, who reported that he could do nothing; then, as a last resource, I took the matter to President Taft himself, who immediately took action and got the alien restrictive law expunged from the statute book of New York State.

These are but small instances in which one man can do work for the good of the industry. Then what, ladies and gentlemen, can you do in your collective capacity, holding the positions that you do?

The policy of the Moving Picture News is, as it always has been, the elevation of the highest and best in the art, to bring forward to the public the great educational possibilities there are in the moving picture for the elevation of humanity as a whole and to bring its aid to further the brotherhood of man, or, as I prefer to put it, "unity of mankind in one great family." It is also a great factor in the elevation of womankind, showing her at her best and in the highest forms of divinity to which woman can aspire. If only the best side of true motherhood and womanhood can be shown in the pictures it will advance mankind to a higher level and show him himself. It will aid in a very great measure the equal rights of women to take part in the counsels of the nation. The ball that has been set rolling, where great women, such as Jane Addams, of Chicago, are being portrayed in the moving pictures, are examples for others to follow. Woman has a wonderful work to do in moving pictures. She can by her influence and voice compel mankind to acknowledge truth, purity and righteousness to each other, teaching the one commandment of "Love your neighbor as yourself." Ladies and gentlemen, we are but just on the fringe of the industry, our feet are stepping onto the second step of an industry that will be great and powerful in the counsels of the nations. It will do more to cultivate universal peace by showing the horrors of war than anything heretofore presented to nations. It is already awakening in the various nations of the world facts that will certainly bear fruit and do away with the slaughtering of great communities of mankind. In conclusion, let me call your attention to the movement started in New York, whereby these pictures of great events can be handed down to posterity to be seen by our children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, showing them in living form how we lived, moved and had our being. I refer to the National Historical Records Association, who are now collecting data and photographs of every kind of a national character; and if you ladies and gentlemen will only assist in the propaganda outlined in this address you will be doing posterity a great favor, and reaping the reward yourselves, by knowing that the National Exhibitors' League of America is the instrument for the advancement and uplifting of the beautiful Art of Cinematography.

Alfred H. Saunders.

NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

Proceedings continued from issue of August 17th

Mr. John H. Blumenthal: Mr. Chairman, I move you by a rising vote of thanks that we thank Mr. John J. Lentz for this able talk that he has given.

Motion seconded.

The President: Ladies and Gentlemen—It is moved and seconded that we thank the Hon. John J. Lentz of Ohio for his able and pleasant address here this afternoon. All in favor of the motion will please rise. (Everybody arose.)

Mr. John J. Lentz: I certainly thank you.

The President: Ladies and Gentlemen—After the many intelligent things that Mr. Lentz has said here this afternoon and after the discussion from the gentleman who spoke in behalf of Mr. Carter Harrison, I wish to say to Chicagoans that I had the pleasure of being in this grand city in 1890. It was here in Chicago that I first entered into an organization that meant much in a political way to a certain party. Ever since that time I have watched the growth of this great city, and I want to say to you that you have a mayor here to-day that represents one who was before him.

I came to Chicago when you would not dare to drive across the bridges faster than a walk. To-day I notice that you go over in automobiles and in street cars just as fast as you please, and if I remember correctly when Carter Harrison was elected mayor of this city that that was one of the things that was mentioned, "We will drive across the bridges as fast as we please," and I am proud to say that Carter Harrison was elected. I am glad, too, to-day to receive a message from the son of Carter Harrison, who is now mayor of the city of Chicago.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, I am not going to try to make you a speech. As you all know I have been here since Saturday. I have slept but little since I came to your city, and I have done a little work. Now, ladies and gentlemen, I wish to state at this time as there are some here who are not acquainted with the motion picture principles and the conditions that exist, to-morrow we will hold an executive session. To-day we invite you. We invited the manufacturer, we invited the film exchanges, we invited the press, and we have invited many people to come here, and those of us who are far away that have not come here to meet with us, it is no fault of the motion picture exhibitors. We have extended to every branch of this industry a welcome and invitation to meet with us here. We want to meet you. We want to become acquainted with you. We want to advise with you and receive suggestions from you. This is a grand organization, and while I look upon your faces and remember that not two years ago back in the city of Columbus, Ohio, where I had the honor of calling a convention of that state together there were just ten who met me in the Southern Hotel at Columbus. To-day from the beginning of those ten we have fought the battle of the motion picture exhibitors. We are proud to say we have not lost the battle. We are proud to say to you there is not a thing that has been presented in the state of Ohio that we have not adjusted and adjusted satisfactorily so far.

Ladies and gentlemen, I want to say to you that this is a grand work that we are engaged in and we are earnest. We are sincere. We ask the friendship of every man and every woman that is engaged in our line of work to help us to uplift cinematography and place the motion picture business on the highest plane possible.

To the manufacturers that are here to-day, we welcome you, and to the film men who are here to-day, we welcome you. We welcome the press of the country, and I desire to say now that through the press we have received assistance that probably none of you know of. It was my good luck or fortune to meet several of the managers and editors of our papers and not one of them has refused to help us. They have joined with us in making this a grand organization, and I would advise here from this platform to-day that every man and every woman engaged in our line of business take some one of the papers; if you can't take more than one, at least take one, and know what is going on in our line of business. That is the way you will know. Assist those who are assisting us. They have helped build this organization and they deserve great credit.

There is another class of people who deserve credit that probably you have not heard of. I will say to you that I have traveled a number of years throughout this country, every town in the United States, and to me it looks a great deal as the old saying "alike," for the simple reason that I have visited nearly every town of any importance in this country and many out of this country. My friends, the traveling men of this country have been working for you for almost two years, and you didn't know it. I have asked them to step into the picture shows and get me the addresses and send them to me. They did it. I wrote to those people. I secured things wherever I could and wrote letters to them and tried to interest them in this line of business, and they have all responded, and we owe them a kind word. I want to say that we desire to thank every man, every woman and every one who has made it possible for us to meet here to-day and who have contributed to this grand meeting of the motion picture exhibitors of this country.

We are receiving letters and telegrams not only from the states in the United States, but in other countries, and later on you will hear more about these things.

Now, just a word more. Several have come and have said, what are you going to do at this convention? Now, my friends, in order that there may be no mistake that we may understand each other to start with, we are here for the purpose of legislating for not only the motion picture exhibitors, but we are here for the purpose of getting acquainted and co-operating together to bring about a condition whereby men and women engaged in this line of business will get a fair and square deal. (Applause.)

Some have said, do you favor this or that. I desire to say right here, now, I have never been president of this organization or president of the organization in the state of Ohio advised another exhibitor to take either the independent or the licensed film service only in so far as my judgment made me believe it was best for him to do so. Naturally, if there were three exhibitors in a town and all used independent, or all used trust goods, I would naturally advise the third or fourth man to use the other. I did that because it looked like a good business proposition.

Now, I want it understood that this is a motion picture exhibitors' convention, and we are going to mingle with you, with all of you who have come here. We are going to try to look at your goods. We are going to try to give time to them to see every exhibit that is here, and we want them to see it, but at the same time we are here for business. We will have an executive session to-morrow and we will have many of them probably and every member that belongs to this league will be admitted to our meetings. There will be a password that will be issued and given to the presidents of every state or the vice-presidents of every state organization, and he will communicate that word to all the members in good standing in his state organization, and you will be admitted on the password. Of course, this is for the motion picture exhibitors. We will have open meetings and notify all who desire to attend, and while those who are not delegates cannot vote upon the questions coming before the convention, you will have the right and we will take any resolution or motion, you can pass to a delegate and he will present it here.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, I want to appoint two or three committees, and I want to say that these committees will meet at headquarters where they will be assigned committee rooms, and I also want to say that each one of the states will meet at certain places.

It is my right and I am glad to be able to appoint these committees and the only rules that I can find to govern.

Committee on Credentials—F. J. Rambush, chairman; George Henry, Harry Reid, Samuel Traeger and Mrs. Louis Smith.

Committee on Rules and Order of Business—Peter J. Juepp, chairman; L. R. Thomas, L. H. Ramsay, G. W. Wiley, G. A. Robinson.

Committee on Membership—H. S. Kline, chairman; Fulton Modesky, Mr. Michaels, Mr. Blumenthal and Charles C. Goff.

Those are the committees. You will meet at headquarters and all who have credentials and all who wish to attend the meetings will report to the credentials committee.

Now, I wish to announce that all whose names are called here will meet in the following places:

Ohio, 1360, this hotel.

Illinois will meet at 1823 to elect or to organize their states and elect a chairman of each state.

Pennsylvania will meet at 1659.

Michigan will meet in this hotel in J. J. Reader's room.

Indiana will meet at 1849, Mr. Rambush's room.

West Virginia will meet in Room 1349.

Kentucky will meet at 1809, headquarters.

New York will meet at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

New Jersey will meet at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

Minesota will meet at 753, this hotel.

Wisconsin will meet at Room 1809.

Washington will meet at 1809.

Iowa will meet at 1809.

Louisiana will meet at Mr. Sherman's room, 1244.

Tennessee will meet at 1809.

Now, ladies and gentelmen, those are the committees. They will be expected to report here to-morrow when we meet in session at nine-thirty. Now, there are going to be business sessions here, and we ask every delegate, especially and alternate, to be present when the roll is called to-morrow of the officers and of the delegates. We want you to be here, because we are here for business as well as pleasure. You will call at the committee room to-night for tickets for the boatride. The boat leaves at seven-thirty. We leave this room at seven o'clock to go to the boat in a body.

Minnesota is requested to meet at state headquarters in the morning to organize, at ten o'clock.

Mr. Klein, Milwaukee: Was there a time designated for the meeting of these committees?

The President: Those that are appointed, all committees will be ready to report to-morrow morning at nine-thirty, and the committee on rules and order of business will meet at 1808 and the committee on credentials will meet at 1810.

Mr. W. H. Wilcy: As a suggestion, are the secretaries or vice-presidents to meet with the credentials committee in order to make a showing of the delegates?

The President: All of the vice-presidents of the various states will meet in 1809, and they will there learn where to meet the different state organizations.

Dr. Rhodes: I would like to suggest that the Indiana boys meet at the Brevoort Hotel instead of here, as Mr. Neff just suggested. Mr. Rambush has a much larger room at the Brevoort; we have two rooms over there.

The President: I would suggest that all of you meet as soon after adjournment as you can. It will only take you five or ten minutes and then you will have your chairman when the roll is called here, and, of course, he will have the vote. The committee on credentials will meet at Room 1810 on the floor below. We don't think we have any contests, but if we have, there is the place to present them before that committee. The committee on rules and order of business will meet after adjourning in Room 1808.

Mr. Schaefer: I move that we adjourn until to-morrow morning at nine-thirty. Motion seconded.

Upon the motion being put by the president, it was carried and an adjournment was taken till nine-thirty, August 14, 1912.

(Balance of proceedings will be published next week.—Editor.)

Names of Delegates and Alternates to the Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

Ohio.—J. H. Broomhall, Hamilton, O.; W. A. Pettis, Conneaut, O.; Mrs. Louisa Schmitz, Cleveland, O.; S. E. Morris, national vice-president, Cleveland, O.; Edw. Kohl, Cleveland, O.; alternate, Ernest S. Schwartz, Cleveland, O.; F. M. Kenney, Cleveland, O.; alternate, W. J. Slimm, Cleveland, O.; Chas. T. Beeching, Cincinnati, O.; Otto Luedeking, Cincinnati, O.; Max Stearn, Columbus, O.; J. A. Maddox, Columbus, O.; Clem Kerr, Dayton, O.; Val Reyburg, Dayton, O.; J. B. Gardner, Toledo, O.; W. C. Bettis, Toledo, O.

Illinois.—Wm. J. Sweeney, national vice-president, Chicago, Ill.; Geo. Henry, Chicago, Ill.; Sidney Smith, Chicago, Ill.; Louis H. Frank, Chicago, Ill.; Julius Alcock, Chicago, Ill.; C. A. Anderson, Chicago, Ill.; C. L. Hull, Chicago, Ill.; Fred Schaefer, Chicago, Ill.; I. Natkin, Chicago, Ill.; Robert R. Levy, Chicago, Ill.

Pennsylvania.—Harry E. Reiff, Pittsburg, Pa.; Harry Megown, Pittsburg, Pa.; G. E. Miller, Plymouth, Pa.; Henry Poke, Pittsburg, Pa.; James Delves, Pittsburg, Pa.; Charles Siegall, Philadelphia, Pa.; Morris Speier, Philadelphia, Pa.

Wisconsin.—C. H. Phillips, national vice-president, Milwaukee, Wis.; alternate, W. E. Smith; Max Weisfeld; alternate, Jacob Moelk; Roy Cummings; Neal Duffey; D. K. Fisher, Milwaukee, Wis.; alternate, Nick Hoyer; H. S. Kleine, Milwaukee, Wis.

Michigan.—B. M. Converse, national vice-president, Owasso, Mich.; Carl Ray, Muskegon, Mich.; W. J. Carroll, Jackson, Mich.; Peter J. Jeup, Detroit, Mich.; Leslie Levy, Detroit, Mich.; Fred R. Remler, Detroit, Mich.; J. J. Rieder, national treasurer, Jackson, Mich.

Kentucky.—Orene Parker, national vice-president, Covington, Ky.; L. J. Dittmar Louisville, Ky.; A. B. Arnet, Louisville, Ky.; L. H. Ramsey, Lexington, Ky.; Max L. Simons, Louisville, Ky.; Joseph Steule, Louisville, Ky.; Thomas Tarvin, Dayton, Ky.; Geo. W. Strotman, Covington, Ky.

Indiana.—F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind.; alternate, Earl Rife, Logansport, Ind.; H. S. Dickson, national vice-president, Winchester, Ind.; alternate, Joe Bommerscheim, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; S. B. Sampson, Indianapolis, Ind.; alternate, J. R. Brennan, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; J. M. Rhoades, Indianapolis, Ind.; John A. Victor, Indianapolis, Ind.; Phillip Scora, Evansville, Ind.; William Huddy, Evansville, Ind.

Tennessee.—Howell Graham, Chattanooga, Tenn.; alternate, W. H. Wasserman, Nashville, Tenn; Frank Rogers, Knoxville, Tenn.; alternate, W. H. Peck, Knoxville, Tenn.; W. C. Morris, Union City, Tenn.

New Jersey.—G. A. Robinson, W. Hoboken, N. J.; C. G. Ruhlman, W. Hoboken, N. J.; Wm. Roberts, Trenton, N. J.; James Clark, Trenton, N. J.

Nevada.—Glen D. Hurst, Reno, Nev.

California.—M. A. Michaels, San Francisco, Cal.

New York.—Joseph Coufal, New York City; E. M. Day, Auburn, N. Y.; Tobias Keppler, Auburn, N. Y.; Samuel H. Trigger, New York City; H. W. Rosenthal, New York City; Louis Rosenthal, Albany, N. Y.; George F. Wright, Albany, N. Y.; W. A. Douque, Utica, N. Y.; F. E. Samuels, Utica, N. Y.; Robert W. Watson, Syracuse, N. Y.; Robert H. Whitten, Syracuse, N. Y.; Wm. McGreal, Rochester, N. Y.; George Griffin, Rochester, N. Y.; G. W. Erdman, Buffalo, N. Y.; W. Kennedy, Buffalo, N. Y; M. D. Gibson, Elmira, N. Y.; James Wilson, Elmira, N. Y.; R. M. Davidson, Binghamton, N. Y.; Samuel Hoff, Binghamton, N. Y.

West Virginia.—M. M. Weir, Charleston, W. Va.; L. R. Thomas, Moundsville, W. Va.; E. W. Waugh, Huntington, W. Va.; A. L. Cotrill, D. B. Eagan, A. C. Johnson.

Missouri— J. E. Haggard, Nevada, Mo.; alternate, N. E. Fields; G. H. Wiley, Kansas City, Mo.; alternate, Winthrop Allen; F. B. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.; alternate, J. H. Gilday; N. J. Flynn, Kansas City, Mo.; alternate, J. F. Fitzsimmons, Kansas City, Mo.; W. E. Shelton, Kansas City, Mo.; alternate, H. B. Sappe, Kansas City, Mo.; E. E. Richards, Springfield, Mo.; W. J. Flynn, Springfield, Mo.

Minnesota.—Thos. Twinniss, Duluth, Minn; alternate, Geo. Osborne, St. Paul, Minn.; L. G. Roesner, Winona, Minn.; alternate, E. A. Nelson, Duluth, Minn.; Otto N. Paths, St. Paul, Minn.; alternate, Ben Huntley, Winona, Minn.

Louisiana.— A. D. Sanger, Shreveport, La.; J. H. Sanger, Shreveport, La.; D. L. Cornelius, Shreveport, La.; alternate, C. B. Anderson, Minden, La.

Iowa.—Morris Lince, Ottumwa, Ia.; alternate, F. P. Lenven, Colfax, Ia.; Walter L. Rupert, Ottumwa, Ia.; alternate, O. A. Kintz, Des Moines, Ia.; H. C. Jurgensen, Waterloo, Ia.; alternate, Fred F. Keys, Des Moines, Ia.

EXHIBITORS' INSURANCE SCHEME

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has perfected and put into operation a system of insurance for members of the league, under which both their fire and liability insurance will be handled on the inter-insurance plan. This plan has been in operation among the leading concerns in other industries for more than thirty years, and has been found to be by far the strongest, safest and most desirable form of insurance in use In addition to these advantages, the cost is reduced nearly one-half as compared with the rates of the public companies insuring all classes of risks. John W. Daugherty, of St. Louis, Mo., an experienced and successful manager of this class of insurance organizations, has been put in charge of this system for league members, and he is rapidly putting the department into the same successful condition as the systems he manages for other industries. There are many important advantages of this system which cannot be mentioned in this brief notice, and the members of the league now have the same advantages in this respect as most of the organizations in the principal lines of trade and manufactures, such as mills, lumber interests, steam laundries, breweries, coal operators, banks, druggists and wholesalers. This subject was briefly discussed in the annual report of the national secretary, and was to be explained in detail to the convention by Mr. Daugherty, who, unfortunately, did not reach the convention in time.

IOWA EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE

Iowa has organized and received a charter as member of the M. P. E. L. of America. Have elected temporary officers. O. A. Knitz, president, Grinnell, Ia.; J. Lemen, vice-president, Colfax, Ia.; W. L. Rubert, secretary-treasurer, Ottumwa, Ia.; Fred. W. Young, national vice-president, Cedar Rapids, Ia. A meeting will be called at Des Moines, when the national organizer. President Neff, makes his trip through the West. All exhibitors wishing to join can correspond with the secretary.

HORACE VINTON

Horace Vinton, for a long time prominent in the dramatic world, and for the past five years identified with the production and scenario departments of a number of the best-known manufacturers of motion pictures, has severed his connection with the Comet Co., with whom he has been associated as scenario editor and director since the beginning of the current year.

Mr. Vinton has not only reviewed several hundred scenarios, from which he made a number of judicious selections, among which can be named: "Reformed by Stratagem," "The House of No Children," "Reconciled at Reno," but has written and produced the following original subjects: "Reggie Breaks the College Rules," "Interrupted Wedding," "My Wife's Birthday," "Two Women and One Man," "A Bachelor's Romance," "The Moonshiners' Task," "A Realistic Rehearsal," "The Tale of a Rubber Boot."

He is not only a prolific and orginal writer but has given to the world of motion pictures many of the most notable subjects produced by the independent manufacturers.

During his eight months association with the American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago, in its inception, Mr. Vinton contributed the following popular themes: "Her Fatal Mistake," "A Husband's Deception," The Troublesome Parcel," "Bonanza King," "Pittsburgh Millionaire," "College Chums," "Checkmate," "One Month to Live," "Penalty," and others.

For the Shamrock Co., St. Louis, he not only filled the position of advertising manager and scenario editor, but wrote and produced several of their most notable stories, among which, to be especially commended, can be mentioned "Ben Saunder's Redemption," and "A Romance in Old California."

Miss Virginia West made one of Mr. Vinton's latest productions, "A Bachelor's Romance," the subject of a story in our last week's issue.

It is safe to predict that Mr. Vinton will not remain idle for any extended period, for his accomplishments are so rare and varied that his services are sure to be in demand.

WHAT THE AMERICAN FILM CO. IS DOING

The American Film Co. has, as our readers know, been stationed at Starved Rock, Ill., for some weeks past. Their broncho-bucking cowboys have created quite a furore about Ottawa, La Salle, Utica and neighboring towns, and some unpleasant remarks were made concerning their riding ability. Some bets were made and about two thousand resorters and regular residents of the section turned out one cloudy Monday to see what would happen. Three dyed-in-the-wool-never-been-ridden-before bronchos were turned loose. What happened sent one "Flying A" cowboy to the hospital, but successfully "broke" three of the most vicious bronchos that Montana and Ennie, two "Flying A" riders, had ever been on. Incidently it furnished much amusement to the good citizens of the Rock and increased respect for the camp.

Production No. 113. in charge of producer Wm. Lee, of the American Film Mfg. Co., is the original Jonah, according to members of the company playing in it and the remarkable chain of unfortunate accidents have consistently followed one after another.

There was difficulty in obtaining locations to start with, and the picture was delayed a day because of that. Rain set in and continued for three uninterrupted days. When work was again resumed a chase scene was staged. During the course of the run, Wm. Philby, one of America's most skillful riders slipped from his horse when a hoof caught in a root, throwing Mr. Philby violently to the ground. Before those following could stop, another horse had planted his foot on Mr. Philby's head, resulting in serious injury. Mr. Philby was transported to the St. Francis Hospital, Evanston, Ill., where he has lain for five days without yet recovering consciousness.

In strong contrast to the manner in which some sections of the East treat the advent of a motion picture company, is the reception accorded Director Allan Dawn and his "rancher" players when they reached Santa Barbara recently. Not only did the newspapers say many pleasant things, but the following letter from Director Dawn to the Local Chamber of Commerce shows how well they were made welcome:

"Frank E. Kellogg,
Secretary, Chamber of Commerce,
Santa Barbara, California.

"Dear Sir:—In behalf of the people of my organization and the corporation I represent, I desire to thank you and the varied interests of the Chamber of Commerce for the cordial greetings extended us. We appreciate these courtesies and will endeavor to so conduct ourselves as to make you proud of our advent here. We thank you for your offer of co-operation and will gladly avail ourselves of your assistance whenever the opportunity offers.

"Very respectfully,
"Allan Dawn, Director."

ALEXANDER PHILBY DIES FROM INJURIES

Since receiving the above notes from the American Film Co., we learn with regret that Mr. Alexander Philby has succumbed to his injuries.

Davenport, Ia.—A new moving picture theatre has been opened up here at 324 West Second street by J. Harry Blanchard.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 17.—"It was good to be there," remarked the Big Man with the wilted collar as he shoved the few remaining "Neff for President" badges into his left coat pocket and joined the rush of exhibitors who were congratulating M. A. Neff over his unanimous reelection as President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

And the Big Man with the wilted collar was right. It was good to be there. It was a momentuous convention—the crucial point in the careers of many powerful in pictureland. And the Three Fates spun wisely and well and President Neff will guide the destinies of the ever-growing Exhibitors' League for another year.

* * * *

The fight was to make Neff's election unanimous. In the hotel corridors, where the politics seemingly inseparable to the occasion were discussed, there was never a doubt among those wise in politics but what Neff would be reelected. But would there be a fight? On Sunday and Monday it was a mooted question. But as the list of arrivals swelled, the sentiment became stronger and stronger, and long before names were placed in nomination President Neff's unanimous reelection was not in doubt.

* * * *

The Taft steamroller gathering, the herding of the Bull Moosers and closely following the gathering of the clans of Filmland makes the Windy City a real-for-sure mecca for conventions. Each convention was more or less of a political tinge. The Taft convention of Republicans was a strong-arm issue; the T. R. delegates also played strenuous politics, but the motion picture exhibitors when once a free and undivided expression was gleaned, proved but the gathering of the clans self-centered on honesty of purpose and with every-increasing determination to do honor to the man who had led them from the Wilderness into the Land of Promise and Plenty.

* * * *

In the lobbies of the La Salle, the Grand Pacific, the Congress and other hotels could be seen clusters of men eagerly discussing the chances of their leader. Good-natured be-badged politicians, all, but nevertheless wearing expressions of determination.

In the La Salle lobby the orchestra was playing. There were bright lights and a promenading of the fashionables. Suddenly there is an eddy in the pool of humanity, a craning of necks and the interrogatory whisper that permeates every nook and corner of the immense lobby. The orchestra crashes on unheeded. A half a head taller than any one there can be seen Mr. Neff, accompanied by his efficient and loyal National Secretary C. M. Christensen. The two become the cynosure of all eyes. There is a rush and cheer and Neff's pathway from dining saloon to elevator becomes blocked. Men and women seek to shake his hand. He is given love-pats on the shoulders by admiring exhibitors. It's an ovation; a handshaking bee. "It's Neff, the exhibitors' friend," is the cry.

The picture is not exaggerated. It is a conservative account of the oft-repeated scene in and near the La Salle headquarters of the President of the National League.

We saw such a scene on a minor scale, occur in the lobby of the Grand Pacific. A handsome man wearing a broad-brimmed hat pushed his way through a crowd of blue-badged delegates. "Saunders, Saunders," went up the shout. A greeting free and unaffected—a joyful greeting. It was a spontaneous testimonial to Alfred H. Saunders, known to the rank and file of Filmland as "The Exhibitors' Friend." The News editor was surrounded by his friends and his hand repeatedly shaken. His advice was sought on many important matters and his suggestions, while never forced forward, were always given freely. With the exception of President Neff, delegates to the Chicago convention will tell you, should you ask any of them, that Alfred H. Saunders proved the Johnson to Neff's Roosevelt. He threw his own interests aside and worked day and night for the man in whom he saw the great leader, the great friend, and the great protector of the moving picture exhibitor.

We saw delegations from two eastern states follow Saunders to the Grand Pacific Hotel, and open headquarters near his apartments, so as to be near him and to seek his advice on what was then believed to be a coming battle against the exhibitors' best interests. We can assert frankly, and whatever is in store for A. H. Saunders, he can rest assured of the loyalty and esteeem of the rank and file in Filmland. It is a mighty honor. We have attended many a political convention, state and national, and we only find such esteem held by those who are not self-seeking and who believe their mission is to help their fellow men. It must be gratifying to Neff and Saunders to receive such testimonials of respect and confidence from the men they are trying to help. It is gratifying; otherwise they would not be human beings.

* * * *

Thirty-six hours before the roll call, we were shown the probable line-up of delegates. Friends of Mr. Neff and of the league had sounded sentiment throughout the country and had circulated among the exhibitors and others on the ground. The old political attempt to damn with faint praise was tried. It failed. The old game of the avowed enemies of the presidential candidate, flamboyantly rushing to his standard was pushed and it likewise failed. Forewarned is forearmed and it was a conclusion shortly before the convention was called to order that Mr. Neff would be elected, and, through him, the exhibitors would be triumphant.

President Neff was in doubt as to his unanimous reelection the Sunday night preceding the convention. He knew he deserved it and as a fight he would try for the unanimous endorsement, but he feared that political maneuvers against him had borne fruit and that he was to be punished for his courage and fairness in league legislation. He informed Mr. Saunders of his misgivings. "Neff, you will be elected and elected unanimously. We are here to see to that," said Saunders.

The poll was again scanned, all state delegations checked and then came the work that put President Neff once again into office, with the whoop and the hurrah that he certainly deserved.

* * * *

The game, in the opinion of more than one political wiseacre, is this: Knowing that the sentiment was too much to attempt to stem at this time, certain enemies of the exhibitors who are ever growing in power under wise leadership, are content to wait until the next national convention when a real battle royal will be waged. This is not visionary talk but the gospel truth. In the meantime, lines will be laid, emissaries will slip here and there, and lay the ground work for the coming conflict. It behooves exhibitors having their best interests at heart to be vigilant and to be wise. Be fair and just to manufacturers, exchanges and to yourselves. But keep one eye open. It's just the old story of The Powers That Prey. They would rule or ruin. Shall the Powers That Prey rule or shall they ruin? They will do neither one, if the common everyday exhibitor is ready and loyal.

Verily, Neff, Bryan and Roosevelt have somewhat similar fields in which to work.

* * * *

"The national officers asked no one for a five cent piece. The Chicago convention committee solicited the funds on their own responsibility," said President Neff in an authorized interview. "Messrs. Christensen and Neff have done the work; have had to dig even into their own pockets for the dimes and dollars and every card has been played face up. The national officers want to be friendly with all, and appreciate contributions, but we never asked a manufacturer for a cent. Organization provides a way to bring about education for exhibitors."

President Neff's statements were brought about from the fact that the official program failed to carry the names of the national committee of the league and boomed an opposition candidate for president. The program was the size of a Century dictionary and was attractive.

Convention Sidelights

Stan Twist, official dopester of the Selig Co., certainly did things up brown. On Wednesday evening, August 14, at the Union Restaurant, he entertained the scribes in a lavish manner, and "The Pleas of the Diamond Dopester" will long be remembered by those fortunate in receiving invitations. Admittance to the Chicago Press Club, where conveniences were afforded active writers, was also appreciated by visitors. Long may Twist wave, and like Oliver Twist, we want more of him.

* * * *

Both factions are promising to bring our films under the Bison brand. Joe Brandt, spokesman for the Universal, stated in the La Salle Hotel that the Universal was going to put Bisons on the market. Exhibitors may get between the devil and the deep blue sea before the question is threshed out.

* * * *

Mrs. Schmitz, delegate from Ohio, and who owns one of the best conducted theatres in Cleveland, was early on the ground. She stopped at the Grand Pacific. She is a woman of extraordinary ability in Picture Land, and the industry needs more like her. She participated actively in all the proceedings.

* * * *

Neil G. Caward, editor of the Photoplay Magazine, is a royal good fellow and is making hay with that bright journal of his. The Photoplay has well appointed offices and the many exhibitors who called there were royally received. Mr. Caward is a versatile editor, having all strings to the game at his finger ends.

Banners, canes and bands accompanied the special train of exhibitors from good old Cincinnati. Who were they for. Guess again. When those boys arrived, there was nothing to it, but Neff.

* * * *

J. S. McQuade, Chicago trade journal correspondent, is a good man in the right place. He has well appointed offices and extended many courtesies to visiting writers.

* * * *

Manager R. R. Nehls, of the American Co, has palatial offices in the Ashland Block. He is a very busy man, having the affairs of a large concern upon his shoulders, but he found time to extend a cordial welcome to many visitors convention week. The trip to the new American plant was enjoyed and appreciated by the exhibitors.

* * * *

The Selig Co. entertained exhibitors at the big plant where refreshments were served and the visitors saw themselves in a moving picture before they went home.

* * * *

Among those seen circulating in the convention throngs were: L. A. Woodward, manager Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.; Fred A. Clark, Motiongraph; G. A. Robinson, manager Colonial Theatre, West Hoboken, N. J.; Joe Brandt, Universal Film Co.; David Horsely, Nestor Film Co.; S. E. Morris, president Cleveland Local No. 1, Motion Picture League of America; Clem Kerr, official organizer Ohio Motion Picture League; F. W. Swett, representing Nicholas Power Co., New York; F. J. Beecroft, New York Dramatic Mirror; S. Franklin, Arrow Moving Picture Co., New York; D. B. Baker, Western Film Brokers, Chicago; Val Rayburg, president Interstate Exhibitors' Advertising League Co., Dayton, O.; T. A. Keppler, Counselor-at-lay, Broadway, New York; W. B. Malcolm, Kedzie Amusement Co., Chicago.

NEW THEATRE INSTALLATIONS FURNISHED BY HALLBERG

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the sale of a large 60 a m p. Hallberg A. C. to D. C. Economizer to the Lyceum Theater, New London, Conn. Also a Simplex moving picture machine to Mozart Theater, Elmira, N. Y.; a Powers No. 6A, with Hallberg A. C. Economizer and full line of supplies, to the Dixie Theater, Prospect avenue, Bronx, N. Y.; an Edison Model B. machine to the Scenic Theater, Willimantic, Conn.

THANHOUSER CAMERA BATTERIES CAPTURE "THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK"

Scenes and Incidents Attending Recent Connecticut Maneuvers Faithfully Reproduced In One Reel Motion Picture

Thanhouser Company have come to acquire a reputation as filmers of timely topics, and in line with that reputation they announce a feature founded on the big war game. The picture bears the captivating title, "The Capture of New York."

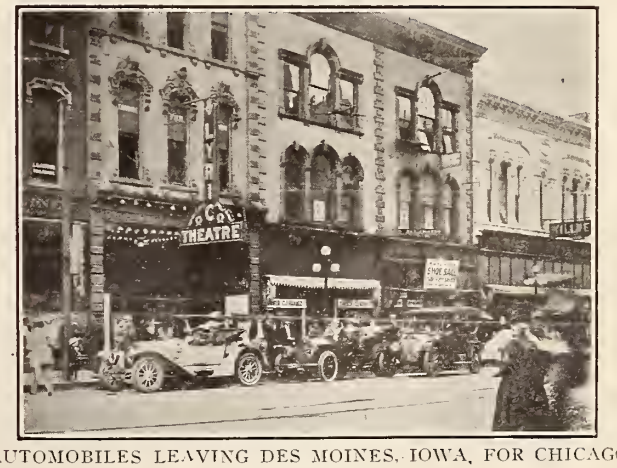
This subject shows scenes attending the attempted capture of New York by the Red army in the recent maneuvers in Connecticut, and is complete in one reel. Twenty thousand men participated in the attack, and the Blue army was steadly driven back to the great city it was defending, stubbornly contesting the ground at every retreating step. All the different forces that made up the victorious Red army are shown in action in the film. The whole picture is very realistic. The Thanhouser "war correspondents," according to the finished film, stuck close to the battlefield and got some fine close-up views of the fighting. It is the kind of stuff that makes you change your mind about wanting to be a soldier! The picture starts with the transporting of cavalry, and their preparations to move to New Canaan. Then Section A of the Aerial Squadron is shown sending out wireless messages. You see a wireless field set and the hangars of the Aerial Squadron. Some of the other scenes show: Installing wireless apparatus on Burgess Wright's aeroplane in the Aerial Squadron. Aviator Lieutenant Milling, U. S. A., and his Curtiss machine. Cavalry division of Blue army. Cavalry on "hike" in heavy marching order. Rear guard of cavalry division leaving camp. Officers' mess "Camp canaries." Army cook tent at a busy hour. "Roast beef for dinner!" "Making himself comfortable." "A little game of black-jack." "His own tailor." General Tasker Bliss' headquarters. Aviator N. Y. N. G. Beckwith Havens in Curtiss machine. Lieutenant Milling coming down. Aviator Havens landing after flight. Havens and Milling taken after landing. Aviator at work. In addition to the wireless and aeroplane views, the use of the army automobile is also demonstrated. Finally the fight commences and the camera takes you after the Red army in their pursuit of the Blues. The battlefield scenes are remarkably clear and in nowise obstructed with smoke as in the case of many scenes of this nature filmed heretofore. The release date is Sunday, September 1.

Amsterdam, N. Y.—Rex Moving Picture Theatre has been sold to Frank H. Christman.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Mozart moving picture theatre has opened.

Elgin, Ill.—James R. O'Beirne has leased the Star Theatre and will open shortly.

Pulaski, N. Y.—The Dreamland Theatre has been sold to Earl L. Brown and Ross L. Simons.



AUTOMOBILES LEAVING DES MOINES, IOWA, FOR CHICAGO CONVENTION

UNCLE'S FAVORITE PUDDING

By Virginia West

(Adapted from Lux Release)

A grown person will usually accept a great deal from children of whom he is very fond, even though those things reach the point of disrespect.

So it was with Mr. John Long. He was very, very fond of good things to eat and his nephews and nieces nicknamed him Uncle Greedy, when they were quite small. He loved them in his gruff, peculiar way, and didn't mind at all being called greedy so long as he had something to eat that he considered worthy of being greedy with.

Now, Uncle Greedy could have all the nice things to eat that he wanted. Why? Because he had a very great deal of money.

The nephews and nieces knew this and knowing the old man's peculiarities, thought it always best to be on the good side of Uncle Greedy.

When they did this their hopes for the future were stronger.

It had been so long since Uncle had been nicknamed that no one remembered just when and where it originated.

One nephew in particular was Uncle Greedy fond of. He was the oldest, and from his uncle's treatment of him he had every reason to believe that the will would be of great benefit to him.

Yet the nephew and his family were sometimes nervous over the matter. They never knew just when Uncle Greedy would take a fancy to some new church or become greatly interested in some charitable organization.

So, of course, when Uncle Greedy came for a meal, they always tried to have something especially good.

One day he sent word that he would be up to dinner that day. A family council was held to decide what to have for dinner. Each member suggested, and the menu was completed with the exception of the dessert.

"Now, let us find a dessert he has never eaten," said Mrs. Brown, the nephew's wife.

So they thought and they thought, but everything that came to their minds they had fed Uncle Greedy before.

"Let's ask Mary," suggested Lily, the daughter.

"The very idea;" and away they went to the kitchen.

"Sure, I know a good dessert," Mary announced when consulted.

"What is it? Something Uncle Greedy has never eaten?"

"It's huckleberry puddin', but such a puddin' you never et."

Such was the faith of the family in Mary's judgment in the culinary line that they felt satisfied that all would be well. Beside they knew from long experience that it would not do to question Mary too much. If she happened to take a notion she would refuse to cook anything but what she chose. She had been in the family for years, and her services were so valuable that the whole family bowed in deference to her.

Uncle Greedy came to dinner. He ate long and happily. All the family did their best to please him, for always, even unconsciously to them, they had in their minds thoughts of the future—and Uncle Greedy's pocketbook.

At last came the dessert. A steaming pudding, rich yellow, dotted with fine juicy huckleberries, and all over the top a mass of beautiful creamed butter sauce.

Uncle Greedy ate one piece and smacked his lips. Then he ate another—and another. "How do you make this delicious pudding?" he asked.

"I don't know exactly, but I can find out. Mary made it," answered Mrs. Brown.

"Well," said Uncle Greedy, "I don't know who Mary is, but I do know one thing, if she will marry me, she needs only to name the day."

"Oh, Uncle, you couldn't," exclaimed Lily. "Mary is the cook."

Uncle Greedy lowered his head and looked over his glasses at the young girl across the table. "And why not, my dear young woman?" he asked.

"Why—a—why—because she's the cook."

"Well, a cook, my girl, is a very necessary person—very. And a cook who can make such a pudding is a very valuable person."

"But," insisted Lily, "you couldn't marry her."

"I could," answered Uncle Greedy, "if she would have me."

By this time the whole family were almost in a panic. They knew that when Uncle Greedy said anything in that tone of voice he meant it. They were horror struck at the thoughts of the old man bringing a cook into the family, but it must be confessed that the idea of his money leaving it was still more shocking.

When the coffee was finished, Uncle Greedy leaned back in his chair, with a deep sigh of joy. "Now, I shall approach her," he said, pulling down his waistcoat—or attempting to do so—as he arose.

"Which way? Which way to milady's bower?" he declaimed.

"There," said Mrs. Brown, nodding toward the kitchen. "But, Uncle, think a while."

"I have thought, I have felt, and I know. I go to her."

With a flourish he strode from the room. Groans broke from the several members of the family.

"Oh, surely he couldn't," exclaimed Mrs. Brown.

"It's awful," wept Lily.

"He's an old fool," growled the nephew.

"Ah, we don't want his dirty money anyhow," said the son, vehemently.

"Charles," cried the mother, "you know we are thinking of no such thing."

"All right, but let's see what he's doing."

Charles arose and tiptoed to the door. Mother, father, and sister followed. Slowly the young man opened the door an inch and all four arranged themselves along the crack.

In the middle of the kitchen, his handkerchief upon the floor and his knee upon his handkerchief, was Uncle Greedy. Both arms were extended upward toward Mary, who stood wiping her face on her apron, as she stood looking down upon her suitor.

"My queen, my angel, come and be my wife and make huckleberry pudding for me and you shall have whatever your heart desireth. Wilt come, beauteous one?"

"If ye don't git up ye'll need somebody to iron yer pants fer ye," said Mary. "The puddin' musta gone to yer head—though I must say it don't look like it's no wheres but the right spot."

"That's it—right spot. Oh, your words are as sweet as your pudding," Uncle Greedy exclaimed, with his hand on his heart.

"Will you be mine?" he insisted.

"Get up, you——" Mary stopped short. She had seen the row of agonized faces along the crack of the door. "Well," she said, sweetly, "I think I better take a little while to consider."

Uncle Greedy went home, happy in the hope of future puddings. But, alas, the poor nephew and his family! Week after week they worked constantly to please Mary in every detail. They feared if they crossed her she would marry Uncle Greedy to spite them.

Mary saw her opportunity and began to take advantage of it by demanding two days out a week. Then a friend wanted her to go on an all-day picnic. Much company was had every evening. Finally she announced that she needed a rest and that she preferred to take it right there at home. So, of course, the family had to do the work while Mary rested.

It was a very short time until Mary was sitting in the parlor doing fancy work, while the family labored over the kitchen stove.

After this had been going on for some time, Uncle Greedy appeared upon the scene. "My treasure," he cried, when he saw Mary in the parlor. "Now you can give me my answer and make me another pudding."

"I ain't got no answer ready yit, and I ain't goin' to make no puddin'," answered Mary as she leaned back in a Morris chair.

"My darling, what is wrong?" cried Uncle Greedy.

Mary rolled her eyes and tapped her toe on the parlor carpet, but said nothing.

All this time Lily had been secretly at work. At every opportunity she stole quietly to the kitchen and searched —searched diligently for the pudding recipe. So faithful were her efforts that on this particular day when Uncle Greedy sat down at the table, crestfallen and discouraged, she came in at the end of the salad course with a steaming huckleberry pudding.

With one bound Uncle Greedy was on his feet and had his young niece around the waist. "My dear little Lily," he cried, "you are an angel and you shall surely be my heir."

"And Mary?" asked Lily.

"Who? Oh, Mary. I don't need her; I have the pudding. A pudding without a wife is better than a wife without a pudding—if it's huckleberry."

The next day Mary was working silently in her kitchen. That night as she laid her head on an uniformed breast, she sighed, "My Wilsie, I wouldn't give yer handsome face and broad blue breast fer all the big-stomached old men with money in the whole land."

OPERATORS' CHAT

By James Girvan

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE OPERATORS' INDEPENDENT UNION NO. 1

President—Robert Goldblatt.
Vice-President—James Girvan.
Corresponding Secretary—Geo. Epstein.
Financial Secretary—Robt. Levy.
Sergeant-at-Arms—William Cohen.
Business Representative—R. Knaster.

The Moving Picture Operators' Association will be known in the future as the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Independent Union No. 1., office 133 Third avenue (top floor), telephone Stuyvesant 572. Meeting rooms at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street, N. Y. City. Open meetings every Monday night until September 16.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union of Greater New York held their third open meeting on Monday night, August 19, 1912, to a very good attendance, at Teutonia Hall, 66 Essex street. President Goldblatt called the meeting to order at 1:15 a. m., and explained to the visitors what the object of the meeting was and asked if any of those present wished to talk or ask questions.

Quite a number of brilliant speakers took this opportunity to tell the former auxiliary members what a wise move they had made, and that any time the independent union needed any information or assistance, it would be gladly forthcoming. They also assured us that there would be no necessity to make a request the second time. It was also decided to hold a smoker on Monday night, September 16, 1912, at Volks Lyceum, 2d street near Avenue B, which will mark the end of the open meetings. This smoker is certainly going to be one grand affair. There will be a few bouts to interest those who enjoy boxing. There will also be some of the finest professional talent that ever trod the stage, some of the latest moving pictures, and last but not least, something which will greatly interest all, plenty to eat, drink and smoke.

The treasurer reports that receipts are coming in steadily now. The membership at the present time numbers 307 in good standing, with 59 applications to be considered. Our former delegate Robert Saunders has resigned from office to take a position as manager in this city; and Brother Ralph Knaster has been appointed in his stead pro tem. The meeting was adjourned at 3:30 a. m.

* * * *

New York, Aug. 19, 1912.

To the Motion Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada.

Brothers: Can any of you explain to me the reason why the A. F. of L. should grant jurisdiction over the motion picture operator to the I. A. T. S. E. of United States and Canada?

Why can we not control ourselves, subject only to supervision of the A. F. of L.?

Why should the I. A. T. S. E., with a total membership of under 13,000, control the motion picture machine operators of whom there are between 15,000 and 20,000 in the United States alone?

You must have more or less brains to operate a picture machine.

The ushers can and frequently do run a spotlight. Are you, or are you not, in favor of National Autonomy?

Why should we in case of stress or strike protect the I. A. T. S. E. when the best we get (to say the least) is the worst of it, in the majority of cases?

Now, I respectfully request every operator to write me stating his views on the subject of National Autonomy for the motion picture machine operators. I ask this of each operator for the reason that Bro. Robt. Goldblatt and myself have been delegated to visit the Hon. Samuel Gompers, worthy President of the A. F. of L., with a view to obtaining National Autonomy or Home Rule for the motion picture machine operators of the United States and Canada.

If there is or are one or more houses in your city, town or village, kindly get the signature of the operator on a petition to the A. F. of L. for National Autonomy and mail to,

Yours fraternally,
W. D. Chaney,
432 E. 149th Street,
New York City.

* * * *

A new union was recently added to the list of Rochester local unions in the organization on July 15 of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union. The new local comprises 38 members, all but two in the city, and it was organised for the purpose of preventing fires and also to aid in the enforcement of the State license law. This law provides that no one under age shall be given a license to operate a motion picture machine.

The local is No. 253, and is affiliated with the International Union of Theatrical Stage Employes and also with the American Federation of Labor. The local officers are as follows: President, R. J. Fisher; vice-president, Louis Miles; financial secretary, Frank Generoux; recording secretary, Albert Florick; treasurer, F. Tross; business agent, E. H. Spears. The meeting place of the local is Painters' Hall, 42 Exchange street.

* * * *

We are pleased to see that the I. A. T. S. E. has been fair to the operators in one city at least. The Rochester boys have been given a charter and they only have thirty-eight members. How ridiculous it seems that an international body could issue a charter to a membership of thirty-eight, and refuse to give a charter to a body of three hundred and eighty of good standing in the I. A. T. S. E., who have been forced to stay for five years under the jurisdiction of a local which is greatly inferior. Were it not for the unfairness of Local 35 there would be only one union in New York City with a membership of one thousand or over, instead of two separate organizations.

THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION WILL OPEN AN OFFICE IN MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Mr. Benjamin N. Judell has left the Milwaukee office of the Western Film Exchange to take charge of this new exchange. He left Milwaukee on Tuesday, Aug. 20. Mr. Judell is familiarly known throughout the film world as "Benny," and has been in charge of the booking department at the Western Film Exchange since its start. He has a reputation as a booking agent which is hard to beat. It was in fact the quality of the programs that he sent out that built up the large business the Western Film Exchange at present commands.

Mr. Judell, while at Minneapolis, will book the Film Supply and Mutual program, the latter which releases "101" Bison, Broncho and Keystone. Minnesota exhibitors are invited to visit Mr. Judell when they are in Minneapolis, while those that cannot come to the office are requested to get into communication with Mr. Judell as he promises to have something very interesting to tell them.

"THELMA"

(Reliance 3 Reel)

The filming of Marie Corelli's great novel, by the Reliance Company, is in every way an artistic production, and one that does credit not alone to the firm of Reliance, but to the moving picture trade in general.

Alice Weeks, a clever young motion picture actress, takes the female lead, while an old favorite, formerly of Pathe Freres, and seen a short time ago to such splendid advantage in the champion production of "Camille," Irving Cummings takes the male lead, Sir Philip Errington. Joseph Chaillis plays the father of Thelma, Olaf Guldmar; Lady Clara Winsleigh is taken by Marguerita Dwight; Sir Francis Lennox by Georgio Majeroni; Violet Vere by Edgena Delespino; Luisa Elsland by Julia R. Hurley; Britta, her maid, by Virginia Westbrooke; Sigurd, a dwarf, by Robert Sansey.

The story has that peculiar weird strain running through it which characterizes Marie Corelli's works. The opening scene in the filmed version shows Philip Errington, a rich young Englishman, repulsing the love of a young woman named Clara Winsleigh, which she persists in forcing upon him. Bored to desperation, he sets sail for Norway, where he meets Thelma, a beautiful Norse maiden, the daughter of Olaf Guldmar. Most picturesque is the scene of the rustic cabin of the old Norseman, with the trailing vines brilliant with blossoms festooning its entrance, the cabin where Philip wins the love of Thelma, and where, with her father's consent, she accepts his proposal to become his wife, and from whence he takes her to London after marriage and introduces her to his society friends. Her first appearance is at a ball given by Lady Clara Winsleigh.

A friend of Errington's has married a stage dancer named Violet Vere. A misunderstanding has arisen, and the husband begs Errington to reason with her in his behalf, which he does. A letter which is written by the actress to her husband works itself into the possession of Lady Clara, and she gives it to Thelma, making it appear that the letter was written to Philip. Thelma, thinking that her husband has tired of her, leaves London, alone, and returns to the house of her father.

A double grief comes to Thelma, when her father, falling sick, believes he sees the Valkyrie, knowing that he is about to die, and orders that he be placed in his boat, that it be set afire, and sent adrift on the ocean, that he may die as did his forefathers. Beset by troubles, Thelma loses her reason, but is restored to her normal self at sight of Philip, who rushes to Norway to her home.

There are many tragic situations throughout the story, for instance, when Sigurd, the dwarf boy, who has been the almost constant companion of Thelma before her marriage, tries to kill Philip in a jealous rage, or when the minister, who also is in love with Thelma, lures her to his home by means of a forged letter, from whence she is rescued by Britta, her maid, and Philip's friend, Duprez.

The film has many beautiful scenic bits, as well as a splendid characterization of the parts.

SHOW ON, BACK WITH PICTURES

Jay Hunt, the moving picture director whom many friends were surprised to learn through these columns was a burlesque "magnate," has finished rehearsals of his Western wheel show, "Queens of the Folies Bergere," and sent it out on the burlesque circuits. Upon doing this, Mr. Hunt rejoined the Thanhouser Company as producers, from which post he had been absent for a month while "putting on" his wheel attraction.

The "Animated Weekly" (issue No. 24), released by Universal Film Co. August 21st, has the following subjects:

A Meal Under Water.—Depicting the strange feat of eating a lunch and smoking a cigar entirely submerged. Thrilling Aeroplane Flight.—Grahame-White's, England's foremost aviator and society favorite, fly at Manchester. Fighting the Flames.—Heroic efforts of the New York Fire Department in quenching a disastrous fire on the Hudson River docks. A Trackless Trolley.—Unique means of transit in actual operation in Pasedena, California. Death Defying Feat.—Law, the Steeplejack, climbs the outside of a twenty story Wall street skyscraper, reaching the eighteenth story, where he was stopped by the police. The King's Prize.—The famous "Bisley Shoot" which decides the champion sharpshooter in the British Empire. Private A. G. Fulton, the winner. National Convention Motion Picture Exhibitors.—Representative Motion Picture Exhibitors from every state in the Union convene in Chicago. Society Flower Girls.—Pretty Chicago society girls sell flowers on the street for charity. Army Attacks New York.—20,000 troops of the regular army and National guard in a sham attack on New York City.

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK. Solax release of September 4th.

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK

Bert Green is an agent for the Government on Mexican territory, buying Mexican-bred horses. He meets the beautiful daughter of Jose, a horse dealer, and falls in love with her. Although Juanita has encouraged the attentions of Pedro, she casts the latter off most cruelly when Bert comes into her life.

Pedro is vindictive. With the assistance of a servant he manages to surprise Bert and Juanita at a clandestine meeting. While Bert temporarily leaves the scene the spying Mexicans come on, throw a blanket over the surprised girl and carry her off. Bert soon returns, sees signs of a struggle and follows the trail made by the abductors.

After a long hunt he finds Pedro's shack in the mountains. He acts quickly, but a false step gives the advantage to Pedro. The girl thinks rapidly. She comes to her lover's aid by breaking the lamp. Then there is a struggle in the dark. Two shots are fired. Soon Bert draws a deep breath, sits on the edge of a table, rolls a cigarette and lights it; while in the shadow is the dead body of Pedro. Bert and Juanita leave the shack and see a stage coach approaching. Bert decides to cross the Mexican border before he is captured by a Mexican posse, and so holds up the stage, tells Juanita to get in and drives off like fury.

Soon after he is pursued by the Mexicans, but he eludes them by throwing the stage coach over a cliff and finds temporary safety in the canebrakes until he is rescued by Texas rangers sent to his aid by a little girl.

The action is replete with sensational incidents, riding and driving by experts, and tense dramatic situations. Released September 4.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A moving picture theatre will be built at Franklin and Clearfield streets for the Philadelphia Film Exchange.

General Film Publicity and Sales Co.'s Next Production Hindered by Illness of Nat C. Goodwin

The results of the unfortunate accident to Nat C. Goodwin, are, we understand, quite as serious as previously reported, and it is feared that his permanent recovery will require some little time, as well as patience and endurance.

Incorporated in our information, to which we are indebted to the General Film Publicity and Sales Co., comes the news that the next big production which is to be put out by them, and in which Mr. Goodwin is the star, will, in consequence of his accident, be somewhat delayed.

THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS
Eclair release Sept. 3rd.

MOTION PICTURE MEN SUED AS A TRUST

Government Will Test Companies' Patents in Suit Under the Sherman Act

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—The Federal Government attacked the so-called Moving Picture Trust in a civil suit filed here to-day for the dissolution of the Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Company. Ten prominent moving picture film concerns are accused of combining to monopolize the business, even to the extent of increasing or decerasing the number of motion-picture theatres, in which they have no proprietary interest.

The following corporations and individuals, who are officers or directors, are named as defendants:

Motion Picture Patents Company, General Film Company, Biograph Company, Thomas A. Edison, Inc.; Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, the Kalem Company, Inc.; George Kleine, Lubin Manufacturing Company, Melies Manufacturing Company, Pathe Freres, the Selig Polyscope Company, the Vitagraph Company of America, Armat Moving Picture Company, Frank L. Dyer, Henry N. Marvin, J. J. Kennedy, William Pelzer, Samuel Long, J. A. Berst, Siegmund Lubin, Gaston Melies, Albert E. Smith, George K. Spoor, and W. N. Selig.

The Government charges that unreasonable and oppressive restraints and conditions have been arbitrarily imposed on the manufacture and leasing of films and machines, depriving the public of the advantages of competition, especially the competition of foreign films, the importation of which is alleged to be restricted.

The Government's petition says that between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 feet of pictures are printed each week by manufacturers and distributed to thousands of exhibitors all over the United States. The Government declares that a sum greatly in excess of $100,000,000 has been invested in the different branches of the business. The defendants control, it is added, from 70 to 80 per cent. of the film business, furnishing approximately 7,000 exhibitors.

The Motion Picture Patents Company is the holding company of all the motion picture patents of the defendants. Other than collecting and distributing royalties among the defendants, the bill says the patents company's only business is the bringing of lawsuits under the patents it holds. Hundreds of suits have been brought, it is alleged, "to harass and oppress all persons engaged in the motion picture business who have not obeyed its mandates."

BIG THINGS COMING ON THE GAUMONT WEEKLY

The Gaumont Weekly camera men are just now covering, in their usual expert manner, the great military maneuvers around New York City and in Michigan, the elaborate water carnival in Chicago and the frontier warfare near El Paso, Texas. All these hightly interesting topics will be fully treated in early numbers of the Gaumont Weekly. Most of them will be seen on no other film.

The Gaumont Weekly regularly receives the largest consignments of foreign subjects brought into this country. Its camera men cover all important events in England, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan and China. It has recently placed a camera man in Manila, and has completed arrangements for fully covering South America.

The Gaumont Weekly is issued in connection with the Gaumont Graphic, of London and Paris, with which it has a rapid exchange of negatives. From its European branches it secures exclusive stories completely out of reach of other topical film manufacturers. This was recently incidenced by the intensely interesting film covering the Imperial Festival in Moscow, in which the Czar and Czarina repeatedly posed exclusively and expressly for The Gaumont Weekly. In the current issue are presented poses from the leading American victors at the Olympic games and is the first current event film in America to present these views. Early in October it will present the most perfect pictures of the Japanese Mikado's funeral in Tokio that will reach this country. Its camera men are already on the ground. This, the most elaborate display of gorgeously barbaric splendor in current history, will be photographed as no similar event has ever been pictorially recorded before.

ECLAIR NOTES

If there has been a drought of comedies, as in the hue and cry of most, surely it hasn't extended to the Eclair company, for they seem to have them a plenty.

In "The Guest at the Parsonage" they utilize a very familiar type of persons. That type that advertises it is a charitable society and who eternally attends to the blazoning of their gifts.

A minister and his old college chum argue as to the sincerity of the charitable society. The chum offers an auto to any member who in a month of time can perform a real act of charity. Some one wins, but she is not a member of the charitable society.

The work of Mr. Johnstone as the wealthy bachelor friend ranks with that of any picture celebrity on either side of the fence.

Eclair's "The Actress Pulls the Strings," released September 3d, is a picture preachment done in that most poignant manner of using a comedy in its telling.

One big moral underlies the whole story. It warns against quick or prejudiced judgment and uses a mighty striking example to present its moral.

An actress arrives at a small summer hotel, and with her is her trunk. Common to her profession it is plainly marked "Theatre," so the highly respectable women about the hotel, acting upon the rule that those of the stage aren't eligible to the inner shrine of cultivated people, snub and ignore her just because of her profession.

But surreptitiously the men folk try to make a hit with her, because she is an actress.

She angers at their insolent reception and from anger is born a plan of revenge. She pretends to leave the hotel and returns in the disguise of an old maid missionary. As a missionary she becomes an idol of attention to the women and an undesirable to the men.

The way she drives home her lesson is too good to disclose here, nor would it be fair to tell it.

FILMS UNDER COPYRIGHT

Bill Protecting Moving Pictures by That Law Passes Congress

Washington, Aug. 19.—The Senate passed to-day the House bill putting moving pictures under the distinct protection of the copyright laws of the United States.

Instead of providing for a fine for each moving picture which infringes another, the bill provides that in case of an innocent infringement the total amount of damages shall not exceed $100.

New York, N. Y.—The Broncho Motion Picture Company, to conduct the moving picture business. Capital, $10,000. Directors: Carl A. Willat, 32 West Eleventh street; Howard T. Woods, 568 East Twenty-sixth street, New York City, and Charles Von Weyke, 54 Ralph avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE DISPUTED CLAIM
Majestic Release, August 27

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Lux

"Views of Livran," for August 23, is a beautiful scenic bit, pleasing to all.

"Uncle's Favorite Pudding," on the same reel is a comedy which is quite acceptable in its production, although the story is out of reason in everyday life. However if we are to have comedy of the farce order, we must forget reason, and be prepared to laugh at foolish nothings.

"Tommy Saves His Little Sister," for August 16th, is a drama in which two more of our child actors make a hit. Tommy's little sister is carried off by a burglar. When his father and the detectives start out to hunt for her, Tommy hangs on to the back of the auto, determined to be in on the rescue, which he sure enough is, for when the others jump out looking for a cue, he jumps in, and Mr. Burglar, coming along at the time, seeing what he thinks an empty auto, whisks it and Tommy, hiding in the bottom of the machine, off to his haunts; Tommy follows him up the steps of the house, sees his little sister within and afterwards rescues her.

"The Modern Child," from Lux, is a very commendable child story. It is a notable fact that the Lux people have some exceedingly clever children in their employ.

Comet

"The House of No Children," for August 19th, is a film which it might be well for some New York landlords to peruse. The story is of a janitor of an apartment, who in trying to follow out his instructions with regard to the exclusion of families with children, becomes so upset over prevailing circumstances that his dreams are disturbed to the extent that he leaves his position in that particular house, for another one where children are not restricted, and there he seeks to make amends for his past cruel conduct by surrounding himself with children whenever possible.

American

"The Greaser and the Weakling," is an exceedingly good "western." The story is possible. The love-making may be a little too rapid in its development, but this is only a trifle, for on an exception such things happen in real life. And surely the audience will applaud when the villain falls.

"The Winning of Wathena," for August 24th, is a story that is entertaining, though not one that takes a great hold on one. It is a simple little love story of a young girl who was kidnapped by the Indians.

"The Will of James Waldron," for August 29th, is one of the most acceptable of recent American releases, where a contrast between the villain and the man of noble character is so marked as to be of use as a lesson in morals and gallantry.

"A Jealous Rage," for August 28th, is also a good study in human nature, although its moral significance may not be sufficiently clear.

"Freaky Rides at Luna Park," on the same reel is thoroughly breezy and suggestive of gay old "Coney."

Reliance

"One Against One," for August 21st, is centred about the love story of a Northwest mounted policeman, and was produced by the Reliance Company in the Catskills, and is specially pleasing in that the locations chosen for its production are most picturesque.

Gaumont

"Androclus and the Lion" is a wonderful film. Artistic in the extreme. It is one of Gaumont's beautiful hand-colored productions, and although the reel is not one of great length it is full of tense situations that keep one's pulses beating ahead of time.

Majestic

"A Corner on Kisses," for August 25th, is a light romance which is very pleasing—a good bit of diversion for a warm Summer day.

Lubin

"The Deputy's Peril," is a detective story of the discovery of counterfeit money coiners. This film is full of thrills and is of more than passing interest.

"Baseball Industry," for August 15th, is a cracker-jack for the "fans." It shows the manufacture of the baseball in all its different stages, topping the thing off with pictures of a few favorites of the bat, such as Eddie Collins, Frank Baker, Rube Oldring, Cy Morgan, John Coombs, Jack Lapp, Schaffaer, of the Washingtons, and several others. The last lick of the camera shows the team in action.

Vitagraph

"A Bogus Napoleon," for August 16th, is a comedy-drama in which the real Napoleon of the story is one of the best impersonations that we have ever seen.

Selig

"In the Tents of the Asra," for August 15th, is a 1,000-foot drama of more than passing merit. It is a beautiful tented production, artistically produced. A production through which one is glad to sit a second time.

Essanay

"The Magic Wand," a 1,000-foot "juvenile," for August 16th, is particularly commendable. So far as the action of the piece is concerned there is nothing left to be desired. It is a pure, sweet touching bit that grips the heart until the tears flow.

Eclair

"Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry," released May 20th, is one of the best comedies we have seen for some time. It is real fun without the appearance of the writer or the players having worked overtime to get in the comedy.

The story centers around the adventures of a young man whose aunt finding that he was spending too much, threatened to cut down his allowance if he did not marry immediately. After discussing the matter with a friend, he sends her word that he has done the trick. The aunt telegraphs back that she will be in town to see her new niece that night. The young man has only an hour in which to get the necessary article, a wife. He makes several unsuccessful attempts to get a wife, after which he insists that his chum, a young married man, play the part. The chum steals his wife's clothes and false hair in her absence, which occasions on her return a hunt for the missing articles by a policeman. The rest of the fun can be imagined.

Gem

"White Dove's Sacrifice," is an exceedingly good drama released Aug. 20th. It is the story of the love of an Indian girl, and is one of the best of the kind that has recently been shown.

Majestic

"The Disputed Claim," the scenario of which has been written by Marion Brooks, makes a very pretty film. It is a mining story, and to those who have actually lived in a mining country, staked a claim, or men fortunate enough to be able to locate the pay streak, there may be a few details lacking, but to the uneducated in mining essentials it is certainly satisfactory.

Pathé's Weekly

The following are a few of the interesting events filmed for this week's issue: "The King and Queen are received at Wild Park, Berlin, Germany"; "Federal Cooperage Co.'s plant at Yonkers, N. Y., destroyed by fire; $150,000 damages"; "Moscow, Russia, International Firemen's Federation held here this year"; "The Delegates to the 'Bull Moose' Convention at Chicago; Suffragettes, etc., join in nominating Roosevelt for third term"; "Mlle. Dorgen, a French actress, wins first prize in her flower aeroplane, Paris, France"; "The Red and Blue armies gallantly defend Seattle (sham battle)"; "Improved lifeboat for the guards is launched at Cromer, Eng."; "At Olean, N. Y., the Glass Blowers' Convention adjourn in a body to witness an oil well shot"; "At Washington, D. C., the air brakes failing to operate, the car is backed through the B. & O. car shops, injuring four"; "The hospital corps, and the hospital dogs of the French Army drill at Paris, France"; "Governor Woodrow Wilson formally accepts nomination for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket.

Cines

"A Convict's Gratitude," is a splendidly acted story. The noble gallantry depicted in the character of the down-trodden ex-convict, should be an inspiration to some American men.

Biograph

"With the Enemies' Help" is a fine bit of comedy-drama, chiefly comedy, in which our friend "Little Mary" gets the audience with her own peculiar sort of fnu It is a prospector's story, and is certainly a cracker-jack for action.

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

An Emphatic No

Thousands of script writers will read with interest any statement made by Horace G. Plimpton, of the Edison Company. His original methods, and the artistic releases of the Edison Company, are too well known to need repetition here. Mr. Plimpton is in charge of the entire production work of the Edison Kinemacolor department, of which the Photoplay is but one of many items, and that he can take a few minutes of his crowded day to give us his opinion on the script subject is greatly appreciated by the editor. Mr. Plimpton's statement:

"Has the general average of scripts submitted the past year been a decided improvement? Regretfully but emphatically, I must answer, No. Such improvement as may have been made in Edison plots has come from special arrangements instituted by ourselves. The average quality of stories submitted continues to be pitifully low—so low that hardly two per cent of the number sent in weekly are, in our judgment, worthy of serious consideration. Working over an old theme, faulty construction, lack of reasonableness, antecedent action not clear in the story itself, extreme sensationalism, crime unnecessarily dragged in and (more rarely) immorality—all these appear so regularly that, if some mechanical method of examination could be devised, a great majority of the plots submitted would be automatically rejected on one or more of these grounds alone.

"The remedy? A long, slow process, I fear—a process of settling down, of elimination, of survival of the fittest. Too much encouragement is held out to prospective scenario writers and the work is made to look too easy, thereby drawing into the field people with neither artistic nor literary training. It is not easy—it is quite as difficult, in my opinion, in its own way as either play or story writing. To tell a story without words in about seventeen minutes, to have the events follow logically, to avoid excessive explanation in sub-titles or written or printed matter, to know film possibilities and limitations—these are problems of technique. And beyond all these lies the idea itself.

"Therefore I say that encouragement should not be held out too lightly to beginners. They should be made to realize that success can only be expected from an original dramatic instinct rounded into shape by long study and a great deal of hard work."

Too Much Encouragement

Mr. Plimpton has presented the situation as he sees it, honestly, truthfully and forcibly. Coming from such an authority, the statement, to our mind, is of portentous significance. Hardly two per cent of the scripts submitted weekly to Mr. Plimpton are worthy of serious examination. And he gives the reasons for this condition of affairs, too. Old themes worked over. In other words, ideas seen on the picture screens revamped; plots stolen from magazines, novels and weekly publications; hackneyed plots that come to the beginner and to others deficient in originality. Faulty construction; scripts of ten and fifteen pages of unessential action; scripts with a cast a mile long and having a synopsis of 1,500 words that could easily be condensed to 200; scripts containing wordy telegrams, letters and a couple of dozen sub-titles; lack of reasonableness; scripts calling for the destruction of public buildings; shipwrecks; maneuvers of armies; aeroplane battles; scripts with veritable menageries for leading characters; stories calling for impossible locale; for unlimited expenditure of money and for situations far beyond the limitations of the camera. Antecedent action: The "twenty years after" stories; the plot with a prologue; the script complicated and confusing which puts over any other old story excepting the one in consideration. Extreme sensationalism: The stories that would not pass the Board of Censors; stories of deliberate murder; kidnapping; plots of repellent violence and not seemly for children, who compose no small part of the patronage of the moving picture show.

More rarely immorality: We are glad that Mr. Plimpton finds this sort of story infrequent. It is not so rare in some other studios. There is a certain minority among would-be pictureplaywrights who revel in the suggestive story and seem to believe that that sort of thing is just what is wanted. Their scripts are never even closely read, but that fact does not seem to diminish the output. These are some of the reasons, my friends, why your scripts are returned instead of the coveted check. Mr. Plimpton is kind. He tells you the reason for their rejection and gives it straight from the shoulder. Read and profit thereby.

Too much encouragement: We construe Mr. Plimpton's assertion to mean that the so-called "schools" are in no small measure to blame for the existing state of affairs. Misleading advertisements which tell the victim that "No education is necessary," "Anyone can do it," "Make $100 a week writing moving picture plays." These are the causes that lead many a man and woman, hopeless of success in literature, to pay over his or her hard-earned dollars into the maw of unprincipled grafters. After they take the "course" they think the $100 a week is easily theirs. Alas, it takes many weeks of misdirected effort and disappointment before the victim realizes that he is as far away as ever from the "easy money." In the meanwhile, the studios are flooded with impossible scripts and when one writer retires, another takes his place in the futile work. These lying advertisements should be barred from the standard magazines. The announcements draw into the field people without the sense of the artistic and the dramatic; people poor in idea; those who believe anything someone more original may state and willingly pay over the money. Those who will make good as pictureplaywrights will do so without the aid of school or sales agent.

People of literary training are the ones who will make good as pictureplaywrights in the future. They are becoming more and more numerous in the new field. They have the original ideas and but little technique. Others have technique and no ideas. Which qualification is the more essential to ultimate success?

Mr. Plimpton believes the remedy for the half-baked script will be the process of settling down, of elimination, of survival of the fittest. That is our opinion. See that you, who read this, be among the fit when the sifting out is finished. Original dramatic instinct, rounded into shape by long study and a great—yes, a very great deal of hard work. This is Mr. Primpton's secret for success. He gives the secret to you. Will you become qualified? Here's hoping!

Stoddard's Idea

Mr. Ralph D. Stoddard, successful script writer and editor of the Cleveland Leader Photoplay page, suggests a little organization of a semi-social nature to successful script writers who toil and spin plots within a radius of 200 miles from that dear Cleveland. He takes great pains to state that it is not a "protective association" idea, but just a "hunch" to get the boys (and girls) into a dining-room, say about once a year, to relate experience and become better acquainted. We pass the idea along to A. W. Thomas, of the Photoplay Magazine, who visits Chicago and Cleveland frequently. We thank Mr. Stoddard for our honorary membership card. We also hasten to assure President Powell, of the Order of Optimists, that we shall continue to pay our dues in that great and ever-growing organization.

Minor Hints

Solax is advertising for good scripts.

Majestic is in market for good rural drama and comedy. —Taylor's Statement.

Stanner E. V. Taylor, who writes most of the playlets in which his wife, Marion Leonard, appears, and who first had his "name on the film" while with the old Reliance Company some years ago, says that a writer who knows nothing about putting an idea into shape will, by his very lack of skill, destroy the originality, and his work is sent back. He deprives the producer of a good idea and discourages the writer. "It is the man with ideas who is most needed in the picture business to-day," says Taylor to the photoplaywright. "There are plenty of prominent and intelligent writers in the field of fiction but who are unfit for picture work. While they show remarked ability at description and character drawing, they are unable to conceive of new and unusual combinations of incidents resulting in some particularly novel situation. It is by developing men of this character that pictures may not only stimulate their own production, but may arouse also those in other fields of literature and drama to greater effort in this direction."

Visiting Picture Shows

A correspondent asked what is meant by the oft-repeated advice "to visit the picture show." We consider a proper study of the moving picture screen of more value to the would-be pictureplaywright than all the correspondence "universities" put together. Visit your local theatre. Take along a pencil and notebook. Study the picture flashed on the screen. Use the more simple plays. Discover the average number of characters used. The course of the action. When and how sub-titles are used and how written. Study the development of the piece, the natural development of the climax and how it is handled. Time the scenes, learn their number and study the ending. Stay for the "second" show. See the picture run over again, all the time taking notes of the action. When you get home and transcribe those notes you will be surprised, maybe, to discover that you have been attending night school in pictureplaywriting. Notice how the scenes are built, how the action is written in, and then realize, after working your notes into proper script form, how much you have to learn about the art of script writing. Do not permit a week to pass without the "course." The cost of tuition is a dime—not $10 or $20, and the benefits of the instruction are well worth the effort.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION OF GREATER NEW YORK

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York will have their second annual ball at Palm Garden, 58th street, between Lexington and Third avenues, on November 14th, 1912, and have already obtained the assurance from some of the motion picture manufacturers to be present in person. The most notable actors and actresses of the moving picture world will also be there. As far as the political world is concerned, Senator Foraker, ex-Governor of Ohio; Congressman Lentz and the Hon. W. F. Cox, Congressman Sulzer and others too numerous to mention. The city officials of New York will probably be there in a body, and it is unnecessary to state that the second annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of New York will be one of the greatest social affairs ever given in New York.

Keansburg, N. J.—De Vires, Licari & Nichols have opened their moving picture theatre.

Dallas, Texas.—W. D. Nevils will open a theatre known as The Washington, at 1613-1615 Elm street.

Quincy, Ill.—The Quincy Theatre on Hampshire street has been sold to Isadore Burnstine, of Springfield.

White River Junction, Vt.—The Dreamland has been extensively remodelled and will be known as The Globe.

THF GUEST AT THE PARSONAGE
Eclair release Sept. 5th.

ITALA FILMS WILL OPEN BRANCH OFFICE IN NEW YORK

The Itala Films, whose manufacturing plant is at Tourino, Italy, the agency for which has been previously in the hands of the New York Motion Picture Co., whose enlarged interests has made it necessary for them to give up the responsibility of the American agency of this excellent product, and to which Mr. Schemiengo, proprietor of the Itala Films, desires us to extend his hearty thanks for the creditable manner in which they have transacted his business here, has, in consequence, arranged to open a branch office in New York City.

Arrangements were completed on the 11th inst., by which control of all Itala films for use in America will be taken over by The Itala Film Co. of America, a corporation now being formed by Harry R. Raver, secretary and manager of the Film Supply Co. of America, who becomes secretary-treasurer and manager of the new company. S. Villa, of Villa Bros. & Co., raw silk manufacturers is president. The stock in the company is divided between the Itala Co. of Tourino, Italy, and the above-named men.

Mr. Raver, in an exclusive interview to-day, on his return from Chicago, stated that he would shortly offer to the trade a feature Itala production in three reels far surpassing in importance "The Fall of Troy," which every exhibitor remembers with gratification on account of its magnificance and money-earning qualities.

When asked whether or not Itala regular releases of one reel subjects would be sold through the Film Supply Co. of America, Mr. Raver stated that no arrangements had been made as yet, but he expected to handle his product on a territorial basis, appointing an exclusive agent in each state, whether through an organized distributing company or not, as would be later determined.

The Itala company are specializing on long films or features, together with microscopic scientific and educational hand-colored films in shorter lengths.

The ordinary type of drama and comedy will be discontinued to make way for specialty and novelty films of an original and unique character.

GEO. KLEINE'S RELEASES

Tuesday, September 3d, has a "Tragedy of Long Ago," from the Cines Studio. The scenes of this tragical story are laid in the romantic surroundings of Southern Italy, during that exciting period when the numerous provinces were governed by the powerful and tyranical dukes, and when treason, conspiracy and plotting were the principle occupations of the day. It is a strong story, full of tense dramatic situations.

One of the finest travel pictures the Urban-Eclipse people have ever put out is, "From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland, by Rack Railway (5,200 Feet High)," which will be seen Wednesday, September 4th, on the same reel with the excellent topical subject, "Small Game at the Zoo," which pictures in highly amusing fashion the antics and adventures of "An Eccentric Sportsman."

The Saturday's Cines, for September 7th, is a thrilling and intensely interesting military subject, depicting battle scenes and hand-to-hand conflicts which occurred during the terrible period of the sacking of Rome, May 5th, 1527. The fact that it is based on historical data attaches additional interest and importance to the story. When the Duke Bourbon refused to grant Pope Clement's request not to pass through the pontifical territory, great terror was spread throughout the city of Rome; the people fled to their homes to barricade them against possible plunderers, while the garrison rushed to man the city's gates and walls to repulse the invaders. The Bourbon's army proves the more powerful and on May 5th, 1527, they effect breaches in the walls, which enable them to enter the city and commence their robbing, murdering and burning orgies. Woven about these exciting incidents is the love story of the Duke Denzo of Ceri and Giulia Vallatti, his betrothed. A short scenic has been added to complete the reel and in "Picturesque Sardinia, Italy," are shown beautifully colored and highly interesting views of the principle town, the Harbor, Cathedral, Royal Palace, St. Remy's Ramparts, and a delightful scene of the sea.

QUIT ROBBING, MR. EXHIBITOR

By Everett McNeil

Mr. Exhibitor, don't make jumping-jacks out of the characters in the pictureplays you are picturing, by whirling a twenty-minute film through the reel in ten minutes, or in fifteen minutes, or even in eighteen minutes. A twenty-minute film requires twenty minutes to play it properly, and you are defrauding the spectators, yourself, the makers, the actresses and the actors and the playwright, when you play it in less than that time.

The spectators paid you their money to see the actresses and the actors go through the scenes in a natural and likelike manner, not to see the rapid series of impossible jumping-jack motions and facial contortions that result when the film is raced through the reel; and they have the right to see what they paid you their money to see, and you have no right to defraud them of it, even if you are in a hurry to get them out and to get another audience in.

Quit robbing your audiences, Mr. Exhibitor.

You are defrauding yourself, because you are deliberately driving the nickels, or the dimes, or whatever the charge of admission may be, away from your cash window. A pleased audience will come back to you again and again, a disgusted one, never; and no sane audience can possibly be pleased when a film is skidded through a reel so fast that it makes jumping-jacks out of all the characters. Your success does not depend upon how quickly you can get an audience out of the house, but upon how quickly you can get another audience in your house. The people, even the five-centers, are beginning to understand what it means when the characters in the plays begin to jerk and twitch in a most unnatural and idiotic manner and to know where the blame belongs; and, very justly, they resent your giving them that sort of a deal; and, when they wish to see another moving picture play, they go elsewhere. If, in order to make fair profits, you must shorten your programme, then cut out some of the pictures; but play the pictures that you do have right. Make every audience you have help to pull in the next audience. Don't turn out a disgusted audience to drive your business away. If you could sit among your audiences and hear some of the remarks I have heard, when you have been hurrying the characters through the scenes in jig-time, you would be brought to a sudden and most emphatic realization of what a coin-killer this jig-time business is; and this applies to no one more emphatically than it does to you, Mr. Five-centers. Why pay out good money for a good film—and then spoil it?

Quit robbing yourself, Mr. Exhibitor.

You are defrauding the makers of the films, when you render ridiculous their costly productions by throwing them on the screen at a speed that makes every character look and act like a puppet, with an insane idiot pulling the wires. The makers of the films have spent hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars to have the characters in the various scenes look and act right; and it should be a punishable crime for you, Mr. Exhibitor, to spoil all of their costly efforts by running the films through the reels at jig-time speed and thus giving an absolutely false representation of the pictures and materially damaging the reputations of their makers. Then, if you have only rented the films, you have no right to subject them to the extra strain of this extra speed, to damage property that does not belong to you.

Quit robbing the film makers, Mr. Exhibitor.

You are defrauding the actresses and the actors of their dearest possession, their histrionic reputations, when you picture them on the screen doing stunts and facial contortions that would make a mechanical puppet die of shame, by cranking them through the scenes at a whirling-dervish speed. No actress or actor can possibly look or act natural when the speed of every movement, every facial expression, is unnaturally doubled.

Quit robbing the actresses and the actors, Mr. Exhibitor.

You are defrauding the playwright of something very dear to him when you throw on the screen his very carefully thought-out and planned play at a speed that ruptures the plot, disjoints the action and violently jerks out of perspective the climax. His success depends on how well his plays please your audiences, Mr. Exhibitor; and no play, no matter how good the play may be in itself, can possibly please a sane audience when it is jerked through the reel and thrown on the screen at twice the speed it was intended to be played. You are defrauding the author of his just dues whenever you do this.

Quit robbing the playright, Mr. Exhibitor.

Finally, you are defrauding the whole moving picture business, when you run a film through your reel at a speed that fails to bring out all the beauty and strength and worth that the playwright, the makers, and the actresses and the actors have put into it. The whole future success of the moving picture business depends on the appeal that the pictures continue to make to their audiences; and whatever tends to lessen that appeal, to bring the pictures themselves into disrepute, hurts the whole moving picture business and all who are connected with it. No one can witness a moving picture play, where all the characters are made to look and act as if they were afflicted with the St. Vitus dance by the speed maniac at the crank, without feelings of disgust that includes and hurts the whole moving picture business.

Quit robbing the business, Mr. Exhibitor.

Verily, verily the moving picture exhibitors have many sins; but the greatest of them all is—SPEED.

A gf A
Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

FOR LOVE OF HER
Reliance release Sept. 7th.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

Second Circuit

Before Coxe, Ward and Noyes,
Circuit Judges.

Motion Picture Patents Company, Complainant-Appellant, vs.

Independent Moving Picture Company of America,
Defendant-Appellee.

The majority of the Court are of the opinion that the decree appealed from should be affirmed, with costs, upon the opinion of Judge Hand; and it is so ordered.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, on August 9th, 1912, handed down a decision affirming that of the lower court, dismissing with costs the bill of complaint in the case of Motion Picture Patents Company, complainant, against Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, defendant. This suit was for an alleged infringement of United States Letters Patent No. 707934, issued August 26, 1902, to Woodville Latham for projecting kinetoscopes and owned by the Motion Picture Patents Co. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals is the court of last resort in patent cases and thus this suit is definitely terminated and the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America has been vindicated in its use of the apparatus that was charged in the bill of complaint to be an infringement.

This suit was looked upon by all parties as a test case. The owner of the patent claimed that it included all projecting machines and cameras in commercial use, but this suit has definitely settled their claims. The lower court rendered its decision about six months ago. The decision was then rendered by Judge Hand for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in which he held that defendant's camera was not an infringement of the Latham patent. In this test case the complainant had sued a user of a camera rather than the user of a projecting machine, because it was essential to complainant's case to obtain a finding that the Latham patent covered a camera as well as a projecting machine. The reason such a finding was essential to this case was that Armat and Jenkins (and not Latham) were the first to employ the feeding mechanism in a successful projecting machine. Judge Hand in a carefully considered opinion held that the patent does not cover cameras and applied that holding to the question of infringement, going no further than that because that was sufficient to dispose of the case. But the holding led equally to the conclusion that the patent being for a projecting machine only is anticipated by Armat and Jenkins and is consequently invalid.

An appeal was taken by the complainant to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and the case was argued at final hearing before Judges Coxe, Ward and Noyes, of that Court, on May 21st and 22d, 1912, complainant's case being argued by Mr. Parker W. Page and Mr. Thomas B. Kerr, of Messrs. Kerr, Page, Cooper and Haywood, and on behalf of defendant by Mr. Wm. Houston Kenyon and Mr. Richard Eyre, of Messrs. Kenyon & Kenyon.

The majority of the court, Judges Ward and Noyes, entered the following decision of the court:

"The majority of the Court are of the opinion that the decree appealed from should be affirmed, with costs, upon the opinion of Judge Hand; and it is so ordered."

This means that the majority of the court of appeals were satisfied, not only with the decision of Judge Hand in the District Court, but also with the reasons expressed in Judge Hand's opinion and upon which he reached his decision.

This decision is directly to the effect that no camera is an infringement upon the Latham patent. In effect the decision means more than that since, if any attempt should be made to sue a user of a projecting machine the very reasons that lead to a holding of non-infringement in this particular case must lead to a holding that the patent is invalid because it is conceded that if the patent is limited to a projecting machine it was anticipated by the projecting machine of Armat and Jenkins and also by the French patent to Joly.

THE PICTURES AND THEIR MUSIC

By Margaret I. MacDonald

On second thought, the above title has in its makeup a note of irony. The pictures and their music! Why, they have no music. The poor neglected things are still allowed to wriggle their way across the screen to just anything in the way of a tune.

'Tis said, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast." And the painter's brush? What of the expressionless canvas transformed by a few flourishes of the artist's practiced hand, into the solemn gray tones of a leaden sky, pouring its tears over the fresh-turned sods below; an "inverted bowl" of azure blue, reflecting its sunny gladness over the rich hues of an autumn landscape, or the rosy tints of the rising sun on the dew-kissed blossoms of a summer morning?

To me there is a new meaning in every changing shade: every shadow tells its story. When the sun lifts his head above the horizon, the birds begin to call, the dew drips from the trees and shrubs and glistens in the meshes of the beautiful big spider webs, the calyxes of the flowers open to receive the velvety brown bees; all the earth is aglow, and the silent inactivity of the night is absorbed by the humming wheels of day.

Again when the shadows lie perpendicularly in front of us, and the midday sun is pouring down his warmest glances, the wheels of day are at their busiest, and only for a short spell does the laborer pause from his labors to snatch his midday meal, or snooze for "forty winks" 'neath the shade of some friendly tree.

But sweetest of all the seasons of the day is when the shadows of evening begin to fall, the tiniest breeze stirs the leaves of the maples; the pale evening star blinks forth where the red and gold of the sunset dissolves into the night sky, and the crescent moon peeps at you through the branches of the trees. It is then that lovers love to walk where the air is laden with the scent of flowers and new-mown hay. It is then that the birds snuggled away in their nests gently coo their loves, and the lowing herds cease browsing to enter the quiet of the night.

Could our moving picture musician but see it, all of these suggestions flash before him on the screen every day. Every day comes a golden opportunity to weave the sentiment of the picture into another fibre—to weave the awakening joy of morning, the busy hum of noon, or the quiet calm of evening into tone pictures, to speak as it were aloud the meaning of the silent emotions.

The agitated heart cannot speak its torments through a dreamy waltz or a rollicking two-step; no more can the tumult of battle or the roar of the mighty ocean penetrate the silence of the picture screen on the breath of a gentle pastoral melody. But the musician who cares can create for himself an everlasting pleasure in the conscientious study of the moving picture and its individual relationship to the varied style of harmony and discord to be found among the works of the masters.

A few days ago a short conversation with Mr. Al Cook, originally with the Haviland Music Publishing Company, afterwards with Theodore Morse, and now in the employ of Mr. Witmark & Sons, revealed the fact that a series of "incidental" or "cue" music has been prepared by the latter firm, in orchestral form, covering two or three volumes, which they claim is best adapted for the purpose of anything of the sort that has been gotten out. It contains short bits for every situation—Adagios, Allegrettos, Pizzicatos, Prestos, Largos, Pastorales, etc. This would no doubt be possible in the case of the feature film, where a rehearsal could be arranged before hand, and would in any case be of great service.

There is a joy for everyone in a beautiful picture; but let me tell you, moving picture musician, you can enhance that joy a hundred times if you will use your intelligence along with your imaginative power when you are at your post in the theatre.

THE MASKO FILM CO. GETTING READY FOR BUSINESS

"The Resurrection," that wonderful film recently produced by the Masko Film Co., and in which Blanche Walsh starred, has been shown in several out-of-town cities, with great success. Storms of applause have met it wherever it has been reeled off. It is an artistic production which stands in its own merit.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

THANHOUSER

THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK (Sept. 1).—This subject shows scenes attending the attempted capture of New York by the Red Army in the recent manoevers in Connecticut, and is complete in one reel. Twenty thousand men participated in the attack,and the Blue Army was steadily driven back to the great city it was defending, stubbornly contesting the ground at every retreating step. All the different forces that made up the victorious Red Army are shown in action in the film. The whole picture is very realistic. The Thanhauser "war correspondents," according to the finished film, stuck close to the battlefield and got some fine close-up views of the fighting. It is the kind of stuff that makes you change your mind about wanting to be a soldier. The picture starts with the transporting of calvary and their preparations to move to New Canaan. Then section A of the Aerial Squadron is shown sending out wireless messages. You see a wireless field set and the hangars of the Aerial Squadron. Some of the other scenes shown: Installing wireless apparatus on Burgess Wright's aeroplane in the aerial squadrons. Aviator Lieutenant Milling, U. S. A., and his Curtis machine. Cavalry division of Blue Army. Cavalry on "hike" in heavy marching order. Rear guard of cavalry division leaving camp. Officers' mess. "Camp canaries." Army cook tent at a busy hour. "Roast beef for dinner!" "Making himself comfortable." "A little game of black-jack." "His own tailor." General Lasker Bliss' headquarters. Aviator N. Y. N. G. Beckwith Havens in Curtis machine. Lieutenant Milling coming down. Aviator Havens landing after flight. Havens and Milling taken after landing. Aviator at work. In addition to the aeroplane and wireless views, the use of the army automobile is also demonstrated. Finally the fight commences and the camera takes you after the Red Army in their pursuit of the Blues. The battlefield scenes are remarkably clear and in nowise obstructed with smoke as in the case of many scenes of this nature filmed heretofore.

THE VOICE OF CONSCIENCE (Sept. 3).—An orphan girl was given a home by one of her father's friends, who, with his mother, carefully looked after her. The girl's benefactor was much her senior, but soon fell desperately in love with him, although she hid it from those around her.

Jealously came into her life when a young woman came to visit her guardian's mother. Soon it was apparent to the orphan that the man she admired was deeply in love with the elder girl, and she saw that his affection for his ward were purely paternal.

While the two girls and the young man were motoring one day, they met with an accident, and the young women were badly injured. A little country hospital was nearby, and there the victims were taken, being placed on adjoining cots. The young man did all he could for their comfort, but his actions showed that his heart was wrapped upon the elder girl. ; This his ward noted, and as she lay on her cot she brooded and prayed for a chance to have revenge.

The man's sweetheart was suffering principally from shock, and a heart stimulant was given her at constant intervals. This draught was a very powerful drug, and the ward knew that an overdose would be fatal. Full of hatred, she watched her chance and when she thought she was unobserved, poured half of the contents of the bottle into the glass containing the mixture prepared for the patient.

By good fortune the doctor, who was outsideon the porch, saw her. He decided that she should be punished, but had a firm belief that conscience would cause her more suffering than could be administered by the law.

The guilty girl peeped stealthily when the doctor approached her enemy's cot, and gave her a dose of medicine. She shuddered a few minutes later, when the screen emblem of a patient's approaching death was put around her neighbor's cot. Later when the screen was removed and she saw the empty bed beside her she bitterly regretted the evil deed that jealously had led her to do.

The girl was not dead, however, the doctor only pretended to give her the medicine, and removed her, for safety's sake, to another part of the hospital.

The guilty girl regained her strength very slowly. Weak and wan she was seated in the hospital grounds, one beautiful afternoon when visitors were announced. They were the man she loved and the girl she thought she had killed. Joyfully she greeted them, but was so weak from the shock that her callers were ordered to leave. To the doctor who came to administer to her, the girl made full confession, and devoutly thanked heaven that in some mysterious way the crime she planned had not succeeded. The doctor explained that he knew all, and had known it from the time she tampered with the medicine, but had kept the secret. Humbly she thanked him, told him she had learned her lesson, and as reparation would consecrate the rest of her life to doing good.

HIS FATHER'S SON (Sept. 6).—A contractor who had amassed a fortune through handling big jobs, thoroughly disapproved of his big son. He regarded the youth as a "dude," and feared he was fast developing into one of the idle rich class. The son, although educated as a civil engineer, was perfectly willing to idle along and live upon the money his father gave him.

The two quarreled constantly until finally there came a day when the boy tired of his father's constant sneers and declared that he would prove he could make his way in the world himself. Fortune lead him to a section of the West where men in his father's employ were carrying on a gigantic piece of work. Under an assumed name he secured a position, and by strict attention to the business and native ability rapidly forged ahead.

One of the division superintendents, although an excellent workman, was a victim of drink, and after repeated warnings, was discharged. The "son of his father" was advanced to his vacant position, and gained the bitter enmity of his predecessor, not only because he had supplanted him, but because the daughter of the general superintendent seemed to look with favor upon the newcomer, and the disgraced employe had long admired her.

It was generally known that the new engineer's job depended upon his concluding his section of the task within the time limit. The old engineer plotted with an anarchistic workman and offered him a sum of money if he would wreck the work. The plot was overheard by a child who had received many favors from the superintendent's daughter. He ran over to warn her, and found the girl alone in the house. She realized that there was no time to summon assistance, found the bomb and at the risk of her life carried it to a nearby stream, where she hurled it into the water. The villians were captured by the girl's father and lover who were hard at work in their office and knew nothing of the plot until they heard the explosion.

The young superintendent advanced rapidly in his chosen profession and the girl's father gladly consented when the young man asked his consent to marry the daughter. The old contractor also heard of his new employe and as the day of the wedding approached decided to travel a few hundred miles out of his way to meet him. The reunion was a joyful one, for the elder man found that the one time dude was a chap to be proud of and through adversity had really become "His Father's Son."

MAJESTIC

THE CHAPERON (Sept. 1).—The boys of the Junior "Frat" resolve to have a camping party, and invite a girl friend each. They are to be chaperoned by Harry's aunt, Mrs. Lester, but when the girls arrive and everything is ready, a telegram comes from Mrs. Lester, saying that she is detained at home by a severe attack of neuralgia, and can't attend. The boys are in a quandry and finally select Harry to make up as a woman and pretend to be the chaperon.

Although he sees his chances of making love slip by, he consents and the party proceed to the camp by the river. They are attended by Professor Black, of the college, who has been very much attached to Mrs. Lester in bygone days, but is near-sighted and does not detect the deception.

The chaperon proves to be a great entertainer and wins the girls away from the boys, by her stories, etc. The boys organize to make Harry behave and administer a severe punishment to him, when, after being caught smoking, he induces the girls to try cigarettes. Harry, in his make-up, while lighting a cigarette held in the lips of one of the boys, is silhouetted against the side of the tent and the Professor and girls seeing this from outside, think that the chaperon is carrying on a clandestine love affair and break into the tent. They demand the expulsion of the chaperon and Harry is forced to reveal his identity. The party is about to break up on this account when the real chaperon arrives and everything ends happily, with a renewal of the Professor's love story.

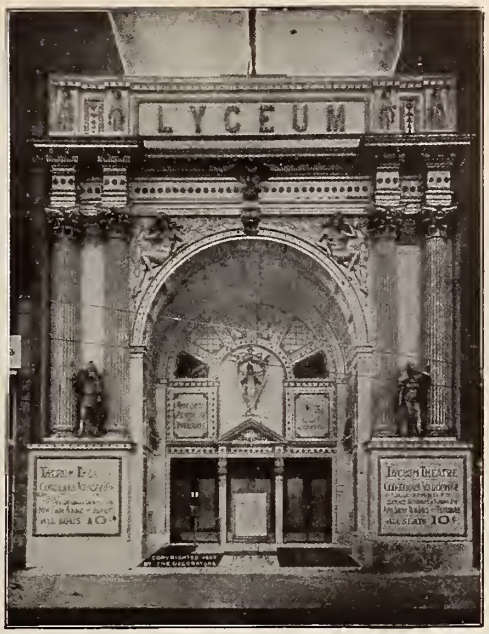
MABEL'S BOW (Sept. 3).—Mabel's mother, the wife of a poor workman, has made great sacrifices to enable her pretty daughter to spend her vacation at a fashionable summer resort, with the intention of making a good match. With a trunkful of new clothes, Mabel and her girl friend arrive at the hotel. Her friend introduces her to a rich young man, Ralph Page. He takes an interest in Mabel at once. He insists upon taking her home in his motor car. As he is unaware of her poverty, Mabel is forced to write a warning letter to her mother telling her to borrow furniture, silver, etc., from the neighbors, so that the little home will look fairly prosperous. The parlor which is used as a bedroom is ready for the night the letter arrives. Great hustling prevails. In a short time the whole place is transformed. Mabel and Ralph arrive and everything goes off smoothly. But after Ralph leaves, the room is changed back to its original state, with couch bed and a bed made on the piano for one of the children. Ralph forgets a glove and returns for it. He is let in by the little boy. He takes his glove and leaves as soon as possible. Later he breaks an appointment with Mabel on account of business. She thinks her poverty is the reason and is heartbroken. However, they come to an understanding and he is able to assure her that he loves her just as much as he did before he knew her family's poverty.

ECLAIR

THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS (Sept. 3).—May Allen, actress, arrives at a summer hotel. Guests with that curiosity which animates all small gatherings, notices her trunk is marked "Theatre," which, of course, means she is an actress, without further introduction.

The women refuse to meet her decently; the men pretend a moral superiority, in the presence of the women, but surreptitiously try to make time, but absolutely fail. Their insults become plain, that May is driven to anger, which means to fight to a finish, to in some way get back at them in a stinging fashion. So she pretends to leave and returns as an old maid missionary. Without question or parley she is received as eligible and respectable, and the women rejoice over the going of the actress. She pretends to return and the women are gloom filled once more. Missing the missionary, they all inquire for her, which inquiry May hears to her own satisfaction. A lawn dance is given. May is ostracized. An idea strikes her as the different men sneak to her and ask meetings. She gets a ball of string, tells each man to take the string with him, to some quiet spot and she will join him in a few minutes, following the string, of course, to find him. In this way she soon gets all the men away, then she steals away for her old maid's disguise.

The orchestra strikes up for the next dance,



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

and the women discover the men have disappeared. They suspect the actress, and their suspcions seem justified when they find she is not in the seat she had been all evening. May arrives in the guise of the old maid; they all tell her of the outrageous act of the actress. She seems to discover the strings tied to the seat, starts pulling on one and soon brings in one of the delinquents, and so follows all the others. When all are in May uncovers her disguise, with admonishment and moral of the story, "Know ye before ye judge."

THE GUEST AT THE PARSONAGE (Sept. 5).—Kenneth Disbrow, a wealthy bachelor, pays a visit to his old college chum, Rev. Boyd Birley. In a friendly argument, Kenneth makes fun of Boyd's fashionable congregation, and offers to give an automobile to the member of the Ladies' Aid Society, who can show a real charitable act during the month. Kenneth to decide. The minister makes the announcement, and the spinsters and widows of the church determine to win both Kenneth and the motor car. But Kenneth has been introduced to Rhoda Ogden, a country maid, with "love at first sight" on both sides.

Kenneth disguises himself as a tramp, and calls on Sarah Jane Smith and others of Ladies Aid, asking for charity. He does not get it. Sarah Jane, however, recognizes Kenneth as he walks away, and runs after him to bring him back. Instead she finds Bill Hykes, a real tramp, dressed like Kenneth. Bill gets a feed, but is "fired" when Sarah Jane discovers her mistake.

Kenneth finds no charity in Dedham, but he finds love. At the end of the month, the Ladies' Aid meet to see who wins the auto. The minister carries the joke along, and then leads Sarah Jane and the rest to a sheltered nook, where Kenneth and Rhoda are deciding to become engaged. Sarah Jane reads the answer and exits in disgust, with her fellow hypocrites.

SOLAX

THE FIGHT IN THE DARK (Sept. 4).—Bert Green is an agent for the Government on Mexican territory, buying Mexican-bred horses. He meets the beautiful daughter of Jose, a horse dealer, and falls in love with her. Although Juanita has encouraged the attentions of Pedro, she casts the latter off most cruelly when Bert comes into her life.

Pedro is vindictive. With the assistance of a servant he manages to surprise Bert and Juanita at a clandestine meeting. While Bert temporarily leaves the scene the spying Mexicans come on, throw a blanket over the surprised girl and carry her off. Bert soon returns, sees signs of a struggle and follows the trail made by the abductors.

After a long hunt he finds Pedro's shack in the mountains. He acts quickly but a false step gives the advantage to Pedro. The girl thinks rapidly. She comes to her lover's aid by breaking the lamp. Then there is a struggle in the dark. Two shots are fired. Soon Bert draws a deep breath, sits on the edge of a table, rolls a cigarette and lights it; while in the shadow is the dead body of Pedro. Bert and Juanita leave the shack and see a stagecoach approaching. Bert decides to cross the Mexican border before he is captured by a Mexican posse and so holds up the stage, tells Juanita to get in and drives off like fury.

Soon after he is pursued by the Mexicans, but he eludes them by throwing the stagecoach over a cliff and finds temporary safety in the canebrakes until he is rescued by Texas rangers sent to his aid by a little girl.

The action is replete with sensational incidents, riding and driving by experts and tense dramatic situations.

OPEN TO PROPOSALS (Sept. 6).—Billy is a cowboy. He gets rather tired of punching cows and doing odd jobs on a ranch, so when he sees an article in the papers to the effect that Eastern women consider Western men more desirable than Eastern men as husbands, Billy decides to go East and find a spouse. The cowboys give Billy a rousing farewell party and in addition play some practical jokes on him before he leaves.

When Billy arrives in New York he loses no time in getting a wife—but the unfortunate part of it is, Billy interprets the article he has read literally. So every woman he sees, he imagines has read the article about Western men making the "best husbands." In his free Western fashion he proposes to all whom he meets and naturally he receives many set-backs much to his surprise and discomfort.

Luckless Bill at last meets with an "old maid" who is willing to have him "for better or for worse," but Billy knows in advance that it would be "for worse," so he tries to escape the woman's clutches. He has an awful time of it, for she is persistent and vows "she will get him yet."

AMERICAN

THE JEALOUS RAGE (Aug. 26).—Marjie Cooler was the belle of the mining camp. Often she made her way among the men, saying a pleasant word here and there and leaving behind her a trail of loudly thumping hearts. A stranger came one day, and the belle had at last last found a conqueror. Bess Harding, jealous and deceitful, loves the foreman of the camp, who was one of the many admirers of the village belle. The foreman did not like the stranger and Bess, seeing her chance to retaliate for old scores against her rival, incited him to kill the stranger. This he tried to do, disastrously for himself and with equally dire results for Bess. How? You should see for yourself.

On the same reel:

FREAKY RIDES AT LUNA PARK, NEW YORK.

LONESOME TRAIL PIONEERS (Aug. 28).—A stirring Western, depicting some of those many difficulties overcome by the hardy pioneers. Through the machinations of an unscrupulous Mexican, pretty Marguerite Caldwell is taken by Indians. The Mexican is tracked and overtaken at the Indian camp just before he could wreak his veneange upon the helpless girl. A picture of superb pantomime, combining those desirable qualities of the strictly Western subject sure to interest and amuse.

GAUMONT

LOVE'S SERENADE (Sept. 10).—Mr. and Mrs. Humboldt have just finished an enjoyable, not to say affectionate honeymoon, and are prepared to spend the most happy subsequent life. However, long before twelve months have elapsed, the young couple's home is rent with the noise of continual quarrels and there is nothing to do to effect a reconciliation. They decide to separate and leave each other forevermore. This proves even more irksome to Humboldt and his divorced Suzanne than married life, when they find that their quarrels have been but insignificant to the pain caused by their separation. They love each other, but neither will admit it to the other.

It so happens that a year after their divorce both Mr. Humboldt and Suzanne stop at the same summer hotel, where their friends are shocked to learn of the trouble they have had. At the hotel, Humboldt is inconsolable. He can see no one but Suzanne and can think of no one but her, while she is quite as devoted to him, without letting him know of it. A most bold admirer, Don Juan, is smitten with the charms of the divorcée and pursues her relentlessly for her hand. She encourages him only to increase the jealousy of her former husband, whom she recognizes as being entirely willing to patch up their small differences. Young Humboldt rages with fury at the advances of Don Juan, and many is the comical situation that arises from the eagerness of these two to outstrip each other in hestowing favors and tokens upon the pretty little miss.

Of course, Suzanne finally gives in to her husband and a complete reconciliation is effected, only after a most furious comedy arises shared by the chivalrous courtier, Don Juan.

THE PLAGUE-STRICKEN CITY (Sept. 12).—We sigh for the "good old days," as we call them, but few of us would care to go back to the time when rulers were all-powerful and treated their subjects as serfs, living only for their own pleasure, and as often as not spending the time they should have given to the government of their kingdom in drinking and debauchery.

This film, magnificently colored, takes us back to those days and gives very vividly the lust and cupidity prevalent at that time.

The city, badly kept and the houses badly ventilated and unclean, became an easy prey to that terrible Black Plague, which strikes so quickly, whose very breath means death, and not only death but all the tortures of a thirst unquenchable and a pain-racked body.

Starvation stares the inhabitants in the face, and though they appeal to their Prince for the help he only can give, they are thrust out of his castle, and he continues to carouse and make merry with his courtiers.

One only amongst all the merry crowd is worried and anxious—the captain of the Prince's bodyguard. To him the Prince turns in raillery, asking him why he does not join in the merrymaking, insisting that he shall drink with them, and then making him fetch his wife and daughters to the feast.

Loth to obey, hut placing duty before all else, the captain fetches his dear ones. The Prince, quick to note the beauty of the girls, at once commences to make violent love to them, uncaring that his caresses fill them with disgust. Their father, the captain, meets a speedy death on attempting interference. Late in the night, when the revellers are overcome by sleep, the captain's wife and daughters slip out of the castle by a secret subterranean passage—all other means of egress have been cut off by order of the Prince, so as to avoid any chance of a stranger getting amongst the courtiers and hringing the plague into the castle. Emerging from the secret passage, the three courageous women go at once into the most stricken parts of the city, and do all in their power to alleviate the pain and distress they find. Their coming into contact with the sufferers, and owing to their taking no precautions to avoid infection, can have but one result: they, too, fall victims to the Black Plague.

Hastening back through the passage, they are once more in the midst of the revellers. A man, holder or more intoxicated than the others, seizes hold of the older girl, and the Prince, seeing his prize slipping from him, rises to interfere. The crowd, maddened by wine, caring not for king or prince, stab him to death that they may continue on their lustful way. The captain's wife at last obtains a hearing, and tells them of the visit to the cursed city, and then taunts them that the Black Plague is in their midst. They fly in terror, but escape is cut off, as the captain's wife in a last despairing effort, feeling the terrible fever coming upon her, sets fire to the hanging and furniture, so wiping out not only the pestilence but the whole den of dehauchery.

COMET

THE DENTIST'S DILEMMA (Sept. 2).—Marjorie Stafford, the pretty and charming daughter of Martin Stafford, an irascible and cross-grained Wall Street hroker, has many suitors. Among them are Dr. Gas, a quack dentist, and Jack Phillips, a young and handsome broker's clerk. The dentist seems to he in favor with the father, who gives his consent for Majorie's hand. The girl does not like Gas and says so, at the same time not disguising the fact that she prefers Jack. Jack is suffering from an aggravated attack of toothache and reluctantly visits the doctor's office. After making a hasty examination of Jack's mouth the doctor ushers him into a chair. He tells him that it will be necessary to extract the sick molar oy gas and the doctor summons his assistant, who quickly adjusts the gas-administering apparatus. Then the dentist leaves the room and attends to other patients who are awaiting him. At this juncture Mr. Stafford enters the place with his face swathed in bandages. He, too, is suffering from toothache. When he sees Jack in the chair he begs him to allow the doctor to treat him first. Phillips leaves the chair and, placing the gas cap over Stafford's face, retires. In a little while Dr. Gas returns. He does not recognize Stafford and, believing that the clerk is still in the chair, proceeds to ruin his chances with Majorie by pulling out six of his front teeth. "Majorie will never love this presumptuous youth after I get through with him," Gas ruminates. One by one he takes out the teeth and when the operation is over and Stafford awakes the doctor for the first time realizes his mistake. He is paralyzed with consternation and tries to explain. It is of no avail for Stafford jumps up and, shaking his fist in the doctor's face, and then his assistant's face, wildly rushes from the room, vowing all sorts of vengeance. Of course, the doctor has lost caste with Stafford. The scene now shifts to the dining room in Stafford's house. A meal is served and the maid enters with a tempting dish of corn on the cob. Stafford tries to bite the corn, but cannot owing to his missing molars. Then Jack comes into the breach by presenting the broker with a set of false teeth. Stafford is happy and forthwith tells Jack that he can marry his daughter.

"THELMA"

Will make money for you! Three big, interesting reels. Adapted from Marie Corelli's great novel. Released August 31st.

RELIANCE

A powerful drama, splendidly acted by an all star cast.
See the Burning Ship! The Great Waterfalls! Tense Dramatic Moments! Special 1 and 3 sheet posters.

"THELMA"

PATHES

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 35 (Aug. 26).

A PRINCE OF ISRAEL (Aug. 27).—Absalom, the son of David, is ambitious to be King and inflames the minds of the people of Israel against the rule of his father. He rides throughout Israel making honeyed speeches and succeeds in recruiting an army to war on the House of David. David's mighty army and the followers of Absalom meet in the wood of Ephraim and a fierce battle ensues. Men fall right and left in the bitter struggle, but the soldiers of the King soon demostrate their superiority and the Israelites are utterly routed. Absalom is riding in retreat when his long hair catches in the bough of a tree. He is swung from his mount and hangs thus until he dies.

THE LIVE WIRE (Aug. 28).—The use of the wonders of science in the settlement of the West impressed the Indians as being nothing short of miraculous, and they underwent some peculiar experiences before they learned the mysteries of the telegraph and telephone. In this film two linemen, repairing a fallen wire, are forced by the Indians to abandon their work and the redmen then run afoul of the charged line. One by one the redskins dance a lively tune while trying to subdue the power of the copper strand; even the chief, so formidable in war, is an easy victim of the peculiar influence of the bare wire. By this time the electricians have returned to the power station and shut off the current in the section where the break occurred. The Indian chief promises his daughter and his war-bonnet to the brave who will overcome the dangerous wire. All refuse to try for the prize except one, a despised cripple, who, now that the current is off, is not in least affected when he winds the wire about his body.

THE DETECTIVE'S DESPERATE CHANCE (Aug. 29).—A band of outlaws, who have been reaping a golden harvest hy holding up the Overland stage, are too cunning for Peter Jones, an Arizona sheriff. Jones, consequently, writes to New York for a detective and one is sent. The sleuth appears in Arizona in the guise of a girl dancer, and the chief of the bandits is soon infatuated with her. It does not take the petticoated detective long to gather his evidence and, single-handed, he turns the outlaw over to the authorities. On the same reel:

THE ARMLESS WONDER.—A man who is hanpicapped by the loss of his arms becomes master of his plight by training his legs, feet and toes to serve their stead. Unusually interesting.

THE MUSKETEER'S LOVE (Aug. 30).—The enemies of Cardinal Richelieu, the famous prelate of the seventeenth century, included the beautiful Duchess de Chevreuse, who promised Count de Chalais, her ardent admirer, that she would marry him if he accomplished the death of the Cardinal. But the Duchess had a bitter enemy as well. He was the Count de Louvigny, and when he learned that de Chalais had agreed to the request of the Duchess he iformed the Cardinal. De Chalais is arrested and condemned to die. The Duchess is heartbroken at the failure of her scheme, and when de Louvigny taunts her about her unsuccessfulness, she becomes so enraged that she plunges a dagger into his breast until he expires and then buries the dirk in her own heart. The coloring of this film and the skill with which it is acted makes it an absorbing and powerful drama.

AN AEROPLANE LOVE AFFAIR (Aug. 31). (Pathe American Drama.)—An aviator has fallen in love with a very pretty girl whose father is opposed to the match. In an effort to make her forget the young birdman, her father sends her to a boarding school. The latest great invention proves its usefulness in such a situation, when the lover in his machine comes gracefully to earth in the school grounds and takes the girl up to the clouds with him. The machine is pursued by the father and the rejected suitor, but the horses they ride cannot leave the surface. Seeing a minister strolling near a church below him, the aviator again descends and kidnaps the reverend gentleman, who, although badly frightened, performs the ceremony. When the father sees that he has been outwitted he relents and gives his blessing to the young people.

VITAGRAPH

THE PARTY DRESS (Aug. 24).—"Oh, dear!" says Lydia Borne, as she picks up the only party dress she possesses and finds it full of wrinkles. A dance to which she is invited is to be held that evening. Time is precious, so hurriedly heating an iron, she is pressing the skirt and accidentally scorches it. Her dress is ruined and her case is hopeless. She is so distressed she goes to the attic, where, alone, she weeps with disappointment. Dreamily, she picks up an old daguerreotype of her grandmother in a very pretty, old-fashioned gown, which is exactly the same style as the present period. She hastily opens her grandmother's trunk, takes from it the dress. She attires herself in it, finds that it fits perfectly and is extremely becoming. She shows her grandfather how well she looks. He is so impressed and she looks so much like her grandmother, he can see his dead wife alive again. Lydia attends the reception, her party dress is admired by everyone and she is conceded to be the belle of the evening. Paul, her escort, is so fascinated by her beauty he falls in love with her and asks her to become his wife. She has always admired him, and unhesitatingly consents, with the mutual understanding that her grandmother's dress will be her wedding dress.

On the same reel:

ON BOARD KAISER WILHELM II.—Since the Titanic shipwreck, the interest in ocean-going steamers has been greatly intensified. All things pertaining to the conditions under which these floating conveyors of life sail from one country to another are matters of universal concern. This Vitagraph portrayal shows us the preparatory coaling of the ship with 7,000 tons of coal for a single voyage, then the start from the dock. When she is well under way, we are introduced to the captain and the officers on the bridge. One of these gentlemen extends us the courtesy of taking us through the steerage and into the first cabin. We pause a moment and listen to the Steward's Band. Then witness the wireless operators at work, sending messages across the sea. To give us an idea of how the gigantic boat is handled in a storm, the second officers close all the bulkheads for us, and we examine the dial indicating exactly what bulkheads are open and what are closed. In passing, we are made acquainted with the officer of the watch and the quartermaster. Most interesting of all, and that which attracts our attention more fixedly, is the daily lifeboat drill, a practical demonstration of just how these boats are used during a wreck, when all are obliged to take to the boats. The lookout, leaving the crow's nest, where he keeps a piercing eye continually on the watch for approaching vessels or possible dangers. We are given a lesson in adjusting the life belts, and we are made thoroughly familiar with every detail of life aboard ship in crossing the great "pond."

A DOUBLE DANGER (Aug. 26).—Dangers and troubles never come singly. Little Margaret Mason is crippled. The family physician, whose brother is a noted surgeon, examines the child and tells her family that she can be cured by an operation, but the operation will cost $500. Her parents, willing to make any sacrifice for their child, decide to have the operation performed. The father, who is a railroad express messenger, is obliged to mortgage their home to pay for it. Preparations having been made, the surgeon, his assistant and the nurse, go to the house and proceed with their delicate performance. Mr. Mason, unable to stay at home, is compelled to go to work on the express car as usual. Among other things billed, is a pine box, containing a body. In transit on this trip he also carries a large amount of gold dust. When the train is under way and he is busy with his billing, the lid of the box opens and a convict, who escaped from jail by hiding himself in this way, peers out. Mason sees the reflection in the door of the safe, which is a new one, and dodges behind it, grabbing his gun at the same time. He fires through the pine box, the convict surrenders, but not without a struggle. Mason, after forcing the convict back into the box, nails the lid down, makes out a new label and ships the prisoner to the penitentiary from which he had fled. The operation on little Margaret proves successful. A reward of $1,000 had been posted for the capture of the convict and is paid to Mr. Mason. This enables him to pay the surgeon and clear the mortgage from their home. Little Margaret fully recovers and her little friends join with her parents in making merry.

FLIRT OR HEROINE (Aug. 27).—Joan Harley goes out to visit her married sister, Mrs. Col. Penton, in India. She is full of life and a flirt. Dr. Kenneth Leslie, a young surgeon, falls desperately in love with her, but he is very serious and becomes jealous of her flirtations. He proposes. She likes him, but does not feel like giving up her liberty and the fun she is having. He thinks that she has been trifling with him and tells her that he never wants to see her again. Time passes and Joan begins to regret her selfish decision. Cholera breaks out at the post, and she resolves to show her lover she is something more than a flirt or jilt, volunteers as an army nurse. He, in terror, urges her to desist, but she says it is her duty and she will do it, and day by day he sees her tenderness and courage in nursing the sick. Cholera breaks out at a station up country and they send for help. Kenneth volunteers to go. Joan sees he is ill and tries to dissuade him, but he persuades her that it is the call of duty. He is stricken down with the malady on the way and taken to a native hut. His servant sends word to the post and Joan insists on going to care for him. He recovers, and during his convalescence, Joan, by her tenderness, reveals her true self and her love for the doctor, and he is not slow to declare his for her.

LUBIN

THE DECEIVERS (Aug. 26).—On the last night of the season, Ormi Meredith, the star of Mr. O'Neil's productions, was sitting in her dressing room finishing a telegram to Mrs. Lang, of Cowper Lake, Bethlehem, N. H., telling her she will visit her for the Summer. The next day she calls on Mr. O'Neil, who tells her he has a big success for her for the next season. She signs her contract and after giving him her address for the Summer she bids him good-bye. Miss Meredith arrives at the Lang farm and she gets the idea she would like to be a country girl for a while. She borrows some clothes from one of the farm maids and after making them promise they will not tell who she is she makes up like this same farm hand. She picks up the milk pails and goes to the barn. In the billiard room of the Lambs Club, Paul Gresham, a well-known leading man, sees an advertisement in the paper for Summer boarders and he writes to John Middleton, Cowper Lake, Bethlehem, N. H., but before he goes he calls on Mr. O'Neil, who tells him he wants him to play leads for him next season and to leave his address. Gresham arrives at the Middleton farm and is laughed at by a farm hand because of his clothes. He also gets the idea he wants to dress like a farmer. He borrows some old clothes and does work on the farm. Gresham goes with the farm hand to water the horses and Miss Meredith enters and asks Gresham if he saw Farmer Lang. They both take each other for farmers and they both act the part. Miss Meredith runs back to the farm and asks Mrs. Lang who the handsome farm lad is, but Mrs. Lang, not knowing Gresham, cannot tell her. Gresham runs back to the Middleton farm and asks Mr. Middleton who the beautiful farm maid is. He is also ignorant of Miss Meredith. Miss Meredith visits the Middleton farm again and asks Gresham to come to the Lang farm for supper, which he does, and to keep up the part they eat with their knife. They get out on the porch together. Gresham kisses her hand and exits. She is worried because she is falling in love with a country boy, and Gresham has the same thought. Mr. O'Neil is busy in his office looking up the addresses of his leads for the next season and finds they have both gone to the same place. He leaves for the country to interview them. He arrives at the Lang farm and is told Miss Meredith is out in the field. He finds them seated on a hay rake making love. When Gresham sees Mr. O'Neil he runs away, and Miss Meredith tells O'Neil she is in love with a farmer and O'Neil tells Miss Meredith that he is Paul Gresham, the leading man who is going to play opposite her next season. She makes him promise he wont tell who she is, and when O'Neil introduces him as Paul Gresham, the actor, she tells him she loves actors, but she is afraid he wont want to marry a poor country girl. His love proves stronger than anything else, and he tells her he will marry her at once. Miss Meredith goes to her trunk and gets some comedy wedding clothes and comes down before the guests and is married to Gresham. After the wedding O'Neil goes to Gresham and introduces Miss Meredith to him as his wife and leading lady for next season. She tells him she knows he married her because he loved her and not because she was a great actress. They embrace happily as the guests exit.

THE BURNT CORK (Aug. 28).—Mrs. Diggs, landlady, spends half of her time trying to collect rent from one of her roomers, a "ham" actor, and in trying to make her husband work. Finally she loses patience with them both, orders the actor out of the rooming house, and makes hubby wash dishes. She seats herself outside the kitchen door to see that hubby does not escape, and falls asleep. Inside the kitchen hubby takes too many draughts from a pint bottle and he, too, falls asleep. The actor, preparing to leave the house, descends the stairs, finds the two of them fast asleep and, for revenge, he gleefully opens his make-up box and covers both the faces with burnt cork. To heighten the joke, he takes an old convict's cap from his wardrobe and puts it on Mr. Diggs' head. Then he "beats" it in haste. Mrs. Diggs is awakened by a 'phone call and learns that she is late for choir practice. She leaves the house, forgetting about hubby. Her black-face, of course, creates the impression that she is a negress. On the way downtown she enters a soft drink establishment, but is refused service, especially when several ladies leave in disgust. Outside on the street again, she is accosted by a negro "swell," much to the amusement of a policeman to whom she appeals. Still ignorant of the fact that she is black-faced, she enters the choir balcony, places herself next to the minister and starts singing. She then lifts her veil to read from the psalm book. The minister looks down at her suddenly and nearly drops dead. Then the ladies of the choir become aware of the fact that a negress has obtruded herself into their midst, and an indignation meeting starts. The minister chases Mrs. Diggs from church. The crowd follows her to her home, and she rushes inside. In the kitchen Mr. Diggs is just awakening. He picks up a newspaper and reads a headline, "Negro Woman Maniac Loose." Then he hears a noise in the hallway. It is Mrs. Diggs. Stopping to fan her perspiring face with a newspaper, she reads the headline, "Negro Convict at Large." Husband and wife meet in the kitchen. She thinks he is the negro convict. He thinks she is the negro maniac. He looks out of the window and sees the crowd. His suspicions are confirmed. He is alone with a negro maniac! She is alone with a desperate negro convict! He arms himself with a carving knife. She picks up her rolling pin. With their eyes glued upon one another they circle around the kitchen table. Then hubby sees his chance and makes a break for the door. She follows. The crowd starts to chase them; it ends at the police station. They are led before the magistrate. Neither are aware of their make-ups as yet. They insist they are white, and are given mirrors to gaze into. Horrors! She then declares she is Mrs. Diggs. Diggs promptly produces his visiting card and explains to his wife he is her husband. The mystery is cleared.

ECLIPSE—George Kleine

THE GOLDEN CURL (Aug. 28).—James Parker, an engineer, misses a set of valuable drawings for a new machine, from his desk, and accuses Robert, his secretary, of the theft. Unable to find any trace of the papers, he decides to send for Nat Barnes, the famous detective, to solve the mystery.

The latter appears and immediately makes a careful scrutiny of the room. He examines the drawer which contained the sketches, and lo! he finds a tress of yellow hair, which afterwards proves to exactly match that on the head of Lucy Parker, the daughter.

Barnes leaves the house, and later returns in disguise to watch the girl. Concealing himself in the next room, he overhears a telephone conversation, in which Lucy angrily tells her sweetheart that she is coming right over after "them."

Quietly escaping through the window, the detective quickly changes places with a cabman, and later when the young lady engages the vehicle, obediently drives her to her destination.

Upon her arrival, he follows her into the house and with his aides, who have kept close behind, completely surprises the culprit, who finally confesses to have induced the girl to loan him the sketches. After placing the fellow under arrest, the able detective returns the papers to their original owner.

CINES—George Kleine

A PICTURE, C. O. D (Aug. 24).—This is a "good one" on poor old John Stout. His friends mischievously order a painting from an art dealer, and direct him to deliver it to Stout's residence, C. O. D.

The artist wastes no time, and arrives the next morning before Stout has arisen. The good wife arouses her husband, who angrily denies ever making such a purchase.

A quarrel then ensues, in which the picture is smashed and so is Stout's temper. It ends by his having to "cough up" for all the damage done.

On the same reel:

JENKINS, THE WATCHMAN. — The "watchful" Jenkins is making his rounds of the estate, when suddenly he is aroused from his customary lethargy by strange sounds coming from the direction of the mansion, as if some one is calling for help.

He immediately rushes into the house to the assistance of the supposed victim, and bursts into the drawing-room, where he finds a large company of guests listening to the plaintive voice of the hostess singing "Pity Me! Oh, Pity Me!"

On the same reel:

MODERN NAPLES.—A charming scenic spreading before us views of the harbor, the Via Caracciolo, St. Fernando Square, the gallery of Umberio the First, the Stock Exchange and the University.

BIOGRAPH

WITH THE ENEMY'S HELP (Aug. 19).—The discouraged prospector is about to give up his search for the coveted ore, when he hears his two little children praying "Please, God, help papa find gold." Their faith gives him new hope and their prayer is efficacious, for he does find it and so stakes the claim, intending to register it at his earliest opportunity. While the little family is lunching at their camp, "Faro Kate" and her gambler husband ride by the claim and jump it, the husband urging Kate to go to the Claim Office and register it. Kate, who does not see the necessity for haste, is slow in starting. When the prospector returns to his "diggings" he finds the gambler in possession and in the struggle which ensues the prospector falls and is hurt. The prospector's wife, arriving on the claim, realizes the situation in a flash and is determined to win the race to the Claim Office, for she feels that the claim jumper has started for that place. By a most unique trick of fate she wins out.

A CHANGE OF SPIRIT (Aug. 22).—Denied by her narrow-minded father all associations except that of her chaperon, the girl, while strolling in the park, indulges in a little flirtation with a young man who is one of a couple of gentlemen thieves. A self introduction comes when he gallantly picks up a book she has dropped. In restoring the book, he cunningly takes her hand-bag in order that he may have an excuse to call on her later and return it, giving her the impression that she had lost it. When he calls her father is away, and so, in the spirit of bravado, she invites him in. While there he surreptitiously secures the key to the house, intending to return later with his partner. However, upon accidentally meeting the girl the second time, he becomes deeply impressed and the thought of his promise to his chum to enter the house that night palls. As can be imagined, the work laid out is odious in the extreme, but it is the means of causing in him a change of spirit.

ESSANAY

HER ADOPTED FATHER (Aug. 23).—Little Mary Wilson, an orphan, feels that her heart will break when so many of her companions at the orphanage are adopted into wealthy families and she is always left in bitter tears. But the kind Mother Superior loves the little girl and takes her to a great office building one morning when collecting alms. Here Mary meets Richard Claiborne, a wealthy business man, and her heart beats joyfully when he takes her in his strong arms and kisses her tenderly. So Mary writes him a note on leaving the office and slips it under the door. Claiborne finds it and a bitter smile crosses his face as he reads Mary's pathetic plea to be adopted into his home. Next morning Mary receives a letter from Claiborne saying there is a beautiful lady in his home who would not like a little girl, but that he is lonely, too, and her visit has made him happier than he has been for months. With the letter clutched in her hand, Mary bows her head on the table and is weeping softly when the Mother Superior enters and sees the letter. Instantly she resolves to find Mary the home she deserves, and takes her to Mrs. Claiborne. The rich society woman kisses Mary tenderly, then says she is afraid her husband does not care for children. The Mother Superior now shows her Claiborne's letter to Mary, and Mrs. Claiborne instantly takes the little one into her heart and home. That evening Claiborne enters the great library, to find Mary asleep at his wife's feet, worn out with the day's play. Both now realize how wrongly they have misunderstood each other, she believing he cared only for business and he thinking she enjoyed only the whirl of gay society. So with the coming of the little orphanage sunbeam into their lives the future looms brightly and the past is forgotten.

BRONCHO BILLY'S ESCAPADE (Aug. 24).—Pretty Vedah Morley is drawing a pail of water at the well one morning when Broncho Billy approaches, lifts his sombrero respectfully and asks for a drink. Struck by the simple charm of the girl, Broncho watches until she enters her shack nearby, then goes on down the trail, unconscious of the fact that Vedah is gazing after him from the window with the light of admiration lurking in the depths of her pretty eyes. In the town saloon Broncho sits in a poker game, detects that he is being cheated, wounds the puncher in the hand, recovers his money, holds the crowd at bay and makes his escape. The sheriff is notified and a posse instantly take up the pursuit. With a bullet through his right arm, Broncho eludes the posse and finally stumbles into the clearing of Vedah's home. He is admitted by the girl, explains the situation and she is bathing his helpless arm when the posse arrives. Quickly Vedah hides Broncho and sends the posse away on a false trail. One of the deputies, struck with her pretty face, returns and attempts to embrace her when Broncho springs out from the adjoining room. The deputy endeavors to capture Broncho at gun's point, but the sturdy hero, with only the aid of his one good arm, forces the deputy's hand through the window and explodes the revolver twice, then wrests the weapon from him. Hearing the shots, the posse return. Broncho now compels the deputy to send them away on another false trail, then confiscates his broncho and watches him out of sight down the rocks. At the door Vedah thanks Broncho, presses his hand warmly and receives the assurance that he will return to her some day, then gazes after him as he waves his sombrero and disappears down the dusty trail.

EDISON

HELPING JOHN (Aug. 28).—John Winter is inaugurating a campaign in the stock market by which he hopes to gain a firm hold on a company known as the Star Milling Company. His plan involves forcing the price of Star Preferred down, by attacking the market. John is not a large operator so, in order to swing the deal, he must be prompt and catch the market unawares, selling in unnoticeable quantities at the start.

John's wife, Edith, is devoted to him. She is rich in her own right and would like to be helpful to John but he will never tell her anything about business matters. She is troubled by his preoccupation while he is preparing the deal in Star. It looks to her as though something was wrong and her fears are confirmed when she finds in his coat a letter regarding the necessity of his selling Star Preferred. She infers that he is forced to sacrifice his holdings in Star in order to get money.

Poor John! She would give him all the money he needs but she knows his pride would not allow him to accept it. She decides to secretly buy this Star Preferred that he has to sell and give it back to him as a surprise. She goes to a broker's office and begins to buy secretly, just as John, through his lieutenants, begins to sell. Her ignorance of the market leads her to buy the stock with a freedom that experienced traders would fear to use. Her brokers, recognizing her from the signature on her check and knowing her husband's relation to the market, figure that some subtle coup is on and they and their customers follow her unconscious lead, the combination naturally forcing Star Preferred up to an unprecedented figure.

The scenes shift from the offices of Edith's brokers to the stock exchange and to John's office back and forth in increasing excitement.

John is wiped out! Edith gets control of the stock and her broker's statement shows she has made a fortune while she was "helping" John. She arrives at his office just as he wonders how he can ever get his head above water again. Explanations are made and all ends happily when, in the following scene, John is patiently explaining to Edith, at home, the details of his business.

THE BOY AND THE GIRL (Aug. 30).—This is a child story for parents as well as young folks.

The small son of wealthy young parents is left to the care of a governess while the father and mother enjoy themselves. He is taught botany and piano playing and considered of small account as a real boy by his parents.

One day, in the park, a little Mischief whose father believes in outdoor exercise and freedom for children, entices the boy away from his governess and after a long walk they arrive at the foot of the Palisades and take off their shoes and stockings to go in wading. Meanwhile on the top of the cliff above them, workmen are engaged in some blasting and while the children are playing they are suddenly startled by a cry from above. Looking up they see a huge boulder dislodged and rolling down the declivity toward them. Never having been used to action, the boy hesitates, but only for a second; then the real spirit of the man within him awakes and he dashes forward, pulling the little girl aside, just in time to save her from the huge boulder which dashes over the spot where she had stood a half a second before.

Realizing what he had done for her, the little girl would embrace him as a hero and the idol of her dreams, but he, being just a real boy, prefers to "shake hands and call it square." He delivers her safely to her father and starts to leave but she tells her father what has happened during their walk and the latter gentleman takes him home to his parents who have by this time missed him, and are disposed to be very much put out at his running away. The scolding is interrupted by the little girl's father, who tells what the boy has really done and the parents realize for the first time that here is a son worth having.

Edison child players are probably the most natural and unspoiled little folks known to the business and this story is acted in their very best and most appealing style. It is certain of popularity.

SIMLA (Aug. 31).—Under the canopy of Oriental skies, lies the Empire of India, with its mountains, deserts, valleys and cities all of which abound with limitless interest. Hence this descriptive picture of Simla. Like its predecessors taken in that country, it revels in the wealth of sumptuous scenery and depicts as well the habits and customs of the people, some just as they were in days primeval. In the little town of Simla, snuggling on the skyward summit of a sturdy mountain, seven thousand feet above the level of the sea, such scenes as follow, this film relates.

A Hindoo dwarf, uncanny in appearance, selling three whiffs of smoke at a sixth of a cent, inhaled like the breath of life by the purchasing native, or turning to the mountain's rugged grandeur, a railroad is seen cautiously worming its way along the downward slopes.

Christ Church on Easter Sunday, with the multitude gaily attired, passing to and fro after vespers are over, adds a cheery luster to the film and bears a resemblance to that of the more modern countries. A view taken in the native bazaar, not unlike that described in the "Arabian Nights," carries one within the glow of real Indian atmosphere where houses with open fronts and streets congested with natives, some grinding corn by rotary foot motion, others passing hitber and thither in the whirligig of commercialism, can be reviewed. Other scenes, taken in more remote parts of the country, show natives, like beasts of burden, assiduously toiling, under a crushing load of lumber, strapped to their backs like a pack pony.

Going then to the upper Sutlej, can you imagine in these enlightened days, a river made navigable by such primitive means as inflated bullock skins on which the natives lie and paddle their feet, skimming like a bubble on the tide?

There are many other scenes of equal interest that tend to make this film the quintessence of pictorial travel.

RELIANCE

THE HEART OF A COSSACK (Sept. 4).—Halia leaves her father's presence to keep tryst with Nazar while Hant, the friend, watches. A general high up in Russian circles bribes the father by offers of money and social position to help him wed Halia. In order to get Nazar out of the way he is sent on a secret mission and a committtee, following the Russian custom, calls upon Halia and her father to arrange for the wedding. Halia does not know that it is the general and not Nazar that she is arranging to wed and joyously acquiesces. Hant overhears the plot and brings the news to Nazar. They return in time to bring consternation upon the committee. The father refuses Nazar's suit and repulses Halia's pleading. Nazar and Hant leave but arrange to kidnap Halia. The father learns of the abduction and follows with his retainers. Nazar stands them off until Hant and his friends ride up and defeat her father and his party. Hant is about to shoot Halia's father when Nazar relents at the old man's suffering and gives him back his daughter. The father, overjoyed, has a change of heart and agrees to the marriage of Nazar and Halia.

LOVE KNOWS NO LAWS (Sept. 11).—Jackson, a young revenue officer, starts up into the mountains to locate an illicit still. He leaves word for his deputies that he will telegraph for them when the opportunity is ripe. Burying his telegraph instruments, etc., at the foot of a telegraph pole, he works on up the mountain. Red Dick, the old moonshiner's assistant, is in love with Mary, the old man's daughter. He presses his unwelcome attention upon Mary and Jackson, coming along, saves her. The old man, though suspicious at first, ultimately admits Jackson to his service as a lumberman and Mary promptly gives him her heart. Jackson eventually discovers the still and is telegraphing his deputies when he is captured. Mary learns of it, robs the men's guns of the bullets, informs Jackson, and when he is supposedly shot she is left to bury him. As she is untying his bonds "Red" returns and, disgusted at her slowness, begins to bury Jackson himself. Mary, to gain time for the arrival of the deputies, leads "Red" to think that her love for him is real and, as he crushes her in his arms, the deputies arrive, release Jackson and capture "Red." Mary, however, has run away unseen and warns her father and his helper. They escape and Mary, after leading the deputies on a false scent, surrenders herself into Jackson's waiting arms.

"MABEL'S BEAU"

(Majestic for Sept. 3rd)

The above film is one of the best comedy bits that we have seen for many a day. It is one which is spontaneous. And not only this, but it has a heart interest for everyone; there is not an incident in it that will not strike home to somebody, and in fact to many; and it is extremely funny.

Mabel is the eldest daughter of a respectable but poor family, which consists of father and mother and four children.

Mabel is invited away to the seaside, where she meets a rich young man who falls in love with her.

The family receive a letter from her saying that she is returning home and that the young man is bringing her in his automobile, and to please get the house nicely arranged, borrow silverware, etc., from a neighbor, and be sure and to have father put on a white shirt and a clean collar.

The following scene shows the commotion of getting the house in order, borrowing chairs and silverware, disguising folding beds, etc., and incidentally getting "father in line."

At the arrival of Mabel and her young man everything and everybody is splendiferous in Sunday attire, and all goes without a hitch.

The young man is no sooner gone, however, than the "getting-ready-for-bed" arrangements commence; father jerks his collar open, the kidlet's bed is made up on the top of the square piano, the folding beds are opened, and so on. A rap comes to the door, and alas! the young hopeful of the family reaches it first and ushers in Mabel's beau, who has forgotten his gloves. Consternation prevails.

It so happens that the young man has to break a dinner engagement with Mabel for the next night, on account of business. When she receives his note she thinks that it is an excuse because he has found out how poor she is.

However, a day or two afterward when she is helping her mother with the wash, in walks her "beau," who straightway turns in and helps with the washing, and all ends happily and well.

EASTMAN

motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

Feet

June 22—The Maniac.....
June 28—The Actor's Test.....
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City.....
July 17—The Airman .....
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

Aug. 1—A Life for a Kiss.....
Aug. 5—The Meddlers.....
Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun.....
Aug. 12—The Battle Ground (2 reels).....
Aug. 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger.....
Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony.....
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—The Wooing of Wathena.....
Aug. 22—The Bandit of Point Loma.....
Aug. 26—The Jealous Rage.....
Aug. 28—Lonesome Trail Pioneers.....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
"101 Bison"

July 30—The Desert .....
Aug. 2—The Gambler and the Girl.....
Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw.....
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle.....
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call.....
Aug. 16—The Other Girl.....
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt.....
Aug. 23—The Reckoning .....
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude.....
Aug. 30—The White Lie .....

BISON (UNIVERSAL)

July 30—An Even Break (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—His Partner's Share (Dr.).....
Aug. 6—A Western Girl's Dream (Drama).
Aug. 10—Her First Choice (Drama).....
Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Shot that Failed (Drama).....
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Com.).....

BRONCHO

Sept. 18—Sundered Ties.....
Sept. 25—His Better Self.....

CHAMPION

July 29—The Poisoners .....
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Rr.)....
Aug. 12—For His Child (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)...
Aug. 26—The Foundling .....
Sept. 2—The Maid and the Rocks.....

COMET

July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.).....1000
Aug. 3—The Sheriff Outwitted (W. Dr.)....1000
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 10—Holdup in Buckeye Canyon (W. Dr.) 1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)..1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (W. Dr.).....1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)..1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (W. Dr.).....
Aug. 26—A Divided House.....
Aug. 31—The Moonshiner's Task (Dr.)....
Aug. 14—A Frontier Soldier of Fortune....
Sept. 2—The Dentist's Dilemma.....
Sept. 7—A Waif of the Mountains.....

ECLAIR

Aug. 4—The Price of Blood.....
Aug. 4—Beautiful Vintage Time.....
Aug. 6—Because of Bobbie .....
Aug. 8—Boys Again .....
Aug. 11—The Foster Sister.....
Aug. 11—Carlshad .....
Aug. 13—Daddy (Com.) .....
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com. Dr.).
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Dr.).....
Aug. 18—Egyptian Ruins .....
Aug. 20—Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry (Com.)
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Will (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day.....
Aug. 27—Dolls .....
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade.....
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts.....
Sept. 3—The Actress Pulls the Strings..
Sept. 5—The Guest at the Parsonage....
Sept. 8—The Kind Old Man.....

GREAT NORTHERN

July 20—Uncle Reuhen Goes to Town (Com.) 332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.).... 876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.).2000
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Com.).....
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Dr.).....

Feet

Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Dr.)..... 944
Aug. 31—Love is Blind (Dr.)..... 943
Sept. 7—The Afflicted Governor (Com.)... 496
Sept. 7—The Spring Lock (Com.)..... 457
Sept. 14—Aunt Jane's Will (Com. Dr.)...1000

GAUMONT

Aug. 6—Dream Driven .....
Aug. 13—Graziella the Gypsy.....
Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold.....
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice.....
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice.....
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion.....
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin.....
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin.....
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run.....
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run.....
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels).....
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels).....
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter and The Launching of the Imperator.....
Sept. 10—Love's Serenade .....
Sept. 12—The Plague-Stricken City .....
Sept. 17—Queen Elizabeth's Token.....
Sept. 19—Kings in Exile (2 Reels).....
Sept. 24—The Heart of a Redman.....

GEM

July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters.....
July 30—Back to Her Own.....
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun.....
Aug. 13—Babette (Dr.).....
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—Baby Fingers .....
Sept. 3—The Celebrated Case (2 Reels)...

IMP

Aug. 3—In and Around Chicago.....
Aug. 12—Big Hearted Sim (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 15—In Old Tennessee (Dr.) (2 reels)..2000
Aug. 17—Kidnapping Dolly (Com.).....
Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Scenic) .....
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Chappie, the Chaperon.....
Aug. 24—The Great Geysers of Yellowstone Park .....
Aug. 26—Making Good .....
Aug. 29—A Happy Family.....
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox.....
Aug. 31—Her Burglar .....
Sept. 2—The Love Test.....
Sept. 5—Tears of the Weak.....
Sept. 7—Lem's Hot Chocolate.....
Sept. 7—Queenie and the Cannibal.....

ITALA

Feh 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene....
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.).....
July 20—Magical Hat .....
July 20—An Eventful Day.....

KEYSTONE

Sept. 23—Cohen Collects a Deht.....
Sept. 23—The Water Nymph.....
Sept. 30—Riley and Schultze.....
Sept. 30—The New Neighhor.....

LUX
By Prieur.

July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.) 967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)..... 983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liberty (W. Dr.)..... 580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)... 272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.).. 744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Sc.)..... 239

MAJESTIC

Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.)....
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.).....
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute.....
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol.....
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl.....
Aug. 18—Toodles .....
Aug. 20—The New Butler.....
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses.....
Aug. 27—The Disputed Claim.....
Sept. 1—The Chaperon.....
Sept. 3—Mabel's Beau.....

MILANO

Aug. 10—Playthings of Fate.....
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel.....
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear.....
Aug. 31—A Circus Romance.....
Sept. 7—Victims of Ingratitude (2 Reel)..

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Feet

July 24—The Little Moonshiner.....
July 26—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit
July 29—The Undoing of Slim Bill.....
July 31—The Ohligation .....
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold
Aug. 7—Fatty of E. Z. Ranch (W. Com.)..
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—The Alibi (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—A Stubborn Cupid.....
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet.....
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill .....
Aug. 30—The Girls and the Chaperon.....
Sept. 2—On the Border Line.....
Sept. 4—The Evidence.....
Sept. 6—The Girls and the Chaperon.....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Aug. 9—The Burglar and the Rose (Dr.)...
Aug. 14—Horse Show at Long Branch (Top.)
Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Com.).....
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—Life's Lesson (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing.....
Sept. 4—Love Will Find a Way.....
Sept. 6—His Weakness.....
REX——
Sept. 5—From the Wilds.....
Sept. 8—The Ghost of a Bargain.....

RELIANCE

Aug. 14—Order in the Court.....
Aug. 17—A Man Among Men.....
Aug. 21—One Against One.....
Aug. 24—North of 53.....
Aug. 28—Secret Service Man.....
Aug. 31—Thelma (2 reels).....
Sept 4—The Heart of a Cossack.....
Sept. 7—The Bully and the Shrimp.....
Sept. 11—Love Knows No Laws.....
Sept. 14—For Love of Her.....

REPUBLIC

Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice.....
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp.....
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons .....

REX

Aug. 8—The Troubadour's Triumph.....
Aug. 11—None Can Do More.....
Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Dr.).....
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.)....
Aug. 29—A Japanese Idyl.....
Sept. 1—In Honor Bound.....

SOLAX

Aug. 7—The Little Rangers.....
Aug. 9—The Pink Garters.....
Aug. 14—The Blood Stain.....
Aug. 16—The Strike .....
Aug. 21—His Double .....
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels).....
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise .....
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps .....
Sept. 4—The Fight in the Dark.....
Sept. 6—Open to Proposals.....

Bison (101) N. Y. Motion

Sept. 3—The Honor of the Tribe.....
Sept. 6—An Old Tune.....

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 13—Now Watch the Professor.....
Aug. 16—The Wrecked Taxi.....
Aug. 18—As Others See Us.....
Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks .....
Aug. 20—The Darkest Hour.....
Aug. 23—Conductor 786 .....
Aug. 25—When a Count Counted.....
Aug. 27—Lucile (Part 1 and 2).....
Aug. 30—Lucile (Part 3).....
Sept. 1—The Capture of New York.....
Sept. 3—The Voice of Conscience.....
Sept. 6—His Father's Son.....

VICTOR

Aug. 16—The Chance Shot (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred.....
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch.....
Sept. 6—After All.....

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

RELEASED SUNDAY, SEPT. 1.

The Capture of New York

THE STORY OF THE BIG WAR GAME. See 20,000 fighting men in action. See how battles are now won by wireless. See scouting by the amazing aerial squadron. Marvel at the wonders of the 20th Century Warfare!

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 3.

The Voice of Conscience

Another plot-with-a-twist. Two girls falling in love with the same man. Out motoring one day they are thrown from the machine and carried to the hospital. Here one of the girls pours poison into the medicine of the other, and later the Dread White Screen is placed about the rival's bed. Here the "twist" enters, and the story swings into a very pleasant finish.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 30.

His Father's Son

This is one of those "dynamiting stories" that this producer can put on more realistically than any other. There is the usual UNUSUAL Thanhouser plot and you are spared no thrills in the working out of it. More gripping, more intense, more exciting than "On the Stroke of Five."

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.
Send me FREE August Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name .....
Address .....
Exchange .....

Coming! "UNDINE" After the Famous Riverside Classic In 2 Reels

TUESDAY, SEPT. 24TH

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

SATISFACTION

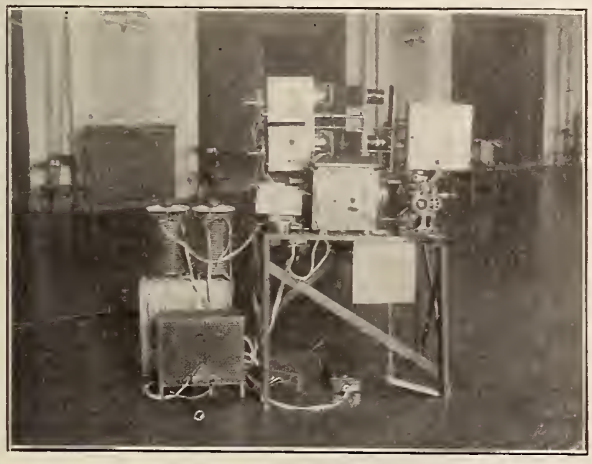
ALWAYS OBTAINED WITH A

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

A good workman is known by his tools. So, with the lecturer. He must utilize the best medium wherewith to interest and please his audience.

In no line is this more evident than in the moving picture field, where the pictures projected must be clear, steady and without flicker.

The name of Prof. Dwight L. Elmendorf stands for perfection in moving pictures; and the subjoined letter speaks for itself. It partially reveals why POWER'S is the favorite machine with every prominent lecturer.



Special No. 6 Equipment used by Prof. Elmendorf

July 1st, 1912.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY,
90 Gold Street, New York City.

Gentlemen:—Replying to your recent inquiry am glad to say that your new No. 6 model which we installed last season has given us entire satisfaction; it runs perfectly and produces an absolutely flickerless picture, far surpassing any machine I have ever seen; and, as you are aware, I have been constantly in the work of making and projecting moving pictures ever since the business began.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) F. H. WHITE,
Operator for D. L. Elmendorf.

Our newest equipment, No. 6A, retains the mechanism of the No. 6, to which are added many vital improvements.

POWER'S ALWAYS SATISFIES. Now, better than ever. Write for catalogue D, giving full details

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 Gold Street, New York City

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
July 25—The Would Be Shriner (Com.)
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)
July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.)
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.)
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.)
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.)
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (2 reels) (Dr.)
Aug. 12—The Inner Circle (Dr.)
Aug. 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)
Aug. 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 26—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Com.)
Sept. 26—Through Dumb Luck (Com.)
Sept. 29—A Pueblo Legend

CINES

C. Kleine

Aug. 3—Law and the Man (Dr.)	640
Aug 3—Carthage and Sidi-Bu-Said (Sc.)
Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)	903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.)	1067
Aug. 13—Mona Lisa in Disguise (Com.)	600
Aug. 13—Vicovaro, Italy (Sc.)	400
Aug. 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Dr.)	1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Dr.)	963
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Com.)	235
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Sc.)	290
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Com.)	450
Aug. 27—The Bridge of Lammermoor (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 3—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—The Sacking of Rome (Dr.)	770
Sept. 7—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Sc.)	230
Sept. 10—Scenes Along Salerno Coast, Italy (Sc.)	140
Sept. 10—The Conspiracy of Catiline (Dr.)	885
Sept. 14—Honors Divided (Dr.)	1075

EDISON

July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)	600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)	400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves	1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.)	1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.)	985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)	1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.)	1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)	1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912	700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)	300
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)	980
Aug. 14—Holding the Fort (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine	1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.)	1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.)	1000
Aug. 27—Alone in New York (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Sc.)	1000
Sept. 3—The Triangle (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Sept. 4—Aladdin Up to Date (Com.)	1000
Sept. 6—Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Com.)	1000
Sept. 7—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va., 1912	400
Sept. 10—The Manufacture of Paper, Maine (Ind.)	1000
Sept. 11—The Stranger and the Taxicab (Com.)	1000
Sept. 13—The Dam Builder (Dr.)	100
Sept. 14—The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July 26—Twins
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.)
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.)
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—An Adamless Eden (Com.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile)	1000
Aug. 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Dr.)
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Com.)
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Dr.)
Aug. 27—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (W. Com.)	1000
Aug. 29—Three to One (Com.)	1000
Aug. 30—The Hermit (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Aug. 12—The Minister and the Outlaw
Aug. 14—The Stubbornness of Youth
Aug 15—Baseball Industry
Aug. 16—The Hindoo's Charm
Aug. 17—The Deputy's Peril
Aug. 19—The Hobo Club (Com.)
Aug. 19—Won at High Tide (Com.)
Aug. 21—The Convalescent (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The New Ranch Foreman (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.)
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Deceivers (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.)
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.)
Sept. 2—A Substitution (Com.)
Sept. 4—The Bank Cashier (Dr.)
Sept. 5—The Smuggler (Com.)
Sept. 6—A Romance of the Coast (Dr.)
Sept. 7—Little Family Affair (Com. Dr.)
Sept. 9—The Halfbreed's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Sept. 11—A Redhot Courtship (Com.)
Sept. 12—Betty and the Roses (Dr.)
Sept. 13—Never Again (Com.)
Sept. 13—Buster and the Pirates

G. MELIES

July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls
Aug. 15—Romance at Catalina
Aug. 22—The Moth and the Flame (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.)
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa
Aug. 10—Here and There in Oregon (Travel)
Aug. 10—Kittens
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 35
Aug. 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Com.)
Aug. 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.)
Aug. 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant Water
Aug. 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (W. Dr.)
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.)
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Edu.)
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (W. Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.)
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Hist. Dr.)
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Com.)
Aug. 26—Patbe's Weekly No. 35
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Dr.)
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bib.)
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Detective's Desperate Chance (W. Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist. Dr.)
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.)
Sept. 2—Pathe's Weekly No. 36
Sept. 3—Beat rix d'Este (Dr.)
Sept. 4—Locked Out of Wedlock (Com.)
Sept. 5—The Penalty Paid (Dr.)
Sept. 6—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Com.); and The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Sci.)
Sept. 7—Gee! My Pants! (Com.)

KALEM CO.

Aug. 2—The Barefoot Boy	1000
Aug. 2—Easter Celebration at Jerusalem (Sc.)
Aug. 5—The Mine Swindler (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 7—Freed from Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Wandering Musician (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 14—Kentucky Girl (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—The Prison Ship (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Com.)	1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Dr.)	1323
Aug. 26—The Little Wanderer (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 28—The Woman Hater (Com.)
Aug. 28—Palestine (Ed.)
Aug. 30—Jim Bludso (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—Saved from Courtmartial (Dr.)	1000

SELIG

Aug. 1—Officer Murray (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 2—The Wreck of the Vega
Aug. 2—The Right Way and the Wrong Way (Edu.)
Aug. 5—An Unexpected Fortune (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 6—The Man from Dragon Land (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com., Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 13—The Wayfarer (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 16—Two Gay Dogs (Com.)	1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.)
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.)	1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Edu.)
Aug. 26—The Laird's Daugbter (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 27—The Whiskey Runners (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 29—The Little Indian Martyr (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30—Just His Luck (Farce-Comedy)
Aug. 30—Frenzied Finance (W. Com.)

URBAN ECLIPSE

G. Kleine

Aug. 7—From Sion to Champery, Switzerland (Travel)	220
Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.)	390
Aug. 14—The Rivals (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities	300
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Ind.)	275
Aug. 21—A Day in the German Navy (Top.)	400
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.)	1020
Sept. 4—An Eccentric Sportsman (Com.)	455
Sept. 4—Small Game at the Zoo (Sc.)	165
Sept. 4—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Sc.)	380
Sept. 11—Glimpses of St. Petersburg (Sc.)	360
Sept. 11—And Chemical Action (Ed.)	180
Sept. 11—And Winter Sports in Moritz (Topical)	485

VITAGRAPH

Aug. 3—The Fatherhood of Buck McGee (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—Too Much Wooing of Handsome Dan	1000
Aug. 6—At the Eleventh Hour	1000
Aug. 7—The Cross-Roads	1000
Aug. 9—Wanted: A Grandmother	1000
Aug. 10—Suing Susan	1000
Aug. 12—Bunny and the Dogs	300
Aug. 12—Ingenuity	700
Aug. 13—The Heart of Esmeralda	1000
Aug. 14—Vultures and Doves	1000
Aug. 16—A Bogus Napoleon	1000
Aug. 17—Two Battles	1000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild	1050
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddleton	1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow	1000
Aug. 23—Saving an Audience	1000
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm II	388
Aug. 24—The Party Dress	614
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine	1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders	555
Aug. 28—Bumps	477
Aug. 30—Written in the Sand	1000
Aug. 31—The Bond of Music	1000
Aug. 26—A Double Danger
Sept. 2—Tommy's Sister
Sept. 3—Coronets and Hearts
Sept. 4—Capt. Barnacle's Legacy
Sept. 6—Bunny's Suicide
Sept. 6—She Wanted a Boarder
Sept. 7—A Wasted Sacrifice
Sept. 9—Patio Days
Sept. 10—The Higher Mercy
Sept. 11—The Hindoo Curse
Sept. 13—The Loyalty of Sylvia
Sept. 14—Popular Betty
Sept. 14—Fortunes in a Teacup

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3rd

THE ACTRESS PULLS THE STRINGS

Get your strings out for this one. A hearty comedy with a great big underlying moral.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th

THE GUEST AT THE PARSONAGE

It will pack your theatre with guests. The play takes a good-natured slap at hypocrisy which all will enjoy.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8th

THE KIND OLD MAN

Through his kindly designing a very bashful pair of lovers attain their hearts' most inner desire. A splendid comedy drama.

FILMS of QUALITY

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42nd St., New York City, N.Y.

ESTABLISHED

Firmly in Legitimate Channels of the Trade, by Trimless Methods,

FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA

And Its Recognized Program Has Made an Enduring Impression on the Thoughtful Exhibitor who Appreciates Fair Dealing along with Quality Films.

YOU NEED THIS OFFERING

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, GAUMONT WEEKLY, AMERICAN
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Address all communications 133-135 West 44th St., New York

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

BE UP-TO-DATE

Subscribe for the Leading Moving Picture Trade Publication
Moving Picture News

FIRST AID TO SCENARIOS!!

Leading Scenario Editor and Author will personally criticise and improve Photo-plays, with advice on sales. $1.00 for each Scenario; must be enclosed with MSS., and stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EUSTACE HALE BALL,
One Madison Avenue, New York City.

NIAGARA SLIDES

Means to you the best on the market. Just now six announcements for $1.00. Now don't think because they're cheap that they're not first-class. They are, and we're bound to please you in large quantitiesn bound to please you or refund your money. We buy stock in large quantities, we pay no big city rent; we're in the business to show you what a good slide means. Send for catalog, and let us tell you of our advertising and novelty slides.

LOCKPORT SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

PATENTS

promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,

H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN

Or THE YELLOW PERIL

A 3000-Foot Drama. Six styles lithographs, photos and heralds.

Exclusive Territory

NEW YORK FILM CO.
12 Union Sq. New York

DO YOU WANT TO MAKE MOVING PICTURES?
We sell and rent moving picture cameras, printers and perforators, new or second-hand.
Educational films made, advertising films taken to order.
We rent cameras and camera men.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFG. CO., Inc.,
248 West 35th Street, N. Y. C.

DESIGNING
ENGRAVING
ELECTROTYPING
HARDING PHOTO ENGRAVING CO.
8-10 WEST 13TH ST.
NEAR
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
TELEPHONE 813 CHELSEA

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST

The Cleveland Leader

Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

ROSS LENSES

For Projection Machines and Cinematograph Cameras
Ross Zeiss Tessar Lenses, F 3.5
No. 1—2-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
No. 1a—3-inch Focus in Focussing Mount
Send for our Catalogue of Cinematograph Lenses

GEORGE MURPHY, INC.,
57 East Ninth Street, New York

PIANISTS WANTED
to send name and address of theatre where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC
all New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made.

S. & B. PUB. CO.,
124 W. 45th St., New York City.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS

$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery

Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

The Art of Scenario Writing

By WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT
And 1 Year's Subscription to Moving Picture News for $2.00

THE 1913 MODEL
MOTIOGRAPH
THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

SPECIFICATIONS

MECHANISM

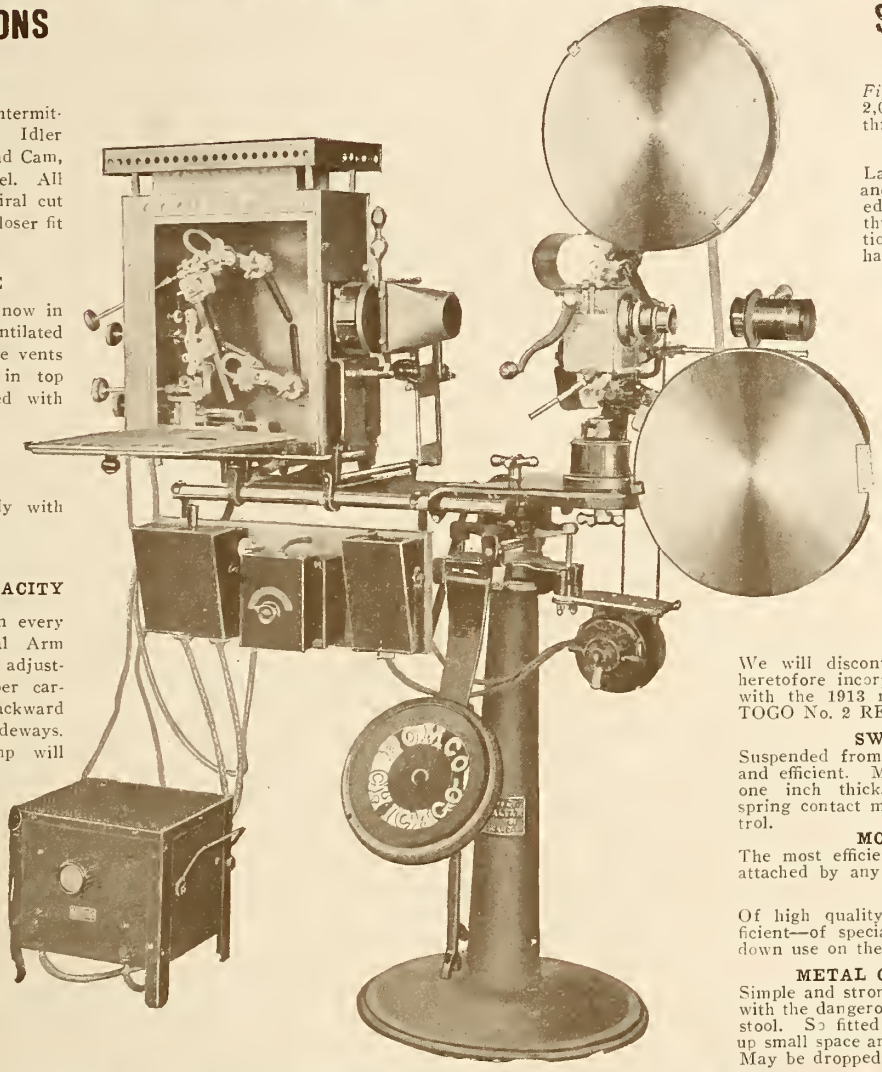
Contains hardened Intermittent Sprocket, Steel Idler Rolls, Heavier Star and Cam, Heavier Balance Wheel. All gears of steel and spiral cut teeth which means a closer fit and longer wear.

LAMP HOUSE

The largest and best now in use. Thoroughly ventilated on all sides with large vents for escape of heat in top hood. Carefully lined with best quality translite board in bottom, front and top. Passes Inspection Anywhere. Supplied only with spring hinged doors.

ARC LAMP
125 AMPERE CAPACITY

Heavier and better in every way. Has Universal Arm and Clamp with two adjustments added on upper carbon arm,—Either backward and forward or sideways. The Universal Clamp will hold any diameter of Carbon from ¾ down to ⅜. Racks provide for a TWENTY-INCH CARBON FEED—a 12" upper and 8" lower.



SPECIFICATIONS

MAGAZINES

Fifteen inch diameter to hold 2,000 feet of film at one threading.

DOWSER SHUTTER

Large diameter with ball balanced handle. Firmly mounted on condenser mount, thus also acting as protection for lantern slides. The handle may also be used for lifting out hot condenser chamber for changing of glasses.

FILM SHIELDS

Large and strong. Thoroughly protect film in its entire passage from one magazine to the other.

RHEOSTAT

Either heavy grid type or coil on 110 v. line. Our grid is adjustable from 20 to 55 amperes. The coil from 30 to 45 amperes.

STAND

The original Gibraltar base, perfect rigidity, 3 heights, with every desired adjustment.

REWIND

We will discontinue the patented rewind heretofore incorporated in mechanism, and with the 1913 model; we will supply the TOGO No. 2 REWIND at no extra cost.

SWITCHBOARD

Suspended from metal sliding base. Rigid and efficient. Made of best quality slate—one inch thick. Contains main switch, spring contact motor switch and speed control.

MOTOR DRIVE

The most efficient ever designed. Quickly attached by any one.

MOTOR

Of high quality—strong, compact and efficient—of special construction for up-side-down use on the Motiograph.

METAL OPERATOR'S SEAT

Simple and strong and designed to do away with the dangerous and cumbersome wooden stool. So fitted to the Motiograph to take up small space and in most convenient place. May be dropped completely out of way.

PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.

THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:

1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete,

OUR GUARANTEE FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR

Covering parts of the 1913 model Motiograph Mechanism that may become worn out in service, or which may show defects in material or workmanship, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 568 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

A HANDCOLORED OPPORTUNITY

OUR FILMS ARE PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT.

Two Reels of Teeming Sensation. One and 3 Sheets—Lobby Displays Photos —Cuts—Pamphlets. Let us hear from you in time.

Watch for the September issue of the PHOTO PLAY MAGAZINE.

This will make them long remember your house if you feature it properly.

Write us for a copy of the Gaumont Graphic which will explain its importance.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 3--Handcolored

The Refugee's Casket

NEXT IN LINE! SEPT. 19—Two Reels

Kings in Exile

A film that deals with the events of great empires. Here's a serious, dignified monarchy exposer. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title!

Thursday, Sept. 5th
A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

Tuesday, Sept. 10th
LOVE'S SERENADE

Scene from LOVE'S SERENADE

Thursday, Sept. 12th
THE PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY

Tuesday, Sept. 24th
THE HEART OF THE RED MAN

Thursday, Sept. .26th
THE STOLEN CUB

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors.

HERE WE GO!!! HAND-COLORED ONE REEL

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17th

Queen Elizabeth's Token

WHY PAY A BONUS for a State right picture when you can get the same thing as an ordinary release? The same story as advertised elsewhere?

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

SEP 10 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

SEP 12 1912

VOLUME VI
No. 9

AUGUST 31
1912

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

"THE LUCKY LOSER"
A Coming Eclair Release

Avoid Fake Films

GET THE REAL AND GENUINE

"101" BISON HEADLINERS

PRODUCED BY THE N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO.

"A Frontier Child"

2 REELS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13 2 REELS

SENSATIONAL FRONTIER PRODUCTION
THRILLING INDIAN BATTLES

BLOOD-STIRRING SCENES AS THE DESPERATE SOLDIERS IN THE STOCKADE THROW BOMBS IN THE MIDST OF THE ATTACKING INDIANS, ANNIHILATING THEM BY THE SCORE.

A WONDERFUL FILM

"The Fugitive"

1 REEL Sept. 10 1 REEL

Caught in a web of circumstantial evidence and accused of embezzlement, a bank cashier escapes from the police and makes his way west. He is joined by his sister and becomes a miner. The real thief locates him and causes his arrest. He is taken fatally ill, and through the influence of the wronged man's sister is induced to confess his guilt.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City. Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

KEYSTONE FILMS

MABEL NORMAND

A QUARTET OF POPULAR FUN MAKERS

MACK SENNETT
MABEL NORMAND
FRED MACE
FORD STERLING

SUPPORTED BY AN
ALL STAR COMPANY
IN SPLIT REEL COMEDIES

A KEYSTONE
EVERY MONDAY

FIRST RELEASE SEPTEMBER 23

"Cohen Collects a Debt" and "The Water Nymph"

Featuring MABEL NORMAND, the beautiful Diving Venus

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30

"Riley and Schultze" and "The New Neighbor"

Amusing subjects, cleverly acted by world-famous actors

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., New York City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

3 PER WEEK 3——TUES., THURS., SAT.——3 PER WEEK 3——THE WEEKLY EVERY WED.

TUES., THURS., SAT.——3 PER WEEK 3——THE WEEKLY EVERY WED.

IMPORTANT GAUMONT ANNOUNCEMENT—READ

Beginning SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21 the Gaumont Co. has decided to issue its third regular release—not including the Gaumont Weekly—note on Saturdays—this makes

3 GAUMONTS 3

PER WEEK

TUES., THURS. and SAT.

AND THE GAUMONT WEEKLY SHIPPED EVERY WEDNESDAY

OBTAINABLE FROM ANY FILM SUPPLY EXCHANGE

This new Saturday release will consist of two subjects—remember always a Saturday Split—the first part consisting of a GREAT AND IMPORTANT TOPICAL EVENT with a scientific, educational, industrial or scenic tailpiece

REMEMBER THEREFORE

3 GAUMONTS 3

PER WEEK

TUES., THURS. and SAT.

Also the GAUMONT WEEKLY which is released for shipment regularly on WEDNESDAYS.

ALL OUR FILMS ARE PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT

GAUMONT CO.

FLUSHING NEW YORK

MR. EXHIBITOR—DON'T MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY. Order the new SATURDAY GAUMONT from your exchange at once.

3 PER WEEK 3——TUES., THURS., SAT.——3 PER WEEK 3——THE WEEKLY EVERY WED.

GAUMONT

The Gaumont Co. has decided to put out that widely-heralded, sensational, intensely exciting two-reel hand colored feature entitled at 15c per foot on the State Right basis.

IN THE LAND OF THE LIONS

1, 3 and 4 SHEET LITHOGRAPHS

REMEMBER—TWO REELS—HAND COLORED

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE NOW!

This is the biggest, bulliest, two-reel sensation that the capable house of Gaumont ever made. More wonderful than ATTACKED BY A LION. A story of lions in the wilds of their own habitat. In fact no comparison with any former release. Wire your order for exclusive territory at once to

Gaumont GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y. Gaumont

GAUMONT

GAUMONT

GAUMONT

SPECTACULAR AND CONVINCING DETECTIVE PLAY

DUBLIN DAN

THREE REELS

A tense story dealing with an organized gang of clever counterfeiters. A careful analysis is made of the psychology of the criminal mind portraying the kind of criminal who commits wrong without a real motive.

FEATURING THE RETURN OF

BARNEY GILMORE

The widely known Irish and American player. A popular idol for years. The matinee girl's pet. Supported by our all star cast.

COPYRIGHTS WELL PROTECTED

STATE RIGHTS SOLD ONLY

Through FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

UNUSUAL ABUNDANCE OF ADVERTISING MATTER

REGULAR WEEKLY FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 11th, 1912

Treasures On the Wing

A child plays an April Fool trick on her mother. She takes the money and other valuables from her mother's purse, places them under the inner sole of her father's discarded shoes and puts a note in the purse saying "April Fool." A burglar comes that night, steals the purse and when he arrives in his den he sees the joke is on him. A complication arises that almost ends in the break-up of a quiet household. A comedy with Billy Quirk as the fun-maker.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 13th, 1912

The Soul of the Violin

A pathetic story of the reunion of a couple after the wife leaves her blind husband. The wife realizes that riches and fine clothes are not always synonymous with happiness. An original story which touches the heart strings.

Solax Company FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

© CLB258272

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI August 31, 1912 Number 9

YESTERDAY—TO-DAY—TO-MORROW

LOOKING back upon the history and progress of the Cinematograph industry and reading some of my editorials, I want to call the attention of my readers to several matters of vital interest that have occurred. I made several statements in the first paper I founded, viz., the Moving Picture World, and afterwards founded the Moving Picture News to carry out the ideas and principles I outlined in the columns of my first paper. Readers will see how events have followed one another in quick succession as I outlined in those editorials even up to the present day. Yesterday the exhibitor was looked upon as a mere cipher in the industry; he was considered to be a man, or a body of men, who had no right to question in any way the picture supplied to him; he had to be like the boy who was told to "Open your mouth and close your eyes and see what the Lord will send you." Oftentimes, instead of the expected sweetness, a practical joke was played on the boy and he got bitterness instead. So it was with the exhibitor until he got wise, and now the old cry will no longer answer. Great praise is due to the exhibitor for standing to his guns and keeping his house open under very adverse conditions, exhibiting the best he could obtain from the powers that be. Yesterday he was entwined round and enmeshed with all kinds of threats of consequences if he did not do just so. Yesterday he could not call his house, his license or his soul his own. To-day conditions have changed and changed considerably in favor of the exhibitor; he is beginning to learn his power and to feel that his feet are on solid ground. He is beginning to realize that manufacturers are referring to him, and beginning to consult him as to what is the best and most suitable for him and his patrons. To-day, thanks to the complete organization through the Exhibitors' Leagues, he is a power to be reckoned with, a power so great that I think he hardly realizes as yet the full extent to which he may go. To-day the moving picture industry is beginning to realize that that which pleased and suited the populace five or six years ago will not do so now, and that the brightest intellects, the keenest logic and the finest brains must be put into the scenario, and that the best photography must portray the result of the author's conceptions. Mediocre pictures—by that I mean indifferent photography—are things of yesterday and have no place in the program of to-day. To-day manufacturers are realizing more than they ever did before the fact that only the best can withstand the criticism of the public, and realizing such, are endeavoring to make their pictures conform in every respect to the advanced condition the public at large demand. All this is due to the fact that the exhibitors are now an organized body and a power in the counsels of cinematography. To-day inquiries are being made in a very searching manner into the conditions of the industry, and all interested are looking with eager eyes to the action of the Federal authorities in Philadelphia. The greatest obstacles for the progress of the industry have been swept away in the courts, and the progress and full advancement of the art is now more than assured. The Moving Picture News has had a great deal to do in the moulding of this opinion, and still stands in the foreground holding out the hope for still further advancement. We have advanced to-day too far ever to recede into the conditions that existed yesterday, the conditions existing in Carlisle, if the report of a manager of a theatre there is correct. When he was asked what class of pictures attract the greatest crowd to his theatre, he replied, "The largest crowd I ever had was to see the 'Jesse James' pictures displayed. I reaped big sums on that picture." Another manager in the same town experimented with a Dickens story, and he remarked that empty seats repaid him for his experiment. This one town is not sufficient to judge the community's tastes by, but I feel assured that in the vast majority of towns and cities the condition of Carlisle would be reversed, owing to the great advancement of public opinion along the lines of higher thought. To-day the moving picture theatre is the theatre of the people, and anyone making a round of these theatres will be astonished to find that, compared with yesterday, the caliber of the audiences has advanced to a wonderful degree of respectability and quality. What of to-morrow? I have repeatedly said, when all adverse conditions and trammels are removed from the cinematograph industry, that it would go by leaps and bounds along the road of progress. To-morrow you will see the amalgamation of the best interests in the art banded together for mutual protection and the elimination of the worst elements in the industry. An open market is in sight, and, looking at the present trend of events, it will come in the appreciable near future, and I am wondering what sort of conditions will exist if every Tom, Dick and Harry is allowed to foist his product upon the long-suffering public. This is only a thought, because to-morrow the long-suffering public and exhibitor will be a thing of yesterday, and unless the manufacturer has many pictures and employees of the highest class he will simply slide into oblivion. The educational advantages of the art will advance by great strides. Industrial pictures will be exhibited in every theatre in the country, showing the advances of the latest agricultural methods, mechanical engineering and the great possibilities that are opening out in the Western States, taking men back to the country, which will give them a living, while the city brings them to the verge of starvation. When these great possibilities are portrayed to the herding population of the congested districts, showing the possibilities of clean, healthy, open lives, "back to the land" will be the cry, back to better conditions, the possibilities that the pictures will open to their view will prove to be better educationalists than are the street-corner orators who are striving to flood the congested districts with feelings of socialism and anarchy. To-morrow the people will only see the best that can be portrayed in the life of the country, and those manufacturers who are now prepared to make an advanced movement along these lines will soon reap the reward of their efforts, and to this end I am more than fully convinced the National Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America will be the lever that will bring about these conditions by the upheaval and the moulding of opinion asking the portrayal of good, instead of the evil, in mankind.

Alfred H. Saunders.

NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE, CHICAGO CONVENTION

The eighteenth floor of the La Salle Hotel was one of the busiest hives of industry it is possible to imagine. The headquarters of the Exhibitors' League, with the executive officers always on the go, was a sight to gladden the eyes of any one who was desirous to see the progress of the exhibitors themselves; they were most enthusiastic and it was impossible to see a face with a grouch on. Then on this floor were situated also the manufacturers' exhibits, which filled the various rooms, and assistants were constantly at work like bees round a hive. There didn't seem to be a drone anywhere. Among the principal manufacturers we noted were:

The American Seating Company, with a display of chairs for use of the picture theatre. This was under the able charge of Messrs. A. E. Dickerman, J. G. Carlsen and George Anderson. In conversation with the editor Mr. Dickerman said the results were beyond his utmost expectations.

Passing next A. H. Andrews Company, seats shown by this firm were admirable and as the factory was within a block of the hotel many of the exhibitors availed themselves of the opportunity to visit. Messrs. J. M. McLoughlin, J. D. Carr, W. A. Bishop, A. N. Carstens and G. P. Shea were kept pretty busy explaining the various devices to the assembled exhibitors.

The American Song Slide & Poster Display Company, under charge of Mr. L. A. Heyman, showed A. B. C. posters and announcement slides.

The American Photoplayer Company was in charge of Messrs. C. C. Spaulding, president, and B. R. Van Valkenburg, secretary. This instrument attracted a large number of visitors who were interested in seeing the automatic device for playing selections of music.

The Decorators Supply Company was represented by A. F. and R. D. Powers, who distributed circulars and invitations to their works in Chicago.

The Deagans were represented by the proprietor and inventor, J. C. Deagan, who was himself in charge of the exhibit. We tried our 'prentice hand on the instrument and helped tune up some.

D'Arcy Ticket Vending Machine Company was represented by its owner, who made much of the device, which was very clever.

The General Electric Company, of Schenectady, showed the Mercury Arc Rectifier, Transformer, Flood Light, etc., in charge of Messrs. C. W. Gallup, J. L. Buchanan, J. H. Dority and F. M. Rosseland.

Hunton-Fell Elliott Company had a good exhibit of slides, photographs and display rack for lobby use.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company had on exhibit several instruments in the Conventional and, also, in the Orchestral Hall on Michigan avenue. These were in charge of our old friend, Mr. J. Hope Jones, whom we were glad once more to meet and exchange courtesies that were previously given in the Memorial Hall, Farrington street, London, some eleven years ago.

The Pyrene Company, of which we have had much to say in previous issues of this journal, was represented by the Chicago manager, Mr. D. Cole, and Mr. Norstron, who ably demonstrated to the assembled exhibitors the ease with which an incipient fire could be extinguished.

The International News Service was represented by Lafayette M. Davis, who made a very good display of photographs, slides and lobby pictures.

The Mirror Screen Company was well represented by Messrs J. F. Rembusch, the inventor, and F. P. Bloomfield. Mr. Rembusch informed the writer that it was worth the trouble and worry to be able to be at Chicago.

The Novelty Slide Company was represented by its proprietor, J. C. Coulfal, of New York, with a very attractive display of announcement, advertising and celebrity slides.

Russell & Erwan Mfg. Co., in charge of W. P. Hudson, had a unique exhibit in the form of panic doors, by which a bar, being pressed, unlocks the door which flies open, and if such a door as this was placed in every theatre the panic would be a thing of the past.

National Waterproof Film Company was in charge of W. A. Daniels and gave a good demonstration of its washing machine to the many interested exhibitors.

Just here we want to say a few words for the Underwood and Underwood Company. Their travelogue slides were well exhibited and proved most interesting to the vast number who visited their room and saw the beautiful quality of slides they had on hand, showing scenes from all over the world.

In the machine exhibit we particularly noticed the Enterprise Optical Motiograph in charge of Messrs. L. A. Woodward, F. A. Clark and F. W. Horn, who ably demonstrated this machine, explaining all the new improvements for 1913.

Nicholas Power Company showed their well-known Six A Camera in charge of Messrs. H. B. Coles and F. W. Smith.

The American Moving Picture Machine was in charge of its proprietor, Eric Morrison.

The Simplex machine in charge of J. E. Robin was very much admired.

All of the machines were well and ably demonstrated by those in charge of the same. Of course, it is hard to individualize any special one as they all had their various patrons packed in each exhibition room.

One of the most noted exhibitors on record was C. Lang Cobb, of the Reliance Company. It was not his fault if the exhibitors did not learn something about the Reliance films for his cold medallions were certainly in evidence. they were distributed among every one present.

On the whole the manufacturers are to be congratulated for the excellent exhibit made of their various products.

Peoria, Ill.—Illinois Feature Film Co. incorporated at $2,500. Incorporators, Robt. N. McCormick, Frank W. Williams, Josephine A. Johnson.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—The Garrick Theatre Co. incorporated at $24,000. Incorporators, W. T. Cooper, H. W. Linton, G. A. Bleich and R. S. Dulin.

A FEW WORDS ON FILM MERITS

Nestor

In "The Dawn of Netta" Nestor has produced one of the prettiest things that they have recently put on the market. The character of Netta is very sweet in its conception, and the portrayal and interpretation of the awakening of her love for her guardian is very good.

Imp

"Betty the Coxswain," from Imp, is a crackerjack, distinct in plot as in photography. The action of the play is characterized by a fresh spontaneousness. J. C. Rice, the famous coach of Columbia, is shown in this film coaching his oarsmen.

"Love, War and the Bonnet," also from Imp, is a masterful piece of work. What could be more refreshing than the interpretation of the part of "Sally" by Miss Margarita Fisher? A wonderful spontaneity characterizes her work.

Rex

"The Martyr," (dedicated to our mothers), written and acted by Miss Lois Webber, is good. It portrays in a realistic manner the martyrdom of the patient mother, and the lack of appreciation which too often is her only reward. This film has a good moral lesson, and must strike home to many hearts, wayward and otherwise.

Gem

"Baby Fingers" is a touching bit. In this story the young woman stenographer forges the name of her employer in order to get money to send her sick brother away. Her crime is discovered and she is arrested. The brother, ill as he is, gets out of bed and with his baby sister goes to the office of the employer. The likeness of the child to one of his own, of whom death has deprived him, causes him to relent, and all goes well.

Eclair

"Dolls," from Eclair, though a simple story, is one of the nicest things recently seen from that studio. The work of Miss Barbara Tennant shows off to particular advantage. It must be said of Miss Tennant that her impersonations are always charming and serious. She sheds a peculiar refinement about her in whatever type of character she appears.

Comet

"A Divided House," for release August 28, is exceedingly good, and has many interesting rural scenes.

"The Moonshiner's Task" is, however, not a film that we could recommend. It offers no excuse for its existence.

Reliance

"The Secret Service Man" is an especially exhilarating film. Get it by all means. Law's drop of 3,500 feet in a parachute is worth the money paid for it.

Solax

"Phantom Paradise," for release August 28, is perhaps the best and most interesting of their recent film stories. There is a heart interest in every inch of it. Darwin Karr and Mr. Lebegg do excellent and dignified work in this production.

"Playing Trumps," for August 30, is a passing good farce comedy, and will get its laughs.

American

"The Marked Gun," for September 4, is full of action, abounds in pleasing scenic bits, and is an all around good story.

Thanhouser

"When a Count Counted," from Thanhouser, for August 25, is a breezy, pretty, and well-acted bit. Mignon Anderson certainly makes a hit as the little stenographer off for her vacation at the fashionable summer resort. The story is original and has character.

Essanay

"Alkali Ike Plays the Devil" is bound to be a favorite. It is one of the funniest things that we have seen—good comedy.

Gaumont Weekly

"Albany Auto Races," showing Bob Burman and his Blitzen-Benz. "Astounding Pictures from El Paso, showing the situation occasioned by the war." "Warfare in Michigan." "Newsboys Outing given them by the Cleveland Press." "Fashions from Paris." "Awheel in Europe, showing Austrian and German experts exhibiting their skill." "Old Home Week in Rockland, Maine." "Military Review at St. Cyr." "New York Hails the Heroes (Olympic athletes return)."

Selig

"The Laird's Daughter" is a pleasing story of a true love, beautifully produced.

"The Boob," also from Selig, is a good bit of clean fun.

Kalem

"The Beauty Parlor at Stone Gulch" is a scream—a real funny comedy.

"The Little Wanderer" is a specially fine bit of drama in which a dog and a child attract particular attention. Surrounding them, however, are a company of excellent players all doing exceptional work. The story is good and the plot clear.

Vitagraph

"Flirt or Heroine" is a fine drama with the scene laid in India. Maurice Costello and Florence Turner play the leads, and are seen in this picture to specially good advantage. The story has a touch of both social pleasures and life in the British Army camps, during the cholera plague.

Lubin

"The New Ranch Foreman" is a thrilling Western. Plenty of action, and a good story.

Biograph

"A Change of Spirit" is a gentleman-burglar story of a peculiar type. It is excellent—splendidly played and splendidly produced. It shows how even in the heart of a criminal sometimes there is a good seed which gets its inspiration to grow from the awakening of love.

JAY HUNT LOSES FATHER

Jay Hunt, director with Thanhouser Company, mourns the death of his father, Henry J. Hunt, August 21, in New York City. The elder Hunt, while never engaged in the theatrical or film business, was known to many in those lines, through the long connection therein of his sons, Jay and Philip. The deceased attained the ripe old age of 79.

THE RANCHERS' LOTTERY
Eclair Release, September 12

HOW MOTION PICTURE MEN SAW MIMIC WAR

"Private" Gregory and "Major" Newburg's Experiences. Thanhouser Camera Men Were in the Thickest of the Battle in Connecticut Last Week and Had a Tough Though Amusing Time Immortalizing Troops in Action.

If anyone thinks the motion picture man's part in war is a vaudeville sketch as seen from the "house," let him ask "Private" Gregory and "Major" Newburg, of the Thanhouser forces.

Carl L. Gregory and Frank Newburg, two of the operators for the Thanhouser Company, went to the scene of the recent war manoeuvres in Connecticut to make pictures of the war scenes, consisting of the landing of troops, the troops on the march and going into battle, the charges of infantry and cavalry, and the artillery action. They wore uniforms of the regular army, with the red bands of the attacking army, and carried passes from General Bliss, chief of umpires, which were to take them anywhere within the lines they desired to go. Their equipment consisted of 250 pounds of camera, tripod, film and other accessories, so that they carried no rations with them. They made their headquarters at a hotel in Bridgeport.

The picture men travelled in a hired automobile with a chauffeur and did a great deal of high-speed work over the dusty Connecticut roads. Many pictures were made of the troops, engineer corps, and signal corps, of the wireless corps setting up their stations, and the aeroplane corps at work.

On the first day of hostilities the picture men were hurrying on in advance of the "Red" army when they were fired upon from ambush and captured by an outpost of the "Blue" army. Mr. Newburg wore the uniform of a major and Mr. Gregory that of a private, and as they wore the red badge, the "Blue" soldiers thought they had made an important capture. They believed Mr. Newburg to be a major of the regular army, and that Mr. Gregory was his orderly. The soldiers could not account for his big camera except that the two were spies seeking to make photographs of the "Blue" army's position.

"Major" Newburg and "Private" Gregory kept the camera going all the time and secured some good pictures of their own capture before they showed their passes, which allowed them to pass on to the main body of the "Blue."

They had taken their camera apart and were resting sometime afterward near the "Blue" outpost, when, suddenly a troop of "Red" cavalry appeared on a scouting excursion, opened fire on the "Blues" and retreated back to their main body. The picture men started to get their camera together in a hurry, and as the scouts retreated one horse fell, taking its rider to the ground. Words cannot express the thoughts of "Private" Gregory when he realized that he had missed a rare picture.

"Private" Gregory and "Major" Newburg went to the general stores and bought beans, potted ham, crackers, olives and ginger ale and ate two days' rations in one meal, while the chauffeur was putting a new shoe on the automobile. When they were ready to go on, and the chauffeur had packed up his tools, "Major" Newburg wiped the perspiration from his own brow, remarking, "Gee, that was hard work;" and the motion picture detail started off for "Red" headquarters to get the information for next day.

At headquarters "Major" Newburg went up with Lieutenant Milling in one of the army aeroplanes, leaving "Private" Gregory on earth making pictures of their flight. The work of the succeeding days was about the same until the day of the great battle of Walnut Tree Hill. There was a 4 o'clock call that morning, and the picture men started from their hotel in Bridgeport at 5 o'clock. They joined the Second Battery at breakfast and were invited by Sergeant Love to join him. They had one whole boiled spud each, with a piece of "Willie" bacon about the size of an aeroplane at 3,000 yards, and black coffee. But the coffee put fighting blood in them. "Major" Newburg relished the fare because he has had experience in the army. When breakfast was over "Private" Gregory asked for a napkin, and was told that that napkin had been used for padding for the pack mules.

When they were ready to take their cameras to the front they hit the rear of the column and were delayed several hours in the broiling sun and without a drop of water.

Artillery firing was heard and they left their automobile to climb a high hill where they expected to find the

SCENE FROM RECENT CONNECTICUT WAR MANŒUVRES
Filmed by Thanhouser Company

battery. But they found that they were on the wrong hill and the battery was on another five miles away. About that time an aeroplane came along, and while they were training their camera on it the thing whizzed by them in making a landing so close that both had to duck, and it missed the camera by an inch.

After carrying the 250-pound equipment half a mile up the steep hill, they had to lug it down again. The road was so narrow that the troops, marching in columns of fours, could not pass it, and the chauffeur was ordered to move on with the troops. The 250 pounds had to be carried on their backs five miles away to the battle field. All this time the battle was raging and their camera was idle, and there was not a drink of water to be had.

If it had not been for Captain Hennessey, with a big aeroplane automobile truck, who came along and picked them up, "Private" Gregory believes they would never have reached the scene of the action. They were taken into the thickest of the battle and obtained a better position than if they had gone in their own car. The two picture men roamed at will through the firing lines and among batteries of artillery in action. They were in the midst of a "Blue" battery which was so intent upon the distant enemy that neither captain nor the men saw the two companies of "Red" infantry come out of the woods on their flank and charge them. They were surrounded and fire was opened upon them before they realized the presence of the enemy. The umpires came and ruled the battery off the field.

SCENE FROM "THE CAPTURE OF NEW YORK"

When the battle closed at noon with the recall, blown by the trumpets, "Private" Gregory and "Major" Newburg began to think of home and mother and her delicious pancakes and omelettes, and rare steaks and homemade pies. But they were in Newton, fifteen miles from their hotel, and their automobile was among the missing. They sat down under a tree, hoping their chauffeur would come their way looking for them. After waiting two hours some soldiers came alone and shared their field rations with them. Then "Private" Gregory smiled a little. They walked to the nearest railroad station, where they found two young women who had come to see the manoeuvres with them, and who had not been able to find them. But the ladies had had the time of their lives with an army officer who took them about in his automobile. They all returned to Bridgeport, and at 7 o'clock that night their automobile arrived at the hotel, covered with dust and the chauffeur ready to tell how he had been captured and held prisoner by the "Blues" during the battle.

"Private" Gregory says he saw many amusing sights and some sad ones. Among the latter, he says, he saw at least two dozen soldiers carried off the field, victims of heat stroke and sun stroke. He saw a soldier throw his canteen of water to another. The canteen slipped and cut a deep gash in the second soldier's forehead. Several motion picture machines were bowled over by cavalry when the operator did not get out of the way quickly enough, and one picture man fell down a hill, breaking a leg and smashing his expensive camera.—New Rochelle Standard, August 24.

TOM BUTLER

(Eclair Three-Reel Production)

It was not without considerable investigation into feature film merits that Eclair decided on the production of "Tom Butler." This feature is gripping and sensational—a most thrilling drama in three reels and forty-two scenes, of which Eclair has acquired the exclusive State rights for New York State. The story follows:

At the Island of Re, two convicts have just escaped. They are on a reef, when the alarm is given by the sentinel and one is shot. The other disappears into the sea. His body was never found.

Some months later, the celebrated actress, Miss Hampton, who, to her misfortune, was the wife of a condemned murderer, receives a threatening letter. The young woman is frightened but she must appear in the scene, and her work makes her forget the danger she feels around her. The day of her performance comes and she tells her friend Villars, a journalist, about the threat. The performance is over. Miss Hampton has scored a great success. Letters and bouquets are showered upon her.

Great excitement in the foyer! Miss Hampton has just been found lying among her flowers. She is seriously wounded, but still lives. She is carried to a hospital, where she slowly recovers. She still receives threats.

One night, on entering her room, she finds a bouquet on her table, with a threatening letter attached. This is too much for the convalescent, who half crazed with fright, sees terrible things before her in the dark. She believes she sees her tormentor. She goes to her window and jumps to the court below, where she is found by the police. Miss Hampton is carried to the nearest house, which belongs to a famous sculptor. There, lying on a couch in the sculptor's studio, she is nursed with care.

A stranger calls on the sculptor. He wants to buy his work. As soon as the former leaves the studio, the stranger, under pretense of going for his walking stick, which he left in the studio, looks over the place and finds Miss Hampton. Workmen are repairing the glass roof of the studio. Suddenly they fall through and lie motionless among the broken glass. Friends of the workmen carry their wounded companions away. When everybody has gone, the sculptor, fearing the noise has frightened Miss Hampton, goes to the couch and finds that the young woman has disappeared. They immediately notify Villars, who sends for the Chief of Police and a search is begun.

Finally, they find the actress tied to a tree. They free her, but she is unable to give them any information. Her memory is blank. Miss Hampton is carried to her apartment, where she is constantly visited by Villars. She recovers slowly. The journalist goes to a florist and asks him to send a bouquet to the convalescent. The messenger who is carrying the bouquet is thrown down by a beggar at Miss Hampton's door. A young Bohemian girl picks up the flowers and returns them to the boy, who then enters the house. The actress receives the bouquet and smells them with delight. But what power have these flowers? The young woman falls asleep. When the journalist comes back, the actress has disappeared once more. He questions the messenger, who tells of his experience and describes the beggar, who threw him down, and the gypsy. Villars noticed them also. Without a doubt, here is the key to the mystery. Miss Hampton's friend searches for the beggar. Finally he finds him and follows him. He has luck enough to discover where the bandits are located. Calling upon the Chief of Police, he secures a few policemen to take with him. Villars and the policemen enter the cave and arrive just at the moment when the wretch, who is holding Miss Hampton prisoner, is about to entomb her. He releases her, but escapes again. In order that the police will let him free, the innkeeper gives the necessary information for the arrest of Tom Butler (the escaped convict) and his whole band. The convict escapes arrest, but his accomplice, the gypsy, is arrested. It is impossible to make her speak. In trying to free her, Tom Butler is arrested. Confronted by the woman whom he has so cruelly treated, the bandit tells that she is his wife, whose accusations had put him in jail. He had done this for revenge. Before anyone can notice what he intends to do, he jumps through the window to his death. Justice is done.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

EXHIBITORS from several states had gathered in the lobby of the LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, and the Gentleman-With-the-Large-Solitaire was speaking. We figured out the reason he wore diamonds when he said: "In connection with dramatic art there is no one element of more importance than the management or upkeep of the theatre where such art or such amusements are to be enjoyed. But I want to tell you that it is seldom that element is seriously considered even by those whose business it is to consider it."

The Gentleman fingered his diamond ring absently for a moment. Then he continued: "Is the theatre too warm or too cold, dusty, well or ill ventilated, fitted with comfortable seats, beset with unnecessary noises, provided with courteous or discourteous ushers? These questions may seem small in themselves, but they certainly loom large when we realize that they constitute conditions under which a great art must be seen and enjoyed."

* * * *

The Exhibitor-From-Illinois butted in: "It seems incredible, but it is true," said he, "that a picture show manager will often go to great expense and trouble in providing entertainment, engage expensive help and place before the public the best picture program obtainable and then, quite calmly allow the whole artistic effect to be ruined by a racket and clatter in the auditorium, which is also under his supervision—slamming doors, perhaps, or clanging steam pipes, or crying babies. Watch the little things and——"

* * * *

"Four years ago I started a picture show in an old frame building down in Kokomo, Indiana," interrupted the Nervous-Little-Man-With-The-Black-String-Tie. "Today I am proud to say——"

* * * *

"A woman who is a great lover of the moving pictures was explaining to me the other day why she seldom goes to the theatre," cut in the Portly Exhibitor. 'It seems to be an artificial life,' she said vaguely.

"'But it is not life; it is art,' I answered. 'You certainly don't complain because art is artificial.'

"'No; but we see it under such artificial conditions,' she explained; 'the sometimes late hours, the artificial lights, the close theatres.' I reminded her that not only moving pictures, but to a certain extent, all art forms have to be enjoyed under artificial conditions. Nevertheless, I think there was some wisdom in her remarks. Theatrical conditions are perhaps more artificial than those upon which other arts depend. The utmost pains should, therefore, be taken with them, in order that just the right delicate relation between the audience and the pictures can be established and maintained and the illusion be preserved without distracting noises."

* * * *

"A splendid place for a person to display a selfish disposition if he has one, is at the moving picture theatre," remarked the Exhibitor-With-the-Long-Stogie. "It simply must show there. The selfish person can no more help betraying himself at the theatre than he can help breathing. The pitfalls are too numerous. A man comes in late at my theatre to start with. Of course, he causes half a row of people to rise, and brushes carelessly against them, and he seldom takes the trouble to apologize because he is too busy thinking of getting into his own seat. Then once seated, he must discuss the picture, its subject, and the players with his companion, regardless of the fact that other people around him are trying to gather up the thread of the plot which they have lost while he has been taking his seat."

* * * *

"Four years ago I started a picture show in an old frame building in Kokomo, Indiana," interjected the Nervous-Little-Man-With-The-Black-String-Tie. "I am——"

The-Man-With-The-Diamond was interested in the statement made by the Exhibitor-With-The-Long-Stogie. "You're right on that selfish dope," said he. "I find that the selfish picture fan is more apt to be feminine," he continued. "Many women who visit my house unfortunately talk during the progress of the program, absolutely forgetful of the fact that their voices are clearly audible, more so to their immediate neighbors, and that no one has come to the theatre for the sake of hearing their comments on the plays, or their opinions of the picture players. They constitute a nuisance that I find it difficult to get away from, for significant glances or frowns mean little or nothing to people so self-absorbed. Then there is the selfish playgoer who kicks the seat in front of him, who monopolizes both arms of his chair, who goes out before the program is finished and who feels that he must be the first one out after the program is over, pushing aside everybody else and who—but one might go on forever—the chances for the display of selfishness are so unlimited in a theatre. I can also remark that the chances for unselfishness are just as great."

* * * *

"We are doing more for the tired business man than the musical comedy," said the Cincinnati Exhibitor. "One of the curious results of the investigation of our theatres by the Voluntary Commission was the number of adult men found in our audiences. They predominate in many theatres even during the afternoons. In spite of the general opinion, I believe the real support of our theatres comes from adults rather than from children. The ventilation of Cincinnati picture houses, on the whole, is first class. Of the hundred and one theatres recently visited by the Investigators, only fourteen were classed as badly ventilated, while thirty-five were marked good, and twenty-six as fair. That people both young and old will continue to frequent our theatres as long as they furnish amusement is a foregone conclusion, and that they should be sanitary as possible doesn't admit of argument."

"I'm giving strict attention to the demand for clean and educational pictures," stated the Exhibitor-From-Illinois, "and I'm dead against these dime novel dramatizations, prize-fight pictures and problem films. My theatre has too many possibilities for good to be permitted to become the show place for pictures which teach the lesson of man's brutality to man and to show scenes of crime that have stirred the nation. I want pictures which appeal to the humorously inclined, clean pictures of romance and scenes which bring the far places of the world to our doors. The fact that I will positively show no films of any other kind, and that I draw consistently full houses, is evidence that off-color pictures are not necessary for profit. I, for one, think that the exploitation of the moral character of youth in order that a few men may fill their pockets should be made illegal."

* * * *

"That's exactly the stand that won out for Mrs. Joe Clement of Boston," exclaimed the Massachusetts Exhibitor. "The Brookline social leader is in sole command of the Bijou Dream. Pictures are the chief source of entertainment and the admission price is ten cents. The performances given there are excellent and of educational value. There are five shows a day and only the highest class of pictures are shown. The theatre is fitted out as if it were a high-priced place and there is a ladies' retiring room and even writing desks and arm chairs in the lobby. The theatre is illuminated by a violet light which does not injure the clearness of the pictures. Musical selections are carefully selected and trained musicians are engaged. It pays," concluded the New England Exhibitor as he arose from his seat.

* * * *

"Let me tell you my experience," exclaimed the Little-Man-With-The-Black-String-Tie. "Four years ago down in good old Kokomo, I started a little picture show——" The others looked at the Little Man sadly for a moment and then they went away. When last seen he was still gesticulating and the black string tie was hanging limp.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

The following is a touching incident picked up by the Shamokin, Pa., News:

Overcome with emotion as he watched the moving picture film unroll familiar battle scenes, Harvey S. Geiger, 72 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, was carried from the Bijou Dream theatre at Milton and died a few minutes later. The veteran, who had complained earlier in the evening of not feeling well, went up to the theatre as he usually did, and sat down to watch the pictures. The last number on the bill was "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address."

The picture, which is a patriotic allegory, opens with a view of Lincoln delivering his famous speech at the field of Gettysburg. As the words are reproduced on the scroll, stirring scenes of battle are depicted. Mr. Geiger watched it all with interest. As the war scenes were flashed on the screen he leaned forward and intently followed the action of the mimic soldiers. As the words of Lincoln's address: "But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground," were succeeded by a reproduction of Pickett's charge, the old veteran could no longer bear it.

In this battle he himself was wounded and as the next scene showed the struggling mass of soldiers leaping forward through a cover of smoke, dodging the hissing ball and deadly schrapnel, the veteran was seen to fall forward with his head on the seat in front of him. A young woman who occupied the seat turned to see what was the matter. The veteran made an effort to resume his seat. At this moment his eyes turned to the picture. The charge had been repulsed and the union flag floated triumphantly over the field. With the death glaze fast filling his eyes, he sank forward again.

"You had better take the old man out," said a man in the seat behind to the veteran's companion, who had been too intent on the picture to note Mr. Geiger's condition. "He is sick." Scarcely had he spoken when the veteran pitched forward.

Four men then carried him out. He was taken next door to the theatre, and there died as he sat in a chair. A doctor arrived after he was dead.

* * * *

According to the Brooklyn Eagle, Germany's dramatic poets are tearing their hair. War has broken out between them and the great kinematograph business, for the fact is, the kinematograph business has reduced the dramatic poets to beggary, and the dramatic poets now want the state to interfere.

It is a complex economic problem. In Germany a man whose business is threatened by competition always expects the state to help him. If the state helps, it thereby injures somebody else, and in due time the somebody else asks the state for help. Nobody can suggest a compromise between the theatre and the "kientopp," and the only available solution is given by the comic journal "Ulk."

The beggared dramatic poets, says "Ulk," lately made a pilgrimage to the Shade of Goethe, and lamented:

"The theatre is ruined," they sobbed. "To-day, Germans go only to the kinematograph."

"Then you should compose pieces for the kinematograph," answered the Shade of Goethe. "In that case people will go there no longer."

* * * *

Motion picture targets, now being tested by the French government to habituate the soldiers to shoot at human forms in action, are said to be a success.

* * * *

"The giant wheel of human affairs," says the Terre Haute, Ind., Star, "has made another revolution, and the church once more will use the stage as a means toward attaining the ends of religion. At least that is the indication from the incorporation of a new society in New Jersey, which calls itself the 'In His Name Society,' whose object is the spreading of the gospel by means of moving pictures, dramas, lectures and dramatic-musical performances. The society disclaims any desire to make money, but has solely in view the moral uplift of men and women.

"The relationship between church and stage has been a peculiar one during the course of history. The two seem to have originated almost or quite simultaneously in prehistoric times, and perhaps as the same institution. Religious rites consisted in those days very largely of songs and dances, and as some were more expert than others in the performance of these rites, the less talented would interrupt their own devotions to admire their more talented brothers and sisters. A secular element was introduced later into these performances and church and stage came to a parting of the ways.

"But the church, which was the more powerful of the two, owing to the backing it had in the heavens, made use of the stage to further its own ends. The great majority of spectacles were religious. The Christian Church did not disdain to take over this custom from the 'heathen,' and in medieval times mystery and morality plays were encouraged and promoted by the church. In modern times the breach between church and stage has been a wide one, the church, in many instances, going even so far as to place a ban on the stage. But a reaction has set in. There is a liberal element in the church that sees no harm in a decent play, even though it be purely secular, and now this new society in New Jersey purposes to use the theatre much in the way it was used in the old morality days."

* * * *

The Brooklyn Citizen is our authority for the following:

The pictureplay writers of this vicinity will have a dinner at Henderson's, Coney Island, Saturday afternoon, September 7. It is possible an organization of such writers may be formed on this occasion. A few years ago the scenario writer was practically unknown. To-day it is estimated that there are at least 2,000 men and women writing pictureplays for the film companies, with more or less success, and at least 10,000 more are earnestly endeavoring to learn the trick.

Frank E. Woods and Epes W. Sargent are responsible for the dinner idea.

* * * *

Patent No. 1,032,172 to Ernesto Zollinger of Turin, Italy, discloses an improvement in producing and projecting moving pictures wherein he deforms the picture on the film by reducing one of its dimensions to a fraction thereof and then projects the deformed picture through a deformer to reconstruct the projection to its normal proportions. Thus he can shorten up the picture in producing it and when he comes to project the picture on the screen he can lengthen it by suitable means to bring it back into condition to properly represent the subject he seeks to produce.—Scientific American.

* * * *

According to the Los Angeles, Cal., Express, valuable acreage overlooking the San Fernando Valley, and situated near Lankershim, has been acquired by the Universal Film Company, a motion picture concern of this city. The tract which has been leased and purchased by representatives of the company embraces an aggregate of about 12,000 acres of land area. It is the intention of the company to increase its holdings in the future, and it has obtained an option of 8,000 acres of land adjoining the tract which it now controls.

"Agfa"
Celluloid Positive Celluloid Negative
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 E. 26th St. NEW YORK
Tel.: Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable: Rawfilm New York

HER ADOPTED FATHER

By VIRGINIA WEST

(Adapted from Essanay Release)

The children at the orphanage sat with shining faces and smooth hair, silently awaiting the visitors. Their faces shone with a brightness of the exterior only, for while the Sisters were kind to them, their hearts longed for the tenderness and love that is due to every child.

It was customary for visitors to come to the orphanage once a week, and it very frequently happened that there was one or more less at the home when the end of the day came. Many a time a childless couple or an old lady or an invalid or someone who needed a little girl for one of many reasons came and took a child away with them.

One visitor's day in the early spring the children sat stiffly waiting with folded hands. So well trained were they and so rigid was the system of the orphanage that it seemed as though the children scarcely breathed.

Mary Wilson was the most quiet and the most solemn looking of all the little ones against the wall of the big bare room, but she was also the most thoughtful. She looked around the room and silently counted. There were many less than there had been a month before.

Tears gathered in her big, wistful eyes. Why didn't any one ever choose her to be their little girl? It seemed to her that the other children didn't care so much about being adopted but she longed for parents and their love more than for all the world beside.

Often did the child lay awake at night thinking of the lady who might some day come to take her away. Oh, how she could love that lady! She would plan over and over the little things she would do for her in order that the lady might love her very much, too.

The clock ticked away the time on this spring morning and the visitors soon came. The grounds and building only were looked at by some, and others looked only at the children.

Sometimes a lady stopped in front of Mary and spoke to her, but the child's heart beat so hard she could scarcely find breath to answer.

This day the ladies passed by, and at the end of the day Mary was still at the orphanage with no prospects of leaving.

The next day the Mother Superior noticed the little girl's pale face and wistful eyes and told the child she might go with her to the city that day when she collected alms.

From place to place they went, sometimes receiving a small sum of money and sometimes nothing at all. At last they entered an immense office building and took the elevator to the top floor. Then they began to go from office to office.

Little Mary, wide-eyed, clung to the Mother's hand. No one noticed her until they reached the office of Richard Claiborne. His eyes were on the child while he talked to the nun. Mary noticed this and unconsciously she moved toward the man. He held out his hand and in a moment she was clasped in his strong arms.

"You are a dear little girl," he said, and continued his conversation with the mother.

The office boy brought a message and Mr. Claiborne left the room. The Mother Superior used the time of his absence to look over some notes she had made.

Softly Mary crossed the room to a desk where some paper and a pencil lay. As quickly as she could and very nervously she wrote the following note:

"Please let me come to your home and be your little girl. I want a papa and mamma so much.—Mary Wilson."

When Mary and the mother left Mr. Claiborne's office the child turned back for a moment and slipped under the door the note she had written.

At noon when Mr. Claiborne started out to his lunch he found the crumpled piece of paper. He read it and reentered his office. Then he locked the doors and gave himself up to thought.

He had always wanted children, but Mrs. Claiborne was a woman who had always been fond of society and was much sought after. Richard Claiborne felt that she did not care for children and so the subject was never touched upon between them.

But oh, how his heart yearned! Often in the parks he stopped and caressed the children and talked to them. But never had he been so drawn to a child as now. Little Mary Wilson affected him as no child had ever done. And he could do nothing for her—at least not the thing that she had asked.

So Richard Claiborne sat at his desk and wrote a note that nearly broke his heart.

The next morning, after a restless night, Mary anxiously awaited the mail. She had never received a letter in all her life, but she felt sure she would receive one that day. Sure enough there it was, addressed "Miss Mary Wilson." The child clutched it with trembling fingers as she went into the empty schoolroom to read it.

Slowly and anxiously she spelled out the words, and then her head dropped upon the table and a flood of tears poured upon the paper in her hand.

"What is it, child?" asked a kind voice at her side.

The little girl knew that the Mother Superior stood by her, but she could not speak. Without raising her head she handed the Mother the letter.

"Dear Little Mary," it ran, "I wish that I could tell you to come to my home and be my little girl. But I cannot do so. There is a beautiful lady in my home who would not like a little girl. You have made me very happy just by wanting to be my little girl. Your friend, Richard Claiborne."

Tears came to the good Mother's eyes. "Did you write to him, my child?" she asked.

"Yes," replied the child. "When we left I put a note under his door. Oh, I want him for my papa. Why doesn't the beautiful lady like little girls?"

For a moment the Mother Superior thought. Then she held out her hand to the child. "Come," she said, "we will go to the lady and see what she will say."

That day was the most eventful of all Mary Wilson's life. She saw for the first time what a beautiful home looked like.

When she and the nun were taken to the room of Mrs. Claiborne the child stared in astonishment at everything around her. Tears came into her eyes when she saw the splendor of the beautiful lady, for she thought that she would never want a little girl from an orphanage. So she hung back a little behind the Mother while the good woman explained their presence.

"Many wealthy people have adopted our children," she said, "and this little girl is so anxious for parents."

The lady did not speak at once. She sat thinking.

"Come here, dear," she said after a few moments.

Shyly the child crept to her side.

"The gentleman who is my husband is very busy much of his time. When he comes home he likes everything to be just as he most wishes it. I am afraid a little girl in the house might disturb him sometimes and he would not like that."

"Isn't Mr. Claiborne your husband?" asked Mary.

"Yes."

The little girl looked in surprise at the Mother Superior, who, catching her expression, knew that the right moment had come. Very gently she put the note the child had received that morning into the hand of Mrs. Claiborne.

"When was this written?" she asked in a trembling voice, when she had read it.

"Yesterday, Mrs. Claiborne," answered the Mother, and waited quietly for the result that she knew would come.

For several minutes Mrs. Claiborne sat staring at the note in her hand as though to understand something that her mind could not grasp at once.

Then quickly she turned and gathered the child into her arms. "Yes, yes, you shall be my little girl," she cried; "I did not know, I did not know."

That evening when Richard Claiborne came into his wife's sitting room he found her sitting with her hand on the head of the little girl who sat at her feet.

"Richard," she cried, holding out her arms to him. "Oh, Richard, why didn't you tell me you wanted a child in the house? The good mother brought me your note to little Mary Wilson. I did not know, dear. Why did you not tell me?"

"I thought you did not have time for children. I thought society took all your time," he said as he knelt by her side and gently smoothed Mary's cheek.

"Why, love, I thought you were too busy with your work for children and so I gave my time to society because I had nothing else to do with it."

"How foolish we have both been," said Claiborne, "to miss so much happiness for so long, just through not being perfectly frank with one another. We will always be now, won't we?"

"Yes, always. Will you be happy, Mary?"

They both looked at the child, but they did not need her answer. She was fast asleep with the hands of her new parents clasped tightly in hers.

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., Aug. 28.—Without entering into a detailed discussion, I would be quite willing to wager "two bits" that the editor of the Moving Picture News has come to the conclusion that "The Man in the Baths" had taken one bath too many, for it is two weeks since I let a yell out of me. But say not so. I have been busy with the Moose—and, lest you should imagine that it was of the "Bull" variety, I want to assure you that politics had nothing whatever to do with it. This was the Loyal Order of Moose, and I have just returned from Kansas City, Mo., where the national convention was held. Furthermore, I want to state that I did not wander into this foreign clime alone, but that I was accompanied by a drum and bugle corp of thirty-five members and some ten equally loyal co-workers; that we went there for a purpose and returned home with more glory than the hall of fame could hold. We landed for Hot Springs a national sanitarium, and the drum and the bugle corp got first prize, and that is "going some," especially when one considers that the sanitarium is to cost one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Whoops, my dear! Is it any wonder that I had to let this correspondence slide? I ask the pardon of the editor, and as I am back once more on the job I promise a letter brimful of news—next week. You see, I have to write this in a rush so as not to be late for this week's publication.

Just a word about the "movies" in Kansas City. I was somewhat surprised that there were not more pretentious theatres devoted to this industry in that city. Why, little old Hot Springs can give 'em cards and spades or three aces to start with and fill out better in the grand and final showdown. I also learned that there had been some pretty raw films seen in old "K. C." recently and that said pictures caused numbers of the juvenile population to give a startling and sad exemplification of Indian massacres, with the result that crepe has been hung on several doors, and the newspapers are not taking kindly to the "Uncensored film" In fact, the Kansas City Post, which is the W. R. Hearst type of paper, is raising merry Hades because some of the films have not the official O. K. of that illustrious Board of Censors.

I have only been back in Hot Springs a few hours and one of the first things I did was to rush for the typewriter and rattle this off. So no more until next week, when I'll have a big review of films, as well as detailing the latest news in the moving picture world here; and with three new theatres being erected, and one of them to open the middle of next month, believe me, it is some industry in this resort.

I noted that work the past two weeks has progressed very rapidly and that the houses will come up to the expectations of the management.

Mr. Editor, am I forgiven? Here's hoping, anyway.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The P. & G. Theatre Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $12,000. Directors, Bessie Fiegenbaum and Annie Price of Brooklyn, and James M. Gossman of New York City.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans have been completed by Anderson & Haupt for a moving picture place at Franklin and Clearfield streets for the Philadelphia Film Exchange.

BARBARA TENNANT
Playing Eclair Leads

THEATRES OPENING FOR SEASON WITH NEW MACHINES

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that the better class of moving picture theatres are throwing out their old machines and opening for the coming season with new up-to-date equipments. Among recent sales by Mr. Hallberg are one Powers No. 6A, complete with Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizer, to E. H. Haverly, Lewiston, Pa. A Powers No. 6 E. E. Jardine, Phoenix, N. Y., and many Hallberg economizers to all parts of the country.

MR. GREENLAND GOING TO CHICAGO

Mr. A. K. Greenland, of the Gaumont Company, has resigned his position with that company to assume command of the Chicago office of the Billboard. Mr. Greenland leaves with the best wishes of all of his friends in New York and with the hope that success will crown his efforts in his new field of labor. He was formerly in charge of the New York office of the Billboard, having been very successful as their New York manager.

Mr. George W. Stevenson, who was in the Chicago office for the past year, leaves to enter the editorial staff at the Cincinnati office.

New York, N. Y.—National Educational Film Co. incorporated with a capital of $200,000. Incorporators, B. Butler Boyle, 272 Lincoln road, Brooklyn; Thomas Chappell, 331 East 92d street, and Jos. W. Taylor, 404 East 17th street, New York City.

Montclair, N. J.—License has been granted to the United Realty and Amusement Co. to build a moving picture theatre.

Greensboro, N. C—The Piedmont Amusement Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $45,000.

THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN
Solax Release Sept. 13tn.

THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN

(Solax Release)

The longing for something that we haven't got is natural. More natural with poor people than with others. Particularly is this longing prevalent among young women of poor origin. They are satisfied with their surroundings until they are attracted by things better. Then they give up home ties and happiness for a taste of "what real life is." Very often the glamour of it all wears off and they return to their own people, better for the experience and satisfied that real happiness comes from the purity of heart and conscience. In this production the poor wife of a blind musician leaves her husband for the home of a wealthy bachelor and after a few lessons breaks away from artificial happiness to the real happiness in the arms of her helpless husband.

Tony and Dolores are happy together. Tony's blindness makes no difference. He earns money by playing on his old violin, an instrument very dear to him. Their happy existence is interrupted by a rich man, a Mr. Gilbert, who is interested in music. Tony and Dolores one day play before Mr. Gilbert's palatial home. The harmonious strains of the violin attract his attention.

The alluring beauty of Dolores fascinates Mr. Gilbert. He is very attentive and it occurs to him that he could be near her always if he arranged to take violin lessons from her blind husband. In this way an acquaintance develops. Mr. Gilbert is captivated by Dolores' Eastern seductiveness and takes advantage of every opportunity of being in her presence. He invites her to a masquerade ball and other functions. Her poor, blind husband is ignorant of the growing attachment and constant companionship of the two.

Events come to a climax when Dolores, temporarily overwhelmed by Gilbert's luxurious living, leaves her husband.

Tony, abandoned and helpless, is soon reduced to penury and is forced to sell his violin.

Later, after the novelty of living in luxury wears off, Dolores begins to think of her abandoned and helpless husband. Gilbert attempts to get familiar and she repulses him. Then her slumbering conscience is awakened.

That night she sees a vision of her blind husband in despair. The strains of his old violin vibrate in her ears. With determination she casts off her fine clothes which Gilbert in his expectant generosity had presented to her and then clothes herself in the rags in keeping with her station. She goes back to her husband full of remorse. He waits for her and takes her to his heart. The Soul of the Violin had done its work, and forever after they live in harmony and good cheer.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

The Trenton Theatre, Lynchburg's only vaudeville house, has adopted the summer policy of eliminating vaudeville during the warm period and is now being operated as a motion picture place. The management is using licensed films and is being accorded flattering patronage. Feature pictures draw well at the Trenton. Kalems "The Siege of Petersburg" was seen by thousands during the two days the film was shown in this city, and it is having a good run in other cities in Virginia.

Miss Gayda Newton, of Chicago, a talented soprano, is making a big hit at the Belvedere, where she has just opened an engagement, succeeding Mr. W. B. Ferrandou, formerly leading soloist with Lew Dockstader's minstrels. It is highly probable that the Belvedere will show the pictures taken of the opening of the island playground of the Young Men's Christian Association early in June. This picture, being made by the Edison Company, is awaited by Lynchburg people with great interest. It will prove a drawing card of unusual strength, as it is of local character.

TREVELYAN BABER.

GLOBE AMUSEMENT CO. HAS TAKEN OVER THE STARLAND THEATRE ON FRASER'S MILLION DOLLAR PIER, OCEAN PARK, CALIFORNIA

The Starland Theatre on Fraser's Million Dollar Pier, which has long been conceded to be the most elaborate, up-to-date, largest and best equipped motion picture and vaudeville theatre on the Pacific Coast, has been purchased by the Globe Amusement Company and in the future will be known as Globe Theatre No. 6.

Mr. J. M. Boland, the former owner, will still be retained as resident manager. In acquiring this theatre the Globe Amusement Company received a valuable asset.

In pursuance of their policy of rapid expansion the Globe Amusement Company are not only building fifteen high-class theatres with a large seating capacity, but are absorbing houses already in operation that have a large enough seating capacity and located in residential districts where they are surrounded by a sufficient population to pack them several times nightly.

The Globe Amusement Company has already acquired something over $300,000 worth of assets in the shape of splendid theatrical properties and has had many offers from the owners of smaller houses who are desirous to become affiliated with this circuit, so that there is very little doubt that by the first of the year this company will absolutely control the suburban theatre field of Los Angeles and vicinity. It is conservatively estimated by those who are in a position to know, that this company will have at least one hundred houses in the near future.

Mr. H. W. Nixon, president and general manager of the Globe Amusement Company, is one of the busiest men in town, getting things in shape for the opening of these houses. It is to his experience in the show business and intimate knowledge of local affairs, together with his business ability that has enabled him to build up this circuit to its present plane of efficiency in the last five months. His ability and integrity are so well known that he has had little or no difficulty in raising the enormous amount of money necessary to carry out his plans.

It is the purpose of the Globe Amusement Company to acquire through building or purchase something in the neighborhood of $700,000 in live theatrical properties in the next few months.

KINEMACOLOR HOLIDAY PROGRAMME

Mr. Charles Urban will throughout the holidays (English August holiday) present at the Scala two distinct "Kinemacolor" programmes daily, in the afternoon showing the complete itinerary of the King and Queen in India, including the Coronation Durbar and its many attendant ceremonies, and in the evening a curtailed edition of the Delhi splendors plus a wide range of important topical subjects which practically constitute an entirely new Bank Holiday bill. Several of the new films, beyond doubt, touch "Kinemacolor's" highest point —notably the series illustrating the maypole ride and musical manoeuvres of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, including tent-pegging, wrestling on horseback, etc. The grace and precision with which the chestnut and jet black chargers, bright in their new coats and spick and span as their riders' uniforms, go through the quadrille, simply compel admiration, the warmth and magic of the scenes being undeniable. "Living Whist" is a new subject of great beauty and charm; an allegory of human life enacted amongst sylvan surroundings and presented to an accompaniment of new and distinctive music. The reproduction of Henley Regatta remains in the programme by general request, while the wonderful views, taken at great risk, of the salving and subsequent dynamiting of the hull of the submerged "Oceana," should on no account be missed. Quivering with life and color and full of new forms, Mr. Urban's peerless entertainment has never been more admirably diversified than it is at the present moment.

New York, N. Y.—The Emilro Amusement Co. leased No. 2138 Third avenue for the purpose of a moving picture show.

NEW INVENTIONS

Reported especially for the Moving Picture News by H. B. Willson & Co., Patent Attorneys, Eighth and F Streets, N. W., Washington, D. C.—A Complete Copy of Any of These Patents Will Be Forwarded to Any Person by Messrs. Willson & Co. on Receipt of Ten Cents. Persons Ordering Copies Must Give Number of Patent.

1,035,274. Photographic-Film Washer. R. F. Troxler, Evansville, Ind.

1,035,433. Apparatus for Coloring Kinematographic Films. Leon Gaumont, Paris, France. Assignor to Societe des Establissements Gaumont, Paris, France.

1,035,540. Washing Tank for Prints and Negatives. F. W. Creech, Fort William, Ont., Can.

1,035,762. Photographic Shutter. Andrew Wollensak, Rochester, N. Y. Assignor to Wollensak Optical Co., Rochester, N. Y.

E. W. Goodrich, Somerville, Mass. Slide-Carrier for Projection Apparatus. 1,035,872.

C. C. Lamb, Joliet, Ill. Assignor to W. M. McEwen, Chicago, Ill. Photographic Apparatus. 1,035,977.

Joseph Campeau, Montreal, Que., Can. Photo Printing Apparatus. 1,036,073.

Henry Mayer, New York, N. Y. Apparatus for Projecting Picture During Productions. 1,036,131.

A. J. Freemen, Petaluma, Cal. Automatic Photo Printing-Machine. 1,036,212.

Daniel Higham, E. Orange, N. J. Phonic Apparatus. 1,036,235.

E. S. Krantz and J. W. Knuteson, Minneapolis, Minn. Print-Drier. 1,036,268.

A. M. Vale, Sheridanville, Pa. Film Attachment for Cameras, 1,036,385.

Jacob Bottlander and John Paffrath, Ford City, Pa. Moving-Picture Apparatus. 1,036,429.

Jackson, Mich.—A new moving picture theatre has been just opened here.

Mesa, Ariz.—The Vance Auditorium has opened.

Alliance, Neb.—H. A. Dubuque and C. E. Calder of this city have purchased the Crystal Theatre here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new moving picture theatre will be erected here on the northwest corner of Kensington and Allegheny avenues.

Prairie du Sac, Wis.—Garrison & Booth, of Baraboo, have opened up a new moving picture theatre in the Tabor Opera House here.

Bay Ridge, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared by Thomas A. Lamb for the erection of a new theatre to be erected here at the southwest corner of Fourth avenue and 50th street.

MABEL'S BEAU
Majestic release of Sept. 3rd.

EDWARD WONN

MR. EDWARD WONN'S ALASKA-SIBERIAN PICTURES

We called in to see Mr. Wonn of the above who is lecturing on these films at the Palace Theatre. This was the seventh week of very good patronage. Chicago people evidently enjoy the educational advantages of these pictures. Mr. Wonn has been connected with the theatrical enterprises for twenty years, playing leading parts in almost every popular production (except grand opera). Under the best managers in the theatrical world, such as Messrs. Frohman, Brady, Kirk Laschells, Hoyt McKee, Wm. Harris and others. As a lecturer he is good. Mr. Wonn said he thought the picture was wonderful, very educational, and there is no limit to the scope of their influence and the bringing to those who cannot afford the expense the foreign countries to allow the audience to visit them from an opera chair.

GAUMONT HAND COLORING

The demand for hand colored subjects is so keenly felt by the exchangemen that in order to satisfy the needs of the exhibitor, they have almost to a man written to the Gaumont Company to place more of these colored films on the market. However, the process of making these cromatic productions is so tedious and expensive, that although this eminent concern wishes to please its patrons all it can, it nevertheless must limit itself to between four and six handcolored reels per month.

Quite a few are therefore slated to appear within the next thirty days, the first of which will be the "Story of Chopin," which makes its debut on Tuesday the 27th of August. This is followed on the 3d of September by the two reel hand-colored spectacle, "The Refugee's Casket." On Thursday, September 12th, the "Plague Stricken City," hand colored, one reel production will make its appearance, while the far-famed "Queen Elizabeth's Token," another hand-colored offering on one thousand feet will be released on Tuesday the 17th of September. The "Legend of Cogliostro, a two reel, hand-colored film which has made an enviable European reputation for itself, will be put out about the middle of October, probably on Thursday the 17th. Before this the first of a series of hand-colored comedies, entitled "A Domestic Treasure," will definitely appear on Thursday the 10th of October.

UNIQUE MANNER OF ENTERTAINING TRAVELING PUBLIC

In a recent issue of Popular Electricity the following interesting item appeared, which demonstrates the versatility of the moving picture as an entertainer:

The Pittsburgh, Harmony, Butler and Newcastle Electric Railway has put in service on its road a special car in which moving pictures are exhibited for the entertainment of its passengers during trips. Of the many schemes called into service for the entertainment of the traveling public this is certainly the most unique and marks the entrance of the moving picture into another field. The car in which the pictures are exhibited is not run regularly, but is used for the accommodation of special parties by whom it is chartered for a certain run. Being badly damaged in collision with another car, the superintendent in having it repaired installed in the rear platform a moving picture machine, with a small bench upon which the operator of the machine may stand. The machine draws its power for use in the arc light from the trolley, and although the power varies with the amount consumed by the car there is little or no flicker.

When the pictures are to be exhibited, the screen is first lowered just back of the motorman. This is opaque, so that no light penetrates it to interfere with the motorman in his cab. The electric lights in the car are turned out, window curtains drawn, and the car resembles a small moving picture theater.—Popular Electricity.

Courtland, N. Y.—The Gem Theatre has re-opened.

Charleston, S. C.—The Majestic is being remodelled.

Mount Carmel, Pa.—The extension to the Theatorium is nearly completed.

Carlinville, Ill.—The Union Miners of Staunton will build a new opera house in that city.

New Rockford, S. D.—A. P. Blonde, a former printer of Devil's Lake will establish a moving picture theatre here.

THE CHAPERON
Majestic release Sept. 1st.

For Those Who Worry O'er Plots and Plays

Eugene Walter's Method

EUGENE WALTER, author of "The Easiest Way," etc., answers the question of how he writes a play, in the following letter which will prove interesting to picture playwrights for writers of the spoken and silent drama have much in common. Walter writes:

> "I think that one first gets the idea of what one is going to do with a play or theme of a play, and then it takes form, the characterizations come into the mind, the story unfolds itself slowly, and finally structures are complete in their mental form. It is so hard to explain one's method without appearing grossly egotistical that I hesitate to say that before writing a play I have every situation in mind, every character a visual, living being, and practically all the technique worked out including all entrances, exits, and the like. The next step is to transcribe it. After the first draft the work of self-annihilation begins. You have overwritten everything, repeated situations and points that make your construction faulty and as you sit down before your work you place yourself in the impersonal attitude of an editor. Perhaps my experience as a reporter and copy reader on daily newspapers has given me a slight advantage over others who never enjoyed this privilege, because I had to learn the trick of putting in one stick the substance of a story that it had taken a column to write. Finally, inserts having been made, the work is again rewritten and again edited and this method continues until your manuscript is ready to be submitted."

Painstaking Work

The above hints given by one of the leading playwrights are invaluable to picture playwrights. If Eugene Walter can take such care in the preparation of his work, the pictureplaywright can certainly do likewise and not sit down and "just dash off something" and then roar when the script is returned. Visualize your action, put it on paper; try and imagine what you would do if this or that character. Get to the point; tell one story, not two or three and when your story ends, stop. Be your own editor. Read your work with as unprejudiced eye as possible. Revise and again revise. "Boil down." Let your script get cold and then edit it again. What is worth doing at all is worth doing well. Tear a leaf from the book of experience as written by Eugene Walter.

Must be Ultra-Good

Mr. W. K. Bradley, president and editor Bradley Film Mfg. Co., New York, wishes us to advise pictureplaywrights that the Bradley Film Mfg. Co., of New York, is not in the market for scripts at present, as they have a supply that will last them well into the next two or three years; but if the playwright has any he considers "ultra-good," to send them on.

Don't Believe It

A critic writing in a magazine of last month asserts that "one editor told me that he had stolen thirty ideas from writers." We don't believe any editor of reputation said any such stuff. We thought this scream about "plot stealing" had died away and now comes a so-called critic who revives the subject. Through the work of "Spectator," of the "Mirror," and other writers, the "plot-stealing" hoodoo was virtually vanquished and now only about ten such charges come to us weekly, when six months ago, they averaged about twenty-five. We repeat, once and for all: Editors with reputable concerns will not "steal your plots." They are honorable men; and when the pictureplaywright who emits most of the "plot stealing" yells submits the editor a plot swiped from the "Popular Magazine" of three years back, that editor is more charitable and just returns the script with a courteous rejection slip. Editors will not steal your plots. If you write original plots and not one of fifty-seven stand-bys, he will pay you for your work.

From Our President

Just as we finished the little dissertation per above on "plot stealing" we received a letter from President A. Van Buren Powell of the Order of Optimists. He writes:

> "Three weeks have I spent vacationing in the upstate wilds and now I am back on the job with rejuvenated nerves, reinforced optimism and a bunch of impressions and suggestions that I have to evolute into pictureplays before long. Have just been reading up on my papers and I find a big bunch of interesting matter in those articles from the editors in your "Plots and Plays." Keep it up until every county has been heard from, please. Let us rise and chant our Optimistic Order closing hymn—'Oh, where is my wandering script to-night!" and close the meeting."

We have, upon President Powell's order, forwarded an application membership blank to the man who ventured to start the "plot stealing" bugaboo.

At Cut Rates

A correspondent sends us a copy of a two-by-four leaflet issued by a Philadelphia "expert" and entitled "How to Write Photoplays." He charges five cents for the instruction. The price is unreasonable.

On the Bright Side

Look on the bright side of things. Too many scripts are being submitted these days, having a superabundance of hardware, knives, wife desertions, unhappy homes, etc. Try the bright side of life for a change. Several editors complain to us that the bright lively plots are being outnumbered by scripts delineating the dark side of life. Don't be too gloomy; liven up some!

Advance Money

Maybe the time is coming when the A No. 1 pictureplaywright will be able to ask for and receive advance money. "We have to grubstake half the men who write for us," declared a magazine editor recently. "Few of them make money enough to be independent. Even writers who have an established position come to us for advance money every time a story is ordered. Naturally enough, we pay writers of this sort less for their fiction than we do the independent author who holds out for his price." The discussion started over a remark made by Rex Beach. When he began to make a hit, a magazine editor went to Chicago to see him. He found Beach had a job selling firebrick. "That's right," said the editor. "Literature is all right as a side line—but brick will pay the rent." The advice holds good still, so far as the run-of-mine writer is concerned. Forget the idea that you can make enough money writing pictureplays to buy automobiles and diamonds. Of course, you've heard of the Free Lance who makes $2,500 a year writing pictureplays, but did you ever meet him? You did not.

Three Good Men

The Universal Script Bureau boasts of three good men. They are Joe Roach, C. B. Hoadley and George Hall. They are experienced script men and have lifted many an author from the Slough of Despond. All are called "assistants." It is a misnomer. Some one of the trio should be in complete charge. Hoadley came from Powers and Roach was formerly with Rex. George Hall came from the Imp. They read all manuscripts submitted to the various Universal companies, except the Victor, and it is the biggest script department in existence. These experienced men pass upon about two hundred scripts a day. The department must furnish about twenty-three stories a week, which is going some.

The Powers Contest

The Powers prize contest was a disappointment in a way. It did not bring out as much good stuff as Editor C. B. Hoadley expected. There were over 500 scripts submitted and there were selected four rattling good plots for the prize winners. The Universal department bought perhaps twenty others from the entire lot, which will be produced. As a whole there was a lack of originality in the stuff and the general run of the scripts was no better than those read from day to day and submitted at regular rates. Fifty per cent. of the contributors did not deserve to win, for they sent in the same scripts that have been going the rounds of the studios, and made no special efforts to write prize winners. In the main the stories were sloppily constructed and were mediocre—scripts of the conventional sort treating of hackneyed themes. Los Angeles writers were in the majority, with New York second and St. Louis third. St. Louis bore off the palm in that two prize winners live there, one in New York and the other on the Pacific Coast. The Dr. Clemens who got inside the prize money is the husband of the lady who won first in the Imp prize contest held two years ago, which was then conducted by a St. Louis newspaper. The bulk of the stories purchased were written by Western authors. The offer failed to interest many newspaper writers, but probably a hundred hack writers who live in New York City made a try for the coin—and failed. By the terms of the conditions, all contestants paid return postage or sent self-addressed envelopes, and there were very few stories written in pen script. Ninety per cent. of the stories were dramas which shows that many writers have not yet awakened to the fact that the best market is for comedy, when it is well written. The contest was conducted fairly and squarely and all contestants were pleased with their treatment. Editor Hoadley selected about forty scripts for final consideration and they were read by Messrs. Hall and Roach, of the Universal. Hal Reid also read them. No one was favored, although the editors were approached by at least two writers with offers to "split" the money if they were favored. Needless to state that these writers were returned their work with curt notices that their script would not be considered by the Universal in the future. It pays to be sportsmanlike and honest whether in script writing or any other game, and that these would-be dishonest writers have been blacklisted by a large number of concerns proves that fact.

The experiences of the script readers in this contest should be interesting and, at the same time, highly instructive to the pictureplaywright.

WM. LORD WRIGHT.

EASTMAN
motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by
EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE PICTURES AND THEIR MUSIC

By Margaret I. MacDonald

It is perhaps not to be wondered at that the music of the moving picture theatre has been a secondary consideration. Who ever thought of coupling music with the pictures when they first made their appearance? It was just the marvellousness of the invention that attracted the crowds. Later on, and before the picture had attained its present popularity, the edges of the novelty having begun to rub off, it was necessary to call in the aid of some other attraction to keep the ball rolling, and that other attraction happened to be music. It happened that way because all humanity loves a tune. The more simple and suggestive it is of some emotion, some common object, act, or everyday thought, the more popular it is. The masses will "fall" for "Alexander's Band" or the old-time "After the Ball" when to them the symphony of Beethoven or the confusion music of Wagner would be as so much Greek. And not until within the past two or three years has it been a matter of serious consideration, just what to play in order to best fit the picture.

To-day is not as yesterday—never was, and never will be. Civilization is advancing, not deteriorating. A harmony between most things is the result of the careful study and action of philanthropists, educationists, scientists and all thinking people. It has therefore become a notable fact that the large and intelligent audiences now attending moving picture theatres are demanding in an ominous silence with a now and then fretful sigh, that the music of the theatre blend with the pieture on the screen. Soon from the silence will come an outburst of wrath, and born of the rebellion of the masses will evolve a condition that we know not of, but of which some of us already dream.

Only the other day I almost screamed aloud at an inconsistency perpetrated by the pianist of a theatre. The young lady in the picture sat down to play the piano, while a child listened, and listening, fell asleep. The silent player stopped, placed her finger on her lips to obtain silence from the other performers, but alas, the real flesh and blood musician, numb to the requirement of the picture, pounded away in ignorant bliss.

Another trying ordeal which shocks the nerves of the sensitive is the discontinuance of the music while the picture is at full swing. This frequently occurs at a climax. What could be more exasperating? All this goes to show how absolutely a part of the picture the music must be.

Interviews with several prominent publishers recently have revealed the fact that the publisher is ready to come in line on the requirements of the moving picture pianist, if the moving picture pianist will give him his support and make it worth while to arrange music adequately adapted to the pictures.

We must all agree, however, that even then the problem of properly applying the remedy is a large one, and that only common intelligence, a musical soul and an artistic temperament, with considerable forethought, can make proper application of any rule or rules set down.

UNIQUE BURIAL GIVEN ALEXANDER PHILBY OF AMERICAN CO.

Mr. Philby lived at 3523 North Clark street with his wife and three children. On Tuesday, August 6, while cantering slowly down the road, Philby's horse tripped, throwing him to the ground. Philby's injuries resulted in his death on Friday, August 16.

The boys of his company decided to give him a regulation cowboy funeral. The horse which threw him followed the hearse with saddle turned backward, his lariat and a piece of crepe dangling from it. Members of the regular company and all extras turned out in full force. Du Brock, from whom the American Film Mfg. Co. rents some of its horses, turned his entire stable over to their use with the result that sixty cowboys and girls, in everyday costumes, preceded the funeral down Clark street to Rosehill Cemetery.

As the casket was being lowered into the grave a company of cowboys under command of Producer Lee, fired a volley of three shots in honor of their dead companion.

Mr. Philby was one of the best liked men in the company and his loss will be grieved by all who knew him.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTES

American to Produce Andrew Jackson Story

Much interest has attached to the work of preparation in producing the battle of New Orleans by the company of "Flying A" players encamped at Starved Rock, Ill. The costumes are of the period of 1815 and no little expense and much hunting about has resulted from Producer Emerson's desire to make his costumes historically accurate.

For instance, he has called for twenty flint-locked revolvers which are obtainable only at Bannerman's Philadelphia establishment at the modest figure of $35.00 apiece. He is bringing an old cannon from the same supply house at a cost of $350.00. The Union Jack of England has been in use for over 114 years; so the women of the company have been kept busy making the "Betsy Ross" flag, at that time the national emblem of England among its troops encamped at New Orleans, although the Union Jack was then in use in other countries. Cutlasses of the period are almost impossible to get and as there is a reproduction of LaFitte's pirates in the picture it was necessary to dig them up one by one.

Geo. Kleine Releases

The two military semi-historical dramas which form part of the particularly interesting program scheduled for the week ending September 7th are set in the romantic days of long ago, when knights and warriors bold in shirts of mail and suits of glistening armor were ready at all times to do battle royal on the slightest provocation or fancied insult to the fair names of their lady loves.

In "A Tragedy of Long Ago," by Cines, Anthony Novelli splendidly portrays the character of Macaruffo, the faithful friend and adviser of Beatrice, the wife of Philip Viconti, Duke of Milano, to whom she is unhappily married. When Philip openly flaunts before Beatrice his love for Agnes, the Countess of Maino, she plots revenge with the aid of her faithful Macaruffo. The events which follow furnish an absorbing and thrilling story of intrigue, discovery, arrest and imprisonment, escape, pursuit, and a final chapter of such pathetic quality that the sympathies of all who follow the fortunes of the beautiful Beatrice in this interesting film story are sure to be aroused to the uttermost depths.

One of the tragedies incident to the brief reign of Pope Clement VII over the pontifical territory enclosed within the high and massive walls in the old city of Rome in the Sixteenth Century was the invasion by the army of the Duke of Bourbon on May 5, 1527, and the looting and burning of houses and the atrocities perpetrated on the defenseless inhabitants by his riotous followers. The Cines Company have attempted to portray in a notable film story entitled "The Sacking of Rome" some of the events incident to that historic occasion, and have interwoven a romance of heart interest and pathos. Another coming release of interest is the gorgeous Cines feature in two reels (2,000 fect) entitled "Rameses, King of Egypt." This is a marvelous film, telling in picture form of the love of a mighty monarch for a modest shepherdess of wondrous beauty.

WHAT SELIG IS DOING

The demand for Selig pictures has grown so within the last year that the Selig Polyscope Co. has found it necessary to announce the release of a fifth full reel subject in their weekly program. The new release will come on Wednesday of each week and the first of the series will be released on Wednesday, Sept. 25th. The Selig Company have been making extensive preparations for the adequate handling of the enlarged output for some time past and several negatives have already been completed and set aside for this Wednesday release. Recently the Chicago plant of the Selig Company was doubled in capacity in order to take care of the extra developing and printing work in connection with the new release, and the Selig Company have made very sure that the quality of their film shall not suffer in any particular by the increase in output.

* * * *

One of the recent additions to the Selig producing staff is Mr. Henry McRae. Mr. McRae is a well-known producer in the legitimate field and has had a long and successful career as a producing manager. For the last few years he has been identified with theatrical affairs on the Pacific Coast. Mr. McRae will be connected with the Chicago studio production forces for the present. His first pictures have been submitted to the Selig officials and are pronounced to be O. K. Mr. McRae has been a keen student of motion picture production for some time and the Selig Company feel that they have secured a producer that will be often heard from in the future.

* * * *

A big shipment of animals has been consigned to the Selig Polyscope Co.'s wild animal farm near Eastlake Park in Los Angeles. This is the most recent of three large shipments of animals that have reached the Selig farm since the first of the year. They will be used in the production of the famous Selig jungle pictures which have proved deservedly popular to photoplay fans.

* * * *

In the Selig release of September 6th entitled "Circumstantial Evidence" Warden Thomas Tynen, of the Colorado State Penitentiary, plays a prominent part. Warden Tynen is the man who instituted the now-famous honor system among the convicts in his charge. The picture in question is exceptionally interesting in that it shows many scenes which were taken in and around the penitentiary grounds.

* * * *

For the last two and a half weeks the Selig Polyscope Co.'s Chicago studio grounds have borne the appearance of an embryo Indian reservation. Over one hundred Winnebago redmen from the government quarter at Black River Falls, Wisconsin, have been camped on the Selig grounds while that company have been producing their big three-reel "Fort Dearborn Massacre Picture." The picture is being made from the story or historical novel by Randall Parish entitled "When Wilderness Was King."

RELIANCE RELEASES

A reel of exceptional interest will be released by the Reliance Company on September 4th, under title of "The Heart of a Cossack." It will be a costume production of magnitude not only in the matter of cast, but in the matter of its extraordinary Russian costumes. These costumes were supplied by the author, who also plays the leading role, and are the only ones of their kind in America. This gentleman, D. Makarenke, has been seen in the leading vaudeville theatres of America, where his offering, a troupe of Russian dramatic dancers, has caused a great sensation for the past few years. The story is one of Russian intrigue, where love plays the principal part and of course triumphs over evil.

The public at large will be glad to note that the Reliance two-reel release of September 18th will be "Caleb West, Master Diver." This famous book of F. Hopkinson Smith's is too well known to need any detailed description, but we are assured that the Reliance Company has, under the direction of Oscar Apfel, given it the best possible attention. A large cast has been employed and great trouble and expense have been gone to in an effort to reproduce the unique lighthouse scenes, both in the matter of construction and after completion. The under the sea scenes where the diver is at work, the explosion of the sloop and the hundred and one other tense dramatic features have all been graphically filmed.

ECLAIR RELEASES

Eclair's "The Haunted Bachelor" ought to go as far in banishing the fear and belief in ghosts as Bob Ingersoll did in tearing down many old superstitions.

Briefly, this pictureplay presents a striking example of what ghosts are made of and that is this: they are simply the delusion of the believer's imagination. Ghosts are and are not, as this play proves.

* * * *

"The Ranchers' Lottery," to be released by Eclair, September 12th, features several members of their stock company in a delightful bit of hearty, unconventional acting. The whole story seems to have gone into their soul and blood, judging by the absolute abandon they exhibit in their working up and then out of a very good situation. It ought to please any sort of audience.

In addition to the one at Whitestone, L. I., the Kinemacolor Company of America is establishing a studio at Los Angeles. David Miles, the director, will shortly take the company to the new California studio, where a series of comedies and dramas will be Kinemacolored; that is to say, produced in all the tints and shades of nature.

* * * *

Mr. E. L. Barker, advertising manager of the Kinemacolor Company of America, is on an extended trip through the West, to further the interest in Kinemacolor pictures.

* * * *

Mr. A. H. Sawyer, of the Kinemacolor Company of America, has recently returned from an extended trip to Boston and New England, where he has been arousing an interest in the Kinemacolor pictures.

ANOTHER GAUMONT RELEASE

No firm has probably met with a more enthusiastic reception from the Independent exhibitors than the Gaumont Company, since they flaunted the Independent banner. At first, it will be recalled, this concern very modestly released but two productions per week. Toward the end of February the demand for three reels was felt and this took place in the Gaumont Weekly, which has since become the standard and most recognized film in the Independent fold.

Now, the continued appreciative patronage on the part of the exchange men and exhibitors has made the Gaumont Company realize that a third regular release, in reality a fourth per week, is demanded and they have consequently arranged to introduce their third regular release on Saturdays, commencing with Saturday, September 21st. This marks the largest number of releases of any of the manufacturers in the Independent faction and gives convincing evidence of the enterprise with which this French concern is pursuing its business in the United States.

This new Saturday release will invariably be a split reel consisting of two subjects, both innovations in their line. The first and major portion of the reel will be devoted to some great and important topical event of the week, much larger in scope and dimension than any of the subjects treated in the Gaumont Weekly, and will carry with it as a tail-piece some scientific, industrial, educational or scenic subject. This arrangement of material for the Saturday releases will meet the long-felt need that the exhibitors have felt so urgently. They are assured of a film of extreme timeliness, coupled with scientific, educational or industrial subjects that will do much to place the motion picture business on a scholastic plane. They cannot but help to elevate, not only the industry, but the class of patronage that supports every motion picture playhouse at this day.

It will be impossible to announce the first important topical event which will be placed in the initial release, but the Gaumont Company assures its patrons that this release will at all times concern itself with some event of the week in which the reel is issued. It is for this reason that it is being put out on the last day of the week. Among various subjects which offer themselves for selection in the way of tail-pieces, the Gaumont Company has already a large supply on hand, the chief of which are the Cotton Industry, the Industries of the Caucasian Mountains in Russia, Zoological Specimens of Pond Life, the Complete Life of the Blue Bottle Fly from the formation of the first cell to its full maturity, the Evils of Child Gluttony, Travels in Bruges, the Venice of the North, and Travels in the Basque Company, the Evolution of the Tadpole to Frog, the Life of a Mosquito, the Germ Bacillus, the Rock Formation of Lower France, the Soil Composition of Dover, England, the Silk Worm, the Hook Worm and many others of similar scientific magnitude. In fact, the exhibitor will at once realize the superiority of this Saturday release over any other film being put out on Saturdays. It is hoped that inasmuch as the Gaumont Company is capable of, and has arranged to advance the standing of the motion picture house by films of such merit that every exhibitor will be loud and long in his cries for the new Gaumont release.

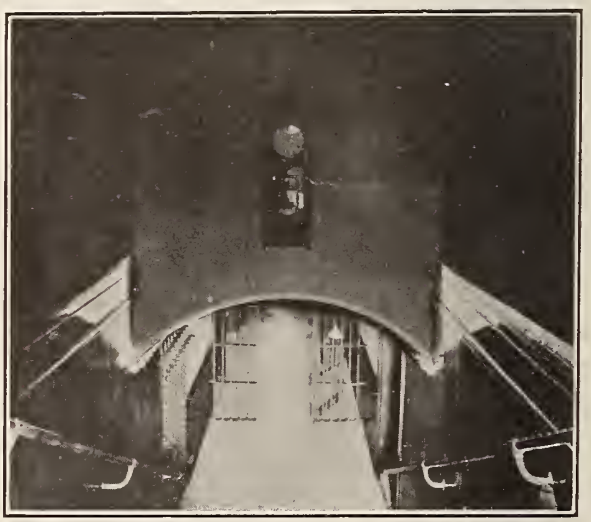
A REMARKABLE FEATURE

Life in Sing Sing Prison is the title of an intensely interesting subject being offered to showmen by A. J. Clapham, the Pioneer Manufacturer of Features. At an enormous expense Mr. Clapham secured 45 excellent photographs of this famous prison showing convicts at work, the various departments, cells, and death chairs, etc.

THE WAGON SHOP

Where all the street cleaning wagons in New York City are made.

These scenes have never been previously published, and every picture is stamped with genuineness. Mr. Clapham's advertising, shown in this issue, explains fully what he has to offer. An attractive line of lithographs has been prepared and every requisite for the proper exhibition of this subject has been carefully attended to; advance slides, two styles, one sheets, three sheets, electrotypes and a very dramatic lecture and lobby display go to make it complete. The subject is a strong one and will undoubtedly be in great demand. It treats of the prison matters in an educational as well as sensational manner. The slides are perfect in photographic quality, and some idea can be had of the value of the subject from the fact that Mr. Kellmann, of the Kellmann Feature Film Co.,



ENTRANCE TO THE DEATH HOUSE

Just inside of this door is the inscription, "He who enters here leave all hope behind." At the present time there are 21 prisoners awaiting electrocution behind these doors.

Boston, Mass., purchased the New England rights from Mr. Clapham for the sum of $500. This is probably the first time in moving picture history that State rights have been sold on slides. Mr. Clapham, however, does not intend to sell State rights in other parts of the United States, but will offer the subject to anyone who wants it.

Manufacturers' Synopses of Films

GAUMONT

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S TOKEN (Sept. 17).—The Virgin Queen of England, during whose reign England reached its climactic status of culture, was not without traces of the moral weakness of her father, the uxorcidal Henry the VIII. Her infatuations were extremely numerous, as the sudden deaths of many of her statesmen and chief advisers substantiate. None, however, approached closer to her real life than did the Earl of Essex, more familiarly known as Sir Walter Raleigh.

This gallant courtier first ingratiated himself in the regard of his queen by placing his robe across a puddle which lay in the path of Elizabeth and which would necessarily have soiled her garments. For his consideration Elizabeth rewarded him with a liberal amount of attention at the court ball held shortly thereafter, much to the chagrin and discomfort of Admiral Howard. This statesman could not conceal his jealousy and bore from the first a deep-seated fatal grudge against the Earl. As a mark of her special favor, the Queen gives to Essex her costliest ring, which was to bear with it an absolute acquittal for all injuries against herself or state, and this oath she solemnized with the Bible.

As time went on the gallant Earl was sent to quell the Irish, who were rising in revolt across the border line. However, his attempts were baffled by these soldiers and he was compelled to return to London humiliated and downcast. The intriguing Howard incites the Queen to refuse the defeated Earl entrance to the royal apartments, which fact so preys upon the mind of the disappointed nobleman that he makes himself a party to a conspiracy then on foot against the Virgin Queen. The plot is discovered. Essex is identified as one of its chief instigators, is captured and condemned to death. The Queen, mindful of her solemn promise, selects Lady Howard to go as messenger to her former lover, the luckless Earl, and bear the news that the Queen is ready to pardon him for his treason if he but return her ring. The humiliated Essex at first prefers to die than win the grace of his monarch, because of past favors, but is finally persuaded to deliver the trinket to Lady Howard, who proceeds at once to the royal apartments to hand it to the Queen. On her way she intercepts her husband. The scheming admiral, realizing the cudgel he almost has in his hands, plans to revenge himself by wresting the ring from his wife.

In the meantime the Queen is told that her former lover refuses to return the trinket and in her ire she orders the execution of Essex to proceed at once. Slowly he mounts the guillotine to his fated end, where the Queen bears witness to his courageous approach to death.

Even though her lover is lost, she cannot forget him and casts the castle in an atmosphere of deepest mourning, which almost interferes with her transaction of state affairs. Finally the truth comes out. It is discovered that Lady Howard has escaped and that the admiral possesses the ring. In her fury the Queen rises to give orders to capture this dastardly couple, but the revelation is too big a shock to her. She swoons as the figure of Essex on the execution platform rises as a mist before her and from this swoon she never revives.

KINGS IN EXILE (Sept. 19).—The Queen of Messina and her son, Prince Charles, are living in Paris in exile with a few loyal subjects, who have clung to them since the Revolution responsible for their overthrow. The gay, fascinating Parisian life appeals to the young Prince, who becomes infatuated with the favorite Parisian actress, Denise Marvel. Many is the clandestine stroll they take through the city's parks, and many the afternoon ride they take through the spacious Parisian boulevards.

One morning Denise learns that the matinee in which she was to take part has been postponed and in her eagerness to be with the one she loves she writes Prince Charles that she will be very pleased to take a walk through the park with him, in so much as the matinee has been postponed. The letter reaches its consignee at a most unpsychological moment, for the missive is delivered to him while in session with his mother, the Queen, the faithful General Dimitriki and several of the exiled royal cabinet. They are greatly distressed at their royal pupil's conduct, as they readily suspect that he is trying to keep something from them. The French newspapers also get hold of the infatuation and come out with an article to the effect that Prince Charles is about to marry Paris' theatrical favorite, Denise Marvel. This works up the anger of the Queen to fever heat and they decide that the Prince must be separated from the stage beauty at all costs. Just at this point Denise refuses a flattering engagement to tour one of the large theatrical circuits in the United States. She declines it only because she is confident that the Prince will make her his wife within the next month. However, the loyal subjects of His Royal Highness, who fled with the exiled party to Paris, prevail upon the Prince to devote more of his time to the interests of the State and less to the actress. They point to the humiliation cast upon them by the rumors in the daily press and persuasion finally leads to a letter from Prince Charles to the comely Denise explaining that they have been too happy in each other's company and must now cease to see each other forever. Only the interest of the State can be responsible for such a sacrifice and he assures her that whatever happens, he never shall be able to forget her and will finally make her his wife. The letter together with the result upon Denise throws the Prince into an unconsolable state. A few weeks later the young Prince is shocked at an article he comes across in a newspaper. It is a large flash, important item, pertaining to the wreck of the Acquitaine, one of the Mediterranean monsters, which had gone down off Madeira with almost all its passengers. Amongst those who had not been accounted for were a troupe of French artists, chief amongst whom was the Parisian favorite, Denise Marvel. This intelligence has the most disastrous effect upon Prince Charles, who is seized at once with violent brain fever and suffers so continually that the doctor opines him slowly going to madness. He is ordered to a private sanatorium, which only proves to aggravate his mental affliction, because of the fact that this institution overlooks the ocean which entombed his love. While confined in the walls of this resort, the Prince is not allowed to read any of the papers, a fact which enables the Queen and her staff of advisers to keep from telling him that a pinnace of the ill-fated steamship had been found by fishermen off the American coast, with twelve persons alive, clinging to it, amongst which number Miss Denise Marvel, her maid, and several other distinguished persons were found.

It is the plan of the mother and General Dimitriki to keep the Prince in complete ignorance of this fact, but love is ever able to overcome deception.

Denise is responsible for this, for as soon as she returns to Paris and learns that the Prince has been removed most mysteriously to a sanatorium, the location of which no one seems to be able to find out, she engages the services of the famous detective, Arville, to locate her love for her. He starts out at once and with his customary promptness, determines the resting place of Prince Charles. He finds him to be at Biarritz and after a considerable amount of cunning, leads the little actress into the confines of this large building. They take their hiding place in the funeral chamber for the detective has learned that it is here that Prince Charles comes at least once a day to mourn his beloved one. Needless to state the detective and the actress await the psychological moment and reveal themselves to the Prince as he pours forth a dirge on the keys of the organ.

The sight of his loved one cures the Prince at once and everything seems ended. All except for the fact that the Queen and her staff of advisers are very much chagrined and unable to reconcile themselves to the infatuation. Prince Charles, however, now that he has his loved one in his grasp once more, determines never again to leave her, and pens a manuscript of abdication from the throne in favor of his mother, the Queen, and the younger branches of his house. This relieves the situation and the Queen herself, now won over by the charms of the dainty Denise, acquiesces and consents to the marriage.

COMET

A WAIF OF THE MOUNTAINS (Sept. 7).—There are few lulls in this interesting picture play. The action is spirited and the situations are many and varied. Through the death of Captain Bertram Green, a retired sea captain, his nephew, Theodore Green, inherits his entire fortune. At the opening of our tale we find Theodore, or Teddy, as he is familiarly known, an inmate of the village almshouse. Teddy's identity is unknown, although search has been instituted all over the world for his whereabouts. In some way or other Caleb Scraggs, an illiterate and uncouth mountaineer, learns who Teddy really is and through the influence of Ike Harvey, the village constable, an unscrupulous man, has the boy turned over to him. Caleb has a wife who is a hag. She is as despicable a character as her husband, and from the time the boy enters the household she learns to hate him. Teddy is made to work very hard. One day, after failing to split wood in accordance with Mrs. Scraggs' idea of speed and finesse, the lad is severely thrashed by Caleb. He is unable to stand the treatment any longer and decides to run away. In the middle of the night he leaves the place and after waiting till morning continues on his journey. Arriving at a schoolhouse miles away, he tells his story to Florence Wheeler, the teacher, and she promises to protect him no matter what prevails. When Teddy's flight is discovered the Scraggs and Harvey follow in hot pursuit. They locate the boy at the schoolhouse and try to get him. Florence refuses to give him up, although threatened with arrest. Then Florence enters the school and with the aid of a pair of horses rides off with the boy. Her destination is the Connecticut State line. Once there she realizes that the lad is at least safe. The Scraggs and Harvey then get into a buggy and follow Teddy and Florence and reach them just as they cross the line. The school teacher and the lad are now out of the jurisdiction of Harvey and the Scraggs and although the constable displays his badge and shows legal papers to the effect that Teddy is the property of Caleb and his wife, he cannot arrest them. They then depart in disgust admitting that the game is up. Florence embraces the boy just as Philip Downs, overseer at the almshouse, arrives and gives the boy some papers which reveals who he is.

A FRONTIER SOLDIER OF FORTUNE (Sept. 14).—Tiring of his wild life and determined to atone for an unsavory past, Jack Gordon, an ex-gambler and cowboy, purchases a general store and settles down in a small frontier town in the Golden West. He seems to be getting along famously until he meets Alice Drake, a pretty girl. Alice has come to Platte Ridge to reside with her uncle, James Thompson, a banker. It is a case of love at first sight between the pair and Jack is anxious to make Alice his wife. The banker does not look on with favor on the match and forbids his niece to have anything further to do with Jack. Alice rebels at this and says that she loves Jack, too. He insists that Alice accompany his wife to Southern California, where Mrs. Thompson has been ordered to take an overland trip for her health. The girl reluctantly obeys, but before she starts she vows her undying affection for Gordon. Jack apparently has no desire to be alone. The sweet face of his dear one haunts him night and day and he concludes to return to his old life and in this way believes that he can entirely forget her. He sells out his business, moves to civilization where he figures in numerous adventures. On his way he encounters a wagon train. It is chased across the plains by a band of Indians. The rear wagon is captured by the red men and left in charge of several braves. At this juncture Jack appears upon the scene. Among the captives are Alice and her aunt. There is a hand-to-hand fight between the gallant young man and the Indians. The aborigines are adroitly routed and Alice and her aunt are saved. As a reward Jack wins a blushing bride and the everlasting gratitude of her aunt and uncle.

THE HAUNTED BACHELOR
Eclair Release Sept. 10th.

EDISON

THE TRIANGLE (Sept. 3).—After having lost his job in a sweat shop on account of dull times, a poor workman living from hand to mouth, with a family to support, is nearly driven to distraction by his inability to secure employment.

One day the poor workman meets a Mr. Goodfellow. He, being rich and philantbropically inclined, has his sympathies aroused by the workman's pitiful story of distress. Mr. Goodfellow, feeling the presence of a problem, decides to investigate the cause and lend his aid in solving it. Accordingly he goes to the manufacturer, where be is informed that the former operators of the idle machines in the shop were discharged because of the fact that he was making more goods than he could sell.

Mr. Goodfellow suggests that if the employees work slower and fewer hours it would afford work for the unemployed, but this ingenious suggestion is not received with enthusiasm. Mr. Goodfellow next visits the retailer to ascertain why he does not replenish his stock more frequently and is informed that trade is poor and it is not feasible to buy more goods than can be sold to his customers.

Mr. Goodfellow then goes home more perplexed than ever, realizing that the question has resolved itself into a triangle which almost baffles him. He finally argues thus; supply the workman with a little money and he will patronize the retailer who in time will replenish his stock and thus compel the manufacturer to employ more workmen to enable him to meet the demand. The following day he puts his idea into practical use by distributing money among the idle workmen. This has the desired effect and he thus works out the problem that philosophers of the world have attempted to solve ever since the struggle of life began. Played mostly in comedy vein the film is a distinct novelty.

ALADDIN UP-TO-DATE (Sept. 4).—Three bad boys come into possession of the famous Aladdin lamp and without realizing its marvelous power cast it away at the lakeside as a valueless article, where it is found by poor penniless Tim, the gardener, who is about to commit suicide because farmer Jenkins objects to him as a son-in-law. He picks up the lamp and examines it curiously.

In trying to remove the sand and dirt he rubs it vigorously when to his astonishment a slave of the lamp suddenly appears, coming from nowhere and informs Tim the slaves of the lamp are at his service and by simply rubbing it his every wish will be granted, then he disappears as mysteriously as he came.

Overjoyed with his good luck he goes home at once to try the power of the lamp; again he rubs it and a slave appears, to whom he expresses his desire to have fine clothes and good things to eat. Instantly his wish is granted by other slaves, popping from nowhere, depositing the wished for articles and then disappearing in a flash. Tim now determines to win his sweetheart and overcome the objections of her parents by the aid of the wonderful lamp. In all this he succeeds in a most mysterious manner. First an elopement, after which the slaves supply him with an up-to-date automobile and present him with a magnificent mansion where they are to live happily ever after.

But one day, during Tim's absence, a walking delegate blows a whistle and the servants of the house strike and walk out. Being suddenly left without servants Tim's wife, with the aid of the lamp, compels the slaves to do her housework which they do reluctantly. They rebel at this unusual work, but are forced to obey until the chief slave finds the lamp and after a short conference they write the following note: "For four thousand years we have been slaves of the lamp, but we bave never done housework and we won't do it now. We have swiped the lamp. Good-by, Ex-slaves." And they disappear for the last time.

This is a delightfully unusual comedy full of trick work which is wonderfully well done.

BELIEVE ME, IF ALL THOSE ENDEARING YOUNG CHARMS (Sept. 6).—All lovers must hold dear in their memory and secret within their hearts the name of Thomas Moore, for perhaps no other singer of sweet songs has played more upon the tender chords in the lovers' litany than the Irish bard, Tom Moore. And of all the songs "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms" is the sweetest that has been sung. In setting this beautiful melody to the canvas the Edison Company has handled it in a distinctly modern style, yet they retain all the poetical atmosphere of its theme.

A famous artist is in search of a model to pose for a picture entitled, "In Love," and he finally engages a sweet-faced young girl whose beauty and simplicity capture his heart.

One night after a reception at his studio, where the simple model learns of the artist's love for her, a society lady, whose imagination had led her to believe that she would soon become his wife, wakes up to the fact that she has a rival. We are introduced to the lines of this beautiful poem, and the manner in which the Edison Company has carried out its theme is brought about by an accident to the model which bids fair to disfigure her for life. Still having faith in her artist lover she awaits his coming in the hour of her misfortune, but by a ruse of the society lady the model is prevented from knowing that her lover is hastening to her with a famous specialist, and she, poor girl, believes that the loss of her beauty is the cause of his loss of affection, so she flees from her rooms, leaving no traces behind ber to tell where she is going.

After months of weary searching the artist gives up hope of ever finding her again. She returns thoroughly restored to health and beauty and on entering his studio she finds him asleep in his chair. Not knowing whether he entertains any further affection for her, she leaves a note upon his table. But fate decides it is never to be read and he burns it up not knowing that it contains the one knowledge he most longs for.

LOVE KNOWS NO LAWS
Reliance release Sept. 11th.

Months afterward they are brought together and "the heart that has truly loved, never forgets, but as truly loves on to the close."

A beautiful love story well acted and staged.

THANHOUSER

DON'T PINCH MY PUP (Sept. 8).—The boy's parents were poor, and he helped out the family income by selling newspapers. He was a lonesome little chap and had no pals among the other chaps, and although he never admitted it openly, he longed for someone who would love him and "be a chum."

While at work one day the youngster met a dog, seemingly homeless, and most certainly hungry. The boy divided his scanty noonday meal with the dog, and was delightfully happy when the dog refused to go away, insisting upon accompanying the child home.

The newsboy found that his joy was not shared by other members of his family. They regarded the animal as an unnecessary luxury, but finally consented to take him in. Then for a few days the child was happy, for he had something to lavish his affection upon.

Anxiety came to him, however, when his father told him that a crusade against unlicensed dogs was to be instituted, and that all animals without tags would promptly be captured and destroyed. The amount of the license fee was trifling, but it was far beyond the financial ability of the boy. After vainly trying to borrow money from his mother, the youngster spent his spare time doing odd jobs, and slowly but surely his secret hoard mounted.

The trouble was, however, that there was a time limit. The day before it expired the boy counted over his money and found he was twenty-one cents short of the necessary sum. He had learned by patient inquiry that the law would not permit of partial payment and his little heart was filled with bitterness. He had done all he could, there was nothing left now but to defy the authorities.

Accordingly he wrote "a warning" to the police. In it he informed the police that he had labored hard and faithfully, had been unable to amass the sum necessary for a dog license. Then he went on to say that he "was not a Black-hander," but he'd kill the cop who pinched his pup.

A great big policeman saw the child shove this threatening message under the station house door. He read it, then called his companions, and they also perused the document.

Perhaps they were afraid, perhaps their hearts were touched. Anyhow very shortly afterwards they marched around to the boy's house and made him happy for a year by presenting him with a collar and a license good for one good dog that a little newsboy loved.

A STAR REBORN (Sept. 10).—"Nothing for you to-day," was what the girl heard in each theatrical office and agency where she applied for an engagement. Weary and despairing, she at last called at a theatre where a Shakespearian star was rehearsing. The doorkeeper rudely rebuffed her, but fortunately the star's attention was attracted, and he went up and talked to her.

"I must have something to do," she pleaded, "and really, sir, I can act if you will give me a chance."

The actor was a goodhearted chap, and his sympathy was aroused. He "tried her out," and as she made good, a regular position was given her. And the girl admired and revered the star, praying that some day she might be able to repay the debt she owed him.

She did not become his leading lady, because she did not have the ability. As an actress she was just ordinary, but she was sweet and pretty, and won the heart of a most presentable young millionaire, who was extremely happy when she consented to become his bride.

Some years later, on her return from a long trip abroad, the former actress was shocked to learn that the star was in financial difficulties. The public no longer cared for Shakespeare, and, his fortune gone, the star was out of an engagement, for he was too old to learn to dance the turkey trot.

The woman called on her onetime employer and found him starving in a garret, although he tried to conceal the fact from her. She was not deceived. Knowing him so well, she realized he would not accept charity, but something had to be done, and she vigorously told her husband so.

"The dear old man is going to star again," she said, "and you are to be the angel, my angel."

The husband had plenty of money, and was willing to indulge his wife. They sent for a theatrical manager, and asked him to send the star out in Shakespearian productions. He was willing when they were agreed to be given on the grounds of a country club. The onetime star appeared as Malvolio, made a great hit, and happily signed a contract.

He never knew to whom he owed his fortune. Actorlike, he honestly believed that his merit had finally been discovered. Arm in arm with his new manager, the shabby little man strutted off, explaining just what should be done and how. Husband and wife watched them, the man laughing. The woman looked up and patted him on the arm.

"We must not forget, dear," she said, "that he gave me a job when I needed it badly. I am always his debtor."

"Don't worry, old girl," the man replied, "he will have big audiences wherever he goes, if we have to shanghai them, and will be the proudest star on the road. We are in for a classical revival."

Then they smiled up at the reborn star, who by this time was nearly out of sight.

THE BIRTH OF THE LOTUS BLOSSOM (Sept. 13).—One of the prettiest legends of old Japan concerns the birth of the lotus blossom. It tells how many years ago, a brave warrior fell under the displeasure of the Mikado, and a troop of soldiers were sent to capture him. He fought them off, single-handed, and made his escape, although badly wounded. Realizing that his end was near, he painfully made his way to the shrine of Hachiman, the God of War, to die there. Upon his arrival the temple was deserted except for one of the priestesses, who bound up his wounds, hid him when the soldiers appeared, and told him she would aid him to escape. When he feebly started away, she decided she could not let him go alone. Kneeling before the shrine, she humbly prayed the god that he would not be angry with her, for her heart had gone out to the brave man, and she could not desert him. Then the warrior and the priestess departed.

The God of War was naturally the patron saint of soldiers, and in this time of peril he aided them. Knowing that the absence of the priestess would be noted, and a search follow that would be fatal to the fugitive, Hachiman descended from his shrine and took the place of the priestess at the altar.

The brave soldier reached a place of safety, but soon expired of his wounds. The broken-hearted priestess returned to her temple, in fear and trembling, to pay homage to the god. When she reached the door and looked inside she was stricken with awe, for she saw herself, in her garb of a priestess, kneeling at the altar.

The god, for the god it was, smiled upon her, and beckoned her to enter. Reverently she did so. As she walked forward the god retreated and entered the shrine. Then the girl fell fainting on the steps of the altar.

The priest and a number of worshipers entered in time to see a miracle. On the altar steps fainting was lying the beloved priestess. The image of the God of War was alive. It stretched forth its hands and slowly resolved back into stone. As it did so, the body of the priestess disappeared, and a lotus blossom appeared in the place where she had been. For the god, knowing that life would be a misery to her without her soldier lover, had taken her to join him in the land where there is no sorrow.

Another Winner!
"CALEB WEST"
In 2 reels. Released Sept. 18th. From the famous book of F. Hopkinson Smith's. Wonderful lighthouse and under the sea scenes. Special 3 and 1 sheet posters.

RELIANCE

Advance releases:—"THE HEART OF A COSSACK," Wed., Sept. 4th; "THE BULLY AND THE SHRIMP," Sat., Sept. 7th; "LOVE KNOWS NO LAWS," Wed., Sept. 11th; "FOR LOVE OF HER," Sat., Sept. 14th.

ECLAIR

A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE (Sept. 15).—Gavroche lives by his wits, so when he reads an ad which tells that a rich American girl will marry the man who can cause her to experience the greatest thrill or sensation, he puts his mental ingenuity to working. And he conceives a plan to win.

He calls at her address and sees two suitors try and fail. He then goes to a menagerie, where he buys two lions. With these he returns and enters the office where the contract is to be signed if one should prove the victor.

All flee before Gavroche and his lions, all but the heiress who flies into his arms begging protection. Thus it is that he caused her the greatest emotion or thrill, and she gladly names him victor and husband to be. On the same reel

AROUND CONSTANTINOPLE.—An animated panorama of those picturesque and antiquated views that abound around the Turkish capital.

THE MARSHAL'S HONEYMOON (Sept. 10.)—John Calhoun, marshal of Green Briar, is on his way to church to marry Lillian Carter, the village belle. He passes the railroad yards and duty halts him. "Peregrinating Pete," a traveling worthy of the road, must needs be arrested and put in the calaboose. This accomplished, he returns to his wedding and soon he and his bride are off on their honeymoon.

The villagers release the hobo and leave a human skeleton in his stead. The Marshal and his bride return and he goes at once to see his prisoner. He sees the skeleton and thinks poor Mr. Vagrant has starved to death. Until he is told there is fun galore.

On the same film:

THE HAUNTED BACHELOR.—John Morgan, a rich bachelor, has a negro valet called Sambo. In a fit of rage he strikes the darky and, thinking he has killed him, he puts his body in a trunk and plans to bury it. But Sambo revives and hides through fright.

Morgan waits till night and then takes the trunk to bury it, and at every turn comes face to face with Sambo, whom he takes to be a haunting ghost. The movements of the doubly scared pair attract the police and both land in the station house. You'll laugh until it all gets straightened out.

THE RANCHERS' LOTTERY (Sept. 12).—Jim Gardner, a quick-tempered, well-to-do rancher, has invited two of his neighboring ranchers, both bachelors, too, over to dinner. His Chinese cook commits a blunder and is discharged. Jim tries to finish preparing dinner and thinks he has done well till all three sit down to eat it. Briefly, it was impossible to eat. All three determine they ought to be married, anyway. So they all advertise for a wife.

Three Eastern girls who are going West for their vacation see the ad. and plan to have fun through it. Ida Carstairs, the prettiest of the three, gets herself up as a bewizened old maid. All three ranchers meet the three girls. They decide that two of them will do, but each one balks at Ida in her disguise. So they decide to draw straws; the thortest straw means Ida. Jim gets it and turns and runs away, while Ida gives chase and catches him. The other two are twitting him about his luck when lo! Ida removes her disguise and Jim laughs last.

VITAGRAPH

TOMMY'S SISTER (Sept. 2).—Left with two small children, Mrs. Morgan finds it difficult to make both ends meet. Polly, her daughter, does the housework. Tommy is looking for a situation to help his mother. He applies for one in the office of Hervey & Porter, real estate, loans, etc. Porter refuses him because he has had but litle experience, but Jack Hervey, touched by the boy's earnestness and hard story, takes him on. His mother and sister are jubilant. A week after he has a place he falls ill, and the doctor says he must stay in bed. In this dilemma, Polly suggests that she dress in Tommy's clothes, pass herself off as his brother and get them to let her fill the place till he gets well. The scheme works. Jack Hervey and Porter are both in love with Estelle, to whom Jack is engaged. Porter tries to make love to Estelle and is indignantly repulsed. Porter resolves to ruin Jack and give away a big land deal, on which he hopes to make a fortune, to a rival real estate man. Polly becomes suspicious and, hiding herself in a cupboard, overhears what they have to say. She warns Jack, who closes his deal quickly and outwits his enemies. Polly then confesses her sex, and the deception is willingly forgiven for what she has done. Jack and Estelle, who are about to be married, resolve to take a special interest in Mrs. Morgan and her family and help them in every possible way

CORONETS AND HEARTS (Sept. 3).—Leaving England in search of an American wife, young Cyril, son of the Earl of Creston, on reaching America meets Lilly Penn, and immediately lays siege to her heart and her fortune when he learns that she is an heiress. The Earl of Creston has advised his son that if he marries an American woman he must marry money. Lilly, who is a trusting, perfectly natural girl, is urged by Cyril to marry him, quoting his family standing in England, and as an inducement, says he will bestow upon her a coronet which he will bring her the following night.

The next day he goes to the safety deposit vaults to get the jeweled crown, and while in the vault he drops a letter which he has recently received from bis father, reminding bim again that if he marries he must marry a fortune. Just after Cyril has left, Lilly has occasion to go to the vault to deposit some jewels and finds the letter which Cyril dropped. She is distressed to learn that he is a fortune hunter, scorns his proffered coronet, and rejects him. Cyril realizes that true worth is found in women, not in their fortunes, and he must prove his worth. He sends the coronet back to his father and relinquishes all claim to his title. He goes West and becomes a rancher. A couple of years later, Mr. Penn, after a siege of sickness, takes a trip West with his daughter Lilly and his doctor. A party of desperadoes try to wreck the train and rob the passengers. Cyril discovers them at their work and drives them away, signals the train and saves it. In the scrimmage he is shot and wounded. The trainmen carry him back to his cabin and he is attended to by Mr. Penn's doctor. Lilly and her father visit Cyril. He is surprised to see Lillian and they are both glad to meet again. He tells her the hardships through which he has passed, preferring to depend on his own efforts than on a title. He points to her head and says that he has no coronet to place there now. She reaches through the window, plucks a branch of vine, twines it into a wreath and places it upon her head. Her father and the doctor withdraw and the two lovers agree that hearts of love are better than all the coronets of jewels.

CAPTAIN BARNACLE'S LEGACY (Sept. 4).—Captain Barnacle receives a letter telling him that Mr. Markham, a South African gentleman whose life he saved some years ago, has died, leaving him a legacy in money and some property and jewels in South Africa. The will stipulates that he shall visit the property in person. The Captain is glad of this legacy, as it will enable him to provide for his adopted daughter, Ruth. He leaves her in charge of Mrs. Lawrence and, with his friend Bunce, starts for South Africa. They are met by Krako, the overseer of the property, who has come to drive them to it in his wagon. Bunce mistrusts him, but there is nothing left to do but follow him. He takes them to the property, where Barnacle discovers that Markham has left an African wife and seven children, who want to adopt him as their father. He gets some very valuable diamonds from a safe in the house, and these excite the cupidity of Krako. He works on the jealousy of the wife and they plot with some other natives to kill the sailors as they sleep. Barnacle and Bunce, however, let themselves down out of a window with their possessions, take two horses which they are forced to ride barebacked and fly the place. After many difficulties they reach their native land, and Barnacle, happy in his legacy, hangs some of the diamonds on Ruth's neck.

PATHES

BEATRIX D'ESTE (Sept. 3).—Beatrix D'Este, a beautiful Italian widow, is loved by Orlando, an Italian nobleman, and also by the powerful Duke of Milan. She refuses the Duke, who plots to prove to her that her lover is false. The plot succeeds and she gives her consent to the Duke. Orlando, hear-of this, seeks to die, and the young widow is informed that he has killed himself for love of her. She rushes to him in her bridal robes and learns from his own lips that she is the victim of treachery.

LOCKED OUT OF WEDLOCK (Sept. 4).—Saying farewell to his bachelor friends keeps Dudley Brown out of bed until the cold, gray dawn of his wedding morning. He tells his landlady to wake him at ten and tries to get some sleep, but is disturbed by boys playing beneath his window. Dressing hurriedly (and scantily) he goes to the yard and sets the watchdog loose. This stops the noise of the boys but not their miscbief. Brown dozes off in the shade of the old apple tree. The boys return, lock the dog's collar about Brown's neck and leave him there. Ten o'clock arrives, and after a search the landlady finally discovers Brown. She tells him the time and he rushes to keep his appointment. But pshaw! he is chained to the dog-house. To get away he takes a piece of the kennel with him. He starts on a wild run to meet his bride, but a policeman suspects he has broken his chain and escaped from some asylum. His explanations sound preposterous, and after a struggle he is locked up for safe keeping. However, the key is secured, the bride acquainted with her lover's mishap, and she marries him in spite of it.

THE PENALTY PAID (Sept. 5).—Black Hawk and Red Fox, members of two neighboring tribes, dispute the ownership of a carcass, and in the struggle which follows Red Fox is killed. Black Hawk informs the Chief, bis father-in-law, of the act, and is condemned to wander the plains with the body of Red Fox tied to his back. Black Hawk is discovered, exhausted, by two braves, members of a warring band, who relieve him of his burden. Their chief accepts him as one of his warriors. An expedition against Black Hawk's former tribe results in the capture of the Chief's daughter, Black Hawk's squaw. The outcast proves his love for her by helping her to escape and return to her own people, and for this her father welcomes Black Hawk back to his old stamping ground.

WIFFLES AND THE MAGIC WAND (Sept. 6).—Wiffles, the noted comedian, is married to a shrew, who proves more than his match in their many conflicts. A discolored eye is the last straw, and Wiffles decides to tame his wife's aggressiveness. He buys tbe magic wand of Professor Jinks and marcbes bravely home. He arrives late for dinner and his wife aims a blow at him. He touches her with the magic wand, but, alas, with the wrong end, producing two wives instead of making one disappear. The wives combine forces, take the magic wand away and pound the unfortunate Wiffles until he apologizes.

On the same reel:

THE BUD, THE LEAF AND THE FLOWER.—One of the wonders of nature. the growth of a flower, reproduced in color.

GEE! MY PANTS (Sept. 7).—The call of duty and his love for his new hat place Dr. Gibbs in an embarrassing predicament. While he is hurrying to attend to a patient his hat blows into a pond. Seeing no one near, the physician divests himself of his trousers and wades into the stream. A tramp makes off with the clothing and leaves Gibbs looking very much like an acrobat. The doctor manages to secure the blanket from his carriage, however, and thus continues his journey. Reaching the patient's house, a watch-dog flirts with the loose end of the improvised trousers. The doctor's screams acquaint the family with the situation, and they provide him with a pair of real trousers, four sizes too large. The medicine man is almost happy on the return trip. He meets his sweetheart, whose automobile is stalled in a sea of mud, and offers to transfer her to his carriage if she will promise to marry him. She accepts the offer, but her weight in his arms, the mud, and the clumsy attire are too much for his equilibrium and he slips. To say what happens after this would be spoiling a good story.

RELIANCE

CALEB WEST (Sept. 18).—Reel 1.—Henry Sanford, a civil engineer, has a contract to build a lighthouse at the ledge at Keyport. He employs the service of Captain Joe Bell and his well-trained sailors, and of Caleb West, the master diver. Caleb has a young wife who, left alone while Caleb is at sea, finds her life monotonous and lonesome. Bill Lacey, a handsome young seaman at work on the ledge, has his eyes on Betty, and constantly makes overtures to her, which at first she repulses. An accident to the boiler of the sloop employed in the work cripples several of the men, and Lacey is badly wounded. Betty, with the other women in the port, is summoned as nurse, and Lacey becomes her charge. Lacey makes the best of his opportunity and plays upon her sympathy. Pity for the suffering man and the unaccustomed position of responsibility awakens new feeling in Betty, and when Lacey is again well she finds her old position in the humble cabin intolerable. A note from Caleb saying that the work at the lighthouse would keep him away from home some time longer decides her and she goes away with Lacey. Caleb, returning from his work, finds her gone, and in complete dismay reads her note of explanation.

Reel 2.—Betty, in her innocence, has grasped at the idea of elopement with Lacey as a means to get away from her lonesome life at the ledge and had not realized what was required of her. Arrived in the city, she becomes frightened at Lacey's ardent lovemaking and when in his madness he uses force she rushes away from him. She goes to Sanford as her only refuge. Sanford, at first bitter against her, softens as he hears her story and he takes her to the home of a friend of his, Kate Leroy, who gives her refuge for the night. Kate is kind and sympathetic and in a general way points out to Betty the error of her flight and gets her consent to going back. A telegram brings Captain Joe on the scene, and he gladly forgives Betty and takes her home.

Caleb, in the nobility of his soul, forgives his wife, but thinking that she will never be happy with him, refuses to take her back. He is lonesome without her, and she, equally unhappy, lives her own life at Captain Joe's. She takes a position in a store so as not to be dependent on Captain Joe. She is returning home from work one evening at dusk and is accosted and insulted by Lacey. In her terror she screams and Caleb, who has made it a habit to follow her, himself unseen, rushes up and falls upon her assailant while she runs safely home. Caleb begins to feel that Betty really needs him, and decides to take her back. He goes to Captain Joe and tells him that he has come for Betty. The Captain, overjoyed, brings the penitent young wife in to her forgiving husband and leaves them in the happiness of their reunion.

THE REDEMPTION (Sept. 21).—Ellen receives a letter from her brother Bob, who is in prison for assault while under the influence of liquor, telling her he will be free in a week and asking her to meet him. She does so and prevails upon him to go home with her. He refuses to meet her husband, desiring to defer it until he has "made good," so the husband is kept in ignorance of the fact that his wife has a brother. Ellen's little girl takes a great fancy to Bob and the clandestine meetings are happy times for all three. The husband blows cigar smoke rings around the child's head, and the brother follows suit, using a cigarette. It is a half burnt cigarette found by the husband that first gives rise to suspicions of his wife's unfaithfulness. These suspicions are latter confirmed by the child's prattle about liking the other man's smoke rings better than his. He finds a note from the brother telling her the clothes she gave him proved a good fit and that he would be there the next day to bid her good-bye. He returns from his office in time to find his wife in her brother's arms, and many tense dramatic moments follow before the situation is cleared up and husband and brother are reconciled.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

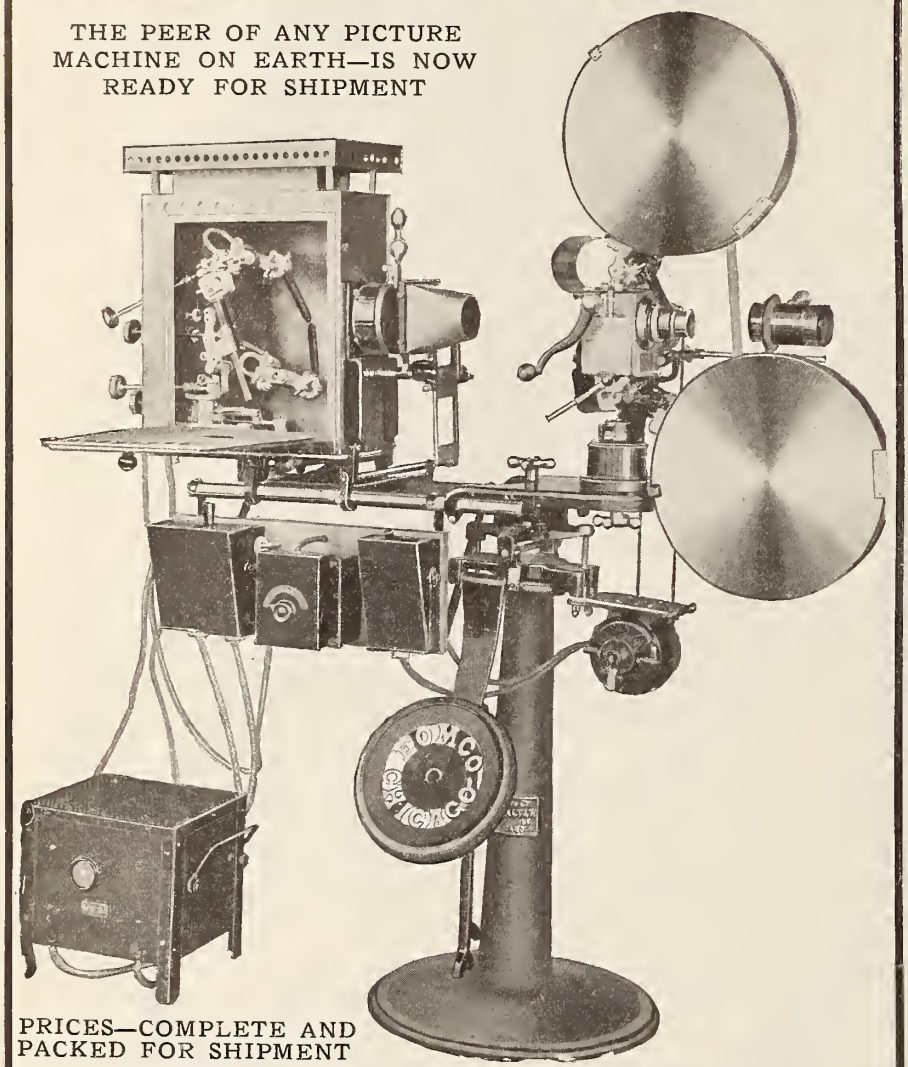
The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

LUBIN

A SUBSTITUTION (Sept. 2).—Harry Lawn, at home from college, has fallen in love with Dorothy Somers, a summer boarder at his father's farm. Lem Durpee, the "hired man," also falls victim to Dorothy's charms, while Miss Priscilla Vane, a maiden lady "on the shady side of forty," becomes smitten with Harry. The attentions of Lem and Priscilla wearying the two lovers, they plan to elope. They are overheard by Lem, by Priscilla, and by Dorothy's father, who decides to stop the elopement. Priscilla resolves to take Dorothy's place and marry Harry herself. At dinner Priscilla drops a sleeping powder into Dorothy's coffee. The powder takes effect and Dorothy goes to her room and drops to sleep. Priscilla dresses in Dorothy's clothes, putting on a heavy veil. Lem goes to the barn to chloroform a cat. It gives him an inspiration, which is to take Harry's place and elope with Dorothy himself. Harry comes into the barn; presently Lem "puts him out of business" and dons Harry's auto togs, which with the goggles effectually disguise him. A whistle at Dorothy's window and the elopement is on, Priscilla and Lem starting off with a horse and wagon, as Lem has not mastered the mysteries of an automobile. Dorothy's father, waiting in his room, falls in a doze, and awakes just too late to stop the elopement. In his haste to overtake the lovers he falls down stairs, arousing the household. A number of the boarders in the Somers car give chase. The car breaks down. A match, lit to ascertain the trouble, causes an explosion, which spoils the car for immediate use. The pursuers then have to "foot it." Lem and Priscilla, unconscious of each other's identity, arrive at the minister's. The pursuing party, well nigh breathless, arrive at the parsonage and hurry in just as the minister is pronouncing Lem and Priscilla man and wife. Somers berates Priscilla soundly, believing her, of course, to be his daughter. Priscilla removes her veil and Lem looks decidedly foolish. He takes off his cap and goggles and Priscilla learns the worst. Congratulations seem to be in order and Lem accepts them sheepishly, while Priscilla, deciding that Lem is better

THE 1913 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

THE PEER OF ANY PICTURE MACHINE ON EARTH—IS NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT



PRICES—COMPLETE AND PACKED FOR SHIPMENT

$250.00 without motor, switchboard or seat.
$285.00 with motor (any voltage), switchboard and seat.
$300.00 special Massachusetts, with motor, switchboard and seat.
THE PRICE HAS GONE UP FOR THREE REASONS:
1st: Because of the advance in Material and Labor Cost.
2nd: Because we furnish a complete metal equipment.
3rd: Because the introduction of the Motiograph is complete.

OUR GUARANTEE

FREE UPKEEP FOR ONE YEAR COVERING PARTS of the 1913 model Motiograph mechanism, THAT MAY BECOME WORN OUT IN SERVICE, or WHICH MAY SHOW DEFECT IN MATERIAL OR WORKMANSHIP, with the understanding that the part be sent to us, charges prepaid, for examination.

Manufactured by THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY
564-572 W. Randolph Street CHICAGO, ILL.
For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

than no man at all, concludes to make the best of things.

THE BANK CASHIER (Sept. 4).—George Graham and James Fairbanks are two young men employed in the bank at Carson City, of which John Davis is the president. Davis has a pretty daughter, Helen, and both young men have surrendered their hearts to her, but she prefers only George and plainly shows her preference by deliberately snubbing James. His jealousy is aroused and he can scarcely conceal his feelings of enmity toward George, who only pities him. Mr. Davis is suddenly called away to look at a prospective purchase of land and leaves the bank in George's care. James also leaves the office before his regular quitting hour and goes to a gambling place near the bank and loses heavily, giving the winning gambler an I. O. U. for a large sum. The gambler, knowing James is an employee of the bank, also that his salary is not large enough to ever make good the I. O. U., induces him to rob the bank. This James finally agrees to do, so they wait the time, when they will be sure of no interruption. Helen, who has made a social call on George, playfully closes the vault door on bim while he is putting away the day's cash and, finding that she cannot open the door again, rushes out to get her father, who is now miles away from town. Frantic with fear, she drives her pony at its topmost speed and soon reaches her father and both ride to the rescue of the imprisoned cashier, who is slowly suffocating in the vault. In the meantime James and the gambler have entered the bank, opened the vault and are about to leave with the money when George recovers sufficiently to realize that a robbery is taking place and shoots at James, wounding his hand severely. The gambler quickly closes the vault door, leaving George to his fate. On the arrival of Helen and her father they find the vault still locked and, upon opening it, find the cashier with still a spark of life left and begin the work of resuscitation. He regains his strength long enough to tell of the robbery and again swoons. Helen telephones for a doctor, who has been busy dressing the wounded hand of the thief—but quickly binding it, he starts for the bank to answer Helen's call. The two thieves, fearing capture, compel him at the point of a revolver to drive them to a railroad station. The banker jumps into his auto and pursues them, finally bringing them to bay. On his return to the bank he finds Helen, who has used her knowledge of "first aid to the injured" to good advantage, and George, both wishing they were one. The banker, believing George is worthy of his only child, gives bis consent.

CINES—George Kleine

A TRAGEDY OF LONG AGO (Sept. 3).—With great pomp and ceremony the marriage of Beatrice and Philip Viconti is solemnized. But the latter does not long remain true to his nuptial vows, for soon afterwards, while out hunting, he meets Agnes, of Maino, and falls madly in love with her.

Beatrice learns of her husband's perfidy and, with the help of her faithful friend and adviser, Macaruffo, plots revenge. But, unfortunately, a traitor informs Philip of the plan and the latter, with several of his men, surprise the pair and imprison them in the tower.

During the night Macaruffo gains Beatrice's consent to escape with him. Suspending a rope from their lofty prison window he makes a perilous descent, hand under hand, with his intrepid comrade clinging to his shoulders. But lo! when they are about twenty feet from the water of the lake surrounding the tower the rope breaks, precipitating them into the water. With a few powerful strokes, however, the brave fellow succeeds in reaching the opposite shore, with his almost lifeless burden.

They escape to the hills, but soon are pursued by Philip, who overtakes them with his soldiers. Macaruffo dies nobly, defending Beatrice, but the latter is captured and heartlessly sent to the block.

ECLIPSE—George Kleine

AN ECCENTRIC SPORTSMAN (Sept. 4).—When the clock strikes four in the morning Jack leaves his bed with a yawn and proceeds to dress and breakfast, in preparation for a good day's fishing. He accomplishes everything with the least possible exertion; he sweeps his clothes with a broom, jumps cleanly into his boots, makes a tablecloth out of the counterpane, drinks his tea from the pot, and swallows his eggs and other viands whole.

He then takes his fishing tackle down from the wall and, calling his faithful dog, "Sport," makes his way towards the river. There he meets with all sorts of adventures, and does most everything but catch any fish. At nightfall he returns triumphant with great stories of his luck and prowess, but no fish.

On the same reel:

FROM LAUTERBRUNNEN TO MURREN (Switzerland).—A delightful journey across the Bernese Alps, by Funicular Railway, at an altitude of 7,000 feet. The Alpine scenery is simply superb; the snow-capped mountains, the deep, narrow gorges, and the quaint little villages perched upon the mountain slopes offer a fascinating sight.

On the same reel:

SMALL GAME AT THE ZOO.—An instructive as well as interesting subject, introducing many of the smaller inhabitants of the zoological gardens.

BIOGRAPH

MR. GROUCH AT THE SEASHORE (Aug. 26).—This ill-tempered gentleman accompanies his wife to the seashore, but being so insanely jealous of her makes the stay there rather unpleasant. First of all, he refuses to go bathing in the surf with her, and she, despite his command not to, goes in alone. Towering with rage at his wife's defiance, he gets himself into several embarrassing positions. In fact, be makes a fool of himself generally.

On the same reel:

THROUGH DUMB LUCK.—A sneak thief snatches a jewel bag from a woman in the park and gets away with it. His act is seen by another crook, who follows him and wants a share of the loot. The affair is reported to the police and a couple of detectives are put on the case. The boob cop of the force begs to be allowed to work, but is denied, the other policemen giving him the laugh for his presumption. Well, he turns the laugh on them by catching the thief and restoring the jewels. although it was by accident.

A PUEBLO LEGEND (Aug. 29).—This production, which comprises two reels, was made in the old Pueblo of Isleta, New Mexico, where the incidents of the story were supposed to have occurred. The costume plates, shields, weapons and accessories were kindly loaned by the Museum of Indian Antiques at Albuquerque, New Mexico. The opening scene occurs on a feast-day in early times before the coming of the Spanish to that country. During the Spring Dance of the Green Boughs, the sun priest tells the story of the turquoise stone that fell from the sky centuries before and was imbedded in the earth, the recovery of which would mean light, happiness and prosperity to the people of Isleta. The Great Brother, the exemplar of the tribe, is chosen as the one most worthy to be sent on the holy mission. The dangers and hardships which he endures during his long quest go to make a most beautiful portrayal of early Indian symbolism.

KINEMACOLOR

THE GREAT WATER BEETLE (Sept. 2).—A subject of intense interest in which the small water beetles of a brownish color, about two inches long, are shown destroying venomous snakes. These ferocious little beetles attack the snake under the surface of the water and attach themselves to the body, their object to get to the head and throat. The snake endeavors to hide itself in the moss and seaweed to protect itself from the beetles, but is finally driven from its refuge and the battle begins, with all its agonies and bloodshed. The attack is renewed again and again until one beetle attaches itself upon the back of the snake's head. Then the battle rages in earnest. The snake, writhing and twisting and lashing itself in every conceivable kind of a knot, makes the water boil with action. This continues while the little beetle gradually works itself around the head of the snake, which is trying in every way possible to rid itself of its tormentors. At last the efforts of the snake gradually cease, and the water takes on a pinkish hue tinged by the blood shed in this death combat. The fact that this picture is taken below the surface of the water gives a novel sensation, to say nothing of the terrible carnage depicted in every tint and hue of the deep.

THE PRICE OF SUCCESS (Sept. 2).—In a small village on the coast of Italy under the cool, sheltering branches of green foliage, a crude altar is erected by the peasants for the marriage of a young artist to a beautiful peasant girl. The Italian breakfast is served in the garden where the friends "Toast to the bride," after which the priest accompanies his flock to the shore to bless the bride and groom on their journey to America.

Arriving in New York, they are directed by a flower vender, a countryman, to modest lodgings. In a poorly furnished garret studio, the young artist works day after day over his canvas until at last, poverty-stricken, his wife finds work in a nearby laundry, that they may have bread.

A child is soon born and the artist strikes upon the idea of posing his wife and baby as "Madonna and Child." This he does, but poverty presses them hard and his wife falls ill, so he tries to sell his works. While in the street he is run down by an automobile. The gentleman whose machine strikes him takes him to his home where they discover that he is not badly hurt, and look at the picture. He is offered a princely sum for his work, which he accepts. Rushing home he finds his wife leaning over the child, apparently asleep. He places the money beside her carefully, so as not to awaken her, hoping to give her a pleasant surprise, only to discover her dead.

Success is his, but death the price.

THE NOTE AND THE SHIRT (Sept. 2).—Helen, a delightfully pretty girl employed in a shirt factory, becomes tired of the life of a factory girl, and while in the mood places a note in one of the shirts, offering to marry the man who chances to buy it, trusting to the guiding hand of Cupid.

The shirt is delivered to an outpost store in the far West, where the owner discovers the note. After reading it, he decides to arrange an auction of the shirt, which, after much bartering, is secured by a typical Westerner, though much desired by a younger fellow. The possessor of the note immediately sends for the girl, but when she receives the note and money she is doubtful, at the same time pleased. One of her friends working with her has an idea. She suggests that Helen should disguise as a colored woman, that she might first view her future husband. This is agreed upon and she soon arrives at the Western town where her intended and his friends await her arrival. However, when they discover that she is apparently a colored woman, they make a quick get-away and decide to play a joke on the fellow who had been disappointed at not being able to buy the shirt. They offered to sell him the shirt, describing the girl as a beauty, and he readily agrees, losing no time in going to the station, only to find that his friends have put one over on him. As he starts to leave, the girl realizes that the joke has been carried too far and seeks relief in tears, which wash away some of the burned cork, revealing her pink cheeks. The surprised cowboy rushes her off, marrying her, and presents her to his much-astonished friends, thus turning the joke on them.

SOLAX

THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN (Sept. 13).—Tony and Dolores are happy together. Tony's blindness makes no difference. He earns money by playing on his old violin, an instrument very dear to him. His happy existence is interrupted by a rich man, a Mr. Gilbert, who is interested in music. Tony and Dolores one day play before Mr. Gilbert's palatial home. The harmonious strains of the violin attract his attention.

The alluring beauty of Dolores fascinates Mr. Gilbert. He is very attentive and it occurs to him that he could be near her always if be arranged to take violin lessons from her blind husband. In this way an acquaintanceship develops. Mr. Gilbert is captivated by Dolores' Eastern seductiveness and takes advantage of every opportunity of being in her presence. He invites her to a masquerade ball and other functions. Her poor, blind husband is ignorant of the growing attachment and constant companionship of the two.

Events come to a climax when Dolores, temporarily overwhelmed by Gilbert's luxurious living, leaves her husband.

Tony, abandoned and helpless, is soon reduced to penury and is forced to sell his violin.

Later, after the novelty of living in luxury wears off, Delores begins to think of her abandoned and helpless husband. Gilbert's attempts at this time to get familiar and she repulses him. Then her slumbering conscience is awakened.

That night she sees a vision of her blind husband in despair. The strains of his old violin vibrate in her ears. With determination she casts off her fine clothes, which Gilbert, in his generosity, had presented to her, and then clothes herself in the rags in keeping with her station. She goes back to her husband, full of remorse. He waits for her and he takes her to his heart. The soul of the violin has done its work, and forever after they live in harmony and good cheer.

TREASURES ON THE WING (Sept. 11)—Dr. Brown is called out of town on an emergency case. Mrs. Brown, a woman who loves her husband, is very attentive to him and sees to the doctor's wants most diligently. When the doctor is about to leave, Mrs. Brown notices the large, awkward health shoes which her husband wears and immediately she protests that if he went out of town in those shoes he would be the laughing stock of all. She induces him to take them off and wear his "city shoes." Before the usual leave-taking the doctor gives his wife a roll of bills with the request that she deposit it in the bank for him.

The doctor gone, the wife places the money in a purse and locks it in a bureau drawer for temporary safe keeping. Mrs. Brown's little daughter knows all this and as she looks on the calendar and sees that it is April 1st she waits until her mother puts her to bed and then, when all is quiet, she stealthily walks down stairs, removes the money from the drawer and places it flat under the inner sole of her father's big shoes. She substitutes for the money in the purse the note—"April Fool —Go to School—Tell your mother you're a fool." Then she steals up to bed.

In the dead of night a burglar enters the house and among other things steals the purse! When he arrives in his den he discovers the note and is much amused at the joke on him.

Mrs. Brown the next morning sees her husband's shoes and decides to get rid of them forever, so she gives them to a passing tramp, who finds that the shoes are too good for him and pawns them.

In the meantime Dr. Brown comes home, and when he asks about the money, the robbery is discovered. The child leaves the rumpus and goes for the shoes and discovers they are gone. She tells her story and then Dr. Brown makes a wild dash to recover the shoes and the money. His adventures are ludicrous.

The shoes turn up unexpectedly from the pawnbroker's via the butler and the poor fellow is innocently involved in a complicated case out of which he finds it difficult to extricate himself.

FOR SALE CHEAP

Prevost Film Perforating Machine. Perfect order, like new. Large model wtih motor. Cost $450.00—$165.00 cash takes it.

ACME FILM CO., Inc.
130 W. 37th St. New York

NIAGARA SLIDES

Means to you the best on the market. Just now six announcements for $1.00. Now don't think because they're cheap that they're not first-class. They are, and we're bound to please you in large quantitiesn bound to please you or refund your money. We buy stock in large quantities, we pay no big city rent; we're in the business to show you what a good slide means. Send for catalog, and let us tell you of our advertising and novelty slides.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

FILMS FOR SALE

From $2.50 per reel up. Send for list.

ACME FILM CO.
130 W. 37th St. New York

FILM PROJECTORS
FOR SALE

One new Newman & Sinclair latest model; never used; one rotary wheel perforator, in good condition. Can be seen at this office. Apply ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, 30 W. 13th St., New York.

DATA FROM MANUFACTURERS' LIST OF RELEASES

INDEPENDENT

AMBROSIO

	Feet
June 22—The Maniac
June 28—The Actor's Test
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City
July 17—The Airman
July 17—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum

AMERICAN

Aug. 8—The Girl and the Gun
Aug. 12—The Battle Ground (2 reels)
Aug. 14—The Bad Man and the Ranger
Aug. 15—The Outlaw Colony
Aug. 19—The Land of Death (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Wooing of Wathena
Aug. 22—The Bandit of Point Loma
Aug. 26—The Jealous Rage
Aug. 28—Lonesome Trail Pioneers
Aug. 29—The Will of James Waldron (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 2—The Greaser and the Weakling (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 4—The Masked Gun (Dr.)	1000

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
"101 Bison"

July 30—The Desert
Aug. 2—The Gambler and the Girl
Aug. 6—The Reformed Outlaw
Aug. 9—The Garrison Triangle
Aug. 13—The Bugle Call
Aug. 16—The Other Girl
Aug. 20—The Buffalo Hunt
Aug. 23—The Reckoning
Aug. 27—The Bandit's Gratitude
Aug. 30—The White Lie
Sept. 3—The Honor of the Trihe
Sept. 6—An Old Tune

BISON (UNIVERSAL)

Aug. 3—His Partner's Share (Dr.)
Aug. 6—A Western Girl's Dream (Drama)
Aug. 10—Her First Choice (Drama)
Aug. 13—The Widow's Claim (Drama)
Aug. 17—The Shot that Failed (Drama)
Aug. 20—How He Made Good (Com.)
Aug. 27—For Love, Life and Riches (Dr.)
Aug. 31—A Shot in the Dark (Dr.)
Sept. 10—A White Indian

BRONCHO

Sept. 18—Sundered Ties
Sept. 25—His Better Self

CHAMPION

July 29—The Poisoners
Aug. 5—What a Woman Will Do (Rr.)
Aug. 12—For His Child (Dr.)
Aug. 19—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Aug. 26—The Foundling
Sept. 2—The Maid and the Rocks
Sept. 9—The Trysting Tree (Dr.)

COMET

July 29—Reconciled at Reno (Com.)	1000
Aug. 3—The Sheriff Outwitted (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 5—A Bachelor's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 10—Holdup in Buckeye Canyon (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 12—Two Women and One Man (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 17—Western Chivalry (W. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 19—House of "No Children" (Com.)	1000
Aug. 24—The Deputy's Duty (W. Dr.)
Aug. 26—A Divided House
Aug. 31—The Moonshiner's Task (Dr.)
Sept. 2—The Dentist's Dilemma
Sept. 7—A Waif of the Mountains
Sept. 9—The Romantic Suicide
Sept. 14—A Frontier Soldier of Fortune

ECLAIR

Aug. 11—The Foster Sister
Aug. 11—Carlsbad
Aug. 13—Daddy (Com.)
Aug. 15—Aunt Hetty's Gold Fish (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 18—A Child to the Rescue (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Egyptian Ruins
Aug. 20—Wanted: A Wife in a Hurry (Com.)
Aug. 22—Robin Hood (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Will (Dr.)
Aug. 25—A Moslem Lady's Day
Aug. 27—Dolls
Aug. 29—The Passing Parade
Sept. 1—Two Brave Little Hearts
Sept. 3—The Actress Pulls the Strings
Sept. 5—The Guest at the Parsonage
Sept. 8—The Kind Old Man
Sept. 10—The Marshal's Honeymoon (Com.)
Sept. 10—The Haunted Bachelor (Com.)
Sept. 12—The Rancher's Lottery (Com. Dr.)
Sept. 16—A Marriage of Convenience (Com.)
Sept. 16—Around Constantinople (Travel)

GREAT NORTHERN

	Feet
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)	332
July 27—Don't Go on the Spree (Com.)	876
Aug. 3—The King's Power (2 reels) (Dr.)	2000
Aug. 10—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Dr.)
Aug. 10—When the Cat's Away (Com.)
Aug. 17—The Prodigal's Return (Dr.)
Aug. 24—For Her Sister's Sake (Dr.)	944
Aug. 31—Love is Blind (Dr.)	943
Sept. 7—The Afflicted Governor (Com.)	496
Sept. 7—The Spring Lock (Com.)	457
Sept. 14—Aunt Jane's Will (Com. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT

Aug. 15—Their Lives for Gold
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 20—Her Supreme Sacrifice
Aug. 22—Androclus and the Lion
Aug. 27—The Story of Chopin
Aug. 29—Marriage on the Run
Sept. 3—Refugee's Casket (2 reels)
Sept. 5—A Midnight Encounter and The Launching of the Imperator
Sept. 10—Love's Serenade
Sept. 12—The Plague-Stricken City
Sept. 17—Queen Elizabeth's Token
Sept. 19—Kings in Exile (2 Reels)
Sept. 24—The Heart of a Redman
Sept. 26—The Stolen Cub
Oct. 1—The Convict's Band

GEM

July 23—Bread Cast Upon the Waters
July 30—Back to Her Own
Aug. 6—'Neath the Homespun
Aug. 13—Bahette (Dr.)
Aug. 20—White Dove's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Aug. 27—Bahy Fingers
Sept. 3—The Celebrated Case (2 Reels)
Sept. 10—A Turn of Fate

IMP

Aug. 17—In and Around Charleston, S. C. (Scenic)
Aug. 19—Padrone's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Castaway (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Chappie, the Chaperon
Aug. 24—The Great Geysers of Yellowstone Park
Aug. 26—Making Good
Aug. 29—A Happy Family
Aug. 31—A Case of Smallpox
Aug. 31—Her Burglar
Sept. 2—The Love Test
Sept. 5—Tears of the Weak
Sept. 7—Lem's Hot Chocolate
Sept. 7—Queenie and the Cannihal
Sept. 9—The Intrigue (Dr.)
Sept. 12—Human Hearts (Dr.) (2 reels)
Sept. 14—Dalhy the Tomhoy and Dick's Predicament

ITALA

Feh. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.)
July 20—Magical Hat
July 20—An Eventful Day

KEYSTONE

Sept. 23—Cohen Collects a Deht
Sept. 23—The Water Nymph
Sept. 30—Riley and Schultze
Sept. 30—The New Neighbor

LUX
By Prieur.

	Feet
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)	967
Aug. 2—The Mysterious Flowers (Dr.)	983
Aug. 9—A Race for Liherty (W. Dr.)	580
Aug. 9—The Postman's Escapade (Com.)	272
Aug. 16—Tommy Saves His Little Sister (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Uncle's Favorite Pudding (Com.)	744
Aug. 23—Views of the Livran (Sc.)	239
Aug. 30—The Modern Child (Dr.)	990
Sept. 6—A Cripple's Folly (Dr.)	990

MAJESTIC

Aug. 4—Farmer Allen's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 6—The Higher Thought (Com.)
Aug. 11—The Matrimonial Substitute
Aug. 11—The Striped Parasol
Aug. 13—A Summer Idyl
Aug. 18—Toodles
Aug. 20—The New Butler
Aug. 25—A Corner in Kisses
Aug. 27—The Disputed Claim
Sept. 1—The Chaperon
Sept. 3—Mahel's Beau
Sept. 8—Willie's Dog and The Pleasures of Camping
Sept. 10—Lola's Sacrifice

MILANO

	Feet
Aug. 10—Playthings of Fate
Aug. 17—Their Guardian Angel
Aug. 24—The Courage of Fear
Aug. 31—A Circus Romance
Sept. 7—Victims of Ingratitude (2 Reel)
Sept. 14—The Wedding Gift

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

July 31—The Ohligation
Aug. 2—Young Wild West Washing Out Gold
Aug. 7—Fatty of E. Z. Ranch (W. Com.)
Aug. 9—A Mexican Mix-up (Dr.)
Aug. 12—A Tale of the Foothills (Dr.)
Aug. 14—How Steve Made Good (Com. Dr.)
Aug. 16—The Miner's Widow (Dr.)
Aug. 19—When the Heart Calls (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Alihi (Dr.)
Aug. 23—A Stuhhorn Cupid
Aug. 26—The Story of a Wallet
Aug. 28—Uncle Bill
Aug. 30—The Girls and the Chaperon
Sept. 2—On the Border Line
Sept. 4—The Evidence
Sept. 6—The Girls and the Chaperon
Sept. 9—In the San Fernando Valley (Dr.)
Sept. 11—The Men Within (Dr.)
Sept. 13—Those Lovesick Cowhoys

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Aug. 14—Wanted, a Practice (Com.)
Aug. 16—The Golden Rule (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Her Diary (Dr.)
Aug. 23—Life's Lesson (Dr.)
Aug. 28—An Exciting Outing
Sept. 4—Love Will Find a Way
Sept. 6—His Weakness
Sept. 11—His First and Last Appearance (Com.)
Sept. 13—The Supreme Power

RELIANCE

Aug. 21—One Against One
Aug. 24—North of 53
Aug. 28—Secret Service Man
Aug. 31—Thelma (2 reels)
Sept 4—The Heart of a Cossack
Sept. 7—The Bully and the Shrimp
Sept. 11—Love Knows No Laws
Sept. 14—For Love of Her
Sept. 18—Caleb West (Dr.) (2 reels)
Sept. 21—The Redemption

REPUBLIC

Aug. 5—The Octoroon's Sacrifice
Aug. 12—The Borrowing Simp
Aug. 19—The Curse of Drink (Dr.)
Aug. 26—The Pickaninnies and the Watermelons

REX

Aug. 15—The Greater Christian (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Thus Many Souls (Dr.)
Aug. 22—An Old Fashioned Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Leader of the Band (Dr.)
Aug. 29—A Japanese Idyl
Sept. 1—In Honor Bound
Sept. 5—From the Wilds
Sept. 8—The Ghost of a Bargain
Sept. 12—The Squatter's Rights (Dr.)
Sept. 15—Lost, a Husband (Com.)

SOLAX

Aug. 21—His Douhle
Aug. 23—The Equine Spy (2 reels)
Aug. 28—Phantom Paradise
Aug. 30—Playing Trumps
Sept. 4—The Fight in the Dark
Sept. 6—Open to Proposals
Sept. 11—Treasures on the Wing
Sept. 12—Fra Diavolo (3 reels), States Rights Feature
Sept. 13—The Soul of the Violin
Sept. 25—Duhlin Dan (3 reels)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 18—Warner's Waxworks
Aug. 20—The Darkest Hour
Aug. 23—Conductor *786
Aug. 25—When a Count Counted
Aug. 27—Lucile (Part 1 and 2)
Aug. 30—Lucile (Part 3)
Sept. 1—The Capture of New York
Sept. 3—The Voice of Conscience
Sept. 6—His Father's Son
Sept. 8—Don't Pinch My Pup
Sept. 10—A Star Rehorn
Sept. 13—The Birth of the Lotus Blossom

VICTOR

Aug. 23—Her Cousin Fred
Aug. 30—The Winning Punch
Sept. 6—After All
Sept. 13—All for Love

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

RELEASED SUNDAY, SEPT. 8

"Don't Pinch My Pup"

This was the ultimatum that a little newsie issued to the police department. He had learned that they would "pinch" his pup under the new dog license laws, and he sent them his defiance. They laughed at it—but made him glad that he sent it.

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 10

A Star Reborn

A great Shakespearean actor gives a stage-struck girl a chance, when all had rebuffed her. She "makes good" and is finally won from the stage by a young millionaire. Years after, she discovers that Shakespearean plays are passé and the actor who had befriended her is penniless. She and her husband, backed by their wealth, rescue him from his plight and soon he is starring again.

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 13.

The Birth of the Lotus Blossom

FIRST OF THE JAPANESE STORIES

A "Japanese Craze" is on in Broadway—from which the rest of the country gets its theatrical tastes. Three New York playhouses are opening with dramas laid in Japan. This series will enable the small theatre TO BOOK "JAP" PLAYS BEFORE THE LARGE THEATRE CAN GET THEM. Beat the "Big houses" to it.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.
Send me FREE August Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name .....
Address .....
Exchange .....

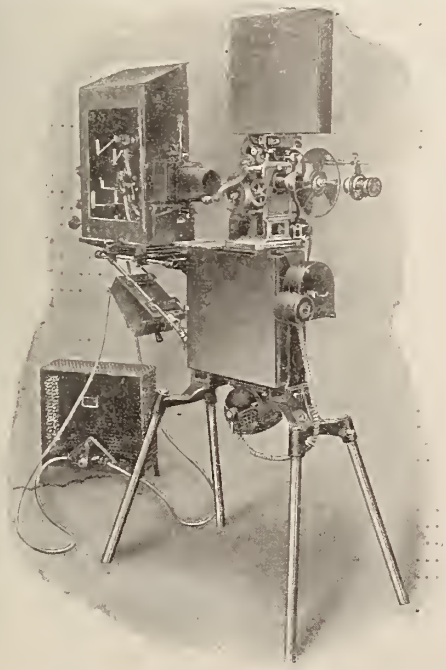
Coming! "UNDINE" After the Famous Riverside Classic In 2 Reels

TUESDAY, SEPT. 24

THANHOUSER COMPANY
NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK
Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 3 T 3 A WEEK?

ADVERTISERS GET RESULTS
FROM THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS The Only Educational Paper in the Industry



POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A

THE MODERN MOTION PICTURE MACHINE.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has maintained its supremacy since the inception of the moving picture business, through sheer force of merit. In it are to be found more good points than can be discovered elsewhere, and it approaches closer to absolute perfection than any other machine.

PROJECTION—POWER'S has developed this to the highest point of efficiency—pictures absolutely without flicker, clear and steady.

PARTS—Interchangeable, easy of access and constructed of the best material that money can buy and all made by us, bearing our name and guarantee.

OPERATION—So delicately adjusted that a child may run it, though it always does a man's work—and without noise.

NO MORE DARK SCREENS, NO MORE INTERRUPTED PICTURES.

Our New No. 6 A is equipped with our patented loop setter device, which will re-set the lower loop automatically without stopping the machine.

These are but a few points, which make for POWER'S supremacy. It partially explains why we have made over 6500 installations of the No. 6 and 6 A in every corner of the world.

Do you want the best? Write for catalogue D explaining in full detail POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH, THE MODERN MOTION PICTURE MACHINE.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
90 Gold Street, New York City

For fifteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

Feet

July 29—Black Sheep (Dr.).....
Aug. 1—The Narrow Road (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—The Tourist (Com.).....
Aug. 5—What the Doctor Ordered (Com.)..
Aug. 8—A Child's Remorse (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Rameses, King of Egypt (2 reels) (Dr.) .....
Aug. 12—The Inner Circle (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)
Aug. 15—The Tragedy of a Dress Suit (Com.)
Aug. 19—With the Enemy's Help (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 22—A Change of Spirit (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—Mr. Grouch at the Seashore (Com.)
Aug. 26—Through Dumb Luck (Com.).....
Aug. 29—A Pueblo Legend.....
Sept. 2—In the North Woods (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Getting Rid of Trouble (Com.)..
Sept. 5—He Must Have a Wife (Com.).....

CINES

C. Kleine

Aug. 6—The Little Orphan (Dr.)..... 903
Aug. 10—The Danger Line (Dr.).....1067
Aug. 13—Mona Lisa in Disguise (Com.).... 600
Aug. 13—Vicovaro, Italy (Sc.)..... 400
Aug. 17—A Convict's Gratitude (Dr.).....1025
Aug. 20—A Matter of Pride (Dr.)..... 963
Aug. 24—Jenkins, the Watchman (Com.)... 235
Aug. 24—Modern Naples (Sc.)..... 290
Aug. 24—A Picture C. O. D. (Com.)..... 450
Aug. 27—The Bridge of Lammermoor (Dr.)..1000
Sept. 3—A Tragedy of Long Ago (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 7—The Sacking of Rome (Dr.)..... 770
Sept. 7—Picturesque Sardinia, Italy (Sc.).. 230
Sept. 10—Scenes Along Salerno Coast, Italy (Sc.) 140
Sept. 10—The Conspiracy of Catiline (Dr.).. 885
Sept. 14—Honors Divided (Dr.).....1075
Sept. 17—Amalfi, Italy (Scenic); and A Gun Factory (Ind.); and Traditional Customs in Southern Italy (Top.) 1005
Sept. 21—Betrayed for Love (Hist.-Dr.)....1000

EDISON

July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)..... 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.) 400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves 1000
July 20—The Little Artist of the Market (Dr.) 1000
July 23—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Dr.) 1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com. Dr.) 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.)....1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist. Dr.).1000
July 30—More Precious Than Gold (Dr.)....1000
July 31—When She Was About Sixteen (Com.) 1000
Aug. 2—The Lord and the Peasant (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 3—Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 17, 1912 700
Aug. 3—Mary Had a Little Lamb (Com.)... 300
Aug. 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring (Com.)..1000
Aug. 9—The Librarian (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 14—Holding the Fort (Com.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Harbinger of Peace (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Spring Log Driving, Maine.....1000
Aug. 20—The Street Beautiful (Edu.).....1000
Aug. 21—Mr. Pickwick's Predicament (Com.) 1000
Aug. 23—The Cub Reporter (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 24—The War on the Mosquito (Edu.) 1000
Aug. 27—Alone in New York (Dr.)..... 1000
Aug. 28—Helping John (Com. Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Boy and the Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Simla (Sc.) 1000
Sept. 3—The Triangle (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—Aladdin Up to Date (Com.).....1000
Sept. 6—Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Bridget's Sudden Wealth (Com.)..1000
Sept. 7—Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Playground, Lynchburg, Va., 1912.. 400
Sept. 10—The Manufacture of Paper, Maine (Ind.) 1000
Sept. 11—The Stranger and the Taxicab (Com.) 1000
Sept. 13—The Dam Builder (Dr.) 100
Sept. 14—The Rescue, Care and Education of Blind Babies 1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

July 26—Twins .....
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart.....
July 30—Broncho Billy's Pal (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—Her Hour of Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 2—The Browns Have Visitors (Com.).1000
Aug. 3—The Loafer's Mother (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 6—The New Church Organ (Dr.).....
Aug. 8—The Old Wedding Dress.....
Aug. 9—The Tale of a Cat (Com.).....
Aug. 10—The Little Sheriff.....
Aug. 13—Broncho Billy's Last Hold-up (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 15—An Adamless Eden (Com.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Magic Wand (Juvenile).....1000
Aug. 23—Work in a U. S. Arsenal (Edu.)..
Aug. 23—A Water Fight (Com.).....
Aug. 24—The Government Test (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—On the Moonlight Trail (Dr.)....1000
Aug. 20—The Return of Becky (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—A Corner in Whiskers (Com.).....
Aug. 23—Her Adopted Father (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Broncho Billy's Escapade (Dr.)....
Aug. 27—Alkali Ike Plays the Devil (W. Com.) 1000
Aug. 29—Three to One (Com.).....1000
Aug. 30—The Hermit (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Broncho Billy for Sheriff (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 3—Back to the Old Farm (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 5—The Wildman (Com.).....1000
Sept. 6—Twilight (Dr.) 1000

LUBIN

Aug. 28—The Burnt Cork (Com.).....
Aug. 29—For the Love of a Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Pinned (Com.).....
Aug. 30—The Overworked Bookkeeper (Com.)
Aug. 31—The Sheriff's Prisoner (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Caretaker (Com.).....
Sept. 2—A Substitution (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Bank Cashier (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—The Smuggler (Com.).....
Sept. 6—A Romance of the Coast (Dr.)..
Sept. 7—Little Family Affair (Com. Dr.)..
Sept. 9—The Halfbreed's Sacrifice (Dr.)...
Sept. 11—A Redhot Courtship (Com.).....
Sept. 12—Betty and the Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Never Again (Com.).....
Sept. 13—Buster and the Pirates.....
Sept. 14—A Trustee of the Law.....
Sept. 16—The Sleeper .....
Sept. 18—When Father Had His Way.....
Sept. 20—Turpentine Industry.....
Sept. 20—No Trespasssing.....
Sept. 21—His Pair of Pants.....
Sept. 23—A Gay Time in Quebec.....
Sept. 25—The Renegades .....
Sept. 26—Swimming and Life Saving.....
Sept. 26—Buster and the Gypsies.....
Sept. 27—Glued .....
Sept. 27—The Water Wagon.....
Sept. 28—The Doctor's Debt.....

G. MELIES

July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny.....
Aug. 8—The Ranger's Girls.....
Aug. 15—Romance at Catalina.....
Aug. 22—The Moth and the Flame (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 29—His Partner's Share (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 5—The Obsession (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 12—The Unworthy Son (Dr.).....1000

PATHE FRERES

Aug. 9—The Burglar's Weird Reception (Com.) .....
Aug. 9—How a Letter Travels from the Great Lakes of Central Africa..
Aug. 10—Here and There in Oregon (Travel)
Aug. 10—Kittens .....
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 35.....
Aug. 13—The Tyrolean Doll (Com.).....
Aug. 14—Silver Wing's Two Suitors (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Cupid's Stolen Arrows (Com.)....
Aug. 15—Some Inhabitants of Stagnant Water
Aug. 16—A Love Story of Old Japan (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Cactus County Lawyer (W. Dr.)
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 34.....
Aug. 20—His Windmill (Dr.).....
Aug. 20—The Sedge Warbler and the Cuckoo (Edu.) .....
Aug. 21—Jealousy on the Ranch (W. Dr.)...
Aug. 22—The Hand of Destiny (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—The Queen's Pity (Hist. Dr.).....
Aug. 24—The $2,500 Bride (Com.).....
Aug. 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 35.....
Aug. 26—Fire at Sea (Dr.).....
Aug. 27—A Prince of Israel (Bib.).....
Aug. 28—The Live Wire (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The Detective's Desperate Chance (W. Dr.) .....
Aug. 29—The Armless Wonder.....
Aug. 30—The Musketeer's Love (Hist. Dr.).
Aug. 31—An Aeroplane Love Affair (Com.).
Sept. 2—Pathe's Weekly No. 36.....
Sept. 3—Beat rix d'Este (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Locked Out of Wedlock (Com.)
Sept. 5—The Penalty Paid (Dr.).....
Sept. 6—Whiffles and the Magic Wand (Com.); and The Bud, the Leaf and the Flower (Sci.).....
Sept. 7—Gee! My Pants! (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 37.....
Sept. 9—The Blighted Son (Dr.).....
Sept. 10—Love's Progress (Dr. Com.).....
Sept. 10—A Little Journey in Tunis (Custom)
Sept. 11—Black Beauty (Dr.).....
Sept. 12—Anguished Hours (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Ford Her Lord (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Late Harriet Quimby's Flight Across the English Channel.....
Sept. 14—Saved at the Altar (Dr.).....

KALEM CO.

Feet

Aug. 12—The Little Keeper of the Light (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 14—Kentucky Girl (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 16—The Prison Ship (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 19—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Dr.).1000
Aug. 21—The Frenzy of Firewater (Dr.)....1000
Aug. 23—The Beauty Parlor of Stone Gulch (Com.) 1000
Aug. 24—Rube Marquard Wins (Dr.).....1323
Aug. 26—The Little Wanderer (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—The Woman Hater (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Palestine (Ed.) .....
Aug. 30—Jim Bludso (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Saved from Courtmartial (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 2—The Hoodo Hat (Com.).....
Sept. 2—From Jerusalem to Dead Sea (Sc.)
Sept. 4—Down Through the Ages (Dr.)...1000
Sept. 6—The Loneliness of the Hills (Dr.).1000
Sept. 7—The Darling of the C. S. A.....1000

SELIG

Aug. 6—The Man from Dragon Land (Dr.).1000
Aug. 8—The Girl at the Cupola (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 9—The Boob (Com., Dr.).....1000
Aug. 12—A Messenger to Kearney (Dr.)....1000
Aug. 13—The Wayfarer (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 15—In the Tents of the Asra (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 16—Two Gay Dogs (Com.).....1000
Aug. 19—The Box Car Baby (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 20—The Cowboy's Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Betty Fools Dear Old Dad (Com.).1000
Aug. 23—Land Sharks vs. Sea Dogs (Com. Dr.) .....
Aug. 23—From Forest to Mills (Edu.).....
Aug. 26—The Laird's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 27—The Whiskey Runners (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 29—The Little Indian Martyr (Dr.) ..1000
Aug. 30—Just His Luck (Farce-Comedy).....
Aug. 30—Frenzied Finance (W. Com.).....
Sept. 2—As the Fates Decree (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 3—An Equine Hero (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 5—Serg. Byrne of the N. W. M. P. (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 6—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)....1000

URBAN ECLIPSE

G. Kleine

Aug. 7—A Quiet Boarding House (Com.).. 390
Aug. 14—The Rivals (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 21—Microscopical Curiosities 300
Aug. 21—Pulp Mills in the Province of Quebec (Ind.) 275
Aug. 21—A Day in the German Navy (Top.). 400
Aug. 28—The Golden Curl (Dr.).....1020
Sept. 4—An Eccentric Sportsman (Com.).. 455
Sept. 4—Small Game at the Zoo (Sc.)..... 165
Sept. 4—From Lauterbrunnen to Murren, Switzerland (Sc.) 380
Sept. 11—Glimpses of St. Petersburg (Sc.) 360
Sept. 11—And Chemical Action (Ed.)..... 180
Sept. 11—And Winter Sports in Moritz.... (Topical) 485
Sept. 18—New Plymouth (Scenic); and A Country Holiday (Com.)..... 980

VITAGRAPH

Aug. 12—Ingenuity 700
Aug. 13—The Heart of Esmeralda.....1000
Aug. 14—Vultures and Doves.....1000
Aug. 16—A Bogus Napoleon.....1000
Aug. 17—Two Battles 1000
Aug. 19—Her Grandchild 1050
Aug. 20—Lovesick Maidens of Cuddleton....1000
Aug. 21—The Ancient Bow.....1000
Aug. 23—Saving an Audience.....1000
Aug. 24—On Board Kaiser Wilhelm II..... 388
Aug. 24—The Party Dress 614
Aug. 27—Flirt or Heroine.....1000
Aug. 28—Two Cinders 555
Aug. 28—Bumps 477
Aug. 30—Written in the Sand.....1000
Aug. 31—The Bond of Music.....1000
Aug. 26—A Double Danger.....
Sept. 2—Tommy's Sister .....
Sept. 3—Coronets and Hearts.....
Sept. 4—Capt. Barnacle's Legacy.....
Sept. 6—Bunny's Suicide .....
Sept. 6—She Wanted a Boarder.....
Sept. 7—A Wasted Sacrifice .....
Sept. 9—Patio Days .....
Sept. 10—The Higher Mercy.....
Sept. 11—The Hindoo Curse.....
Sept. 13—The Loyalty of Sylvia.....
Sept. 14—Popular Betty.....
Sept. 14—Fortunes in a Teacup.....
Sept. 16—Capt. Barnacle's Waif.....
Sept. 17—The Troubled Trail.....
Sept. 18—A Vitagraph Romance.....
Sept. 20—The Indian Mutiny .....
Sept. 21—Adventure of the Italian Model..
Sept. 23—Bobby's Father .....
Sept. 24—His Lordship, the Valet .....
Sept. 25—Bill Wilson's Gal.....
Sept. 26—The Signal Fires.....
Sept. 27—The Counts; and Weary Starts Things in Pumpkinville.....
Sept. 28—Irony of Fate .....
Sept. 30—Her Choice .....

ECLAIR

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th
Split-reel

"THE HAUNTED BACHELOR" and "THE MARSHAL'S HONEYMOON"

A long laugh in two parts.
The first will surely prove a haunting comedy and the other is funnier still.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12th

"THE RANCHERS' LOTTERY"

Everything, almost, is a gamble. But there's no lottery speculation over the success of this comedy drama. Like rent day, it is a sure thing.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 15th

"A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE"

Two genuine lions assist in making this a great big sensational laugh. On the same reel

"AROUND CONSTANTINOPLE"

A beautiful and instructive Film Journey.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42nd St., New York City, N.Y.

ESTABLISHED

Firmly in Legitimate Channels of the Trade, by Trimless Methods,

FILM SUPPLY CO. of AMERICA

And Its Recognized Program Has Made an Enduring Impression on the Thoughtful Exhibitor who Appreciates Fair Dealing along with Quality Films.

YOU NEED THIS OFFERING

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, GAUMONT WEEKLY, AMERICAN
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NORTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Address all communications 133-135 West 44th St., New York

DESIGNING
ENGRAVING
ELECTROTYPING
HARDING
PHOTO
ENGRAVING CO.
8-10 WEST 13TH ST.
NEAR
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
TELEPHONE 1817 1818 CHELSEA

ONE OF OUR BIG MONEY MAKERS
NEW YORK'S BIG POLICE SCANDAL
ROSENTHAL CASE
20 slides plain $5.00. 40 slides plain $10.00
20 slides colored $10.00. 40 slides colored $20.00.
Lecture and colored sheets free with each set. Look before you buy. We ship anywhere in the U. S. with privilege of inspection.
ACME FILM CO., Inc., 130 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

PATENTS
promptly obtained OR NO FEE. Trade-Marks, Caveats, Copyrights and Labels registered. TWENTY YEARS' PRACTICE. Highest references. Send model, sketch or photo. for free report on patentability. All business confidential. HAND-BOOK FREE. Explains everything. Tells How to Obtain and Sell Patents, What Inventions Will Pay, How to Get a Partner, explains best mechanical movements, and contains 300 other subjects of importance to inventors. Address,
H. B. WILLSON & CO. Patent Attorneys
Box 202 Willson Bldg. WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD
YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Edison, Powers, Motiograph, Simplex and Standard Machines and will Exchange any make.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely.
Send 25c. Stamps for my Complete Motion Picture Catalogue, the Reference Book.
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.
We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.
Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.
Write for Catalog.
Established 1882.
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

MANUFACTURERS—
STATE RIGHT SELLERS—
MACHINE AND SUPPLY MEN—
WANT TO REACH THE EXHIBITORS AND PICTURE-GOERS OF THE MIDDLEWEST
The Cleveland Leader
Maintains a Consistent and Progressive Photo-Play Department in its Sunday Edition that is read by everyone who is interested in any phase of the Moving Picture Business. Advertising rates on application. Address
EDITOR MOVING PICTURE DEPT., THE CLEVELAND LEADER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN
Or THE YELLOW PERIL
A 3000-Foot Drama. Six styles lithographs, photos and heralds.
Exclusive Territory
NEW YORK FILM CO.
12 Union Sq. New York

PIANISTS WANTED
to send name and address of theatre where playing for big collection of FREE MUSIC
all New York's latest hits—free for a postal. Most remarkable offer ever made.
S. & B. PUB. CO.,
124 W. 45th St., New York City.

LOCAL MOTION PICTURES MADE FOR 10 CENTS
PER FOOT.
SPECIAL EVENT FILM MFRS. CO., Inc.,
248 WEST 35TH ST.,
NEW YORK.

HARD MAPLE
FOLDING CHAIRS
$6.00 per doz. Quick Delivery
Finished Natural with Waterproof Varnish. Wood Framed Slatted Seat which cannot warp. Built for Hard usage. Folds compactly

SMITH MFG. CO.
309 Broadway, NEW YORK

LIFE IN SING SING PRISON
The most startling and sensational feature ever offered, produced from genuine views of the famous prison inside and out. Photography is perfect. The original views cost us a small fortune. They are exclusive and copyrighted.
Stunning three sheets and two styles one sheets in colors. An intensely dramatic lecture written specially, three different style electrotypes, 5 x 7 photographs for lobby.
25 Slides colored, 1 Three sheet, 5 One sheet, 1 Electrotype, 6 5 x 7 Photos, 1 Lecture } $20.00
45 Slides colored, 2 Three sheets, 10 One sheets, 3 Electrotypes, 12 5 x 7 Photos, 1 Lecture } $40.00
Rush your order to
A. J. CLAPHAM, Mfr. of Features
130 WEST 37TH STREET, NEW YORK.
The Originator of Sensational Lectures.
Exclusive New England Rights sold to Kellman Feature Film Co., Boston, Mass.
NOTICE!—This subject has been copyrighted by us and we hereby warn infringers that we will prosecute to the full extent of the Law.

BRONCHO FILMS

Produced upon the largest scale ever attempted in motion pictures. Stirring themes—tremendous casts—perfect photography.

FIRST RELEASE

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

"Sundered Ties"

The Biggest One-Reel Feature Ever Made

The North against the South—Father against Son—in wonderful and thrilling battles, booming cannon, hand to hand conflicts, sensational cavalry charges. Through it all runs a heart-gripping story, splendidly acted.

A BRONCHO EVERY WEDNESDAY

THE BEST FILM IN THE WORLD

SECOND RELEASE

"His Better Self"

1 REEL Wednesday, Sept. 25 1 REEL

In the hot desert, beneath the blistering rays of the sun, the rivals battle for the canteen of water—and life. As one falls wounded the hand of his conqueror is stayed in a death thrust by the picture of the woman they both love, and he carries his erstwhile opponent to shelter.

EXHIBITORS: Place your order with your exchange at once for booking. The demand will be tremendous.

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE CO.

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

Gaumont

ONE REEL

TUESDAY
SEPT. 17
HAND COLORED

Queen Elizabeth's Token

Why pay that bonus for a state right picture when you can get the same thing as an ordinary release? The same story as advertised elsewhere. Beware of imitations.

ONE REEL

TUESDAY
OCT. 1

The Convict's Brand

A black and white sensation. See the branding of the refugee, the convict's escape, the bark atoss on the briny deep. Every inch a stirrer supreme.

ALL
OUR FILMS ARE PROTECTED
BY COPYRIGHT

TUESDAY
SEPT 3rd

The REFUGEE'S CASKET

(2 Reels)
Hand-Colored

THURSDAY
SEPT. 5

A MIDNIGHT ENCOUNTER

TUESDAY, SEPT. 10—LOVE'S SERENADE

THURSDAY, SEPT. 12—THE PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY
(Hand Colored)

TUESDAY, SEPT. 24—THE HEART OF THE REDMAN

THURSDAY, SEPT. 26—THE STOLEN CUB

THURSDAY, OCT. 3—ZIGOTO TO THE RESCUE

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors.

GAUMONT WEEKLY

TWO REELS—THURSDAY, SEPT. 19

Kings in Exile

A master film dealing with the stirring events of Messina during the stormy period following the insular revolution. A serious, dignified monarchy shaker. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of title marry title.

P 19 1912

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

VOLUME VI
No. 10

SEPTEMBER 7
1912

PRICE
TEN CENTS

A FRONTIER CHILD
101 Bison Two Reel Feature
Release of September 13

Gaumont

Gaumont

A REAL NOVELTY

In the motion picture industry is being inaugurated by the GAUMONT CO. in their new Saturday release. Just what the exhibitors have been crying for.

A SPLIT REEL

WITH AN EDUCATIONAL AT ONE END AND A SENSATIONAL EVENT AS THE OLYMPIC GAMES OR THE FUNERAL OF GENERAL BOOTH ON THE OTHER. Think a little and then ask the exhibitor what he thinks of this idea. Then fire in your order for the

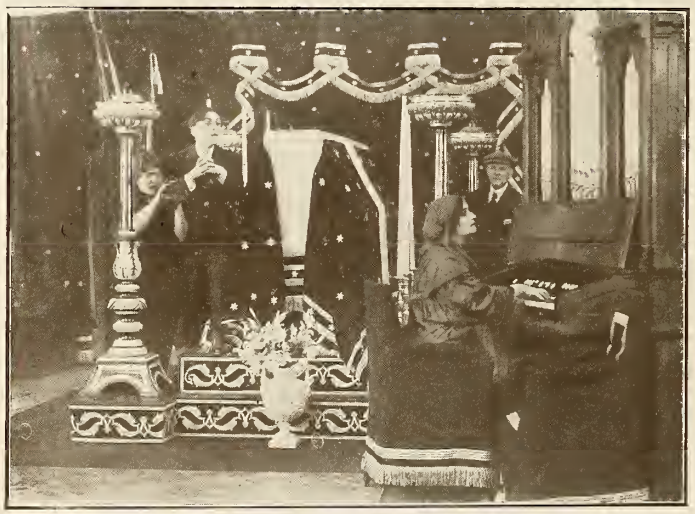
FIRST RELEASE, SATURDAY, SEPT. 21st

The Funeral of General Booth

AND

The Eclipse of the Sun

Tuesday, September 24—THE HEART OF A RED MAN
Thursday, September 26—THE STOLEN CUB
Saturday, September 28—LIFE IN CAUCASIA
Tuesday, October 1—THE CONVICT'S BRAND
Thursday, October 3—ZIGOTO TO THE RESCUE
Friday, October 5—ZIGOTO DRIVES A LOCOMOTIVE



Kings in Exile

TWO REEL SUBJECT. RELEASED THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19th

A film that deals with events of great empires. A serious, dignified monarchy exposure. Not anarchistic, but treated rather from the angle of love and princely sorrow. The everlasting evil of "title marry title."

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA, Sole Distributors.

Gaumont

Gaumont

THE MOST WONDERFUL FILM OF THE YEAR

In the Land of the Lions

The most remarkable picture of a remarkable series that every exhibitor knows to be a money maker.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

on a basis of 15 cents per foot.

HAND COLORED
1, 3 and 4 SHEET POSTERS

Gaumont

A WONDERFUL STORY OF THE ESCAPE OF A FAMILY FROM DEATH IN THE CLAWS OF THE KING OF BEASTS

GAUMONT CO., Flushing, New York

KEYSTONE FILMS

A QUARTET OF POPULAR FUN MAKERS

MACK SENNETT
MABEL NORMAND
FRED MACE
FORD STERLING

SUPPORTED BY AN
ALL STAR COMPANY
IN SPLIT REEL COMEDIES

MABEL NORMAND

A KEYSTONE EVERY MONDAY

FIRST RELEASE SEPTEMBER 23

"Cohen Collects a Debt" and "The Water Nymph"

Featuring MABEL NORMAND, the beautiful Diving Venus

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30

"Riley and Schultze" and "The New Neighbor"

Amusing subjects, cleverly acted by world-famous actors

KEYSTONE FILM COMPANY

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., New York City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

BRONCHO FILMS

Produced upon the largest scale ever attempted in motion pictures. Stirring themes—tremendous casts—perfect photography.

FIRST RELEASE

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

"Sundered Ties"

The Biggest One-Reel Feature Ever Made

The North against the South—Father against Son—in wonderful and thrilling battles, booming cannon, hand to hand conflicts, sensational cavalry charges. Through it all runs a heart-gripping story, splendidly acted.

A BRONCHO EVERY WEDNESDAY

THE BEST FILM IN THE WORLD

SECOND RELEASE

"His Better Self"

1 REEL Wednesday, Sept. 25 1 REEL

In the hot desert, beneath the blistering rays of the sun, the rivals battle for the canteen of water—and life. As one falls wounded the hand of his conqueror is stayed in a death thrust by the picture of the woman they both love, and he carries his erstwhile opponent to shelter.

EXHIBITORS: Place your order with your exchange at once for booking. The demand will be tremendous.

BRONCHO MOTION PICTURE CO.

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City, Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

"Custer's Last Fight"

THREE REELS

Released Friday October 4

GENUINE "101" BISON

THE MOST SENSATIONAL AND THRILLING MILITARY HISTORICAL SUBJECT EVER PRODUCED IN THE HISTORY OF MOTION PICTURES.

1000 Soldiers — ENGAGED IN DEADLY CONFLICT — 1000 Indians
EXHIBITORS—ARRANGE YOUR BOOKING AT ONCE!

ONE REEL "THE PENALTY" ONE REEL

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 17

An Indian scout is caught stealing and is punished. He conspires with other Indians in the government employ and with his tribe and a wagon train is captured. Attired in the uniforms of the dead soldiers the Indians try to gain admittance to the fort. The plan is frustrated and the redskins are met with an unlooked-for resistance which practically wipes them out. The battle scenes are presented by tremendously large casts.

ONE REEL FRI., SEPT. 20 "THE DOCTOR'S DOUBLE" ONE REEL

The doctor's double causes him no end of trouble and finally lands him in jail. His wife untangles the mass of circumstantial evidence wound about him and secures his freedom. This is one of the cleverest photographic subjects ever seen, both men being shown facing each other in the same scene.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: Notwithstanding false and misleading statements to the contrary, genuine 101 Bison films are produced only by the New York Motion Picture Co., which is in complete legal possession of all its properties in New York and California, and retains in its employ the real Bison and "101" companies. Exhibitors should beware of imitations.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., NEW YORK CITY 150 E. 14th ST.

Mutual Film Corporation, 60 Wall St., N. Y. City. Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada

"THE CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE COPYRIGHTED"

The Moving Picture News

INCORPORATING

Moving Picture Tales

AMERICA'S LEADING CINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor (20 years Expert in Cinematography).

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President: John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Entered as second-class matter in the New York Post Office.

Volume VI September 7, 1912 Number 10

AN OPEN MARKET

YES, sir, I said an open market. I fully believe that the time is very, very near to us, when an open market for the cinematograph art will be an accomplished fact. The tendencies of the day show that it is more than possible, and I have full and complete knowledge that some of the manufacturers are already making preparations for this time. Do I believe it will be for the best of the industry, did you say? I hardly know how to answer this. It depends upon what is considered the best. The above is the gist of the conversation I had this past week with a prominent manufacturer, who is turning out some of the best film manufactured in this country, and whose products are received with open arms all over the world. He expressed a kind, as he explained it, of a lurking fear that it might be detrimental to the industry at large. I do not for one moment think that an open market would be detrimental to the interests of the industry. In fact it will be the other way about, and in my former writings I have said much towards this, and taking the conversation with this friend and also the expression of opinion from a man who thoroughly understands the position here and in England and who will shortly be in this country with a very large proposition, I think I can use his opinion in expressing the sentiment here and abroad. He says, to quote a portion of his letter:

"Well, Saunders, I see some big things have happened since I left New York, namely, the split in the Independent ranks. The sooner the free-for-all-market the better, and then for a survival of the fittest, and the best make win. I guess you have heard of the invasion of England by the American makers? Edison have Furniss producing at Ealing. I believe they are using Will Barker's studio.

"You know of Bunny & Co. being here, and rumor says Bunny intends to stay in England. I hear also that Lubin Co. intend to visit England, and also Selig.

"Well, it is time something woke up the English maker. I don't think they can put the stuff on the market like their cousins across the pond. It does not look as though they can to me, but the programs prove the American film is the leading make, and I think this is the end that talks, namely, the show and its patrons. Anyhow, I must not say what I think of English films. It would take too long and I might get myself in disfavor with you, so the least said the soonest mended.

"I learn that two of the leading companies running several high class picture theatres are starting to make film for their own shows and that their intention is to make two and three reel exclusive English productions, and by so doing, ensure an absolute exclusive program. In fact one large concern has already started, and is at present producing its own films, which, of course, pays them, as they have 25 to 30 theatres, and more are building, while another firm controlling a large number of shows are about to start manufacturing, and I hear are co-operating with a member of the Licensed Association, to come to England to produce for them or manage the manufacturing end for them. This I have on very good authority, but as it was given me confidentially I cannot divulge the names at present but will probably tell you more of this in a week or so. Anyhow, the present demand is for English stories and English films, so makers cannot go wrong to play to this end if they want to have big sales here. I will tell you more when I reach America of some of the great doings, but can fully say that the open market is looming up pretty big."

It is often said "a straw shows which way the wind blows," and in conversation with many in the industry I am firmly of the opinion that every manufacturer is preparing for the inevitable. What does an open market mean? Does it mean that the trade will be flooded with the medicore, blase, illogical subjects, cheap and shoddy, of four or five years ago? No, indeed, the public and the exhibitors are too wide-awake to allow any such backward tendency. It means an upward, a forward, an advanced movement for quality, good photography, and the best that can be produced. It means that the larger theatrical producers who own a large circuit of theatres will manufacture their own exclusive films. It means that companies owning a circuit of moving picture shows will either arrange with one of the large manufacturers, or manufacture for themselves, feature products of their own conception. It means that men who are only in the business for the money they can make out of poor productions will pass away. It means that companies who are trying to get widows, innocent lady teachers, etc., to invest their stock in capital in this business while living from hand to mouth, not being able to pay their bills, even to their own employees, and who are anxiously trying to interest other capitalists in their venture, will have to get responsible persons at the back of the firms or lie down. I have in mind three companies who are doing this and whom I have warned friends against investing in; such companies as these are only a detriment and a drag on the industry.

Again, an open market means a mutual gentleman's agreement, whereby only the best companies will be amalgamated for mutual protection, and the upholding of the price and high class production, leaving each individual company free to work out their own ends. The cheapening of scenario writing, the cheapening of production, and the placing in the hands of irresponsible played-out directors will be a thing of the past. New blood, new life, new vigor, new interests, new capital will be required for the carrying out of this open market. It is a well-known fact in the trade, that some who are manufacturing pictures to-day ought to go back to their old trades and professions and forget they ever tried to produce pictures. Men with money who have held aloof, owing to the calibre of pictures being turned out, will take a firm hand in the production of the educational film of the future, and this educational film must be of such a nature that it will be truly educational and instructive. In the letter I quote from the above, English manufacturers must get a move upon them so that they will be able to compete with the American product in their own country. The same condition of affairs does not exist here. The audiences like to see and delight in seeing American subjects, and while they do not object to foreign pictures they must be of the same high class as America is now producing ere they can compete with the American manufacturer.

I must confess it is hard for me to take my correspondent's letter and read that English films made by English manufacturers do not please English taste. Where is the fault? I well recollect the time when America could not produce a film, when all its manufacturers had to dupe the product emanating from the Urban Studios, Melies, Lumiere, Gaumont, and several other good makes. I have in my possession catalogs listing these subjects and it was hard to see a picture here that was not a dupe. Now there is no necessity whatever for dupes. The Americans prove in spite of themselves that they had to make films. They got into the stream and it was too strong for them. It was not by any device of their own that they made the money out of film manufacturing. The stream simply swept along, swept them off their feet and landed them into an El Dorado which dazzled their sight, so that they simply had to take what the gods gave them.

In conversation with some of these men they expressed to me their utmost astonishment at the progress they have made, and this progress is only just in its infancy, and when the open market is here, when the beautiful art of cinematography is free, then we can indeed expect the full and complete advancement of the highest and the best that money, brains, and workers can produce.

Alfred H. Saunders.

MOVING PICTURE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE NOTES

Since the close of the national convention, which was held at Chicago, the president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has been very busy in arranging to organize new states. The South is enthusiastic and ready to organize. Mr. Neff is arranging to make a trip through the states of Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina and Virginia, starting the latter part of November. A meeting has been called for the motion picture exhibitors of the state of Texas to meet in Dallas on the 15th and 16th of October. A meeting will be called for the state of Oklahoma to meet and organize some time near the 18th and 19th of October. Kansas and Arkansas are getting ready to organize and the dates of their meetings will soon be known; there are a few details to perfect before the national president calls these conventions.

The national president and the national secretary were both invited to attend the Minnesota convention, which met in St. Paul, Minn., at the St. Paul Hotel on the 4th and 5th of September. Owing to the national matters of importance which have recently developed in the East, it was impossible for Mr. Neff to leave his office, as he is directing movements of vital interest to the whole country. Mr. C. M. Christenson attended the convention and assisted Minnesota in perfecting a permanent, thorough organization. We now have twenty-two states belonging to the national organization, Canada having been taken into the League. North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Virginia are knocking at the door.

Mr. Neff contemplates a visit to the East in the near future, as he expects to attend the big ball which will be given by Local Branch No. 1 of Greater New York on the 14th of November. He would be pleased to get in touch with all the Eastern exhibitors who have no state organization that a state organization may be formed, especially the states of Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Vermont and Maryland. It is time the Eastern states were organized. Many years ago the thirteen states joined together and formed a Union which has become the greatest power in the world. The patriotic sentiment of unjust taxation appealed to the sense of the forefathers of New England in the past, and we believe that the exhibitors of New England are not unmindful of the acts of their forefathers and that they, too, object to the unjust taxation and commercial interference. It is only through an organization that the motion picture exhibitors of New England can secure their commercial rights and a fair and square deal for all.

The state of Ohio has organized two new locals through the efforts of the state president, Piqua Local No. 6 and Sandusky Local No. 7. These locals were both organized on Thursday, September 5, 1912. Mr. Neff anticipated four or five days' vacation at Cedar Point, O., but on his arrival at Sandusky, O., he found conditions that needed attention. He immediately called the exhibitors together and they all decided to run two reels and organize a local. Mr. Max Stearn, of the Exhibit Theatre, Columbus, who was former treasurer of the Ohio State League and who has interest in Sandusky, was present at the local meeting and assisted in perfecting a thorough, strong working local.

Cincinnati Local Branch No. 2 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America held a meeting at the Sinton Hotel, Parlor F, at 2 p.m., Tuesday, September 3d. They endorsed the new motion picture ordinance for the city of Cincinnati. Arrangements are being made to hold a big picnic in the near future. The Cincinnati local is now thoroughly organized and most all of the leading exhibitors of Cincinnati belong to the League.

Vancouver, Wash.—Pantage's Theatre has reopened.

Evansville, Ind.—J. R. Brannen Amusement Co., capital $10,000.

Ames, Ia.—The Scenic Theatre sold to Mr. H. L. Coulson of Valisca.

Dunlap, Ia.—W. C. Wilkins has leased the moving picture theatre here.

Galveston, Tex.—Mr. Campbell has purchased a moving picture theatre near here.

STREYCKMANS APPOINTED ON MUTUAL CO.'S STAFF.

The Mutual Film Corporation has added to its staff H. J. Streyckmans, who has resigned from the New York Motion Picture Co. to accept the position. Mr. Streyckmans has been with Messrs. Baumann and Kessel for more than two years, and is one of the few men in the moving picture business who couples a thorough knowledge of the business in all its branches with literary ability.

In choosing Streyckmans the Mutual Film Corporation is following its policy of engaging none but the highest class men for its executive staff. The board of directors of the Mutual is composed of successful business men, occupying high positions in the commercial and banking world, and the progress of the company has been built upon solid foundations.

Streyckmans is noted for his aggressiveness and quick wit, and in the recent trouble between the Universal and the New York Motion Picture Co. it was the daring work of Streyckmans and "Doc" Willat which saved the plant when the doors were broken in and an attempt made to eject them. The New York Motion Picture Co. is still in possession of the plant.

When Chas. O. Baumann learned that Wm. H. Swanson had left for California to endeavor to take the Bison Pacific Coast studios, Streyckmans was hurriedly sent after him, and by quick work made connections with fast trains which landed him a few hours behind Swanson, though the latter had a forty-eight hours' start. The plants were fortified with armed men, and Streyckmans directed the legal proceedings which resulted in the Bison properties remaining with Messrs. Baumann and Kessel.

H. J. STREYCKMANS

Mr. Streyckmans was formerly editor and manager of The Show World, a Chicago theatrical publication, and the organizer of the International Projecting and Producing Co. The independent field was practically extinct at that time, and Streyckmans made a sensational tour of the country, holding meetings of exhibitors and establishing agencies.

When Messrs. Baumann and Kessel organized the Reliance Co., Streyckmans was engaged to exploit the new product as well as Bison, Itala and Ambrosio films. It is said that the Reliance Co. broke all records in securing standing orders for its first release. In handling these interests Streyckmans published a house organ called "Film Fancies," a booklet which attracted considerable attention.

The departure of Streyckmans breaks up the combination of Willat and Streyckmans, who have been warm personal friends since Mr. Willat assumed the superintendency of the New York Motion Picture Co., and "Doc" Willat will miss the loss of his faithful lieutenant. To a representative of the M. P. News Mr. Streyckmans paid a high tribute to Willat, and stated that his chief regret in severing his connection with the New York Motion Picture Co. was the fact that it meant the parting of business ways with Willat, whose keen judgment and ability have made "101" Bison films famous throughout the world.

"DOC" WILLAT

BRONCHO RELEASES SENSATIONAL FILM.

Spectacular Military Subject Is the First Release of the New Company Through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Broncho films make their introduction to the trade with a stirring military subject for release on September 18, entitled "Sundered Ties," dealing with the Civil War.

The plot is laid in the Spring of 1861, when the whole country was momentarily expecting the secession of the South. John Stevens, a Southerner, is a lieutenant in the army, and his father writes asking him to resign and come home. John obtains a furlough and after a stormy scene with his father decides to remain in the U. S. Army. His sweetheart, Irene, breaks her engagement because of his refusal to join the Confederacy, and John goes back with a heavy heart.

As the struggle between the North and South becomes more bitter, and the ranks of each are decimated, the older men are drawn into the fray, and old Col. Stevens takes up active service.

Several years later the vicinity of the Stevens home is the battle-ground of a terrific conflict in which father and son are arrayed with the opposing forces. Splendid scenes are shown of inspiring cavalry charges, cannonading, and war in all its realism.

A detachment of Union soldiers take up a position close to the Stevens house. John's little brother, stirred by the scenes of carnage and with the intense patriotism fired in his youthful heart, climbs up a tree with a rifle and begins picking off the officers. A squad is sent to silence the hidden sharpshooter, who locate the tree and fire a volley into the concealing foliage. The boy drops to the ground mortally wounded. Filled with pity, one of the soldiers carries the lad back, and John is horror-stricken when he recognized his brother.

The war ends. Col. Stevens is destitute and his home in ruins, and he is forced to accept the hospitality of Irene's father—a sad situation for the proud old man and his loyal wife. Irene's folks are in dire financial straits themselves, having hardly anything left but the roof over their heads. It is Irene's birthday and the faithful negro determines to provide a real meal. Making his way to a neighboring hen-coop he takes the largest fowl and hurries back. The owner of the chickens discovers him, however, and starts after him, and soon a mob is hard on the poor old negro's heels.

John returns home and goes to the old homestead. Tears spring into his eyes as he gazes at the ruins, and he slowly turns away. Suddenly a howling mob breaks upon him, and the old darkey throws himself at John's feet, begging for protection. John holds the crowd off and adjusts matters by paying liberally for the stolen fowl.

From the darkey he learns of the straightened circumstances of his loved ones and decides to give them a real feast. The grocery store is visited and they emerge laden with bundles, which are carried to Irene's home.

The negro whispers to Irene that John is outside and she joyfully greets him. As the family sit down at the table all are surprised at the repast which awaits them, and while the servant is endeavoring to explain John walks into the room. With a glad cry his mother throws her arms about him. John kisses her tenderly and walks slowly over to his father and holds out his hands. The old man gazes at his son for a few moments, speechless with emotion and impulsively clasps his son to him.

The final scene shows the reunited family, with radiant faces, sitting around the table, while the delighted servants watch them from the kitchen.

GENERAL FILM PUBLICITY AND SALES COMPANY CONTRACT FOR ROOSEVELT FILMS.

There is but one way to scale the dizzy heights of success, and that is to keep on going and never look back. A steady head, a steady hand, and a grip that never quavers is an absolute necessity for the man who does not intend to slip back one inch for every two he gains.

The General Film Publicity and Sales Company, with energetic young blood at the helm in the persons of Spanuth and Strouse, have held on from the start with a grip that never relaxes—the grip that makes them win and hold. Yesterday it was the filming of our greatest character actor, Nat C. Goodwin, and to-day it is the filming of no less a personage than Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

A signed contract was shown the writer a few days ago which entitles the General Film Publicity and Sales Company to the right to film Roosevelt, the greatest and most talked of man in America to-day, in his private car, out of his private car, at social functions and political meetings all over the country.

This is a tremendous inning for any film company to obtain it must be admitted, and we congratulate the General Film Publicity and Sales Company on their success in persuading the great ex-President of the United States to submit to the ordeal of being constantly within the focus of the motion picture camera.

A special point about these films will be that the speeches of Roosevelt will be flashed upon the screen in conjunction with the pictures. This is the first time that anything of the kind has been attempted, and only goes to demonstrate the unparalleled usefulness of the motion picture film.

The Roosevelt films will be brought out on a regular release date, probably near the end of September, and will be sold at so reasonable a price that the exhibitor, the exchange man, or anyone wishing to procure them can do so without financial inconvenience.

The fact that a man is a "Bull Mooser," a Republican, or a Democrat, should make no difference with regard to the purchase of patronage of these films; he should look at it from the standpoint of the man, remembering that something of value not alone to the present generation, but to posterity, is being done, in the filming of the personality and the oratory of one of the greatest of America's men.

The General Film Publicity & Sales Company have also secured the exclusive American rights to the only two existing brands of Japanese films in the world for which Japanese men, women and children have posed, and which portray the life and customs of the Japanese people as they actually are. These are the Mikado and the Y. O.

More will be heard regarding these interesting films in the near future.

KLEINE'S CINES AND ECLIPSE FEATURES

For Tuesday, September 10th, Kleine offers a magnificent Cines production entitled "The Conspiracy of Cataline." It deals with the attempt of Cataline to overthrow the Roman government. Anthony Novelli does ample justice to the role of Cataline in the Cines production of the tragical story of this noted conspirator's ambition to become a consul of Rome.

A short but highly interesting and beautifully tinted travelogue has been added to complete the reel, and to view the scenes along the Salerno coast of Italy, as photographed by the Cines experts with their naturally artistic ideas of picturesqueness, is almost as satisfying as to visit in person the sections depicted.

In the Eclipse film to be released Wednesday, September 11th, this company have pictured winter sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland, one of the finest and most picturesque spots in the winter time to be found in the world.

On the same reel "Chemical Action" will be found a very interesting exposition of the effect of various acids and alkalis on different substances as viewed under a powerful microscope.

THE PLEASURES OF CAMPING
Majestic release September 8th.

THE MUTUAL RELEASES TWO-REEL "101" BISON.

Spectacular Frontier Picture Produced by the New York Motion Picture Co.

The New York Motion Picture Co. is realizing another of its popular two-reel subjects on September 13, through the Mutual Film Corporation, which has the sole agency for the United States and Canada for the original Bison pictures. The title of the picture is "A Frontier Child."

The original Bison and "101" company are seen in this film, which is directed by Thomas Ince. It is a story of typical pioneer days, presenting an enormous cast, spectacular battle scenes and sensational incidents. A feature of the film is the wonderful acting of the little girl who enacts the title role.

The Story.

John Adams is a pioneer, living in a log cabin with his wife and baby girl, earning his livng as a trapper. He digs a bear pit which is covered over with branches and bait placed in the middle. A big, black bear attempting to reach the tempting morsel falls crashing into the pit. An Indian comes upon the captured animal and shoots it, and descending into the pit secures the skin.

Adams meets him with the bear-skin on his arm and attempts to take the hide away. The Indian draws a knife, and a fierce encounter takes place, in which Adams lands a crushing blow on the Indian's jaw, knocking him down. As Adams walks away the Indian regains his feet, and fires at the trapper. As the report rings out and the bullet sings past his head, Adams drops to the ground and feigns death. The Indian runs up and leans over him and is clutched by the throat by Adams, who leaps to his feet. The Indian is badly wounded and Adams departs.

The redskin happens to be the chief's son, and when he is found by his tribe their rage is unbounded. A war dance is held, and they decide to retaliate by an attack upon the whites.

Mrs. Brown, a neighbor, is taken ill, and her husband drives over and gets Mrs. Adams to minister to her. She leaves baby Dot alone, who amuses herself in various ways awaiting her mother's return.

The Indians are then seen starting on their mission of death and destruction, leaving a trail of outrage and conflagration in their wake They finally reach the Adams cabin, and little Dot sees them coming in the distance. Terror-stricken the little tot looks frantically about for a hiding place, and then leaps into the huge bucket at the well and descends to the bottom.

The Indians sack the cabin and are about to depart when they spy Adams coming home. Quickly hiding, they await his approach, and, leaping upon him he is overpowered and carried away, a prisoner. The cabin is set on fire, and with exultant whoops they move on.

Dot comes from her hiding place, and with water from the well manages to extinguish the blaze. She then barricades the door, and tremblingly awaits—she knows not what.

Coming home in Brown's rig, Mrs. Adams sees the Indians galloping toward her from the vicinity of her home. Brown wheels the horse around, but her mother instinct is aroused to the highest pitch and she refuses to go on. Brown then resolves upon a desperate measure, and secreting Mrs. Adams in the bushes he drives out into the open and plies the whip to his horse, drawing the pursuit of the Indians.

Mrs. Adams races home and hammers at the door. Dot, thinking it is the Indian, lifts a heavy gun across the back of a chair and is about to pull the trigger when her heart fails her, and she turns away and hides in the fireplace. Mrs. Adams calls to her, and at the sound of her voice the little girl springs to the door with a glad cry and unlatches it.

In the meantime, Adams has been securely bound and placed in a tepee to await torture, with a guard in front. Straining at his bonds he finds he cannot undo them, and shaking himself forward he manages to drop a few matches out of his shirt pocket. Working with his hands behind him he gathers up twigs and leaves, and scratching the match with his mouth he sets the mass on fire. He turns over and holds his hands into this fire, burning off the cords, and is free.

Hundreds of emigrants and settlers seek the protection of the fort. The gates are scarcely closed behind them when the Indians attack. A sensational and thrilling battle takes place in which the soldiers and emigrants are being defeated when they resolve upon a desperate course: A huge bomb is made of a keg of powder, and as the Indians gather to rush upon the weakened gate it is thrown into their midst, blowing them to atoms. With a wild rush the whites rush from the stockade and attack the bewildered Indians, and the few surviving redskins are killed or driven off.

Adams throttles his guard and escapes He is rent with conflicting emotions, but entertains a forlorn hope that his family may have escaped. Running to the door he calls to his wife, and his heart leaps with joy when she replies, and with Dot rushes into his arms.

Star Theatre, Kingston, N. Y., Re-opened

Mr. L. H. Sheppard, formerly of Oneonta, N. Y., has reopened the Star Theatre at Kingston, N. Y., purchasing a complete new equipment from J. H. Hallberg "The Economizer Man," including a Powers No. 6 with Double Dissolver, with Hallberg A. C. Economizer, and full line of supplies.

WILLIE'S DOG
Majestic release Sept. 8th.

WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

At the picture show, the other evening, the features being shown upon the screen were not the only ones that were painfully working. There were some drawn features in the audience.

* * * *

Why not picture the old-fashioned man who used to begin on Tuesday to wish that it was Saturday night and supper on the table?

* * * *

Anyhow, a salary of $12 a week will keep a family of seven in picture show tickets.

* * * *

We have our moments of extreme mental depression when it seems as if everyone who dropped into the office of this old palladium of liberty, on our busiest day, had a strikingly original pictureplay script and insisted on reading it to us in a loud, clear voice.

* * * *

One man declares he makes $5,000 a year by writing poetry. We place him in the same class with the man who declared he made $2,500 a year writing pictureplays.

* * * *

Some mechanical genius could make a fortune and win the gratitude of the audiences if he would invent a machine to drown out the conversation of the picture fan who insists in telling his companion what is coming next on the moving picture screen.

* * * *

It was with pleasure, mingled with feelings of admiration for someone's versatility, that we witnessed one of our two-year-old pictureplays worked over and presented as something new at the Idle Hour Theatre the other evening.

* * * *

"Laughter is youthful," says Lillian, "sometimes to the point of idiocy." A giggle, it may be added, is the irresponsible result of a partially suppressed risibility often occasioned by a picture comedy.

* * * *

"One of the long-felt wants of our politics," says the Hartford Courant, "is a ducking school for common scolds." We are broadminded enough not to construe this as a slam at The Moving Picture News.

* * * *

No, Lucinda, you are slightly confused. A moving picture house organ is not one of those frescoed instruments that stand in a corner of the parlor.

* * * *

About twenty-six million people have the right to vote in the United States this year, and the majority of them would be perfectly satisfied to vote for M. A. Neff for another presidency.

* * * *

Before the start of Dickens Centenary we advocated the filming of "Pickwick Papers." Now Edison and Vitagraph are doing it, and doing it well. There is enough material in "Pickwick" to make a score of good clean comedies. And now we repeat our suggestion that some first-class concern put "Ten Thousand a Year" on the screen. It's another great work and would attract a new class to the moving picture theatre, namely, the legal fraternity. Come on, Mr. Plimpton!

* * * *

The season of housecleaning is invariably a moving occasion, but you wouldn't class the good housewife as a "movie." There are scenes in the picture theatre that move you to laughter or tears, and there is the man-who-eats-onions who moves you to another seat. You move, perhaps, but you and the theatre should not be classed as "movies." "Movies" is a misnomer for the Moving Picture theatre. Swat the term!

* * * *

Someone rises to remark that films depicting the current history of this country should be preserved and a place made for them by Congress. It's a good idea. However, the films showing scenes at the Bull Moose convention would probably be barred by the present Republican Administration.

* * * *

Some exhibitors wish to know how to get theatrical news items in the daily press. Either pay for them or hand in newsy and brief items, typewritten, and give the editor a pass. A good idea is to gather up all the single column cuts you can. Ask the exchanges to provide them. Many a country editor will use a cut four inches long when he would be horrified to give that much space to reading matter.

* * * *

Mr. E. Arnaud, director for Eclair, works often without a scenario. An engraving in a New York store furnished him inspiration for one appealing pictureplay. We hear of another scribe who wrote a photoplay on his cuff —a laundry script. However, these are exceptions. The every-day pictureplaywright often has neither engravings nor cuffs, but he can get there just the same with the proper use of a typewriter.

* * * *

Our hearts go out in Christian love to the hardworking gentlemen who, in the moving picture magazines, conduct the Questions and Answers Departments. They are long suffering. "Constant Reader" asked the Photoplay Magazine if it is true that most of the actors and actresses in the films are deaf and dumb! "Fair Subscriber" naively wishes the Motion Picture Story Magazine man to tell her if he is married. But he never took that copy home! Of course, it is flattering to the Thespians to know that their work arouses admiration and interest, but it seems to us that some of the questions asked the magazines are up to the limit and a little over.

* * * *

There is a middle line in American life that has scarcely been touched in the picture play, remarks a writer. There is; and there is abundant material in every community for life portrayals. The every-day American life is not being presented convincingly or life-like. The trouble is that many studio writers cannot appreciate the true American life because they are handicapped by their environment, and when a true characterization of Middle West or Western types come in, it is not "quick and devilish" enough often to suit the fastidious director. There is many an "Art Embroidery Club" and, "Missionary Church Society" doing business in the smaller towns and cities that would furnish a wealth of quiet comedy and lifelike characterization to the picture screen, if some directors and editors would only see the fact. We think Edison, perhaps more than any other concern, has caught the true spirit and atmosphere of everyday America.

* * * *

There is a commendable willingness, on the part of the makers and exhibitors of the films to promote good causes and this willingness has had much to do with the rapid advance of the industry and with popularizing the pictures. For instance there was the film exhibited in aid of the fight against tuberculosis; the film showing the joys of a safe and sane Fourth of July; the "Swat the Fly" film and the pictures on "Woman Suffrage." The good that may come of this popular educational work it is impossible to estimate. People generally, the children particularly, must be saved from the slaughter and educated in the cause of health. But how is this to be done when ignorance and indifference remain? The films are helping and all good people should be grateful for the aid. The character of the pictures shown to-day is much better than even a year ago. The dime novel dramatization, imitation of great crimes, and the sensational melodramatic action, are being decried. Artistic efforts that will give helpful information or divert without corrupting, offer the ideal in Cinematography.

KEYSTONE MAKES RELEASES THROUGH MUTUAL FILM CO.

The Mutual Film Corporation will make the first release of Keystone films, for which it holds the exclusive agency for the United States and Canada, on Monday, September 25, with a split reel comedy, "Cohen Collects a Debt," and "The Water Nymph."

The leading parts in Keystone films are played by Mack Sennett, Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and Fred Mace, supported by a strong cast. This quartet comes to the Keystone Co. from the Biograph, and their work is well known throughout the world. Mr. Sennett continues as director.

MACK SENNETT

Shortly after September 25 two reels of Keystone will be released, the reel made by Mr. Sennett and a dramatic production by another stock company, of which full particulars will be given when release dates are fixed.

The Keystone comedy on Monday will always consist of two snappy subjects.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

In a contest for popularity among about fifty of our prominent business men, comprising almost an equal number of trades, Tom Moore, the well-known motion picture man, came out as the winner. The contest was the unique arrangement of the Washington Herald in filling one page with small advertisements of equal size. The public was asked to vote for its favorite and the successful contestant was awarded a full page advertisement by the Herald. In announcing Mr. Moore as the winner, the paper stated that he outdistanced his competitors by 100 per cent. Certainly this shows the esteem and popularity of the man who was a pioneer in the film business in the capital city. Mr. Moore used this prize page advertisement in heralding the coming of Nat Goodwin as Fagin in "Oliver Twist," at the Garden. These performances were well attended by the scholarly element of the city. Especially did those who had so often witnessed Mr. Goodwin's performances in our local theatres view these reels; for he was always a great favorite with Washington audiences. Certainly his acting in "Oliver Twist" is excellent, more dramatic and tragic than many of his admirers expected. The entire cast in this production was exceptional and there was regret expressed that all names were not given on the screen.

* * * *

Mr. J. Boyd Dexter has at last gotten possession of a theatre on Ninth street. This is the Maryland, which he will manage in an up-to-date style, using many unusual and multi-reel productions. One of the first things he gave the public was the four-reel exhibition of the life and experiences of Scout Younger, the one time famous outlaw. Mr. Younger was also on the scene and spoke to the audience. It is the intention of Mr. Younger to make these films teach a moral lesson, by showing from his own experience the evils of outlawness and the little there is to be gained. Mr. Younger has placed his two little girls at one of the seminaries of Washington, where they will continue and complete their education.

The Scout Younger reels remained in the city several days, during which time they were well attended. There was almost as much interest displayed in the decorations outside the Maryland, as in the realistic pictures. There were pistols, lassos, saddles, gauntlets, chaps, chains and various devices and trappings used in the West by cowboys, outlaws, sheriffs, etc. And there was a cute little baby black bear, which every child wanted. This display served as an object lesson to the public.

It may be said in passing that Manager Dexter had the "nerve" to offer this show at 10 cents, for it takes "nerve" to even suggest a show at that price on Ninth street. And the people readily paid the price. "This is only a beginning," said Mr. Dexter. "There will be plenty other shows for 10 cents to follow this. I mean to raise the price of admission to the motion picture theatre. Two reels is sufficient for 5 cents and I hope to reach that condition. This is the belief of all managers, who somehow seem afraid to tackle the situation."

In assuming the management of the Imperial Theatre, Tom Moore has changed the name to The Garden. And it is his intention to make this playhouse live up to its name in decorations in the near future. Just at present he is running multi-reel productions and these will continue until after the baseball season, because the electrascore holds the theatre for several hours in the afternoon when the local team is out of town. Later in the season high-class vaudeville will be established

Mr. Moore will install an electric score board in the Majestic for afternoon reports for the remainder of the ball season.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION OF GREATER NEW YORK

At the meeting of the Ball and Convention Committee a resolution was adopted that a World's Exposition of the moving picture trade will be held in conjunction with the convention to be held in New York, July 7, 1913.

Communications have already been forwarded to Europe, Africa and Australia asking the co-operation of the trades throughout these continents.

Committees were also appointed to commence work immediately on the second annual ball of the New York State Exhibitors, and the following committees were appointed:

Committee on Publicity

M. Needles, Arthur Jacobs, Mr. Coufal, L. Rosenthal, Ed. Valensi, R. C. Whitten, Mr. Eckman, William Allen and L. Germain.

Committee on Arrangements

Sidney Archer, F. E. Samuels, H. W. Rosenthal, Grant M. Anson, Mr. King, Mr. Goldfarb, Frank Allen.

Committee of Ways and Means

A. Coleman, M. L. Fleishman and Mr. Eckman.

Reception Committee

Samuel H. Trigger, F. E. Samuels, Adolph Bauerenfreund, Arthur Jacobs, R. L. McNabb, Ed. Valenci, Sidney Ascher, Grant W. Anson and L. Rosenthal.

A STAR REBORN

By VIRGINIA WEST

(Adapted from Thanhouser Release)

THE officers of the theatrical agents were stifling in the August heat. The small waiting rooms were packed to the doors with waiting engagement-seekers. All types they were: The woman of insufficient food, pale and hollow-eyed beneath the paint and the touch of the black pencil, put on to conceal the true condition of affairs; the other woman—well-fed and loud, paint put on, not to conceal but to accentuate; the loud-voiced and jovial—both men and women—putting on the air of indifference as to whether they ever got work; the anxious-eyed, nervous man, past his youth and nothing in the bank. All of these and more stood all day, first in one office and then in another, waiting, waiting for something that seemed always so near and yet never came.

Into this crowd Lillian Loraine came with reluctant feet. Weary in mind and body she asked the same old question, "Anything to-day?" And back came the usual answer, "No, nothing to-day."

The girl went from the office in despair. She had been the rounds of the theatrical offices, where she could gain admittance, and to all of the agencies that day, and things were beginning to look very hopeless. She glanced at a o'clock and saw that it was five o'clock. Then she opened her purse and counted its contents. Three dollars and fifty-six cents, and her room rent was not paid for that week.

As she stood at the entrance of a building on Broadway two women stopped near her and began the following conversation:

"Why do you think it was you didn't get the job?"

